Call on us—glad to see you. Come in whether you want anything or not.

Abuse of Credit

Every bank makes loans, mostly good ones, but occasionally there is a doubtful one. In all cases they are made from depositors money.

Hence the duty of the borrower to ask for only such loans as he can with reasonable certainty repay when due. By asking for more, you abuse your credit and injure yourself and the bank as well. We try to be accommodating and go as far as good business methods will permit, but we owe first responsibility to our depositors which must not be overlooked. Always remember this when asking for a loan.

St. Joe Valley Bank—A State Bank

Another Farm Home Burns

Peter Kosht's Home Destroyed 10 Days after Willis Baker's Fire

Fire destroyed the home of Peter Kosht, located three miles north of St. Joe, Tuesday evening despite the efforts of the St, Joe Fire Department and a hundred of fighters.

The fire was noticed by neighbors who called the Kosht home notifying them that their house roof was on fire. The alarm was then sent to St. Joe and the surrounding neighborhood. A freight train standing on the B. &O. crossing held up the fire truck for several minutes, delaying it enough to be too late to do much good.

Practically all the contents of the house were carried out and saved. The house was a fine building, having been built new in 1903, and it was practically modern. The loss was estimated at about $2,000 and was insured heavily. The cause of the fire is thought to be from a spark falling on the shingle roof, right in the center.

The fire demon is working fast in that section, for only ten days prior the Willis Baker home was destroyed, and less than a year ago the home of William Staman. All these homes were fine houses.

Notice Choral Society

Regular rehearsal Monday at 7 p. m. at the home of Dr. C. S. Johnson.

Do It Now!

If you have a bit of news,
  Send it in.
Or a joke that will amuse,
  Send it in.
A story that is true.
An incident that's new;
We want to hear from YOU—
  Send it in.
Don't wait a month to do it;
  Send it in.
Something serious or a jest—
Just whatever you like best,
The ed. will do the rest;
  Send it in.

At Winona Lake In July

The consultation conference to be held at Winona Lake, Indiana, the first eight days of July this year will be unique — something different from anything hitherto held there or elsewhere.

Public spirited men and women of America and numerous other countries, — outstanding business men, publicists, educators, statesmen,—including United States Senators and members of the House of Representatives, Governors of States and members of State legislatures, and commissioners to the United States from foreign lands; distinguished ecclesiasts will confer together for a full week and more on present day world [illegible] and how best and most [illegible] remedy them, from the [illegible] of Christian Citizenship.

S. S. Class Meets

The Little [illegible] of the Lutheran Sunday [illegible] at the home of their teacher Miss Mary [illegible], Thursday [illegible]. [illegible]

F. E. Johnson Demands $15,000 For An Eye

Sues Pennsylvania Railroad Company for Injuries Received January 30.

Glancing Chisel Destroys Sight.

F. E. Johnson, of northwest of St. Joe, has filed a suit in the DeKalb circuit court against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in which he demands a judgement of $15,000 for the loss of an eye.

Last winter Mr. Johnson was employed by that railroad company as a helper to a carpenter in the Fort Wayne shops, and on January 30, 1923 he met with an accident that caused the loss of his left eye. Johnson was helping in the repair of a box car when a chisel glanced under the blow of a heavy sledge wielded by another man and flew with great force hitting him in the eye, destroying the sight and the tissues at the back. The sight of the other eye was also seriously effected, says Mr. Johnson

M. P. Bazaar a Great Success

The Bazaar held in Mrs. Berry's cream station last Friday and Saturday by the Ladies of the M. P. Church was a success in every respect. A fine exhibit of needle work was displayed and offered to the public and sold. The same can be said of the chicken pie supper on Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. Ed Leighty. The proceeds go for the work of the local church.

BANK STATEMENT.

Emillus Case, President; Wm. Curie Vice President; F. R. Bowman, Casheir; Elgin Curie, Assistant Cashier. Report of the condition of the St. Joe Valley Bank, a State bank, at St. Joe, in the State of Indiana, at the close of its business on Apr. 3, 1923.

RESOURCES
Loans and Discounts	$129,631 56
Overdrafts	169 47
U. S. Bonds	1,571 45
Other Bonds and Securities	7,100 09
Banking House	5,280 00
Furniture and Fixtures	4,220 00
Due from Banks and Trust Companies	7,674 70
Cash on Hand	3,248 92
Current Expenses	1,020 64
Taxes Paid	55 16
Interest Paid	1,009 97
Total Resources	$161,344 79
LIABILITIES
Capital Stock, paid in	$25,000
Surplus	4,724
Undivided Profits	50 86
Exchange, discounts and Interest	3,868 [illegible]
Demand Deposits	45,[illegible]
Demand Certificates	71,[illegible]
Bills Payable	10,000 [illegible]
Total Liabilities	$161,344 79

State of [illegible],

County of DeKalb, ss:

I, [illegible] cashier of the St. Joe Valley Bank, a state [illegible] that the above [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

Interesting Items from Nearby Towns

Harlan, Ind.—Andrew Miller, 83, a veteran of thd Civil war and a promanent resident of Harlan, died April 9, of a complication of diseases. Mr. Miller was one of three brothers, all past 80 years old and all well-known citizens of this place.

Hicksville:—The Koch Elevator, formerly the Earl Bear Elevator, has been purchased by the Hicksville Grain Co., consisting of 200 stock holders, for the sum of about $13,500. Both the Hicksville elevators will now be owned and operated by the same company.

Auburn. — The National Coal company of Cleveland, Ohio, will supply the city of Auburn with coal for 1923 at $2 75 per ton and freight at $2.50, making $5.25 delivered. The estimated quantity will be 7,500 tons costing the city $39,375, a saving of $11,850 over last year's expense. Thirty-two other coal companies bid for the contract.

Garrett —Carl Basse has been found guilty of assualt and battery on his 15-year old step-daughter, Eva Fales, by the jury in the DeKalb Circuit Court and sentenced to six months in the state penal fam and $50 fine and the costs. The jury sit for four days listening to the evidence presented and retired for sixteen hours before an agreement was met on the verdict.

Auburn:—Edna C. Sutherland, a young mother of a small child was granted a divorce in the DeKalb Circuit Court Saturday from her husband, Jay C. Sutherland. The couple had been] sweethearts at high school in Ashley; were married in February, 1922 and a child was born in May the same year. Sutherland refused to make a home for his wife and child. The plaintiff obtained a judgement of $400 against him and was given $300 alimony.

Renew your subscription.

Lutheran Notes

All the pews and a few chairs were occupied at the Lutheran church last Sunday night. Thank you.

The subject next Sunday morning at 10:30 will be, "Mary Magdelene." Come and here what salvation from sin by Jesus Christ means to a lost soul. If you do not go to Sunday School, we would like to see you out next Sunday morning at 9:30.

S. D. Steffey, Pastor

A Little More Truth

The following a clipping from the Sherwood Chronicle is too good to leave slip without passing it on: "Flowery and long is the wedding notice which the editor printeth. The minister getteth ten bones. The groom standeth the editor off for a 12-month subscription. All flesh is grass and in time the wife is gathered into a silo. The minister getteth his bit. The editor printeth a death notice, two columns of obituary, three lodge notices, a cubit of poetry and a card of thanks. And he forgetteth to read proof on the head and the thing cometh out: "Gone to Her Last Roasting Place." And all that are akin to the deceased jumpeth on the editor with exceeding great vigor. And they pulleth out their ads and cancelleth their subscriptions and they swing the hammer unto the third and fourth generation."

There are a few dogs in St. Joe that are apparently without masters. If there are any old dead cats or bones or any other unsightly thing laying around that someone neglected to bury these dogs are sure to have it carried in front of the lots. Freshly made gardens and posy beds are prey for these dogs also. Why not take care of the pets or have them put out of the way.

LOWE BROTHERS

"High Standard" Liquid Paint

High Standard Liquid House Paint surpasses in covering power, spreading capacity, durability, even wearing, failing by gradual wear and leaving the surface in good condition for repainting. The experience of more than forty years, under the most exacting requirements, has demonstrated its high quality.

It is s[illegible] upon its ability to bo better work [illegible]ally and for a greater number of years than any other paint, or than "lead and oil mixed by hand.

Automobile Varnish Colors

[illegible] Floor and Varnish Stain

E. R. KINSEY

Hardware Furniture Undertaking

L 91

The Joy of Living

By Sidney Gowing

Illustrations by Ellsworth Young

Copyright 1922 by Sidney Gowing

"CLOSE CALL, PARTNER!"

SYNOPSIS.—Disliking the prospect of a month's visit to her austere aunt, Lady Erythea Lambe, at Jervaulx abbey, and her cousin, Alexander Lambe, Aimee, vivacious daughter of the Very Reverend Viscount Scroope, wanders into the park, there encountering a strange youth. He laughingly introduces himself as "Billy," American. The two ride on his motorcycle, the "Flying Sphinx," and part. With Georgina Berners, her cousin, Aimee sets out for Jervaulx. She decides that Georgina shall impersonate her at Jervaulx, while she goes on a holiday. Georgina's horrified protest is unavailing. Aimee again meets "Billy." He tells her his name is Spencer, and she gives hers as Amy Snooks, at present "out of a job." Billy offers to take her into partnership in selling the Sphinx. In a spirit of madcap adventure, she accepts. The two proceed to the town of Stanhoe, taking separate lodgings in Ivy cottage. That night Aimee visits Georgina and learns that the deception has not been discovered. She compels Georgina to continue the subterfuge. On a trial spin, with Billy, Aimee almost collides with a carriage in which are her aunt, Georgina and Alexander. The pair escape unrecognised. Georgina learns that Lord Scroope is coming to visit Lady Erythea and is in hopeless bewilderment. While Aimee is secretly visiting Georgina at Jervaulx, the place is burglarized. Aimee escapes.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued.

—4—

"But when I reached the open there was no one to be seen," pursued the butler, whose throat ached with the effort to make his mistress hear; "there was, however, a dim light, a mere glow, in one of the windows; I shouted, asking whose it was—"

"Which window?" asked Mr. Lambe sharply.

"I am unable to say for certain—either her ladyship's or Miss Scroope's, which is next to it. Perhaps, if we went out—"

Lady Erythea immediately led the way through the front entrance.

"There is a light full on in one of the rooms now!" said Alexander.

"It is Aimee's room," said Lady Erythea. Like a thundercloud she swept upstairs and beat upon the door of her niece.

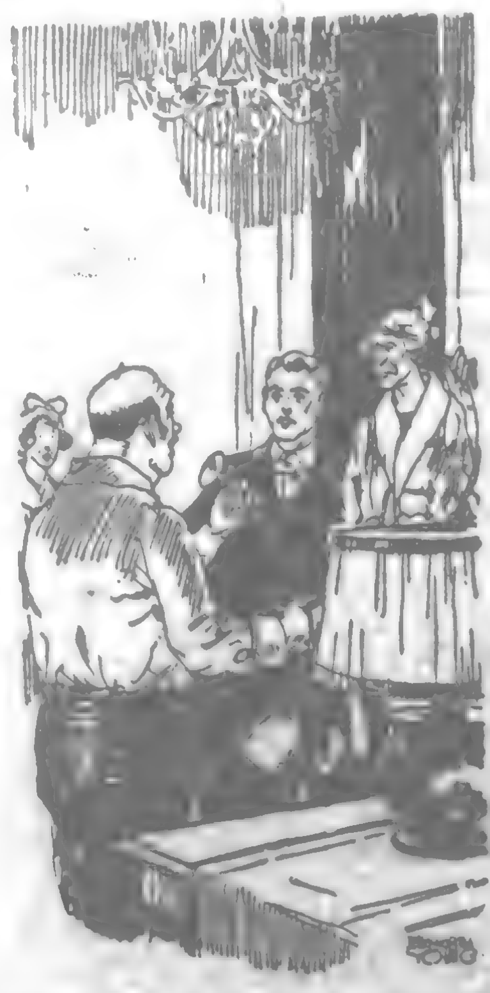
"Aimee! Open the door. Why is your light on?"

"I—I'm so frightened, aunt!" cried a trembling voice. "I dare not be in the dark—I dare not."

"I cannot hear you!" said Lady Erythea.

"Have they c-caught the thieves?" screamed the voice tragically.

"Caught them?" snorted Lady Erythea, shaking the doorhandle. "Is it likely a mob of mental deficients could catch anybody? No!"



"There Was No One to Be Seen," Pursued the Butler.

"Thank heaven!" said Georgina with an explosive gasp.

Lady Erythea started.

"Er! What are you talking about! Will you open the door or not!"

"I'm frightened, aunt! I—I—!" Georgina's voice rose to a shrill whoop.

CHAPTER IX

—

"Marvelous!"

Lady Erythea recoiled. There were, after all, enough hysterics in the house already. Evidently nothing was to be learned from her niece.

"Go back to your bed and don't be silly. There is no danger," snapped Lady Erythea. The sharp whirr of a motor on the drive below drew her attention, and she hastened downstairs.

The car drew up at the entrance with a jerk and ejected three [illegible] in-spector almost joyously, as one who seems his theories confirmed. "Sergeant, get after them at once in the car—take Polson with you. As we didn't meet them they must have taken the branch lane at the crossroads—away with you, man—quick!"

"I shall consider no reward too great, if my emeralds are recovered!" exclaimed Lady Erythea, as the car drove away. "Do you think your men will be successful, Inspector? My butler allowed the malefactor to slip through his fingers in the most fatuous manner. Can you—"

"One moment!" interrupted the inspector. "The thieves were seen then, by your ladyship's servants! Was one of them a woman?"

He had to bawl the question into Lady Erythea's ear-trumpet, which Alexander brought. When she understood, Lady Erythea's eyes flashed fiercely.

"Yes!" she exclaimed, "a young woman. You suspected a woman then—before you came here?"

"I do more than suspect, my lady," said Inspector Panke grimly. "I know!"

"Who was this woman, Inspector, and when do you propose to apprehend her? We have a piece of the creature's skirt!"

"Hah! let me see it at once!" said the inspector, his eyes lighting up. It was brought to him and its capture explained. Inspector Panke examined the yard of cloth, tried its strength, rubbed it, held it up to the light, peered keenly at the torn edges.

"Good!" he said under his breath, and turned upon Mr. Lambe so sharply that that gentleman jumped. "Your telephone, sir—where is it?"

"Who is the abominable creature?" exclaimed Lady Erythea. "And why is she at large, a scourge upon the country, breaking into—"

"She won't scourge it much longer," said the inspector grimly. "I'll very soon give your ladyship news of her—I want the telephone, quick!"

"This way," said Mr. Lambe, and led him to the call-room. Inspector Panke remained at the instrument a considerable time. He emerged triumphant.

"If they get away now—well, may I never handle another case," he said quietly to Mr. Lambe. "I can't answer questions at present, sir; I've got to get busy. If I might suggest that you induce her ladyship to retire, and come round with me yourself—it hampered me a bit, that ear-trumpet, and we've got to be quick—you can explain to her afterward."

Alexander was successful in persuading his aunt to retire from the field, though she went breathing threats of vengeance, and mourning aloud for the emeralds. Inspector Panke made a rapid examination of the safe, the wall beneath Lady Erythea's window, and the ground outside. He took a full description of the missing jewels, and briskly questioned the servants.

"I've only time to say this, sir, before I go," he said, turning to Mr. Lambe. "I recognise the work of Jack the Climber in this case, as plainly as if they'd left the name written on the wall! It was him and Calamity Kate. I thought for a moment it might be Bender Williams, who was released from Portland last month. But it's undoubtedly Jack's job. For some months past a series of daring burglaries have occurred at country houses in various parts of England, and, so far, I'm bound to say they've beaten us; no arrest has been made. The methods of the thieves are so similar in each case, that it is clear to an expert all these jobs were done by the same person—or, rather, two persons, a man and a woman. The man, besides being as smart a hand at cracking a safe as ever lived, seems to have the training of a steeplejack as well. He can climb anything that a fly could get a foothold on; in fact, he's known as the Climber.

"The woman, if anything, is more dangerous than the man. All that's known of them is that they're probably foreigners—some say Americans—and that they use a motorcycle when they're on the job.

"Briefly, what happened here is this: The man got in through Lady Erythea's window. There's the marks of him on the wall. He might have got in still easier by the next one, where the veranda is. But he went in through her ladyship's bedroom."

Mr. Lambe's eyes met those of the inspector; the same thought passed between them; whatever might be said of Jack the Climber's moral character, he was a brave man.

"And so to her bedroom, and opened the safe without waking her— [illegible]

"However, there it is. And this bit of blue cloth, sir," concluded Inspector Panke, holding it up, "is going to put Calamity Kate in my hands."

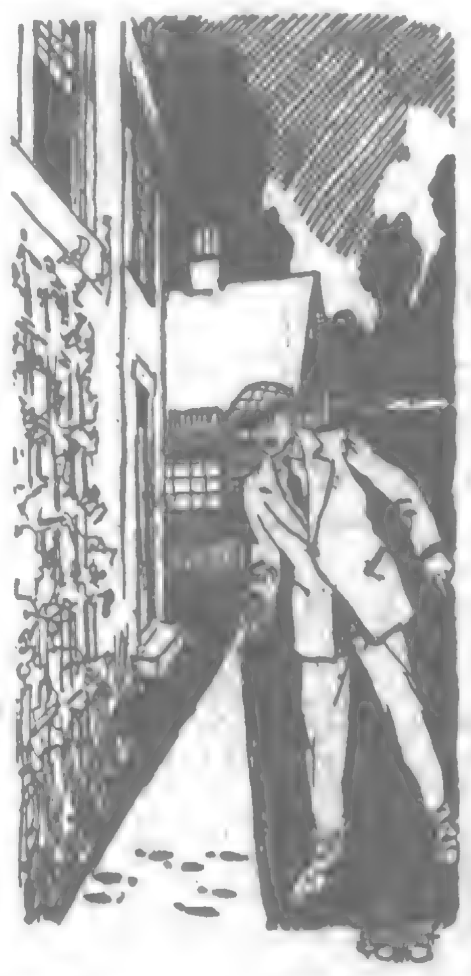
He folded the torn fragment of cloth, put it in his pocket, and moved briskly to the door. "Goodnight, sir! Before very long I'll show you the rest of this skirt—and its owner!"

CHAPTER X

—

Action and More.

Billy Spencer, sitting in his austerely furnished bedroom, looked unusually thoughtful. The night was still young, but his candle was not lit. The whole house, indeed, was in darkness.



There Were Five Little Shoe Prints Visible.

He sat on the window sill and stared out into the night. At last he wandered back to the bedside, his hands thrust in his pockets.

"The partner," he said pensively, "has got something on her mind. A fellow doesn't need any X-rays to see that."

His lips curled down at the corners.

"I'd give a lot to know what it is. I hate to seem inquisitive. But I'd hate a lot worse to have anything happen to the partner. An' I can sure smell trouble coming. She doesn't fear man or devil. But that isn't always goin' to help a girl. There's times when it's more useful to call up a husky with big feet—like me.

"She'd sure be mad if she thought I was interfering. And she can get mad—the partner. Gee! but she's great! The dinkiest thing that ever happened. But I don't like the way things are framing."

He stood for a while, as if listening; then sighed and lay down on the bed, fully dressed. In twenty seconds he was asleep, breathing regularly and easily.

It was a doglike sleep, of which some men hold the faculty, and very doglike was the manner in which Billy roused himself some hours later. In a moment he was broad awake, and swinging his legs off the bed, sat listening with cocked ears. He moved swiftly to the window and peered out.

There was nothing to be seen. Billy remained where he was for some seconds, all his senses alert. Then, with a gesture of decision, he snatched up his cap, heaved himself out of the window, and climbed down the trellis.

He came silently under Aimee's bedroom window, glanced up at the open casement, took a little nickel torch from his vest pocket, and bent down. Shading the glow with his hand, he examined the soft soil beneath the window. There were five unmistakable neat little shoe-prints visible; the first pair deep and pointing inwards to the wall, the others leading outwards.

Billy at once ran noiselessly round to the garden gate and peered up and down the lane. No one visible. He returned quickly, got a rake from the shed, and carefully raked over the footprints; also those beneath his own window. Then he made for the [illegible] and, after a moment's thought, unlocked the shed where the Flying Sphinx reposed. [illegible] cycle out, [illegible] toed softly [illegible]

Not till he [illegible]

Aimee had not the faintest suspicion that anybody at Ivy cottage knew she had made an unconventional exit by the window the night before. Billy, however, was perfectly well aware of the fact. Early that same morning, before setting off for Syderford, he had observed the footprints beneath her window, which, to a keen eye, told plainly that Aimee had dropped from the trellis, and later on had regained her room by the same path.

Clearly the partner had made a midnight excursion for a very definite object; people do not roam the countryside in the small hours for nothing.

The incident of the carriage on the Stanhoe road puzzled Billy; he had mentioned the carriage casually to Mrs. Sunning—saying nothing about the collision—and learned that it could belong to none other than Lady Erythea of Jervaulx abbey. He was told a good deal about that establishment. It was easier to start Mrs. Sunning talking than to stop her.

Obviously, Amy had something to fear from Jervaulx; something that bound her to secrecy, and led her to run risks. It annoyed Billy that she should have anything to fear whatever.

"Sometimes," said Billy to himself, as the lodge gates of Jervaulx came in sight, "a broncho filly with the spring blood in her will get doin' stunts an' galloping among the gopher holes. When they do that they're liable to fall an' break a cannon-bone. It's the same with her. If she doesn't want me, why she doesn't. But if she does, I'm going to be right there."

He dismounted some little distance short of the park entrance. The dark pile of the abbey was visible, a quarter of a mile across the grasslands.

Billy paused and reflected. The journey could be nothing more than a scouting expedition. He wished very much that he had been closer on Aimee's tracks.

Just then he observed a light flash out in one of the abbey windows. Faint, tintinnabulatory sounds were borne to him upon the night breeze—the clanging of a bell.

He watched the house with alert and thoughtful eyes. In a few moments two dim figures became visible, moving swiftly. An imaginative onlooker might have thought them to be goblins, gamboling across the sward. But they kept an uncommonly straight line, crossing the park and heading for a point a few hundred yards to Billy's right. Two people—running swiftly.

Billy followed them with his eyes. The foremost was long-limbed, scudding along with giant strides. The other, close behind, moved no less swiftly, but it was a figure of vague outlines, apparently wearing a cloak or dust-coat. They vanished from sight against the park fence where the lane turned.

"If that ain't a hold-up," said Billy, starting away from the fence, "there never was one yet!"

He heard the cough and splutter of a starting motorcycle under tall trees far up the lane. For one moment he listened, then made a dash for the Sphinx.

"A get-away!" said Billy. "My job!"

He threw his leg over the Sphinx and whirred off round the corner. He lifted his chin and gave a joyous laugh, like the bay of a hound. The lust of the hunter was in his blood.

The rider ahead, already aware that he was being chased, let out his machine at breakneck speed. The ray from Billy's lamp showed him a man crouching low between the handlebars, his arms spread like the wings of a bat. On the pillion behind crouched a small, muffled figure.

"Give up!" shouted Billy, as he overtook them. "You can't make it. I've got you!"

A hand stretched out from the figure on the pillion, and emitted a barking flash of fire. It dazzled Billy for the moment. Something zipped through his hair; automatically his left hand tightened on the valve-lifter and the Sphinx slowed, allowing the other cycle to shoot ahead.

Billy made a lurid remark, and at once increased speed again to close with the fugitives. Right ahead the lane forked on to the main road, and thither the driver of the other cycle was obviously heading. But the lights of a car were in sight, approaching rapidly on the road. The rider of the cycle had evidently no ambition to meet it: at the last moment he swerved left and continued along the narrow lane.

Billy laughed aloud.

"The guy's cornered himself!" he thought. "He's taken the blind alley. I've got him!"

The lane was very rutty and uneven. [illegible] than a fist with six feet of activity behind it. Billy's left dashed the pistol hand aside, the bullet spat impotently into the air, and his right came with a terrific upper-cut beneath the man's chin, lifting him off his feet to fall inert.

As he came down, something skipped and rolled away from him along the grass, in the ray of the Sphinx's headlight. With the swift instinct for loot Billy pounced upon it—a sumptuous looking little case of leather, with a clasp. Billy thrust it in his pocket and turned to the fallen man, who lay with closed eyes and his head moving faintly from side to side.

"Mighty slow with a gun," said Billy, stooping over him. "I'm going over you for the rest of the goods, Bud."

A moan from the other malefactor, lying by the fallen cycle, interrupted him. So pathetic and treble a moan was it that Billy started and jerked himself upright, staring.

"Lordy!" he gasped, with remorse and concern. "It's a woman!"

The discovery was disconcerting enough. But a thought shot through his brain that nearly paralyzed Billy. What woman was it?

He hurried to her side. She had already raised herself on one hand and seemed trying feebly to get up. Billy stooped over her.

"Much hurt?" he stammered. "Here—"

At that moment the fallen driver recovered and stirred. Billy turned his head toward him, with a quick instinct—the danger lay closer at hand.

The woman's hand was grasping a stone, and, as Billy turned, she brought her arm round with a sweep, swift as a striking snake. The chunk of rock crashed full on the side of Billy's head. He fell as an ox falls, and lay still.

The woman staggered to her feet and ran to her prostrate companion.

"He's got his!" she panted. "You hurt, Jake?"

She helped the man to rise. He stood dazedly for a moment; the spinal jar from a knock-out under the point of the chin is terrific, but evanescent.

"Look lively an' beat it!" gasped the woman, hauling the motorcycle upright with surprising ease. "See if the bulgine'll run—we'll have the cops here next!"

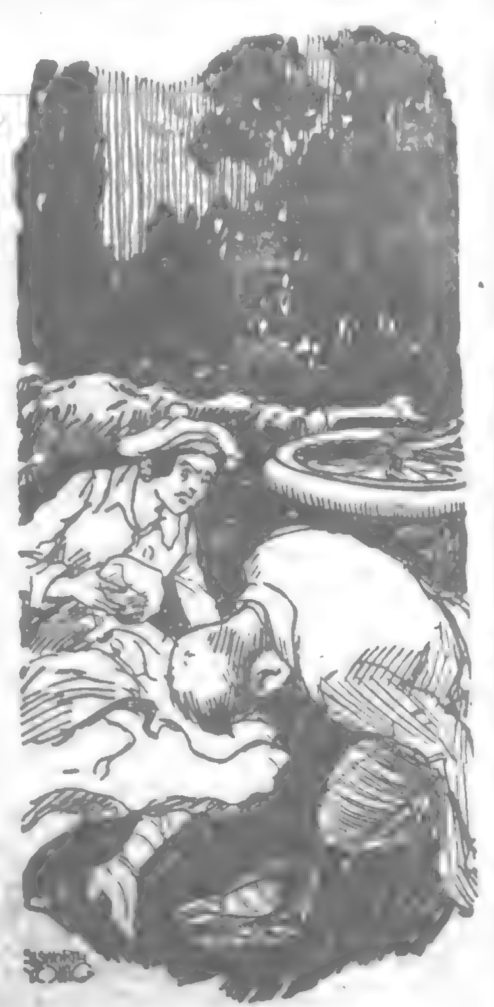
"Got to settle with him!" said the man thickly, glancing at the prostrate Billy.

"He's all in, I tell you. Get her going!"

The man wrenched the motorcycle round, and fumbled at the feed and controls with nervous fingers. While he did so the woman snatched up another stone, and, running to the Sphinx, hammered on the engine and the levers. She had dealt three or four lusty strokes when the other motorcycle came spitting and wobbling past her. The woman ran to it and swung herself up deftly behind.

"Let her out. We'll clear yet!"

The motorcycle, coughing and missing fire badly, trundled back down the lane the way it had come. Jack the Climber leaned to the handle-bars, Calamity Kate, her arms tight round him, settled herself on the pillion. Together they whirred away into the darkness.



He Fell as an Ox Falls.

CHAPTER XI

—

Confession.

It was very dark and very quiet at the lane's end when Billy at last stirred, and, after an interval of slowly returning consciousness, managed to raise himself dizzily to a sitting position.

He pressed his hands to the side of his head and remained for awhile motionless, conscious of a damp warmth under his left palm. His eyes fixed on a white, chalky stone, as big as a doubled fist, that lay on the grass beside him. Events began to [illegible] themselves in a brain that [illegible]

"[illegible]," murmured Billy, [illegible] a touch of pride, "isn't [illegible] in an argu- [illegible]

the machine crashed," thought Billy. "She loosed it at me when I was riding up. Lucky for me she hadn't it just now. Some girl!"

He heaved himself to his feet unsteadily, made for a ditch where there was a glitter of water, and bathed the tender side of his head. The water revived him; save for a cut under his hair, no serious damage was done, though the blow might easily have cracked a weaker skull.

"I don't see that I shine much, over this job," said Billy despondently; "they sure handed it to me. Got right under my guard. Never thought of a woman sharing in a hold-up; an' yet I guess it's been done before."

He picked up the pistol, was about to pocket it, but altered his mind and flung it in the ditch. The other automatic was nowhere to be seen. Billy walked towards the Sphinx, the headlamp of which was now in darkness. His hand swung against a large lump projecting from the side of his coat. He halted and dragged out the leather case. Billy had forgotten its existence.

"Why, here's something saved from the wreck!" he exclaimed. "They couldn't have seen me get it."

He dropped on one knee, opened the case, and switched the little electric torch over it.

Billy gave a stifled gasp. On a bed of cream silk velvet reposed a necklace of amethysts, ending in a loop of nine superb emeralds that shone with changing green fires under the torch's glow. Billy was not an expert in gems, but he guessed that these were such as a prince might be proud to own.

"This is the darnedest game I ever was up against," he said [illegible], returning the case carefully to his pocket.

He made a rapid examination of the Sphinx, and at once became aware of Calamity Kate's handiwork. In spite of the best intentions, however, that enterprising lady had overestimated the vulnerability both of Billy's skull and his motorcycle. She had done some damage, but had missed the more vital parts of the Sphinx. After ten minutes' work Billy's capable hands restored the machine to fair running order, and he rode away down the lane. Both lamps were out of action.

Any further pursuit of the [illegible] he put aside as a useless proposition. He had a vague idea that they had gone hours ago; in fact, however, he had not been unconscious more than a few minutes.

"There's only one thing to do," said Billy, "an' that's—"

A disconcerting thought flashed through his mind. The bumping of the jewel-case against his side suggested it.

"Gee!" he murmured, "I'm Little Boy Blue, all right. But if I was to run against the cops now, it'd take a heap of explanation before they slugged me. My story'd look pretty thin. Jewel-case—motorbike—it only wants one item to complete the outfit!"

He turned on to the high road, rapidly resolving on a plan of action as he rode. It was a good plan, but a few moments later it was hopelessly upset again. He was, as it happened, nearer to Stanhoe than to Jervaulx abbey, and as he turned in the direction of the latter Billy became aware of someone running toward him along the road—a dark figure, with a peculiar moving gleam of whiteness about it. He stopped the Sphinx immediately and thrust out his feet to steady himself.

The dark figure checked in its stride, hesitated, and seemed about to bolt back again.

"Partner!" cried Billy in amazement. "Is that you?"

The reply was a wild gasp. Aimee, breathless, muddy, with an appreciable breadth of white cambric showing at the base of her skirt, rushed up to him and seized his arm.

"Billy! Oh, I'm so glad—I'm so glad!" she panted. "Billy, I—I'm in an awful mess! The absolute limit!"

"How! Why?"

"I was in a house—and it was burgled"—gulped Aimee, struggling for breath "they thought it was me—and I scooted—they're chasing me."

It was not a vividly lucid explanation. But Billy's intelligence department connected with it at once; it supplied the missing factors. Before he could answer, a pair of lights flashed into view far down the road, approaching at speed.

"Car!" exclaimed Aimee, and with a note of panic—"Billy, suppose it's police? If so, they'll be looking for me!" She made a dash for the pillion of the Sphinx. "Get me out of this, Billy—start her quick!"

"Not on your life!" said Billy swiftly. "That's the last thing on earth for you now. Come with me."

He ran back fifty yards along the road to a field gate. In a few moments he had it open, thrust the Sphinx through, let her fall behind the hedge, and dragged Aimee with him into the ditch. They had hardly gained that cover when the car swept by with a roar, showing a glimpse of police helmets scudding past the low rampart of thorn fence. The majesty of law and order, sweeping inexorably through the night. A rattle, a hoot, and it was gone.

In the ditch there was painful silence. Billy mechanically felt his bulging pocket, glanced for a moment at the Sphinx, and then stared blankly at Aimee.

"The idea is," continued Aimee, "that I've lost my character."

[illegible]

APRIL

L 9/2

558

Aspirin

Say "Bayer" and Insist!

Genuine BAYER

Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer product prescribed by physicians over twenty-two years and proved safe by millions for

Colds	Headache
Toothache	Lumbago
Earache	Rheumatism
Neuralgia	Pain, Pain

Accept "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" only. Each unbroken package contains proper directions. Handy boxes of twelve tablets cost few cents. Druggists also sell bottles of 24 and 100. Asperin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.—Advertisement.

Too Early.

Mother—Isn't it about time that young man of yours was entertaining the prospects of matrimony?

Daughter—Not yet. He don't come until 3 o'clock.

MRS. EARLS TELLS WOMEN

How Backache and Periodic Pains Yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Olean, N. Y. — "Every month my blood would go to my head and I would have such a headache, nosebleed, backache and pains that I could not do my work. At night I could not get my rest and nothing seemed to do me any good. I read some of your testimonials about what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others, so I decided to try it. I had only taken two bottles when I began to be better, and my back did not hurt me nor my head ache. I felt like a new woman. The Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine and I will always recommend it."—Mrs. A. D. EARLS, 580 N. 5th St., Olean, N. Y.

Mrs. Kelsey adds her Testimony

Copenhagen, N. Y.—"I read your advertisement in the papers and my husband induced me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to get relief from pains and weakness. I was so weak that I could not walk at times. Now I can do my housework and help my husband out doors, too. I am willing for you to publish this letter if you think it will help others."—Mrs. HERBERT KELSEY, R.F.D., Copenhagen, N.Y.

Stop Laxatives

Which Only Aggravate Constipation

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication. Try it today.

Nujol

A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

You can't feel so good but what [illegible] will make you feel better.
Get a 25c. Box.

IF YOUR VETERINARIAN Uses "Carter's" [illegible]

Berkeley [illegible]

New Hair [illegible]

The Cottage Gardener

One-Horse Cultivators or the Wheel Hoe Serve the Cottage Gardener in the Cultivation of His Crops, Which Is Required Several Times During the Growing Season.

HAVE LONG ROWS IN YOUR GARDEN

Plan Will Not Only Save Labor but Will Prevent Injury to Tender Plants.

Arrange the garden in long rows and cultivate the crops with a horse whenever this is possible, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture. Horse cultivation can be practiced where the rows are as narrow as 24 inches, but as a rule it does not pay to have the rows closer than 30 or 36 inches.

One good arrangement is to have the crops grown in three-foot rows occupying the major portion of the garden, with a narrow strip along one side laid off in small beds or narrow rows in which all the smaller crops can be grown. One farmer near Washington, D. C. who is noted for having a good garden follows the practice of cultivating with a horse every Saturday afternoon, provided the soil is not too wet from a recent rain. It takes only about one hour to go over the garden with a cultivator and then with a little hand hoeing he is able to keep his garden in perfect condition. While it may not always be convenient to cultivate the garden at a specified time as does this farmer, yet there are often short periods in farm work during which the garden can be cultivated.

The long narrow garden is easier to plow than one that is more nearly square and requires less turning in cultivation. If less than a full row of any one vegetable is desired, this will not cause any inconvenience, as two or three different kinds of vegetables may be planted in one row. The kind of cultivator to use in cultivating the garden does not matter greatly, but one having a number of fairly small teeth that will pulverize the soil.

There are two types of one-horse cultivators on the market, one having five teeth with various sizes and shapes of points that can be changed to suit local conditions and another which is an "A"-shaped cultivator and having about 15 small teeth or shovels.

The wheel hoe is a desirable tool for use in the garden, mainly for finishing up the cultivation close to the rows of plants after the rows have been gone through with a horse cultivator. This applies especially to onions, beets, carrots, parsnips, celery and several of the low-growing and compact types of vegetables. The rows should be perfectly straight. It is better not to depend upon a horse-drawn marker for laying off the rows, but to use a line.

SUCCESS WITH LIMA BEANS

Variety Is Last of Bean Family to Be Planted; May Be Grown to Stakes or Poles.

Tenderest of all the bean tribe and last to be planted are the limas, one of the finest garden vegetables. Both the bush form and the pole varieties are vegetables which should be found in every garden.

Usually, the pole varieties are the more satisfactory to a [illegible] beginner as they yield a [illegible] crop and [illegible] pod than the [illegible] varieties, [illegible] need good cultivation and [illegible] room to develop.

There are many complaints about lima beans [illegible] a majority of [illegible] cause. [illegible]

COLOR SCHEME IS VERY IMPORTANT

Harmony in the Way of Shrubbery and Flowers Should Be Considered.

Harmony is the first law of nature, not only in the color of a house, but in the way shrubbery and flowers are placed about it. More attention should be given, says the United States Department of Agriculture, to improving the home surroundings, including the care of a good lawn and the growing of roses and other flowers that will add beauty to the premises. It has been suggested that it would be appropriate if paint were sold with flower and vegetable seeds, because the esthetic relation between a properly painted house and outbuildings, a flower garden and a vegetable garden are so close as to warrant their being considered together.

Incidentally, a trash burner might be located in an inconspicuous corner of the back yard, to receive all the various papers and litter that from time to time blow about and spoil even the most charming home pictures. Home will always be more attractive and pleasant if it is surrounded by the beautiful growing things of nature as well as the necessities. One also owes it to one's pride as a citizen in a community, and to the right of other people to see beauty around them, not to permit the home surroundings to be ugly and unattractive.

Roses to Screen Porch.

PLUCKING SPINACH LEAVES

Heart of the Plant Should Be Left to Produce More Tender Sprouts.

In gathering spinach from the home garden during the early part of the season and before the plants have attained full size, the outer leaves are simply picked off, leaving the heart of the plant to [illegible]. Later and toward the end of the season the entire plant is [illegible] cutting off just above the surface of the ground. In [illegible] the market the [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

MRS. M. SNYDER GAINS 20 LBS.

Declares Tanlac Overcame Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble, Restoring Full Vigor.

"Tanlac built me up twenty pounds, and I am as happy over my new health as my little boy was over his Christmas toys," declared Mrs. Mary Snyder, 838 Estes St., Charlottesville, Va.

"For two years I suffered from stomach trouble, rheumatism and a nervous, run-down condition. I was almost a skeleton and got to the point where, when I went to bed nights, I wondered if I would be able to get up in the morning. Rheumatism in my shoulders was so painful, and I was so thin and weak that I did little of anything except try to get well.

"I was in despair when I started taking Tanlac, but now my troubles are all gone and I am as healthy and happy as I could wish to be. Tanlac has earned my undying gratitude."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

Difficult to Understand.

"It's hard to understand."

"What is it?"

"The fact that children are such a nuisance to the neighbors who have only a dog."

FOR OVER 40 YEARS

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE has been used successfully in the treatment of Catarrh.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an Ointment which Quickly Relieves by local application, and the Internal Medicine, a Tonic, which acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces, thus reducing the inflammation.

Sold by all druggists.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

Versatility Required.

Detroit Ad—"First-class cook—Will pay good wages to one who can cook frogs' legs, male or female."—Boston Transcript.

SPRING CLEANING

After the WEAR and TEAR of a hard winter, SPRING CLEANING has a very real meaning to all of us this year. It means that besides getting our HOUSE in order for the SPRING to look bright and attractive, we must also see to it that we are getting OURSELVES into proper shape to be FIT, STRONG and fully CAPABLE for active work during the balance of the year.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS will help you do this work if taken NOW. Thousands of healthy people take DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS every year during SPRING and FALL as directed, simply to keep their kidneys in perfect condition at all times.

There is DANGER AHEAD if you neglect your KIDNEYS.

Take DODD'S Kidney Pills NOW and avert such possible dangers and fortify yourself against KIDNEY TROUBLE.

But we should not think of the DARK side of life. Think of the BRIGHT, SUNNY future that may be yours. Remedy such possible weakness of the Kidneys NOW, and add years to a happier and brighter life, that will enable you to enter into your daily work, full of PEP and ENTHUSIASM, feeling YOUNG at THREE SCORE AND TEN.

READ WHAT THESE PEOPLE, ONCE SICK AND AILING, NOW FULL OF LIFE, HEALTH AND ENTHUSIASM, HAVE TO SAY ABOUT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS:

Three Score and Ten and Feeling Fine

"About fifteen years ago I used DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS and was relieved of a very stubborn case of KIDNEY TROUBLE. I have now rounded out my "THREE SCORE AND TEN" and am still feeling fine—better than for twenty years. I attribute my present good health and vitality to DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS, and I always recommend them whenever I can."

SAMUEL P. BENTON,
526 Central Avenue,
Hot Springs National Park, Arkansas.

Given Up by Three Doctors

"Several years ago I was very low with a severe attack of KIDNEY TROUBLE. Three noted physicians had given me up, expecting DEATH at any moment. I bought a supply of DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS, took a double dose right away, and the second day I actually felt relieved. I continued to use them and they CURED me. This was years ago, and I never had another attack. Last winter DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS cured me from a severe attack of the FLUE."

B. C. BIRCHLER,
Fulda, Ind.

They Saved His Life

"My trouble was SCIATICA. My back was affected and it took the form of LUMBAGO. Also had NEURALGIA, cramps in my muscles, pain and ache on the top of my head and in different parts of the body, nervous spells, dizzy spells. Symptoms of kidney trouble. I then commenced to take DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS. They were the means of saving my life."

REV. W. H. WARNER,
188 East Ridge Street,
Nanticoke, Pa.

Consulted Many Doctors. Told Had Bright's Disease and Lumbago.

"I had been troubled with LUMBAGO for twenty years. Consulted many doctors and tried all kinds of medicine, but all to no purpose. Six years ago I was told I had BRIGHT'S DISEASE in the last stages. I commenced then to use DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS and contribute my present good health to these kidney pills. I now take DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS twice a year, in spring and fall, in order to keep in good shape at all times. Mrs. Schmitz has also used DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS, and she is surely getting better. I recommend DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS to all friends."

PROF. AUG. F. W. SCHMITZ,
Route 3, Box 39,
Thomas, Okla.

Read Statement From City of Buffalo's Famous Analytical Chemist, Doctor Herbert M. Hill, Regarding Purity and Medicinal Value of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

HERBERT M. HILL, Ph. D.
Analytical and Consulting Chemist and Chemical Engineer
20 West Eagle Street, Rooms 5, 6, 7, 8, 9
Buffalo, N. Y.

March 23rd, 1923.

Dodd's Medicine Company,
City.

Gentlemen:

I have examined a sample of Dodd's Kidney Pills and I find them FREE from all habit-forming drugs. From the formula after which they are made I am certain that they contain no material harmful to the human system and that they are valuable for the purpose intended when taken according to directions.

Respectfully,
HERBERT M. HILL.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS are sold by druggists everywhere. Large box, 60 cents. Money back if not satisfied. Should your druggist, perchance, be sold out of DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS, do not accept any substitute with a similar name. Get the BEST, the GENUINE DODD'S. Used for generations and always found good and reliable. Your druggist can easily secure DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS from his jobber or wholesale house, or you may send 60 cents direct to us and we will send you a large box at once. But "ASK YOUR DRUGGIST FIRST." Whatever you do, be sure you get from your druggist the genuine DODD'S. Remember, there are 3 D's in the name: D-O-D-D-'S. Take no other. We shall be glad to receive letters from users of Dodd's Kidney Pills, telling us of result. We will send them DIET rules, etc., etc., FREE OF ALL CHARGES.

DODD'S MEDICINE COMPANY, 700 Main St., BUFFALO, N.Y.

10 Cents Gives Cheerful New Color Tone to Old Curtains

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES—dyes or tints as you wish

MATTER COULD BE ARRANGED

Rather Embarrassing, However, the Frankness With Which Ruth Discussed the Idea.

We had a wealthy bachelor, terribly stingy, living across the hall in our apartment. He came to our apartment frequently to play cards.

He and our little four-year-old daughter, Ruth, became friends. He always tried to get her to call him "Uncle Frank."

I remarked to my husband I would teach her to call him uncle if I thought he would leave her something in his will.

One evening in the midst of our card game, Ruth touched him on an elbow and said, "Mother says she will teach me to call you uncle if you leave me some of your will."—Chicago Tribune.

She Remembered Him.

Mrs. C. M. writes that while out walking with her six-year-old niece, a man went past them and lifted his hat.

"Who was that, auntie?" inquired the child.

"That's Mr. Blank, dear. He's the village undertaker."

"Oh, yes," returned the little one quickly, "I remember him now. He undertook my grandma. — Boston Evening Transcript.

It's wonderful what good memories people develop after they have done you a favor.

BY THE SCIENTIFIC METHOD

Modern Mother, Physician Thinks, Has Poor Ways of Bringing Up Her Children.

Dr. Alzamon Lucas of New York, who claims that by the exercise of will power a mother can determine both the sex and the vocation of her unborn child, said at Atlantic City the other day:

"I hope to see—in fact, I do see—a revival of the good old-fashioned motherhood idea. The modern mother was too scientific altogether. She glanced through a textbook and thought she knew it all.

"There's a story about a nursemaid who rushed into the smoking room of one of these modern mothers and shrieked:

"'Oh, my goodness, ma'am, the twins have fallen down the well! What shall I do?'

"The lady lit a cigarette and answered calmly:

"'Go to the library and bring me the last number of "Modern Motherhood." There's a very complete article in it on "How to Bring Up Children."'"

Deference to Example.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "don't you think a woman should be guided by the taste of her husband?"

"Of course."

"So do I. That's why I'm going to have my hair cut short and learn to smoke."

They Are.

"They come high," observed Jones.

"What do?" asked Smith.

"These movie stars."

Red Cross Ball Blue should be used in every home. It makes clothes white as snow and never injures the fabric. All good grocers.—Advertisement.

JUST HAD TO "MINGLE THEM"

Task Set Before Little Erastus Could Hardly Be Classed as an Impossible One.

Erastus was dressing to go to Sunday school. He couldn't find his clothes and pestered his mother in his efforts to discover them. On this particular Sunday he seemed worse than ever. Finally he was dressed except for his feet.

"Ma!" he said plaintively, "does you know whereabouts ma shoes and stockin's is?"

"Rastus," said his mother, exasperated, "yo is de good-fer-nothin'-ness chile dat I knows. Yo' shoes am behind de do', yo' stockin's am undah de bed and yo' feets am on you. Now see can you mingle 'em."

Poor Service.

She was in a telephone booth and had just put in toll call. She wept bitterly as she pulled down on the hook to attract central's attention.

"Hello?" came central's clear voice.

"H—hello," she sobbed. "I w—want my money back. Harold w—wouldn't speak to me."

No need to say, "I wish I dared"

How often have you heard the expression, "I can't drink coffee; it doesn't agree with me!" Yet there is an undeniable satisfaction in having a hot drink with meals.

Postum supplies satisfaction and safety, both. No need to deny yourself the pleasure of this fragrant, invigorating cup through fear of nervous disturbance afterward. Postum is rich and comforting, and there's nothing in it that can harm anybody.

Why not follow the example of the thousands who have left off the risks of coffee, for the assured satisfaction and safety of Postum?

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared; made by boiling fully 20 minutes.

Postum FOR HEALTH

"There's a Reason"

Made by Postum Cereal Co., Inc., Battle Creek, Michigan

APRIL

L 912

The St. Joe News

William S. Quance,
Editor and Publisher.

One Year, - - $1.50
Six Months, - - - .75
Three Months, - - .40
One Month, - - - .15
Single Copy, - - - .05
(Advertising Rates on Application)

Entered at the postoffice at St. Joe, Indiana, as second class matter.

Foreign Advertising Representative
THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

Ye editor and wife called on Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Wilmot in Fort Wayne Sunday afternoon.

March weather is being carried on into April if we know anything about it.

Taxes sure are high, but don't you really enjoy riding over the roads which lead to our town.

We are very much concerned that St. Joe organise a base ball team this season but we don't like to see it play on Sundays.

Not much has been said about oiling the streets yet, but it will soon be time to get the citisens lined up on the subject.

Their are many taking advantage of these nice days by cleaning up their premises, but there are some who will wait until fall to even haul away ashes.

A few still maintain the idea that all business and copy for the News is censored by parties other than the one opparently in charge. Such stuff is laughable. Some folks know more about other peoples' business than of their own.

Not many men are as spry at the age of 62 years as was John Fetters on April 1, his 62nd birthday, when he turned four handsprings. Fetters has for several years made a practice of turning handsprings on his birthday.

Every resident of Defiance county has a debt of $134.44 hanging over his or her head because of bonds issued by the taxing districts in this county. In 1910 this debt amounted to only $21.43.—Hicksville News-Tribune.

Someone has asked whether we are going to have band concerts this summer again or not. We felt confident enough to reply that we sure would have. The boys are becoming more interested again and with the end of the school term several will return to the organization and others will begin.

A Good Thing - DON'T MISS IT.

Send your name and address plainly written together with 5 cents (and this slip) to Chamberlain Medicine Co., Des Moines, Iowa, and receive in return a trial package containing Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for coughs, colds, croup, bronchial, "flu" and whooping coughs, and tickling throat; Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets for stomach troubles, indigestion, gassy pains that crowd the heart, biliousness and constipation; Chamberlain's Salve, needed in every family for burns, scalds, wounds, piles, and skin affections; these valued family medicines for only 5 cents. Don't miss it.

Program for the 103rd. Convention

of the

Jackson Township S. S. Association

To Be Held at Rehobeth

Sunday, April 22, 1923, 1:30 p.m.

Organ Voluntary
Singing - - - - - - - - - Convention
Devotional - - - - - - - - Ray Armstrong
Singing - - - - - - - - - Convention
Words of Welcome - - - - - - Rev. Troup
Response - - - - - - - - - Ernest Cornell
Singing - - - - - - - - - Convention
Appointment of Committees
Reports of Division Superintendents
Reports of Sunday School Secretaries
Music
Discussion - - - - - - Subject—"Excelsior"
  1—Home Responsibility.
  2—Graded Instruction.
  3—Co-operation of the Public Schools.
  4—Advantages of a Church School.
- - - - - - - - - Rev. C. H. Havens
Special Music
Recitations
Secretary and Treasury's Reports
Reports of Committees - - Secretary's Report
Offering
Singing - - - - - - - - - Convention
Adjournment with Closing Prayer

—S. M. HIGH, Chairman
—INEZ WYATT, Sec'y.

NEWVILLE

John Miller made a business trip to St. Joe Friday.

Mrs. Blanch Osbun of Orangeville, is sick with the smallpox.

For good glasses see Griest at American Building Hicksville, Ohio.

Miss Freeda Martin, of St. Joe, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Geneva Sechler, Saturday.

Dewey Miller of Auburn, was a Saturday night and Sunday guest of his parents.

Frank Griest and family of Hicksville, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Griest.

The Administrator's sale on the Seely place was attended by a large crowd of people.

The W. C. T. U. met with Mrs. Ida Traxler Tuesday. The May meeting will be with Mrs. Jennie Gengnagle.

Argyl Sechler and wife, Forrest Fusselman, wife and daughter and Mrs. Kate Fusselman were Sunday guests of Edgar Fusselman and wife of Milford.

Dale McNabb moved to Fort Wayne last week where he has employment. A family by the name of Royer moved in the house vacated by McNabb's.

Dr. Bonnell M. Souder
HOSPITAL
Established in 1914
206 West Seventh Street
AUBURN, INDIANA

CONCORD

Paul Krise is at home with the mumps.

Ford Jackson is working in the St. Joe Saw Mill.

Ira Bose commenced work on the Lancaster Morr road one day last week.

Rev. Havens and family were Saturday afternoon callers on Geo. Johnson and family.

Mrs. George Johnson's brother from the county line called on the Johnson family Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Mary E. Baker of Auburn, visited last week with her daughter, Maude Harris and family.

Mr. Frank Meese and wife moved to Concord the latter part of last week, occupying the Ford Jackson property.

Sunday was Mrs. Dell Draggoo's birthday, but we won't publish her age. She is our Sunday School superintendent, and members of the school prepared a surprise for her and the rest of the school to be presented Sunday morning at Sunday School. She was first showered with post card greetings. Then a delicious white cake, which had been made by Mrs George Johnson, with fifty burning candles on it was uncovered. Mrs. Draggoo was told to cut the cake, but when she refused to do so, Mrs. Johnson cut it in fifty pieces and passed it around. Everyone enjoyed the surprise with Mrs. Draggoo and wished her many more happy birthdays.

Hall's Catarrh Medicine
[illegible]

[illegible]

Chiropractor Optician
Calls made at your home by
APPOINTMENT.
EARL E. FRISBIE,
Butler, Indiana.

COLETOWN

Lewis Price called on J. W. Hart and wife Wednesday afternoon.

Mark Murphy and family spent Sunday with Will Sauers and wife.

Lester Pierman and family called on Everett Welch and wife Sunday.

Rev. A. L. Martin, Claud Lamb and Fred Hart called on J. W. Hart and wife Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hart visited Saturday with Sam Keesler and wife at St. Joe.

Everett Welch and wife spent Wednesday and Thursday with Lester Pierman and family.

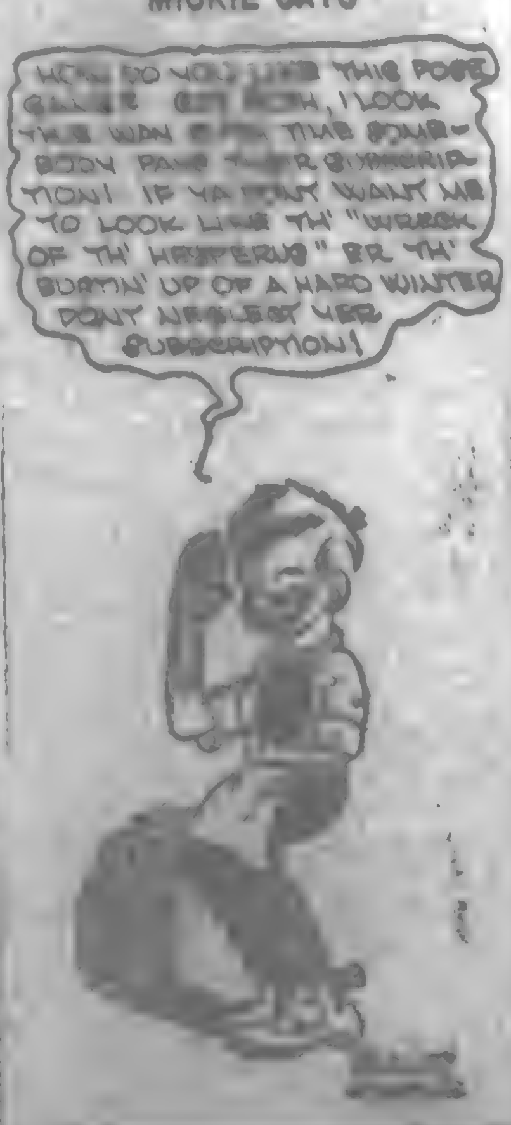
Homer Varner spent Sunday evening with J. D. Brown and family.

World's Biggest Pig Club

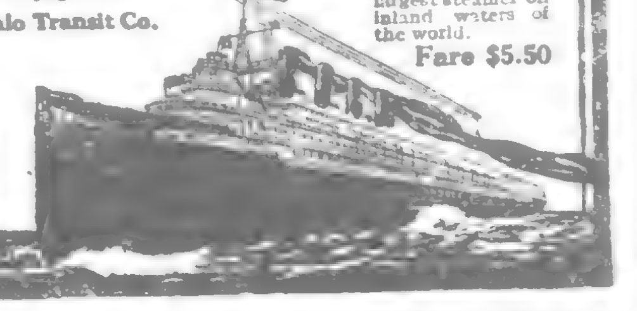
Milford, a small town in Kosciusko county, Indiana, is the home of the largest boys and girls pig club in the world. In the last ten days more than 500 members of the club have received a Spotted Poland gilt, from James T. Shepard, a banker of Milford who has been directing pig club work for many years. More than 100 other boys and girls in the county are waiting for the next distribution, and before the middle of April, the club will have a membership of over 600. The boys and girls will repay Mr. Shepard from the offspring of these gilts.

Many boys and girls of Kosciusko county during the last few years have started herds from membership in this club and are now paying their way through college. Nearly every boy and girl within a radius of ten miles of Milford have their own bank account—savings from money made through pig club membership.

MICKIE SAYS



HOW DO YOU LIKE THIS POSE GALLUS? GEE WHIZ, I LOOK THIS WAY EVERY TIME SOMEBODY PAYS THEIR SUBSCRIPTION! IF YA DON'T WANT ME TO LOOK LIKE TH' "WRECK OF TH' HESPERUS" ER TH' BUSTIN' UP OF A HARD WINTER DON'T NEGLECT YER SUBSCRIPTION!



Make Your Trip More Enjoyable by a Refreshing Night on Lake Erie
(Your rail ticket is good on the boats)
Thousands of east and north bound travelers say they wouldn't have missed that cool, comfortable night on one of our fine steamers. A good bed in a clean stateroom, a long sound sleep and an appetizing breakfast in the morning!
Steamers "SEEANDBEE"—"CITY OF ERIE"—"CITY OF BUFFALO"
Daily, May 1st to November 15th
Leave Cleveland - 9:00 P.M. } Eastern Standard Time { Leave Buffalo - 9:00 P.M.
Arrive Buffalo - 7:30 A.M. } { Arrive Cleveland - 7:30 A.M.
Connections for Niagara Falls, Eastern and Canadian points. Ask your ticket agent or tourist agency for tickets via C & B Line. New Tourist Automobile Rate—$10.00.
Send for free sectional puzzle chart of the Great Ship "Seeandbee" and 32-page booklet.
The Cleveland and Buffalo Transit Co.
Cleveland, Ohio
The Great Ship "Seeandbee" — the largest steamer on inland waters of the world.
Fare $5.50

BANK STATEMENT.

F. E. Rhodes, President; L. B. Fisher, Vice-president; C. G. Rectenwall, Cashier. Report of the condition of the Farmers & Merchants State Bank, a State bank at Spencerville, in the State of Indiana, at the close of its business on Apr. 3, 1923.

RESOURCES
Loans and Discounts	$170,033 97
Overdrafts	227 99
U. S. Bonds	4,788 41
Other Bonds & Securities
Banking House	3,558 34
Furniture and fixtures	2,941 93
Due from Banks and Trust companies	29,797 37
Cash on Hand	3,476 63
Cash Items	200 28
Current Expenses	673 54
Taxes Paid	65 79
Interest Paid	2041 39
Total Resources	217,805 64
LIABILITIES
Capital Stock, paid in	$25,000 00
Surplus	6,050 00
Undivided Profits	5,937 74
Interest, Discount, etc.	2,662 04
Demand deposits	37,685 04
Demand certificates	120,470 82
Bills Payable	20,000 00
Total Liabilities	217,805 64

State of Indiana,
County of DeKalb, ss:

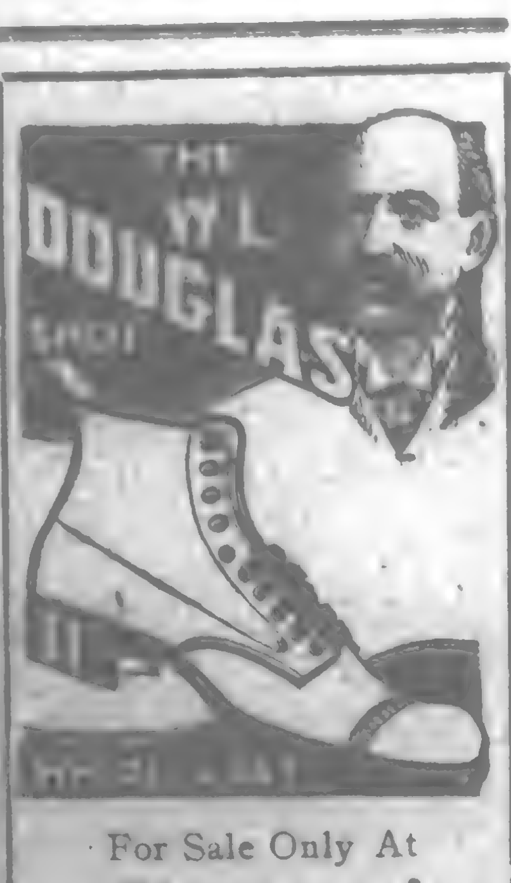
I, C. G. Rectenwall, cashier of the Farmer & Merchant State Bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true.

C. G. RECTENWALL, Cash.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 10th day of April, 1923.

[L S.] F. W. Silberg, N. P.
My com. expires Jan. 1, 1927.

Frank L. Milliman
TRUSTEE
Concord Township
Office Day Friday of Each Week at his residence 2 miles north and 1-2 mile West of St. Joe.



THE W L DOUGLAS SHOE

For Sale Only At
Chaneys'
Auburn, - - - - Ind.

SPENCERVILLE

The Junior, Senior Reception will be given on Wednesday night April 18, at the Lutheran dining Hall. The speakers of the evening will be as follows: Welcome Address, Miss Nellie Shull; Response, Miss Florence Beams; Address, Miss Nellie Baker; History of Senior class, Vaughn Allen; High School Spirit, Prof. Flemming; High School Days, Miss Ida Reed; Prophesy of Junior Senior class, Venus Beerbower; College Days, Miss Reams.

Failure of Carl Fletcher to provide a home for her and his alleged habit of going with other girls, led Lucille Fletcher of Spencerville, to bring a suit for a divorce.

The complaint filed in the DeKalb circuit court by Atkinson & Husselman on behalf of the plaintiff, sets out that immediately after the couple's marriage Fletcher took his bride to the home of his parents to live. She says his parents have a large family and their home was wholly unsuited to her and her husband, but that he refused to provide another home for her. She says she therefore returned to the home of her own parents and that since that time her husband has not supported her.

Since the date of their marriage Fletcher has been going with other girls in the community, his wife alleges, and he told her he would not live with her if she got down on her knees and asked him to do so. The plaintiff adds that her husband told her he was not the father of their child.

Fletcher's home is at Hicksville. —Auburn Star.

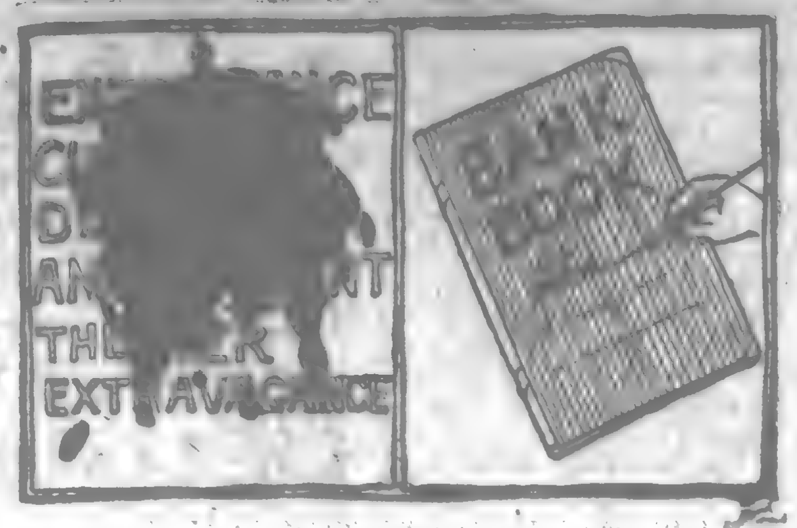
H. O. WILLIAMS
THE
Abstracter
is able to furnish you with a complete Abstract of Title to any description of Real Estate in DeKalb County.
OFFICE
West Seventh Street
AUBURN
FIRE INSURANCE NOTARY PUBLIC

C. R Baumgartner, D V M
Veterinarians
OFFICE and HOSPITAL
SPENCERVILLE, - IND.
Phones—Office No. 7
F W Silberg, D V M

Lehman's
CLOTHING HOUSE
ESTABLISHED
MENS AND BOYS OUTFITTERS
Fort Wayne, Ind.

APRIL

£ 91



That Saving Habit

Saving is a matter of habit. And the habit grows, just like the savings.

To acquire the habit when young with small sums is to practice the habit when older with larger sums.

So encourage the little fellows to start a savings account with us at once and watch the habit grow.

Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank

Capital Stock, - $25,000

Spencerville, Ind.

The Bank of Personal Services

SPENCERVILLE

Joel Balts is quite ill with neuralgia at his home.

Mrs. Fred Brewster and children were Sunday guests of Elmar Smith and famify.

Mrs. Florence Silberg and daughter were guests of relatives at Garrett last week.

F. W. Silberg, Raymond Rhodes and Ray Zimmerman spent Thursday at Decatur.

The C. C. Club was most pleasantly entertained at the home of Mrs. F. A. Dean. The next meeting will pe at the home of Mrs. Verna Rhodes north of town.

The Spencer Township Sunday School convention will be held next Sunday afternoon at the Coburntown church. The speaker of the day will be D.A. J. Brown, a former pastor of the Meteodist church, and Dr. Johnson of St. Joe.

Rev. F. E. Brewster, who has been pastor of the local Methodist church for the past year has been returned to this charge and will be the pastor for the next twelve months. He attended the State Conference of the church held at Kokomo last week.

Miss Mary Pervines of Auburn, visited friends at this place Sunday.

Charles Chapman and family, who spent the winter in Florida, returned home last week.

Mrs. S. E. Koonts is visiting her son, John Koonts and family, at Fort Wayne this week.

For Sale—Rural New York Potatoes. J. R Doll,
Spencerville, Ind.

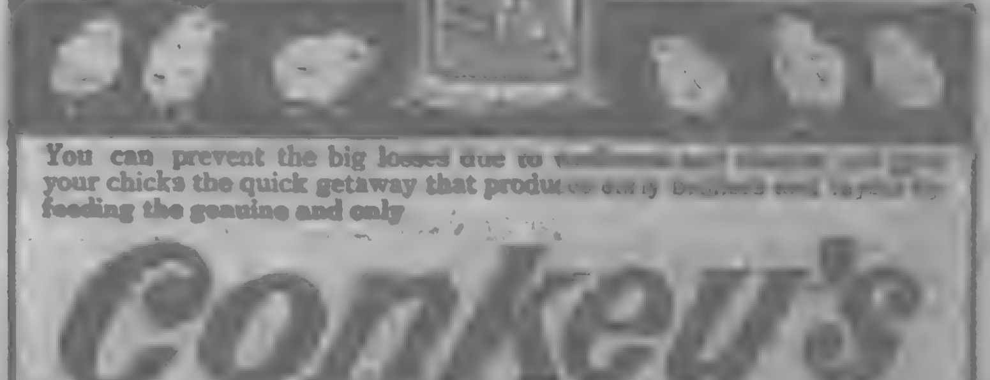
The Misses Berniece and Edna Perry of Hicksville, W. P. Steward and famify, William Valleau and Clifford Brandon were Sunday evening guests of Fred Strubing and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Balts, Mr and Mrs. Frank Balts attended the infair dinner of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Rhodefer at the home of William Rhoderfer and wife at Auburn, Sunday.

The eighth grade county examination will be held at this place on Saturday, April 21 at the high school building. There are twelve members of the class and are as follows: Margarite Koch, Doris Rhoades, Rachel Goings, Ada Bowser, Ethel Lindley, Irma Egler, Gaylon Goldsmith, Morris Hollabaugh, Gale Bowser, Charles Timmerman, Larwence Goings and Delbert Furnish.

Start Them Right

Raise More Chicks



You can prevent the big losses due to [illegible] and give your chicks the quick getaway that produces [illegible] by feeding the genuine and only

Conkey's

Buttermilk Starting Feed

[illegible]

Try It and You'll Never Be Without It

[illegible]

Sold and [illegible]

[illegible]

Ford

ANNOUNCEMENT

of Interest to

MILLIONS of FAMILIES

"I will build a car for the multitude"

Said Henry Ford in 1903—Read how the fulfillment of that prophecy is now made possible through the

FORD WEEKLY PURCHASE PLAN

For many years it has been Henry Ford's personal ambition to make the Ford the universal family car—to put it within the reach of millions of people who have never been privileged to enjoy the benefits of motor car ownership.

During the past fifteen years over 7,000,000 Ford cars have been placed in the hands of retail customers—more than a million and a half of them within the past twelve months—and yet there are still millions of families who are hopefully - looking forward to the day when they can own a Ford.

And now the way is open.

Under the terms of this plan you can select your Ford Car, set aside a small amount each week and you will be surprised how soon you will own it. In the meantime your money will be deposited in our local bank where it will draw interest.

Think it over. Five dollars will start an account. The whole family can participate in it—father, mother, brothers and sisters each doing a little.

Why not start today. Stop in and talk it over with your local Ford dealer. He will be glad to fully explain the details of the plan and help you get started toward the ownership of a Ford car.

FORD MOTOR COMPANY
DETROIT, MICHIGAN

F. W. SILBERG, Authorized Agent
SPENCERVILLE, IND.

School Notes

The commencement of Spencer township will be held at the Lutheran [illegible]

[illegible]

DOES YOUR HOUSE HAVE WET FEET?

A house without a cement basement floor is like a man with wet feet. It is damp, cold and a constant danger of health.

[illegible]

In addition to protecting health and property, such a floor makes available a large amount of space which was previously [illegible]. For instance, a property with [illegible] basement makes an [illegible] room, and can, if necessary, be used to advantage for sleeping purposes.

[illegible]

Spencerville Lumber Co.

[illegible]

APRIL

Matrimonial Adventures

Pursuit

BY

Henry Sydnor Harrison

Author of "Queed," "V. V.'s Eyes," "Angela's Business," "Saint Teresa," etc.

Copyright by United Feature Syndicate

A FEW WORDS ABOUT HENRY SYDNOR HARRISON

It is like shaking hands with an old friend to see the name of Henry Sydnor Harrison. Some years ago his first book, "Queed," gave him instant place as one of our foremost American novelists. Then at intervals—for Mr. Harrison is an author who works long and with infinite care—came "V. V.'s Eyes" and "Angela's Business," both startling successes. "Saint Teresa" established him as a front-rank American author.

He started writing when he first left college, and mainly at night, because, he said, he had to make a living. He joined the staff of the Richmond Times-Dispatch. He laughed when I asked him what he did there. "I was paragrapher, at first," he said, "then editorial writer, and often poet!" At the end of five years, having saved some money, he resigned to see if he could make his way at writing alone.

To get a short story from Mr. Harrison is an event, his time is so fully occupied with work scheduled ahead. But like the others in the Star Author Series of Matrimonial Adventures, he made the opportunity to contribute.

"Pursuit" may be a bit cynical, but it gives much food for thought and reflection.

MARY STEWART CUTTING, JR.

It was the evening of May Hesketh's picnic supper, small but memorable; and now the clocks, had there been any on the island, would have pointed close to midnight. What was so rare as this night in June? Sailing wisps of cloud shredded the face of the high moon; the blackness of the woods, the glades and dells, the vine-covered rocks and the empty quarry, were stippled and patched with silver; the lake was a sheet of silver stretching far away to lose itself in a lovely dusk. Through the verdure a soft breeze whispered; from the water floated voices of the merrymakers, receding; and the woman stealing on light feet up the path, a slim and not incongruous figure in her white bathing dress, with unbound dark hair streaming to her waist, reflected that, for an hour at least, she would be alone here.

But it was not so. From the impenetrable shadows, as she neared the ruined cabin, the figure of a man abruptly emerged upon the path; he stood confronting her. She started a little, and then she saw, with a wild shoot of satisfaction, that this man was her husband.

"You!" she said, with the faintly mocking air she had long ago learned for him; "but fancy meeting you here!"

"You—you looked like a—" he began a little confusedly; and then, breaking off, he cleared his throat and started again, more authoritatively: "I don't say I approve of that suit, but—but it does seem to fit in with the surroundings somehow. You might almost have been mistaken—at a distance, that is—for—a hamadryad. But—"

"And what may they be? Something very nice to be mistaken for, may I hope? But I supposed you'd gone in the launch—"

"No—no. I'm tired of drunks," said he, continuing to stare at her. "And besides, swimming at night—ah—affects my sinus—as you once used to know. But you—why did you come back? You—you forgot something?"

She was smiling faintly; her dark eyes derided him.

"I almost forgot myself, if you count that! But not, in your sense. I'm not forgetful, only punitive. My sinus is sound, but my temper uncertain. So I don't go. A sweet night, isn't it? Well!—"

"But—what is it? Why, what happened?"

"Oh, that. Yes, to be sure. I was [illegible] kissed, you see. In the [illegible] the boathouse, just as we [illegible] to start—oh, most fero[illegible]. I assure you. Really that [illegible] me angry, though of course not [illegible] as I [illegible]. So I'm letting [illegible] over alone—" sure I won't intrude, no, I'm off to dress—goodby!"

[illegible]

"No, no! Don't go. I—"

Having controlled himself with an obvious effort, the man resumed with awkward carelessness:

"Ah—it seems too bad for you to miss your moonlight dip, when you enjoy it so—merely on account of the behavior of an alcoholic cad. I was about to say—I'll paddle you over to the Pulpit myself."

She eyed him quizzically and all at once was aware of the beating of her heart!

The two stood close together, in the darkness and beauty of the woods. The man's ponderous dignity was manifestly a little strained. Why? For a long time past, indeed, it had been evident that she had undermined his case in their relationship. For weeks she had been conscious, in her withdrawals and through the silences that she had made so common between them, that he regarded her with a new attentiveness. But he had stopped there; his pride—or some cowardice perhaps?—had restrained him from word or act. Was it the romantic solitude now, and the sudden sight of her in her wood-nymph's guise? Was it the thought of those kisses she had just taken from another? What? Into her husband's eyes had come a look she had not seen these three years; and she wondered suddenly if, here and now, beyond all calculation, her great moment had come at last.

But do you think that she would yield anything to him? Not she.

Ironically grave, she answered: "You are always kind, Horace. But of course I'd not dream of imposing on you that way."

"No imposition at all. I'd enjoy it. We find ourselves deserted—each by our own choice—what more logical than to join forces, eh?"

"Logical!"

"And—and pleasant," said he with his labored lightness. "Why not? Or—if you don't care to join the party now—after what happened—why, we might just paddle about for a while. The night—the night's fine," said Horace.

"Canoeing in the moonlight with one's husband! My dear man, do you want to make me the laughing stock of the county?"

Her laughter, thrilling unexpectedly, took him quite aback; stung him, too, as she saw with pleasure.

"A very little of that sort of thing," said she, "and gossip would soon begin connecting our names!"

"I don't think you run many risks of that," he retorted, with marked stiffness. "And I wish you'd cease this—this extravagant way of talking—it's provoking. Now come along. I—we'll enjoy it."

"On the contrary, I should die of shame."

"You're being absurd. Come!"

"A thousand thanks, but no."

There was a silence. The breeze fluttered her long hair.

"I see you actually prefer the society of drunken male flirts to that of . . . And this is typical, too—"

He finished, all but impulsively for him: "I'm sure you can't realize, Laurel, how little we actually see of each other—these days."

Ah, but did she not realize!

She leaned back against the slender bole of a white birch and stared up at him liquid eyed.

"How little! Why, Horace—good gracious! That's literally all I can say—good gracious! Seven days a week under the same roof, but separated a single day in—"

"I know, I know!" he said in another tone, embarrassed. "It seems odd, I own—I'd hardly think it was possible. And still . . . I was of course sure you weren't conscious of it, but—"

He hesitated, peering at her with his short-sighted eyes; and then the natural man let go a little more of the unnatural constraint.

"Why, Laurel! You go out somewhere every evening, with or without me, or if you don't go out, you have people in. At odd moments, when there are, in the little between times, as I might term them, you're always reading, or studying, or practicing something, or else you're writing letters or you have a headache. Saturdays and Sundays and usually week days, too, you have people staying in the house, all over the place. Noise and dancing and parties and rushing about—never a quiet moment of—of just the domestic sort—"

"You certainly make it sound different from the home life of our dear Queen! I'd no idea it was so bad as that—"

"I understand it, if anything. But—well, we won't go into it now. My point is [illegible] quiet hour [illegible] and no more [illegible] drunks. [illegible]" ring [illegible]. After two years she adored him without restraint, and for days and weeks together he was frankly bored with her. Why? Was it the everlasting law of things that a relation can support only so much love, as a bucket holds so much water? Certainly her efforts to charm this grave senior by doubling her wifely thoughtfulness and sweet subjections, had but increased his ennui. There had come the inevitable day when she, with floods of tears, had packed her trunks and gone off on the usual indefinite visit to her mother.

[illegible]

So far their story had followed a familiar course. Would that have been the end of it, right there, but for Anders Carthew? Nothing seemed to her more certain. Beyond doubt Anders, who was twice her age, and had taken an interest in her, paternal or otherwise, from her sixteenth year, had penetrated her with a new and startling concept. For Anders wouldn't accept, he would hardly listen to, her own ready formula, long since smoothed by women of all ages. "Oh, no," he had said, in his merciless kind way. "It isn't that you 'love him too well.' That's letting yourself down too easily. It's simply that you love him with too little pride—and no good sense at all." And a little later, when she had conquered her first furious indignation and sat down again, he spoke words which she took at last for truth, and which filled her in the end with an overmastering purpose. For Anders had said that a man's necessity is not to be loved, but to love; and that, to love, his fixed need is to pursue—and conquer.

So, she, because she had a will, and it seemed that her whole life was at stake, had actually achieved this impossible. She had warped her nature, she had broken her heart to pieces; she had recovered the reserves of maidenhood, made herself again mysterious to this once familiar; she had fanned the last flickering ember to a flame. Now here he stood suing her in the romantic night—her Horace, bored no longer, and still, and still . . . Was it not ironical that, here in the instant of her tremendous triumph, her mood should be so skeptical and cool? . . . How large was Horace's nose, she unsentimentally considered, how halting his tongue, how really small his vanity and caution. Had something then permanently passed away? In the long process of repression, of moral separation, so painful at first, had she wrought in herself an irreparable change?

She wondered, smiling shadowily, in that second of thick silence. Now the man, having drawn back a step, spoke abruptly:

"Look here, what's come over you?"

"Come over me?"

"You've changed so much—just in this last year—that you're like another person—a stranger."

To be sure, her heart swelled a little at that.

"But you hardly offer that as a complaint, Horace? Hastily recalling our past, I feel sure you must find any change in me an improvement."

"That's just the tone I don't like from you, Laurel. This constantly evasive manner. Flippant, I am bound to call it, and—and provoking. I think the time's come to remind you that a husband has some rights—and I'm not getting mine."

"But—why, all this is news to me, my dear. Your rights. I'd thought you were frightfully fatigued with them, whatever they are, years ago, and gladly—"

"Never!—no! Ridiculous. I—"

"Ah, that poor memory of yours, failing you again, I see!" said she, shaking her finger in a manner insufferably satirical; and resumed demurely: "But of course I'm glad that you've forgotten that day—when, I, sobbing like a deserted village lass, most crudely taxed you with having ceased to love me, and you, poor dear, could only reply, 'There, there!'—most soothingly, I own, yet it mortified me at the time, I remember. You've forgotten explaining to me that life wasn't meant to be an unending song of romance, that it was normal and necessary that the disturbing heyday of love should descend to afternoon, to twilight—"

"So that's it!" he interrupted suddenly. "You've never gotten over that one little scene—a mere incident?" . . . "Oh, I remember—I've been thinking back a good deal, here lately," he went on, rather [illegible]. "You went off on a visit to your mother's then, and when you came back the change had come—that was the time. [illegible]" thought to ask myself such a question."

[illegible]

"Ask yourself now. I insist—it is my right."

Her merriment died.

"I am. And, Horace," she said, regarding him duskily—"honestly—I don't know the answer."

Yet in that moment, exactly, she seemed to herself to have the answer. Yes, something had gone out of her, now and forever. Funny, but you couldn't crack and make over your nature for nothing.

"Oh, you don't know?" he said darkly. "Well, the time's come for you to find out—"

"Why? What's your interest in the ancient point? Haven't I the best authority for saying that love wasn't meant—"

"That's enough of that; I won't have this attitude any longer. Plenty of time—and kisses, too, it seems—for every whippersnapping nincompoop—nothing at all for the man you married—"

"But, my dear Horace, I can't turn myself on and off like a hot-water faucet! And the nincompoops never taught me that the heyday of romance—"

"Stop provoking me this way—!"

"Willingly. Good-by! But, indeed, you mustn't think of me as a stranger, Horace. I assure you I'll always think of you as among my very best friends."

His dim face became flooded with color.

"You're my wife, do you understand that? My wife!"

"Wife is a relative term," she said, a little faintly, again seeking to pass him. "But I'll leave you now."

"I'm d—d if you will," said the man, in a terrible voice.

And, his dignity broken altogether, he seized her furiously in his arms.

The violence of that embrace astonished her. Still more surprising, perhaps, was the wave of resistance, of instinctive repulsion even, that swept through her.

She succeeded in extricating herself and backing away rapidly, shaken and angry, vigorously rubbed with the palm of her hand the cheek her husband's lips had just grazed. Still, her fixed smile mocked him.

"Don't you think, all things considered, that's quite a liberty?"

He lunged for her, saying gutturally: "I'll show you a liberty! You forget yourself—you need to be taught—"

"No!—p-positively, you don't know me well enough for this! Please!—You brute!—"

She managed again, though with difficulty, to free herself from those violent clutching arms. Her light airs were gone. She had thought just now that if Horace touched her she might actually hate him; it had not occurred to her that she would fear him, yet so it was. Now, as he came after her again, muscularly potent and altogether wilful, panic, suddenly and unaccountably, took possession of her. Without having planned anything of the sort, she wheeled abruptly in her tracks and fled away from him.

If that was a confession of weakness, unluckily it did not settle her difficulty on the spot. With dismay she heard the large feet of Horace pounding after her down the path.

She ran as for life.

It was a sight for the gods, no doubt. In the still midnight, beneath the serene moon, in this lonely place, wildly and primitively beautiful, through the groves and among the crags sped the slim white-clad wife, dark hair flowing after; and hard behind, grunting and snorting, menacing, too, chased the heavy-built man, her husband. Different from the home life of the queen, indeed!

On the open path his clumsiness was equalized. She looked back, fearfully, over her shoulder; he was gaining on her, no doubt of that. Instantly she left the path, scrambling over the rough boulders which flanked it here, plunging into the copses, if such they were, bounding away through the virgin woods, sure-footed as a fawn. With a wild bursting of foliage and cracking of boughs, Horace leaped after her. On the difficult terrain her superior nimbleness gave her advantage; the distance between them steadily widened. Once she heard his hoarse voice panting, "Stop! I tell you, stop!" Now the strange thrill of the chase, the throbbing excitement of the quarry, set her blood afire. She thought, "Pursuit, and love!" and, [illegible] frantically to herself, [illegible]. And then, as she [illegible] across a sweet, open space, a [illegible], powdered with bright moonlight, she glanced back again, [illegible]; alas, her foot caught in a [illegible] on the bottom, and Horace was tall. In fine, while she was still submerged, her foot was roughly seized; coming up, spluttering, she found herself effectually prisoned.

[illegible]

Thus the man, like Neptune with a mermaid, had his way. The stars looked down upon the odd conjugal caress. Upon the woman's lips, gasping and watery, the lips of Horace, just as gasping, came waterily down. Though her heart hammered with a wild excitement, there was now no strength in her. After an instant, her feeble struggles ceased; another instant and, marvelously, resistance seemed no longer of any importance. Under this masterful embrace the wife's will, her whole being, indeed, seemed all at once, mysteriously, to dissolve within her.

"You witch! I will adore you forever," panted Horace wetly.

And then her bare dripping arms, lifting, went round his neck.

Under the impulse of his great love, the days and the weeks that followed became for the wedded pair like a new and richer honeymoon. Her elusiveness faded; her reticence and reserves, all the provocative withdrawals, learned after how much tribulation, came to seem not only superfluous, but altogether unworthy. Since Horace gave so lavishly, how inconceivably mean-spirited to dole back to him with a thrifty and calculating hand!

Willingly, young Laurel let herself go.

The new banns brought their unexperienced blessing. Now God was ready, in the old phrase, to smile upon this union. There came another June and then another, and Laurel's first child was six months old.

Otherwise perhaps it would hardly have been bearable.

She sat in her room near the screened open window, nursing her boy, whom she had no thought of weaning as yet. The sultry afternoon was quiet. From the piazza below floated up the voice of her husband idly exchanging domestic news with his adoring mother, arrived the day before for her yearly visit; but she did not need that sound to make her remember his nearness. On the stand beside her lay a note from Howard Witheredge, who had lately "come into her life" again; she had just been thinking that nothing could be more symbolical than that.

Her name came vaguely wafting up to her.

"Laurel's stoutened," said her mother-in-law, rocking comfortably, though with a touch of asthma. "It's not unbecoming to her. I think she has—settled—somehow, Horace? She has gained in poise?"

"Yes, she's matured very much since the baby came," said Horace, and yawned a little.

"She is charming still. And a more exemplary and devoted wife I never saw. That pleases me so much. Do you know, my son," continued Mrs. Seymour, suddenly, "two years ago when I were here—that spring—I was rather afraid she was drifting away from you—just a little?"

"Really! What an idea! . . . No, I remember that summer on the lake particularly," said Horace thoughtfully. "We had a wonderful time."

"Oh, it's evident enough that I was mistaken!" said his mother archly. "She absolutely worships you, that's as clear as noonday."

"Oh, yes," said Horace.

There was a little silence. Down in the pasture-lot, behind the barn, the buxom new dairy maid was climbing over the stile. The lass had a trim leg. Having adjusted his glasses a little, Horace satisfied himself on that point.

"In fact, if the dear creature has a fault at all," he finished indolently, "I'd say that she loves me a little too well."

SHOWS HIMSELF TO FAITHFUL

Tradition of Rising of Martyred Priests' Coffin Has Strong Hold in New Mexico.

To the Church of St. Augustine at Isleta, N. M., there attaches a queer legend. It is the tradition of the rising of Padre Padilla's coffin. Among the Franciscan friars who accompanied Coronado on his famous march to what he called Quivira—country of the Wichita Indians in Kansas—was Padre Juan de Padilla. This intrepid servant of God (when Coronado turned homeward) remained with a view of [illegible] those Indians. He was killed by them, and now tradition has it that somehow in the heavenly ordering the body of the martyred padre got [illegible] transferred from Kansas to a place under the church altar at Isleta, and that periodically the [illegible]

Fine for the Bath.

[illegible]

Sure Relief
FOR INDIGESTION
BELL-ANS FOR INDIGESTION
6 BELL-ANS
Hot water
Sure Relief
BELL-ANS
25¢ AND 75¢ PACKAGES EVERYWHERE

Ladies Can Wear Shoes

One size smaller and walk in comfort by using Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic, healing powder for the feet. Shaken into the shoes Allen's Foot-Ease makes tight or new shoes feel easy; gives instant relief to corns, bunions and callouses; prevents Blisters, Callous and Sore Spots and gives rest to tired, aching, swollen feet. 1,500,000 pounds of powder for the feet were used by our Army and Navy during the War. Sold everywhere. For Free Sample and a Foot-Ease Walking Doll, address Allen's Foot-Ease, Le Roy, N. Y.

SLOW DEATH

Aches, pains, nervousness, difficulty in urinating, often mean serious disorders. The world's standard remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles—

LATHROP'S
GOLD MEDAL
HAARLEM OIL
CAPSULES

bring quick relief and often ward off deadly diseases. Known as the national remedy of Holland for more than 200 years. All druggists, in three sizes. Look for the name Gold Medal on every box and accept no imitation

SPOHN'S
DISTEMPER
COMPOUND

Are your horses coughing or running at the nose? If so, give them "SPOHN'S." A valuable remedy for Coughs, Colds, Distemper, Influenza, Pink Eye and Worms among horses and mules. An occasional dose "tones" them up. Sold at all drug stores.

SPOHN MEDICAL CO. GOSHEN, IND. U.S.A.

Keep Your Skin-Pores
Active and Healthy
With Cuticura Soap
Soap 25c, Ointment 25 and 50c, Talcum 25c.

PILES
of the most stubborn kind relieved in 3 to 10 days
One trial convinces
MIRO
AT ALL DRUGGISTS

Anyhow, a lot of people know a lot about ancient Egypt they never would have known if old Tut hadn't turned up.

A "window envelope" is a device that shows nothing but conceals nothing. Everybody knows it contains a bill.

The man who thinks girls are not as pretty now as once they were doubtless has lost his appetite for cookies, also.

By a strange oversight, all of these people who are making out lists of the ten best books overlook the bank book.

For 2,000 years Europe has been fooling with the buzz saw, and still acts surprised every time it loses a finger.

Why Multimillionaire is "Sore."

Millionaire—After sending your son to college it must be disappointing to have him run off with a chorus girl.

Multimillionaire—I should say it was disappointing. I expected to marry the little lady myself.—London Mail.

Weak and Miserable?

[illegible]

DOAN'S [illegible]

APRIL

L 912

After Every Meal

WRIGLEYS

In work or play, it gives the poise and steadiness that mean success.

It helps digestion, allays thirst, keeping the mouth cool and moist, the throat muscles relaxed and pliant and the nerves at ease.

Save the Wrappers
11
FOR A BETTER SCORE

It Usually Lands 'Em.

When I was a young girl I never allowed a boy friend to be sentimental or even kiss me. (This may seem exaggerated to youthful readers.)

I had been going with a young man who had been repeatedly refused a "good-night kiss." One evening he asked me why I refused. I told him I would never permit any young man to kiss me unless I was engaged to him.

Well, he kissed me that very night!—Exchange.

For your daughter's sake, use Red Cross Ball Blue in the laundry. She will then have that dainty, well-groomed appearance that girls admire.—Advertisement.

When Hubby Agreed.

"Alas," sighed the shapely wife, "I suppose I'll simply have to begin wearing my skirts longer."

"You will," grimly replied the husband, "for I simply can't wear these old trousers any longer."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

It's an easy thing to convince men that honesty is the best policy when it pays better than the other kind.

Yeast Foam makes good bread

Every girl should learn how to make good bread.
It should be the foundation of her home cookery training.

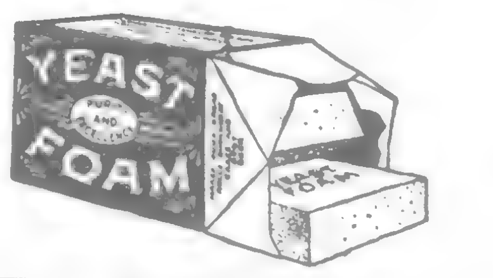
Send for free booklet
"The Art of Baking Bread"



Northwestern Yeast Co.
1730 North Ashland Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

Remarkable New Alloy.

A young French chemist named Mazarin has invented a new alloy resembling gold and it has been termed "areum." It has the brightness, durability and inoxidizability of gold, which qualities will permit its substitution in jewelry and other manufactures where gold is now used. No particulars as to composition seem available.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children

In Use For Over 30 Years

Always bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Chinese Actors Lose Cast

When a Chinese goes on the stage he loses caste, he and his children after him being deprived of citizenship for four generations.

Cuticura Comforts Baby's Skin

When red, rough and itching, by hot baths of Cuticura Soap and touches of Cuticura Ointment. Also make use now and then of that exquisitely scented dusting powder, Cuticura Talcum, one of the indispensable Cuticura Toilet Trio.—Advertisement.

Abbreviation and Advice.

Wednesday is said to be the luckiest day on which to get married. We suppose that is why it is generally written "Wed."—Boston Transcript.

Try these

Bakers' Raisin Pies

—save baking at home

THERE are luscious raisin pies just around the corner, at your grocer's or a bake shop.

Baked to a turn—a flaky crust filled with tender, tempting raisins, the rich juice forming a delicious sauce.

Once try these pies that master bakers bake fresh daily in your city and you'll never take the trouble afterwards to make raisin pies at home.

Get a pie now and let your men folks taste it.

Made with tender, thin-skinned, meaty, seeded Sun-Maid Raisins.

Raisins furnish 1560 calories of energizing nutriment per pound in practically predigested form.

Also a fine content of food-iron—good food for the blood.

Use raisins frequently, therefore, which are both good and good for you, in puddings, cakes, cookies, etc.

You may be offered other brands that you know less well than Sun-Maids, but the kind you want is the kind you know is good. Insist, therefore, on Sun-Maid brand. They cost no more than ordinary raisins.

Mail coupon for free book of tested Sun-Maid recipes. Learn what you can do with luscious raisins.

SUN-MAID RAISINS

The Supreme Pie Raisin

Your retailer should sell you Sun-Maid Raisins for not more than the following prices:

Seeded (in 15 oz. blue pkgs.)—20c
[illegible]
Seeded, in tins (8 oz.)—15c

Blue Package

CUT THIS OUT AND SEND IT

Sun-Maid Raisin Growers,
Fresno, California

Please send me copy of your free book, "Recipes with Raisins."

Name ______
Street ______
City ______ State ______

American Farm Bureau

Louisiana's championship boys and girls' poultry judging team, with Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, Washington, D. C. This photograph was taken immediately after the Louisiana youngsters had taken first place in judging utility fowls and second place in the national judging contest at the Madison Square Garden Poultry show. Reading left to right in the group—Joe Savage, Jennings, La.; Orah Burke, Forest, La.; Mr. Wallace; Elmer Puls, Loranger, La.; Eva Mae Brooks, Franklinton, La.

MRS. MARTIN CALLED COMMUNITY BUILDER

Practical Woman Farmer Makes Remarkable Transformation on 1,200-Acre Tract.

Two years ago Cave Springs was but a post office set in the pine forests of the Sabine Bottoms of East Texas. A narrow, deep-rutted road wandered aimlessly up to it. Occasionally the road paused at a stumpy clearing surrounding a squalid cabin. A scraggly crop of peanuts and garden truck marked the industry of the place.

That was two years ago. Today a dozen modern bungalows face a sixty-foot graded road and back of each bungalow lies a productive 100-acre farm. Here in the Sabine Bottoms is the largest community farm in America.

It was Mrs. W. C. Martin who brought about the transformation. "Community Builder of the South" is what many call her. Certainly her work in developing the Sabine Bottoms community and other communities since then has earned that title for her.

Mrs. W. C. Martin.

Mrs. Martin is no impractical dreamer. She is a farmer. She personally ran a 6,000-acre ranch in Boque County, Texas, to such good effect that in three years it paid a profit of $38,000. Four years ago the community farm plan developed in her mind. For two years it was just a paper plan. Then came the opportunity to put it into effect on a 1,200-acre tract in the Sabine Bottoms.

First of all the land was laid out in 100-acre tracts. A sixty-foot graded road was run through the center. On each side of this road six 6-room bungalows were built. Not plain square box buildings are these, but attractive modern houses with porches, fireplaces, window seats and cosy corners. Back of the long front porch are four large rooms. A central chimney makes possible a fire place in each of these rooms. The kitchens and a sleeping room are back of these rooms.

Careful planning is evidenced by the covered well on the back porch, the trough leading from it to the barn, the blue grass in the yard, and the chicken-tight fence.

Each house is set on a square acre. And each house is within easy hauling distance of its neighbor.

The whole scheme is knit together by several community projects. There is a community house, with reading tables, books, soft and shaded lights. Back of the community house is a community laundry, and nearby is a community [illegible], a [illegible] shed and a garage. The [illegible] of a [illegible] is the [illegible] community [illegible].

[illegible]

The success of the plan has given Mrs. Martin a vision of all rural America made over into a great community farm—the dwelling place of prosperity and happiness. She has been made chairman of the home and community department of the American Farm Bureau federation and through this department will build her vision into a reality.

TO MAKE SURVEY ON USE OF ELECTRICITY

Committee Appointed at Chicago Meeting to Make Comprehensive Study of Problem.

To determine of just what value electricity can be in farm operations a meeting was held in Chicago by representatives of the federal Department of Agriculture, American Farm Bureau federation, American Society of Agricultural Engineers and the National Electric Light association. A committee on electricity as related to agriculture was organized at this meeting. J. W. Coverdale of the farm bureau is chairman, G. C. Neff of the electric light association is secretary.

This committee will supervise a comprehensive study of the farm-power problem.

Involved in this investigation will be a farm-power survey covering all types of farm-power generators such as horses and mules, steam engines, gas engines, windmills, electric motors, and man himself. Data will be collected on the amount of power required for various farm operations, power requirements of various machines, and working it into such a form as to make it readily adaptable to the special problem under consideration.

It was agreed that a complete survey of the present state of the use of electricity on the farm is desirable and to this end plans were laid for an investigation which will reveal the number of farms being served by isolated plants and central station service. The National Electric Light association will be requested to find the number of farm customers being served, miles of rural electric lines, current used, farm operations for which electricity is used, and cost of this service to the farmer. An attempt will be made to secure similar data for the isolated plants.

In view of the importance of the farm-power problem it was urged that the United States Department of Agriculture and the agricultural experiment stations institute investigations on the application of electricity to agriculture which will ultimately place information in the farmer's hands enabling him to make intelligent decisions regarding the application of electricity to his own problems.

Outline of investigations to be carried on under general supervision of this committee is as follows:

1. Farm-power survey.
2. Survey of central station and isolated plant services to farmers.
3. Survey of agricultural uses of electricity in foreign countries.
4. Experimental and research work on the uses of electricity in agriculture.

New Jersey Farmers Pool.

Eight farmers' co-operative organizations of New Jersey have voted to pool their buying power by the formation of the New Jersey Farmers' Co-operative Purchasing association, representing over 1,200 members who last year purchased co-operatively nearly $600,000 worth of farm supplies and who as individuals buy $2,500,000 worth each year.

Co-operative Serum.

The Indiana Farm Bureau federation has concluded a contract whereby the anti-hog-cholera serum will be made available to farm bureau members at cost. This is in fact co-operative manufacture and distribution of serum.

[illegible] for [illegible] Growers.

[illegible]

BETTER ROADS

MEASURING HUMAN PROGRESS

There Has Never Been High State of Civilization Without Dependable Transportation.

There are now 115,000 miles of paved or surfaced highways in the United States—more than there are or ever were in any other country in the world. They have all been built, too, within comparatively few years. When the system provided for in the federal highway act is completed, the Agricultural department reports, the improved mileage will amount to 180,000 miles.

The process will keep right on, with accelerating speed, establishing new trunk lines across the continent and up and down, in a transportation system of ever-growing fineness and durability.

Imagine all this network of good roads swept away—the condition in which it would leave the country and the deterioration that would follow.

Good roads are civilization. There has never been a high state of civilization without dependable transportation routes connecting every locality with every other, and still less will there ever be hereafter, says the Brattleboro, Vt., Reformer. You can measure modern human progress pretty accurately by its road building.

RESULT OF TRACTIVE TESTS

Instruments Carefully and Accurately Measure Pull Required and Fuel Consumed.

"Iowa State and other colleges and institutions have been making tests to determine comparative tractive resistance on various types of road surfacing. Special instruments are designed to carefully and accurately test pull required and fuel consumed per ton mile, the accepted unit of highway traffic.

Where Iowa Tractive Tests Were Made.

Tractive resistance test figures indicate that the average ton-miles per gallon is as follows:

On earth road....................14 ton-miles
On gravel road....................21 ton-miles
On concrete road..................31 ton-miles

At 24 cents per gallon fuel costs per ton-mile on these averages are as follows:

On earth road....................1.71 cents
On gravel road....................1.15 cents
On concrete road....................77 cents

BETTER ROADS BENEFIT ALL

Farmers as Well as Wealthy Tourists and Truck Using Corporations Are Helped.

Good roads are vital to all sections of the country. Contrary to common conception, the wealthy tourists and truck using corporations form only a small fraction of those who are urging better highway transportation.

Better roads will benefit two great classes, 3,500,000 of farmers who are dependent upon their automobiles, and as many more city dwelling families with incomes of less than $4,000, who with the farmers own two-thirds of all the cars sold.

Purely as an investment, better roads will pay regular and substantial dividends which every enterprising community cannot afford to lose. Better highways mean better transportation and better communities.

HOSPITALS MADE ACCESSIBLE

Automobile and Improved Roads Have Made It Possible for Farmer to Enjoy Advantages.

The development of the automobile and the construction of hard roads have made it possible in many sections to equip and erect modern hospitals even in the smallest towns and cities and to make these hospitals accessible to patients through the use of motor ambulances for distances as far as 30 and 40 miles. The old emergency operation was performed on the rough pine table; now, it may be done, in many instances, under the most modern of hospital advantages.

Greater Road Progress.

According to Thomas H. McDonald, chief of the bureau of public roads, greater progress was made on the national highways during the last year than in any similar period in the history of the country.

[illegible] of Citizen.

[illegible]

YEAR OF ADVANCE

Canada Rightly Proud of Its Achievements in 1922.

Has Bravely Met and Overcome Depression Following the War—Financial Standing as Nation High.

The year 1922 in Canada, Western Canada particularly, has been a year of quiet achievement. If there has been nothing in its development of a spectacular nature, there has been a steady growth, a resolute elimination of things immaterial to prosperity.

The year 1923 is entered upon by the people of the West in high hope that it ushers in a period of prosperity based upon the productivity of the country and the vast riches of its natural resources.

Canada, in common with all other nations, has felt keenly the cycle of depression following the spurious activity and inflated business coming immediately after the cessation of the war. It has met and overcome many obstacles in the path of its prosperity. The year just passed, however, has seen the silver lining peep out from the edges of the dark cloud and has demonstrated to the world the celerity which this country can adjust itself to changed conditions. This is evidenced by the fact that Canada has been the first among all countries whose currencies fell below par to bring that currency back to par, and even for a time above par. It did this in the face of what seemed insuperable difficulties, increased its exports, lessened its imports, and generally set its business house in order.

The high standing of Canada as a nation is shown by the ease with which her bonds are absorbed and by the high prices paid for them, and Winnipeg, it may be mentioned, in a recent flotation obtained a higher price than even any provincial government for some time.

Western Canada in 1922 harvested its largest grain crop. Its production of grain, live stock, cereal and dairy products will, when all is marketed, produce in the neighborhood of a billion dollars. There has been, and there still is felt considerable disappointment that the total value is not larger, but the fact remains that this vast sum of money has come to the West, or is in the process of coming, and if, as is undoubtedly true, much of it is used in the liquidation of obligations incurred in the past, it is but a safer and saner, if longer, road to that prosperity to which all are looking. In the process of reaching this prosperity it is inevitable that there must be some failures.

As a matter of fact, it is the opinion of many prominent business men that 1922 saw the corner definitely turned and that 1923 will commence the upward swing.—Advertisement.

One who can appreciate a real landscape is as cultured as one who can appreciate a painted one.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

When housecleaning begins, a towel bound about her head is a woman's helmet of war.

Springtime Advice for Tired Mothers

Mothers who are tired and run down by the strain of family cares can rebuild strength and regain normal health by taking Father John's Medicine, which is all pure, wholesome nourishment. The food elements which this old-fashioned prescription contains are so prepared that they are quickly taken up by a system weakened and run down.

There is no false stimulation in Father John's Medicine. It is pure, wholesome nourishment. Guaranteed free from alcohol or dangerous drugs.

FOR COUGHS AND COLDS
FATHER JOHN'S
NO DRUGS

[illegible] HAIR BALSAM

[illegible]

D-C [illegible]

Wonderful Showing

—OF—

Gaberdines Whipcords

Bedfordcords

Topcoats

Yesterday we added to our great stock over 400 of these stylish spring coats that we will sell at special prices—

Gaberdines, $15.00 to $30.00
Whipcords, $20.00 to $35.00
Bedfordcords, $25.00 to $40.00

All Sizes, 32 to 56

Think of buying a silk lined Gaberdine for $15, or a silk lined Bedfordcord for $25

This is the Store That Does Things

Patterson-Fletcher Co

Wayne and Harrison — Fort Wayne, Ind.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

For Sale—Good trailer.
Frank Akins.

Mrs. Maud Monroe was a Hicksville shopper Tuesday forenoon.

Mrs. Olive Frye went to Auburn Monday where she was made a member of the Maccabee Lodge.

O. E. Ginther and family spent Sunday with Mr and Mrs. F. B. Leighty.

E. R. Kecht and family of Decatur and D. R. Krabill called on Martin Engle Sunday afternoon.

Wanted—To rent vacuum cleaner for two days. Call News Office.

Yes, Mart Tustison has been fishing. He fished off the creek bridge the other day and caught a mess of suckers.

The Ladies' Bible class of the M. P. church held a meeting at the home of Mrs. Mary Bets, Monday evening.

Rev. B. B. Dailey conducted funeral services at Hamilton recently of the two-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Patton.

The record for a non-stop dancing has been set by a young man by the name of Jean Besulteresy. He danced 33 hours and 15 minutes without stopping.

The [illegible] has changed hands. [illegible], who has operated the paper for a number of years, [illegible] to G. N. [illegible] of Lebanon.

[illegible]

[illegible]

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

[illegible]

The St. Joe teachers attended the Tri-Township Institute at Spencerville, Saturday.

Miss Lenore Moore spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents at Cromwell.

Miss Mabel Schmalstried spent Saturday night and Sunday with relatives at Fort Wayne.

Mrs. Fred Randall and two children of Harlan spent Monday with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Randall.

Mrs. Willie Baker is quite ill with pneumonia at the home of her son, Ora Baker and wife.

Mrs. Ada Bassett is spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. A. D. Brunson, north of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Sherrick and family of Auburn, were Sunday guests in the W. E Henly home.

J. C. Hull and wife spent Sunday afternoon visiting in the home of J. O. Quance ot Fort Wayne.

Marguerite Milliman of Fort Wayne spent Saturday night and Sunday with her parents, F. L. Milliman and wife, north of town.

Harry Shuff and wife have begun house keeping in the property formerly owned by John D. Milliman.

Mrs. Ross Morr of Auburn Junction, came Tuesday for a few days visit with her grandmother. Mrs. Belle Ridgway.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Price, F. R. Bowman, wife and daughter [illegible] visited relatives in Fort Wayne, Sunday.

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

Rella Wiese, wife and children were Sunday dinner guests of J. L. Rhodenbaugh and wife.

For Sale—22 acres of land for sale, $50.00 per acre.
Mrs. Mary Shuff.

Mr. and Mrs. Ford Jackson of Concord are the proud parents of a little daughter known as Iris Carmajean.

For Sale—½ bushel Mammouth Red Clover Seed, Extra well cleaned.
H. W. Northrup.

Mrs. S. W. Armstrong and daughter, Mary, were Monday afternoon guests of the former's father, Elijah Imhoff at Butler.

GLASSES—$2.50 up, Benj. F. Griest, Eyesight specialist, American Bldg., Hicksville, Ohio.

Dr. H. R. Minnick and wife are moving from the Frank Sechler house on Widney Avenue into the property formerly owned by C. A. Patterson.

Mrs. Fred Crooks of Auburn, Mrs. Cleo Messing and little daughter Jenevieve of Kendallville, were Sunday afternoon callers of Miss [illegible].

Mrs. S. S. [illegible] and little grandson, [illegible], spent Saturday and Sunday with the former's daughter, Mrs. John Hart at Ft. Wayne.

The [illegible] Bible Class of the M. P. Sunday School was [illegible]

[illegible]

SOUR STOMACH
caused bad breath, gassy pains, coated tongue and belching.
Always had relief in
CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS
Sweeten your stomach and breath—only 25c

Shut Up Chickens

The statutes provide that no persons owning chickens or other fowls shall permit them to trespass on the land or lots of their neighbors, but they are required to give them a written notice not to do so, and in case that the owners fail to comply after five days notice they are subject to prosecution for trespass.

Mrs. C. C. Bassett is spending a few days at the home of her mother, Mrs. A. D. Brunson, who is ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Hart spent part of Saturday afternoon at the Sam Keesler home.

Mrs. Grace Dilley and Mrs. Mary Sechler were recent supper guests of Miss Susan Sechler.

Dr. H. R. Minnick of this place, reports the birth of a nine pound baby son to Mr. and Mrs. Dan Leichty near Grabill, April 3.

On Wednesday J. R. Bishop and wife, E. M. Bishop, wife and baby grandson, and Mrs. Z. T. Kagey came to M. T. Bishop's for dinner.

Dr. and Mrs. B. S. Sheffer and James Rhodenbaugh attended the funeral of the former's sister-in-law, Mrs. C. E. Sheffer at Kendallville Thursday.

Mrs. C. H. Bishop with her children, Catherine and Frank, of Cleveland, Ohio, came last Tuesday for a three days visit with M. T. Bishop and wife, and left Friday for Auburn to visit other relatives.

Virgil Perry and wife of Fort Wayne, will leave on April 16, to locate in Colorado to make their future home. Mr. Perry has been in the employe of the Standard Oil Company for the past four years and will take a position with an oil company in the West.

Walter Reichelderfer and wife of Harlan, and Reuben Klopfenstine and family of Grabill, spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sechler and S. S. Widney.

John George, wife and daughter, Dorothy, of Auburn, were Sunday afternoon callers at Alfred Reasoners. Mr. George and George Beugnot also attended the meeting at the M. P. church, preparing for the coming County Sunday School Institute in May.

Bible Thoughts for the Week

Sunday.

TAKE NO THOUGHT.—Take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or Wherewithal shall we be clothed? For your heavenly Father knoweth that we have need of all these things.—Matthew 6:31, 32.

Monday.

A NATION'S GREATNESS.—Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people.—Proverbs 14:34.

Tuesday.

NEED OF DAILY PRAYER.—Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominion over me: then shall I be upright, and I shall be innocent from the great transgression.

Wednesday.

SEEK TODAY.—Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near.—Isaiah 55:6.

Thursday.

REFUGE, STRENGTH, HELP.—God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.—Psalm 46:1.

Friday.

THE LORD IS [illegible] that the Lord is good: blessed is the man that trusteth in him.—Psalm 34:8.

Saturday.

[illegible]

H. R. Minnick, M. D.

[illegible]

Full Line FERRY'S Garden SEEDS

More CHEAP SUGAR at Leighty's Grocery
10 Pounds for 98c

Our Aim— Keep eggs at the highest price. Call for our price first.

E. LEIGHTY, Grocer

38 Years Ago

From Our Files

Wheat sold in town this week for 80 cents.

John Leighty returned to Orchard Lake last Monday.

Charlie Grubb has bought Eck Fales' property and will make St. Joe his future home.

H. K. Reynolds was called to Ohio again last week.

Wineland talks of putting in a tile mill in connection with his fork handle and shingle factory.

Means & Waters have a branch agricultural store at Corunna.

Gene Wilson has quit working for J. D. Leighty, and will engage in his old business, that of selling books.

Milliard Dermott presented us last week with a small pail full of splendid democratic taffy—the pure juice of the tree boiled down. Whew, but it was good. Much obliged.

Byron Widney came into the store one morning last week and in a wild and excited manner said: "Give me a dozen safety pins right away off quick, its a girl, weighs nine pounds, folks all doing well, call me "pap" after this and don't forget to call my father grandpap," and away he went back home to see whether they really had a baby or not.

August Kinsey talks of putting up a furniture room on the lot where Brook's shoe shop stands.

"KEEPING OUT BAD FOOD," NEW GOVERNMENT MOVIE

Protecting the great American appetite against unscrupulous foreign food exporters and preventing the dumping in this country of impure food and drug imports is the subject of a new United States Department of Agriculture one-reel film, "Keeping Out Bad Food."

The motion picture visualizes one of the important tasks of the Bureau of Chemistry in administering the Federal food and drugs act.

Scenes show inspectors selecting samples from newly arrived food and drug shipments, inspection of food cargoes at the Wharves, on the floor of the customs appraiser's "store," and in the laboratories of the Bureau of Chemistry. Many of the common attempts at violation of the law and their detection are shown. Scenes showing the seizure and destruction of impure food are included.

The administration of the tea act, the only existing law which regulates the palatability of a food, is also visualized in the film. Expert tea tasters are shown at the work of judging the tea imports to make sure its quality is up to American standards.

"Keeping Out Bad Food" will be loaned to exhibitors, free, for short periods, and circulated through the department's film distribution system. Copies may be purchased at cost of printing.

Sunday School Report.

The following is a true and correct report of the various Sunday Schools in this neighborhood for last Sunday.

Christian	81	$ 4.43
M. P	64	5.37
Lutheran	74	4.69
M. E. Spencer	58	3.63
Lutheran	70	3.80
Newville U. B.	42	1.87
Christian	73	3.04
Coburntown	50	2.12
Concord	50	2.86
Rehoboth	38	3.81
Mt. Pleasant	54	2.33

Road Notice

The trustees of Concord and Spencer townships, those who have agreed to donate work and all interested in having the grade from the railroad to the Hadsell bridge built, are requested to meet at the St. Joe town council room, Friday evening, April 13, to complete arrangements for the work.

L. W. YEISER.
County Commissioner.

An Urgent Meeting

All township officers are urged to meet at the M. P. Church, Sunday, April 15, at 8 o'clock A. M., to finish program for the Township Convention to be held at the Christian Church, Sunday afternoon and evening, April 22.

LATEST and BEST!

An INCREASING, life-long Monthly Income if Totally and Permanently Disabled by accident or disease before the age of 60 years.

THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK

$10 a month during first 5 years, $15 during the next 5 years, $20 thereafter for life. No further premium deposits. And then $1000 at your death to your beneficiary, or $2000 if death, at any age, is accidental, payable in a single sum, or as income for a term of years or for life. Total disability lasting 3 months regarded, during further continuance, as permanent.

J. C. HULL, St. Joe, Ind.

Please give me further information about this perfect Life Insurance Policy.

NAME ____________

ADDRESS ____________

____

BIG 5 SPECIAL

Three Days This Week

Thurs., Friday, Saturday

On

School Supplies

[illegible] Tablets, white or yellow, 2 for 10c
Carter's [illegible] Ink [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

NEWS OFFICE

APRIL

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXXVII ST. JOE DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, APRIL 19 1923 No. 16

Obituary

Julia Annie Baker was the daughter of William and Mary Jane Saylor and was born January 11, 1857 in Concord township, within one mile the place of her decease, at the home of her son, O. D. Baker. Her entire life has been spent in this community where she enjoyed a wide acquaintance.

She was united in marriage to E. W. Baker November 21, 1875 and to this union one son, Ora, was born. She was converted and joined the Methodist Protestant church at St. Joe, of which she was a member until her death.

Her death occurred April 13, 1923, after an illness of one week with pneumonia which was contracted at the time of the burning of the family home just two weeks prior to her death.

She leaves her husband, the son, and two grandchildren, besides one half-sister and one half-brother, and four full brothers and other relations to mourn her departure.

She was a woman of strong character, thrifty, industrious and enjoyed the confidence and respect of a large circle of friends.

Every care and attention that family and friends could bestow was given in the hope of recovery, but she has gone and we all bow in submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

CARD OF THANKS

We are desirous to thank our many friends and neighbors for their kind sympathy and assistance during the sickness and death of our wife and mother.

Willis Baker and son, Ora.

Chicken Pie Supper Saturday Night

In an effort to create public interest in the community and to raise funds necessary for its advancement the Community Welfare Band of St. Joe are planning a big Chicken pie supper to be held in the Lutheran Church basement on Saturday evening, April 21.

Every real-for-sure-booster for St. Joe and the surrounding vicinity is cordially invited. The eats will be furnished by booster patrons, cooked by booster cooks, served by booster-waiters and your money will be accepted by booster-collectors. Music will probably be furnished by booster-boys and the whole affair will be a town-booster.

Taken to Hospitals

Rev. C. H. Havens, pastor of the local and Concord M. P. churches was taken to the Methodist hospital at Fort Wayne Monday to be operated on for appendicitis. Upon a thorough examination it was found that other complications would make it necessary to postpone the operation several days.

Charles Collins, an employe of the Wabash Railroad was examined at the Company hospital at Peru last Saturday and it was found that he had a double hernia, which requires an operation. His wife was called to Peru Monday, but at the time to go to press we were not able to learn whether or not he had had the operation.

SEEDS FOR SALE--

Tested Clover, both Mammoth and Medium

ALSO

Tested Alsike-Sweet Clover

Alfalfa and Pine Tree Timothy

FEED--

A carload of Hominy feed just unloaded. Buy now—it is cheaper than corn. We carry Bran, Middlings, Tankage, Oil Meal, Cottonseed Meal, Laying and Growing Mash, Oyster shells, in fact a feed for every need. Send an order in at once.

COAL--

We have plenty of coal, so dont run too low. Buy that little you need to tide you over.

The St. JOE ELEVATOR

Samuel Keesler, Mgr. Grain Dept.

Bert Jackson, Mgr. Coal Dept.

Call on us—glad to see you. Come in whether you want anything or not.

Abuse of Credit

Every bank makes loans, mostly good ones, but occasionally there is a doubtful one. In all cases they are made from depositors money.

Hence the duty of the borrower to ask for only such loans as he can with reasonable certainty repay when due. By asking for more you abuse your credit and injure yourself and the bank as well. We try to be accommodating and go as far as good business methods will permit, but we owe first responsibility to our depositors, which must not be overlooked. Always remember this when asking for a loan.

St. Joe Valley Bank—A State Bank

David H. Hogg, Ft. Wayne

This talented man is slated for an address next Sunday night at the township Sunday School convention Subject, "Measure of a Man.

Concord Township S. S. Convention

The Concord township Sunday school convention will be held Sunday afternoon and evening at the Christian church.

Afternoon Session at 1:30

Opening remarks by township president.

Song service led by Reuben Koch.

Devotional . . . . . . Rev. S. D. Steffy.

Song . . . . Congregation.

Business, Secretary-treasurer report.

Reports of Departmental Superintendents and nominating committee.

Offering

Song . . . . Congregation.

Address—"The Work Eternal" . . . . . . Attorney Clyde Carlin, Angola.

Song . . . . Congregation.

Benediction . . . . . Dr. B. S. Sheffer.

Evening Session at 7:30

(Young People's Division)

Miss Josephine Johnson in charge of the music.

Devotional . . . . Robert Johnson.

Song . . . . Congregation.

Vocal Solo. . . . . . Dorothea Scholes.

Remarks by County Superintendent of Young Peoples Division Dora Carnahan.

Recitation . . . . Miss Alice Rhoades

Piano Duet . . . . Thelma Johnson
Pauline Morr

Remarks by . . . . . . Rev. S. D. Steffy.

" by . . . . Rev. R. B. Daily

Offering

Address—"The Measure of a Man" . . . . . . David H. Hogg, Fort Wayne.

Song . . . . Congregation.

Benediction—Dr. C. S. Johnson.

Hit by Locomotive

Mrs. Frank Batz of Spencer township was painfully injured last Saturday evening at the Wabash station in Fort Wayne while waiting to board [illegible]

[illegible]

Announce Child's Clinic

Fifty years ago last Sunday was the wedding day of Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Ulm, now residing one mile west of St. Joe. There were thirteen guests at the home on that day and it is a queer incident that on last Sunday there were thirteen guests gathered again at the aged couple's home to help them celebrate their golden wedding anniversary.

The guests were: Mike Costello, wife and baby of Fort Wayne, Ruben Corkenard, wife and baby, J. R. Shilling and wife, Harlow Ulm and wife, and John Ulm, wife and son, Fred.

Capacity House

The high school auditorium was filled to its capacity Saturday evening by patrons to hear the entertainment given by Mrs. Darla Fusselman, for the benefit of the Eighth grade. The program consisted of humerous readings and songs and proved to be very interesting.

Golden Wedding Anniversary

As a preliminary announcement the campaign of child welfare work staged by the state board of health, will be evidenced in St. Joe on May 8th. On that date a clinic for children up to six years of age will [illegible] and on a date to be [illegible] an evening [illegible] will be given in the [illegible] of the same work. Mrs. [illegible] is chairman for Concord [illegible] and Mrs. [illegible] is chairman for St. Joe [illegible]

Notice

[illegible]

Alumni Meeting

At a business meeting of the St. Joe High School Alumni Society held at the News Office Tuesday evening the following new officers were elected to serve the coming year: William Quance, President; Mary Armstrong, Vice-Pres.; Stanley Means, Sec'y; Harvey Hull, Treas.

A meeting is called to which all members of the Alumni are urged to be present for next Monday evening at 7:30 at the News Office to lay plans for the Alumni banquet, probably to be held on Saturday evening, May 19. It is time to pay annual dues also.

Schools Exhibit Fine Work

Examples of the work of the pupils in the St. Joe schools have been doing in the past year were artisticly displayed and put on exhibit for the patrons inspection last Saturday afternoon and evening at the school building.

The exhibit shows that great pains had been taken in this work for the display was very good indeed. Work from practically every department of the school was shown.

Christian Church Notes

The township Sunday school convention will be held in this church next Sunday afternoon and evening. A good program has been arranged. Be among those present.

The Loyal Sons and Daughters class met after services Sunday for a pot luck dinner with Mr. and Mrs. George Wilmot. Nineteen were present. A business session was held in the afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Claud Mason will be host and hostess at the next meeting May 20.

The Martha Society will meet Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Mary Rhodenbaugh. A full attendance is desired as there will be important business to be talked over.

Two Conventions in May

Two Sunday School Conventions will be entertained in St. Joe during the month of May. The first is the Annual Convention of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Union of the Indiana Conference of the Methodist Protestant church to be held at the local M. P. church three day, May 8, 9, 10. This will probably be the biggest convention ever held in this town.

The second convention will be the DeKalb County Sunday School Convention which will be held here May 22 and 23. Already elaborate plans have been made for the entertainment of these meetings.

38 Years Ago

From Our Files

Frank Meek was in town yesterday.

Shade trees have been set out around the depot at this place. Quite an improvement.

Will Koch and Miss Anna Timmerman were married last Sunday.

Charlie Bartlett, brother of Mrs. Alex. Filley, who has been in the West for the last four years, returned home last week.

Mrs. Wes Hart read an excellent essay at temperance meeting last Wednesday evening. It was right to the point and ought to have made moderate drinkers and tobacco users feel sick.

The St. Joe schools commenced last Monday with Miss Laura Shutt as principal, and Miss Swineford, assistant.

P. F. Shulow will have a sale one week from today.

They will not build a church at Concord this year.

There will be no service in the Lutheran Church next Sunday evening because of the Sunday School Convention.

S. D. Steffey, Pastor

READ!

Come to the

Chicken Pie Supper

at the

Lutheran Basement

Saturday Evening

from 5 to 7:30

Price 25c Price 25c

The proceeds of this supper will go benefit the Community Welfare Band

Help the Boys Get Ahead

E. R. KINSEY

Hardware Furniture Undertaking

Matrimonial Adventures

The Mental Hazard

BY

Clarence Budington Kelland

Author of "Sudden Jim," "The Source," "The High Flyer," "The Little Moment of Happiness," "Scattergood Baines," "Conflict," etc.

Copyright by United Feature Syndicate

SOMETHING ABOUT CLARENCE BUDINGTON KELLAND

I asked for Mr. Kelland at the First National bank in the town where he lives on Long Island. I was directed to ascend the stairs at the left. I did, and came out at the top right on Mr. Kelland himself. There wasn't anything up there but Mr. Kelland and Mr. Kelland's desk, a typewriter, much paper, and the other chair in which I sat. We were completely surrounded by room.

It was easy to talk to Mr. Kelland; he was interested at once in the Star Author Series of Matrimonial Adventures, but I could get him to say very little about himself.

Finally I elicited the following facts: He started writing by work on a newspaper because he "wanter to get three square meals a day." He had been on the staff of the Detroit News for several years. Then he edited the American Boy. He comes originally from Michigan, but he has lived in Vermont and Maine, and has owned lumber camps in both states. At one time he and his brother owned and ran a mill for the manufacture of clothespins.

He knows the Northwest and the Maine woods; the business of big industries; and he knows everyday people, too, the way they think and feel and love. His attitude is big and human and typically American.

His first story to bring him into prominence was "Sudden Jim." Since then, his has been a name to conjure with.

"The Mental Hazard," written purposely for this series, shows the infinite fineness of his treatment of the marriage theme. It is a big story.

MARY STEWART CUTTING, JR.

"I'm beginning to think,' said McDonald Kent to his wife, "that marriage is like golf—full of mental hazards."

"I presume," said Jane icily, "that you're trying to say something disagreeable."

"I'm trying to be pleasant, I'm trying to get dressed and out of this room without a row." His voice gradually lifted with his irritation. "Thus," he finished, "setting a world's record."

Jane turned to look out of the window, and then she began to hum. The sound of her humming bored into her husband's ears maddeningly. He was a reasonable human being; he knew nothing had been done or said which warranted either of them in giving away to anger and the usual morning quarrel, but he could feel it coming on. There was an inevitability about these morning rows, a silly inevitability. Morning after morning he had arisen with good resolutions, and so, he knew, had his wife—but the result was always the same.

"Mental hazard," he told himself. "Like driving a golf ball over the pond on the sixth hole. You know you're going to smash it into the water, and you do." He turned to Jane with elaborate self-repression and painstaking patience.

"I don't want to be disagreeable, God knows," he said. "I don't want to start the day with a rumpus, but—"

"But you always do," she said provocatively.

He compressed his lips and stared at her, determined to control his tongue. "Honestly, Jane," he said, "I wasn't trying to say anything disagreebale—that about mental hazards. What I meant was that you can't play golf without believing you can make your shots—and that's just like marriage. We're off our game. We're always topping our irons or hitting out of bounds. Purely mental. We could play the game as well as we did six or seven years ago if we just thought so."

"I hadn't lived with you ten years seven years ago," Jane said with finality.

"God send you're not living with me ten years hence," he said, his anger suddenly ablaze.

"I wouldn't be living with you tomorrow," she answered, "if there was any way out. Oh, why haven't I money of my own? Why can't I be independent of you?"

"Well," he said shortly, "you haven't and you can't—and there are the kids, so all we can do is make the best of it."

With that he jerked on his coat and [illegible]

11 years, and there were two children, nine and seven years old. Neither McDonald or his wife gave consideration to the fact that the ages of their children might have much to do with the steadily increasing inclemency of their life together. The fact of the matter was that the children had passed babyhood in safety. They were in school; no longer were they monopolizing the attention of their parents, and, consequently, after all these years, Jane and McDonald had time to think about themselves.

Jane was not the sort of person to think and analyze, but she felt. Her emotions were headstrong and she was undiplomatically frank in describing them. She knew that some essential element had gone out of their marriage, some element she craved. With something of fear she realised that she did not love McDonald. The urge which had swept her into marriage with him, and made their first years together very sweet and wonderful, had vanished. This discovery was followed by a period of active revolt. She worked herself into a state of mind in which she believed her husband had become actually repulsive to her, and, in her headstrong way, she told him in a storm of tears.

McDonald stood aghast. That such a thing could have happened to him was unbelievable. It was incredible until he sorted over his own feelings toward his wife and found that he had reached a state of indifference toward her. The glow was gone forever.

They had reached a point which every married couple must reach—the moment of readjustment when they must rebuild upon a new foundation or see their structure swept away by the rising storm. They seemed unable to locate a stable foundation upon which to lay a new cornerstone.

McDonald considered the practical side of the question. The thing, he told himself, was a fact. Apparently it could not be mended, so there was nothing to do but try to make the best of it. The children made any other course impossible, and finances made this course necessary. It was all he could do to support one establishment in comfort, therefore, even had he been willing to do so, he could not have allowed Jane to leave him as she seemed to wish to do. He had not the money to allow her to live separately in independent dependence.

Jane's reactions, however, were purely emotional. She no longer loved McDonald, and to love seemed to her the one essential to life—to love and to be loved. She awoke bitterly to the realization that the love which she loved had not been present in their home for years. She craved the uplift of love, remembering how she had been borne along blindly upon a warm rushing wave of love during the first years of her married life. She wanted that again, wanted it to continue. The idea of the commonplace was abhorrent to her; the thought of continuing to live with McDonald as his wife was repulsive. She was young, vivid, lovelier even than she had been ten years ago, and she felt somehow that her loveliness and her life were going to wasite; that she was being cruelly, bitterly cheated.

Which, if you stop to think of it, is a dangerously fertile state of mind.

The first sharpness of realization became somewhat dulled. Life continued. The household remained intact, but always it perched upon the brink of disaster. Everything was commonplace, habit, humdrum. It was maddening, wearing, a constant source of irritation. Bickerings were inevitable.

McDonald settled down grimly to the task of holding his family together, of holding his wife. He was essentially fair-minded. He perceived, regretted, and tried to make the best of it—but it was not easy. A certain testiness of disposition added to the difficulties. As for Jane, she went along thinking of herself, holding herself more or less in suspense, craving, always craving for the return of that which had vanished forever.

Jane had always done much as she pleased, and McDonald had interfered little with her whims and amusements. She had her friends, both men and women, but, John saw with alarm, her men friends were narrowing down to one. She golfed with John Firth. McDonald was logical enough to realize the danger of it, but also he had the self-rebellious strain which drove her, sometimes against her own will, to do those things which she was extremely forbidden to do, or to accomplish that from which authority sought to restrain her. McDonald knew his interference would only make a bad matter worse.

He was more or less of a fatalist, too. "If she's any good," he said to himself, "she'll stick. If not, she'll go." And there he rested, hoping for the best.

These things happened in those unpleasant days of [illegible] days of her marriage. He loved her. Vehemently he told her of his love, and she delighted in the stirring of it—and then as must happen, being in love with love, she imagined herself in love with Firth. Which is exactly as bad as the real thing. Or perhaps it is the same thing. And, too, there was the element of adventure, secrecy, apprehension. Love flowers best in such conditions. Here lies the chief defect of marriage—ease of access to the loved one. There are no difficulties, no obstacles. If some method could be invented whereby a husband would incur risk in seeing his wife, or the wife have to plan and evade and dare in order to see her husband, divorce would disappear from the earth.

For weeks now Jane had been holding Firth at arm's length, reluctantly and more reluctantly, with difficulty and with greater difficulty. She was happy again, clandestinely happy, thrilled, poised on the brink of the precipice.

On a Friday night McDonald took an earlier train than usual, arriving at his home shortly after ten o'clock. He was at the end of his rope. The worst had happened. He was smashed, beaten down, obliterated. As he alighted from the train he was just where he had started fifteen years ago—no, he was in a worse case than he had been then. Fifteen years ago he had dared to embark in business for himself. He had possessed youth and hope, and about his neck was no millstone of responsibility. He could make or break and no damage done to any but himself. It was different tonight. When his creditors finished with him he would not have two nickels to jingle together. Even the house toward which he walked so slowly and heavily—that would be gone. He dreaded the ordeal of breaking the news to Jane.

Usually he rode home in a jitney—tonight he walked, walked to save the quarter it would have cost to ride. He took the short cut through a vacant lot to his back door. The soft lawn deadened his footsteps as he rounded the house to the low porch, and he arrived unheard. So lost was he in his apprehension of the coming interview with his wife that he was unconscious of his surroundings until he stood at the corner of the porch. Then the sound of a man's voice arrested him. He paused, not intending to spy, and the man's words came to his ears, vehement words, impassioned words. . . . John Firth was making love to his wife.

McDonald hesitated. He did not think clearly; was incapable of sharp decision.

"You must love me," he heard Firth say. "You must. You must. . . . I can't get along without you, Jane . . . Jane . . ." There was a brief silence. "Tell me you love me. Say you'll go away with me. . . . Nobody, nothing has the right to keep us apart if we love. It's a sin to keep us apart."

"I—oh, let me think, let me think," said Jane.

"Think! You've had time for thinking. Weeks and months of it. You must know. You do know. . . . Oh, Jane, nobody ever loved you as I do."

"It's sweet to be loved," said Jane. "But—oh, a woman has so much to think of."

"Just think of you and me—of the happiness we have a right to have. . . . Tell me, Jane, tell me you love me."

"Not now, John," McDonald heard his wife say, "not tonight. Let me have just this night to think. Tomorrow I'll—I'll tell you—how it is to be."

"You'll tell me you love me? You'll tell me you will go away with me?"

Jane paused, while McDonald waited dumbly, unable to speak, unable to move. "I—I hope so," she said, softly.

McDonald turned slowly. Stealthily he walked away. He did not want to be seen or heard. He wanted to get away and to face this new disaster, to stare into its eyes and to demand its meaning. He tramped. Hour after hour he tramped, his head seething with incoherent thoughts. So he had lost everything, business, wife, home—all in one debacle! He tried to realize it, to peer ahead and to picture his future. He could not. He groped for some plan to follow, for some action to take—but there was no light to follow, only the murk of bewilderment. One thing he knew, one fact stood out. He did not want to lose his wife and his home. Perhaps his wife might be a better wife and his home a happier home—but they were his and he wanted them. The thought of losing what lay yonder was intolerable to him.

There were savage thoughts, too; violent thoughts, but he fought them down. Somehow he did not blame Firth, and he could not blame his wife. Circumstances, [illegible] stances were at fault. It was just the way things had happened [illegible]

he announce first? Something, not reason, told him there was but one calamity to announce. About his discovery of last night he would be silent. He could not bring himself to speak of it, and in that moment he knew that, whatever came, whatever should be the outcome, he could never tell her what he had overheard. It must be buried, buried in his heart, never to be exhumed.

"I'm broke!" he said baldly.

"Broke! What do you mean?"

"I mean," he said, patiently, "that the business has gone up the spout. I've lost everything. Even this house has gone. We'll have to get out of it. . . . I haven't a cent in the world. It's—the end."

She stared at him wide-eyed, and, strangely enough, the thought that filled her mind was not of the money lost, of comforts departed, of possible poverty to come—it was of McDonald's loss—that the thing he had labored so hard to build was destroyed. Her heart cried out with sympathy for him!

"You poor boy. . . . Everything you've worked so hard for?"

"Everything," he said dully. "I'm—done."

She got out of bed and walked to his side. "It's wicked, cruel," she said.

He shrugged his shoulders. "You've been wanting to—to get away from me," he said in a low voice. "There's no reason why you shouldn't now. . no reason why you shouldn't do it now. . . . You'll be as well off away from me as with me."

"I tell you everything's gone. This house—everything! You can't keep a servant. God knows where I'll get money for food." He turned away. "There's no use prolonging this. Somehow I'll fix things up for you to stay here until—you're ready to go."

She clutched his arm. "McDonald, what do you mean? Do you want to get rid of me?"

He looked down into her eyes. "No," he said.

"And you think I'd—desert you—when you're down and out? You think I'm that kind of a quitter!"

"You've wanted to get away. You've—been so tired of me."

"Poor boy," she said softly. "Poor boy. . . . I—Oh, McDonald, can't you see I couldn't go now? If you were rich—if everything was all right with you—" she hesitated. "But not now, not when—when you need me. Sit down, here." She drew him upon the bed beside her. "I may be a rotter," she said, "but I'm no quitter." We'll start again. Maybe it's all—been planned this way. Maybe it didn't—just happen. We'll start fresh. I'm not afraid. You—you can find a job—or get a start somehow, and I'll—work. Oh, Mac, Mac, don't you want me to help you—back?"

"You don't love me," he said.

She looked into his eyes a full minute before replying, and then she said. "No, McDonald, . . . not the way you mean, dear, it's better than the other kind of love—more lasting, more to depend on. Don't make me go—don't make me go. Let me stay and start all over again, not from the beginning, but from a new beginning."

She stood before him and held out her hand. It is significant she did not offer her lips, but something told both of them that would be playing off the key. She extended her hand, and he took it in his hand and clung to it. Suddenly she burst into tears.

"Thank God you—you—busted," she said tremulously.

RECOVERED MORE THAN DIME

Andrew Carnegie Stooped for Small Coin, and Had One More Proof of His Being Lucky.

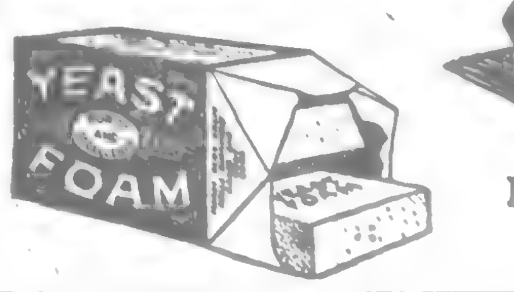
Sometimes even the trivial side of a great man appeals to the public, writes Roscoe G. Mitchell in The Nation's Business. There is one experience I had with Mr. Carnegie. I had a copy of a cable from Berlin relative to some move made by the then Emperor William looking to the promotion of world peace. My city editor had asked that I get Mr. Carnegie to comment on the cable dispatch. I located Mr. Carnegie at a meeting of the Civic Federation at Hotel Astor. When the meeting had concluded and the guests were taking their departure, I rushed over to the speakers' table to have a word with him. Just as I spoke to Mr. Carnegie, I was surprised to see him dart suddenly on all fours under the table without acknowledging my greeting. I pursued my quarry to his place of refuge. As I crawled under the table I saw the ironmaster on hands and knees and a worried look on his [illegible] countenance.

Before I could delve further into the mystery Mr. Carnegie's face was beaming [illegible]

Be sure of good bread; use Yeast Foam

The knowledge of how to make bread gives a girl confidence in mastering other baking and cooking.

Send for free booklet "The Art of Baking Bread"



Northwestern Yeast Co.
1730 North Ashland Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

Nicotine and Plant Lice.

Nicotine dust destroys plant lice by gassing them, Drs. Thomas J. Headlee and William Rudolfs of the New York agricultural experiment stations have found. Other things being equal, they said, the value of nicotine dust is measured by the amount of nicotine evolved from it within 48 hours following its application, because the agent destroying the lice is nicotine gas. Dew reduces and heavy rains destroy the effectiveness of the dust.

There Is a Time.

North—Is it possible for a young man to know everything?

West—If he is young enough.

Off the Track.

On a recent stormy morning an East Michigan street street car was careening along that rough stretch east of the Belt railroad tracks. The course was bumpy, to say the least.

Then the car hit the smooth stretch of track west of the railroad tracks with a burst of speed and the course from then on was smooth.

"Say, Mr. Conductor," expostulated a voice from the dark, "we must be off the track. We're going along here mighty smoothly."—Indianapolis News.

Single Devotion.

"Don't they get on well together?"

"I'll say they don't. They have twin pews in church."—Life.

Which Is Larger the Sun or a Cent

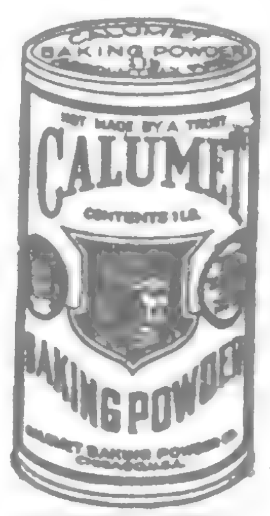
The sun is the largest but you can hold the cent so close to your eye that you'll lose sight of the sun. Don't let a cheap price or a big can baking powder make you lose sight of quality.

CALUMET

The Economy BAKING POWDER

Is the quality leavener—for real economy in the kitchen, always use Calumet, one trial will convince you.

The sale of Calumet is over 150% greater than that of any other baking powder.



BEST BY TEST

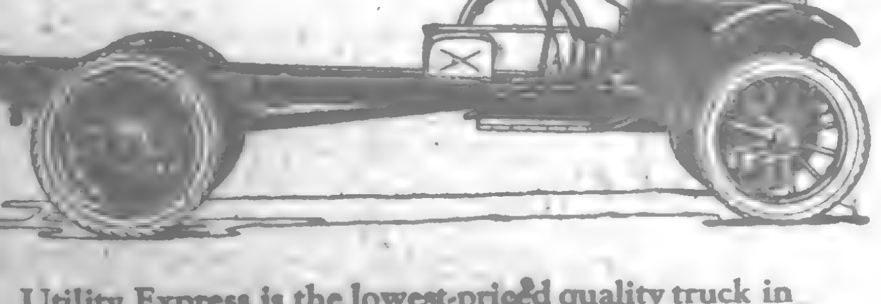
THE WORLD'S GREATEST BAKING POWDER

for Economical Transportation

CHEVROLET

Utility
Express Truck

Chassis Only $575 f. o. b. Flint, Mich.



Utility Express is the lowest-priced quality truck in the world capable of fast heavy-duty service. It hauls your heavy loads quickly and economically. It is reliable.

Long grades and deep mud are mastered by it without racing the motor or boiling the water because the 3-speed transmission provides correct gear ratios to meet any condition of load or road.

You get fast, heavy-duty service at the lowest operating and maintenance cost with this truck. It [illegible] on gasoline, oil and tires, [illegible] the Chevrolet reputation for [illegible] economy.

Prices f. o. b. Flint, Michigan

[illegible]

Chevrolet Motor Co., Detroit, Mich.

[illegible]

[illegible]

APRIL

L 912

After EVERY Meal

give your digestion a "kick" with WRIGLEY'S.

Sound teeth, a good appetite and proper digestion mean MUCH to your health.

WRIGLEY'S is a helper in all this work—a pleasant, beneficial pick-me-up.

WRIGLEY'S P.K. CHEWING SWEET

12

Mothers of the World

Mothers!! Write for 32-Page Booklet, "Mothers of the World"

Pat. Process Lloyd Loom Products
Baby Carriages & Furniture

Use This Coupon

The Lloyd Mfg. Company (Heywood-Wakefield Co.) Menominee Mich. (11)

The Lloyd Mfg. Co. (Heywood-Wakefield Co.) Dept E Menominee, Mich. Please send me your booklet, "Mothers of the World."

Name..............
Street..............
City.............. State..............

You can't trust the dictionary. It says allies are those who make common cause.

The only inflated thing that is always accepted at its face value is a compliment.

There may be ruins 5,500 years old in Ur, but it may be a mistake; it is human to err.

Conferences are like kisses. One leads to another and frequently they mean nothing.

The Ten Commandments don't need to be rewritten half as much as they need to be reread.

About the only good some persons get out of jewelry is the publicity they get when it is stolen.

Seemed Somewhat Personal.

There are things one might have expressed differently. A gushing matron was getting up an afternoon affair and called on a somewhat elderly damsel who had promised to assist.

"Now," pattered the matron, "I have secured a sweet girl to pour tea. You, my dear, will look after the slices of lemon."

"What am I to infer from that?" asked the other acidly.

Masterpiece Oddly Written.

"Songs to David," the lyrical poem of 86 stanzas, was written by Christopher Smart during lucid intervals of his wild madness.

No man is ashamed of his acts as often as he should be.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children
In Use For Over 30 Years
Always bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

NR
TONIGHT
Tomorrow Alright
NR Tablets stop sick headaches, relieve bilious attacks, tone and regulate the eliminative organs, make you feel fine.
"Better Than Pills For Liver Ills"
Get a 25c Box.

ABSORBINE
Reduces Bursal Enlargements, Thickened, Swollen Tissues, Curbs, Filled Tendons, Soreness from [illegible]
[illegible]

W. N. U., [illegible]

American Farm Bureau

The Louisiana Farm Bureau Cotton Growers' association, with a membership of approximately 5,000 farmers who have pledged 100,000 bales of cotton under a five-year standard contract, was incorporated at Baton Rouge recently under the state co-operative marketing law which permits farmers to organize non-profit, non-capital-stock agencies for the selling of farm produce. In the accompanying picture is shown the newly-elected directors and officers of the association, as follows:

Top row, left to right—Leo Hartman, Farmerville; Walter Scott, Tallulah; Travis Oliver, Monroe; J. Franklin Schell, Washington; W. P. Connell, Baton Rouge.

Middle row—A. L. Smith, Monroe; Dr. J. B. Pratt, Natchitoches; R. A. Kent, Fluker; Jno. R. Anderson, Oak Grove; J. T. Henry, Simsboro; E. G. Arceneau, Lafayette; R. H. Miller, Minden; Frank Dimmick, Shuteson.

Bottom row—Walter F. Johnson, Mansfield; Dr. W. B. Womble, Gilbert; N. R. Cotton, Jonesville; Andrew Querbes, Shreveport; Mrs. H. M. Cannon, Baton Rouge; Harry F. Kapp, Baton Rouge; L. P. Roy, Marksville.

AGRICULTURAL BILLS PASSED BY CONGRESS

Co-operative Marketing Legalized and Intermediate Credit Is Granted Farmer.

Legalization of co-operative marketing, granting of intermediate credit and raising of the farm loan limit from $10,000 to $25,000 were the three great agricultural legislative triumphs of the Sixty-seventh congress. These were the three farm bureau bills.

The farm bills actively supported before the Sixty-seventh congress and which are now laws briefly summarize as follows:

Provided intermediate farm credit, affording the farmer a new channel for credit running from six months to three years commensurate with his production and marketing methods.

Increased the amount individuals may borrow on farm mortgages through the co-operative federal farm loan banks from $10,000 to $25,000.

Placed the meat packing industry under federal supervision, making it possible to ascertain the status of the meat packing and stockyards activities.

Placed a tax on trading in grain futures, supervised the grain exchanges and legalized membership of co-operatives in grain exchanges.

Legalized co-operative marketing, making it possible for farmers' co-operative organizations to do business, thus relieving the constant shadow of the court which menaced all co-operative marketing activities.

Furnished a farm-to-market highway program and appropriated funds to be used during the next three years.

Increased the working capital of the federal farm loan system, making it possible to float bond issues more easily.

Provided that the interest rate on farm loan bonds would be increased to 5½ per cent—emergency act.

Revised the tax schedule, reduced the surtax.

Limited immigration to 3 per cent of the foreign-born recorded in the 1910 census and barring hundreds of thousands of undesirable aliens.

Prohibited the manufacture and sale of filled milk, thus protecting the dairy industry to the extent of many millions of dollars annually.

Created an 80 per cent fat standard for butter.

Appropriated money for extension of credit to farmers in the Northwest who have had crop failures, and defining crop failures.

Strengthened the warehouse act by making it apply to all agricultural products, making warehouse receipts more useful to banking channels.

Placed representative of agriculture along with industry, commerce and finance on the federal reserve board.

Re-created the War Finance corporation and extended its usefulness in advancing credits on agricultural products.

Appropriated funds for the Department of Agriculture.

Enacted an emergency tariff followed by the permanent tariff.

Putnam Re-elected.

At the annual meeting of the New Hampshire Farm Bureau federation George M. Putnam was re-elected president. Mr. Putnam is a member of the executive committee of the American Farm Bureau federation. H. Styles Bridges is secretary of the New Hampshire farm bureau.

Farm Pool in [illegible]

[illegible]

REWARDS FOR CLUB MEMBERS

Magretta Bailey Wins Scholarship to West Virginia State University and Other Prizes.

Cash prizes, scholarships and trips are some of the immediate rewards that come to members of boys' and girls' clubs conducted through co-operation of the Department of Agriculture, state extension schools and county farm bureaus. The girl in the picture above took the grand championship prize at the West Virginia statewide club show this year with her purebred Hereford heifer, June Fairfax. The girl's name is Magretta Bailey. In winning the grand championship she won a scholarship to the state university. She could have sold her calf at auction with a profit of $760.25.

Magretta Bailey and Her Purebred Hereford Heifer, June Fairfax.

The boy in the picture is Clifford Benson of Lamoille, Iowa. His is the distinction of being the winner of the grand championship in America's largest calf club "beef" show. Competing against 413 [illegible] at the Iowa state fair, young Benson showed his Hereford steer, Roan Repeater, to victory in open competition with all breeds.

Clifford Benson and His Champion Hereford Steer.

Co-operative Horse Sales.

The North [illegible] Farm Bureau federation has [illegible]

[illegible]

GOOD ROADS

ROAD BUILDING IS PROBLEM

Development of Railroad Systems Has Retarded Improvement of Country Highways.

The highways of the United States as they existed in the year 1900 resulted from a gradual development extending, roughly, over a period of three hundred years. During this time there was no radical change in either the vehicle or the motive power. So far as concerns the general function of the highways, in our scheme of transportation, a very great change was introduced with the beginning of railroad development, about 1820.

Prior to the development of railroads, our only means of land transportation was over the highways. Had it not been for the development of the railroad system of the United States, there is no doubt whatever, in my mind, but that we should have in the United States at the present time a system of federal and state highways comparing favorably with similar systems that were developed, first by the Romans, and later by the modern European states, writes Prof. L. E. Conrad of the Kansas State Agricultural college in the Kansas City Star.

The matter of determining the best type of road to build is not easy. The whole problem of motor operation, as it confronts the American people at the present time, has come upon us so suddenly as compared to most developments, and the problem is so stupendous, that any sensible person should be willing to admit that it is unreasonable to expect our highway commissions and highway engineers to know exactly what to do under all circumstances. It is much less reasonable to expect local road officials who have devoted comparatively little study to the subject, and who have been elected because of their high standing in the community as citizens rather than as highway experts, to have a satisfactory grasp of the problem.

The middle western states which, to me, seem best to prove this statement are Illinois, Minnesota and Nebraska. All three have state highway systems. The conditions in the three states are vastly different. The three highway commissions have adopted policies which are quite different but which are admirably adapted to the conditions in their several states.

Illinois has a large population, with nearly 700,000 automobiles and trucks registered in the year 1921. The area is comparatively small. They have constructed a large mileage of pavement.

In Minnesota, with about half of the automobile and truck registration of Illinois, and with a much larger area to be served, there has been comparatively little pavement constructed. The highway commission has confined its efforts in the main to the construction of a large mileage of gravel and graded earth roads. The state is favored with a good supply of excellent road gravel and many tourists from other states can vouch for the skill with which it has been used.

In Nebraska, with about two-thirds of the number of automobiles and trucks found in Minnesota, and also having a comparatively large area, the highway commission has considered it best to confine its efforts, for the most part, to the grading and maintenance of a large mileage of earth roads. Many travelers crossing Nebraska have been surprised by the excellent results obtained by their highway department with graded earth roads.

The people of Missouri are to be congratulated on having finally adopted the only policy for handling their state highway problem that has ever brought satisfactory results. The present expenditures may seem large, but I am convinced that before 20 years have elapsed the people of this state will be well satisfied with their investment.

RULES FOR DRAGGING

The following rules are given by the Illinois highway commission:

Use a light drag.

Haul it over the road at an angle so that a small amount of earth is pushed to the center of the road.

Drive the team at a walk.

Ride on the drag; do not walk.

Begin at one side of the road, returning up the opposite side.

Drag the road as soon after every rain as possible, but not when the mud is in such a condition as to stick to the drag.

Do not drag a dry road.

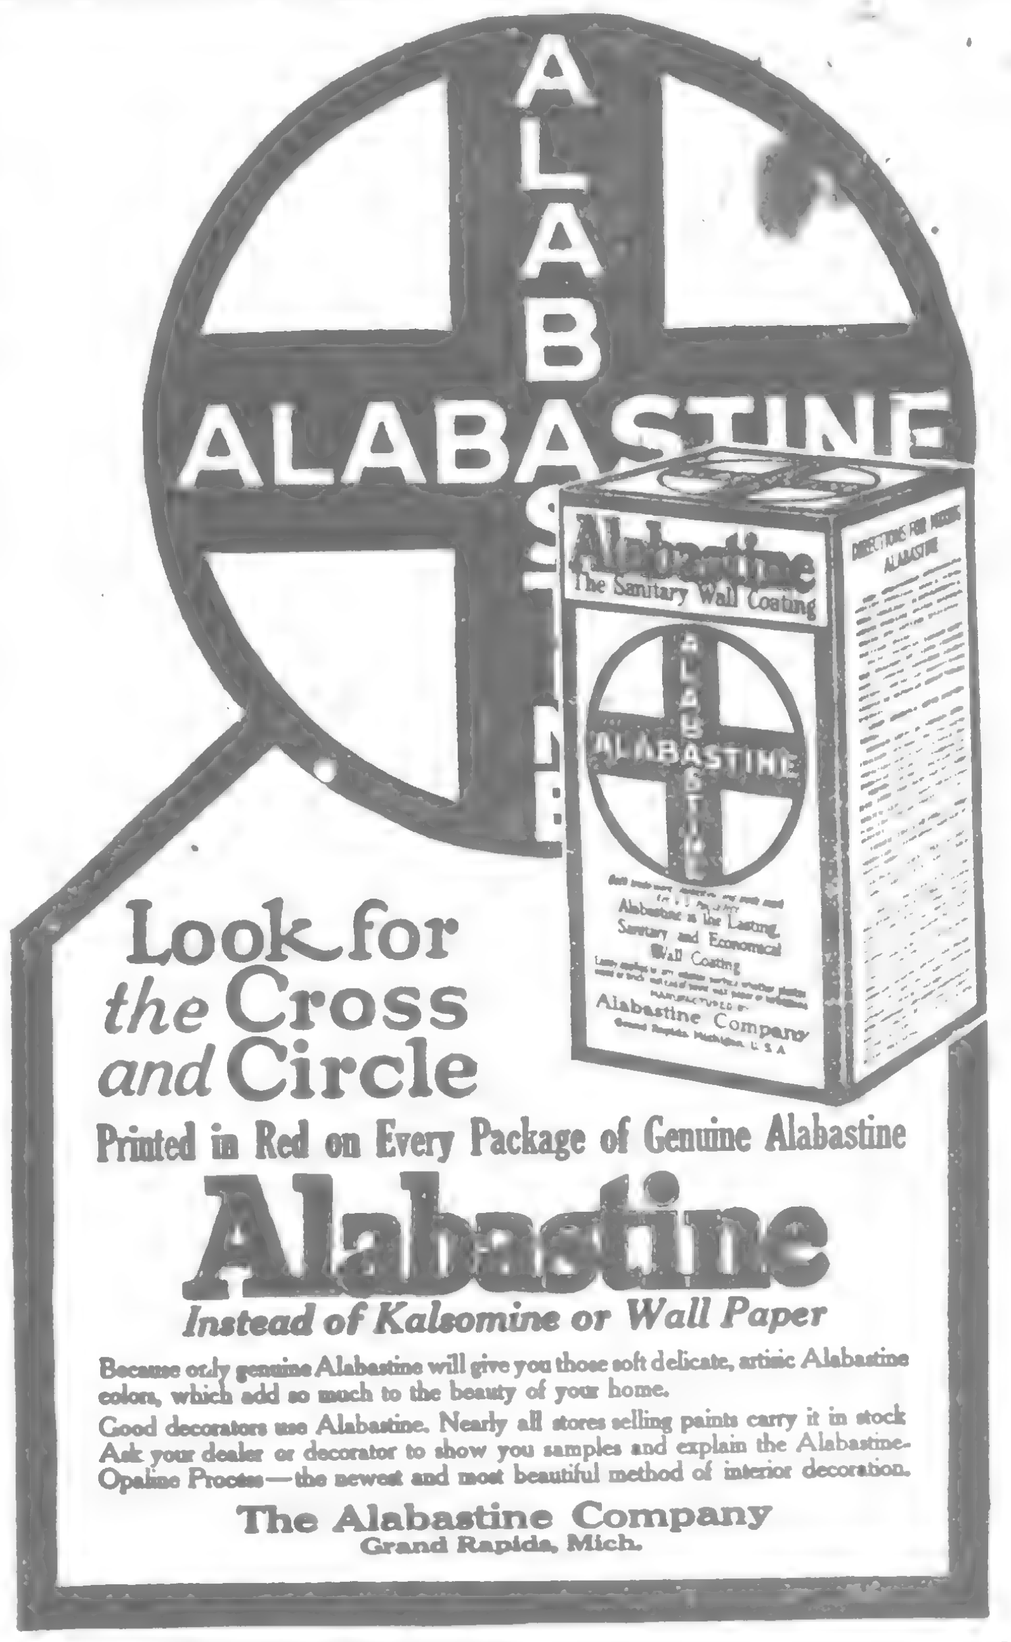
Drag whenever possible at all seasons of the year.

Education of Children.

There are [illegible] children in the country who should be attending school, but of this number only [illegible]. Good roads would [illegible]

Lower Cost of [illegible]

[illegible]



Look for the Cross and Circle
Printed in Red on Every Package of Genuine Alabastine
Alabastine
Instead of Kalsomine or Wall Paper
Because only genuine Alabastine will give you those soft delicate, artistic Alabastine colors, which add so much to the beauty of your home.
Good decorators use Alabastine. Nearly all stores selling paints carry it in stock. Ask your dealer or decorator to show you samples and explain the Alabastine-Opaline Process—the newest and most beautiful method of interior decoration.
The Alabastine Company
Grand Rapids, Mich.

10c Saves Need Buying a New Skirt
Putnam Fadeless Dyes—dyes or tints as you wish

All Aboard.

Some sailors went ashore and as a change thought they would like to go for a ride on horseback. They went to the nearest livery stable and the spokesman asked for the ostler.

Spokesman—We wants an 'orse.

Ostler—What kind of an 'orse?

Spokesman—We want a four-legged 'orse.

Ostler (annoyed)—Yes, I know that, but d'yer want a quiet 'orse or a spirity 'orse?

Spokesman—Oh, it don't matter about that, mate. Give us a pretty long 'orse—there's eight of us and we're all goin' aboard.

Betwixt and Between.

"These here schoolmarms don't know their own minds! One of 'em says Oswald's too forward, an' the other says he's backward!"—Judge.

Railway Seismographs.

An indication of the swift progress of the Japanese mind in practical science is afforded by Doctor Omori's report on the measurement of the vibrations of railway cars by means of seismographs. The primary purpose of the seismograph is to measure the oscillations of earthquakes. Japanese engineers use it for determining the proper balance of locomotives and the state of the permanent way of railways. Many practical advantages in the saving of fuel and the detection of faults in construction have thus resulted.

It Happens to the Best.

Edison says he has offered 45 inventions to the navy and every one of them has been turned down. Writers, it seems, aren't the only ones who get their stuff sent back.

Canada Offers "Last Chance" for Virgin Farms

THINK of what you could produce on a farm of virgin fertility, without the burden of high-acreage cost. Think of what 20-to-40 bushel wheat would mean to you under these conditions, and of dairying and stock raising on cheap pasture land. Land pays for itself in a few crops—no artificial fertilizer—no heavy investment. You have envied the farmer who got his start when land was cheap. Here's your chance, perhaps your last chance, for the same brand of prosperity.

Western Canada—Your Opportunity!

Western Canada is the farmer's land of opportunity. Thousands of settlers who started not many years ago with little or nothing, are today the owners of fine farms, with comfortable homes and barns, thoro'bred stock, dairy herds—all the marks of prosperity. Yet land is not dear—only $15 to $20 an acre for rich, virgin, prairie convenient to railways. Land is not dear in Western Canada—yet—because there is so much of it. But many settlers are expected in 1923, and now is your opportunity, before the best farms are taken. Get started. Taxes are reduced, not raised, on land brought under cultivation. On farm buildings, improvements, machinery, personal effects, automobile, etc., there is no tax at all. Canada wants workers—it wants its land farmed—and the farmers, through their municipal councils, have practical control of all local taxation.

Special Renter's Plan—Buy Out of Profits

To aid and encourage the honest worker with perhaps little capital, the Canadian Government has a "Renter's Plan", whereby one may work a new or improved farm—"Try it out" for several years if desired—and buy a farm of his own out of profits.

Thirty-Two Years to Pay

For the benefit of those wishing to buy land, a national non-profit sharing organization—the Canada Colonization Association—has been established, with head office at Winnipeg, and United States office at St. Paul. This Association offers selected land convenient to railways—much of it at $15 to $20 per acre—on very small cash payment; no further payment until third year; balance extended over thirty years, but purchaser may pay up and obtain title at any time, if desired. Interest six per cent.

Get the Facts—Costs You Nothing

Mail the coupon to the agent mentioned below, located nearest to you. He [illegible] is authorized to give you information and assistance, without charge, and glad to be of service to you.

Mail the Coupon Tell us something of your position, and [illegible] special railway rates can be arranged for a trip of inspection.

W. S. NETHERY
Desk W, 82 E. Rich St. Columbus, Ohio
M. J. JOHNSTONE
Desk W. 116 Monument Pl. Indianapolis, Ind.

Free Homesteads are still available in some locations. [illegible]

EASTERN CANADA

[illegible]
Name..............
R. F. D. No. [illegible]
P. O.............. State..............

APRIL

L 912

In three or four years many autos are worth about ten cents on the dollar-- and you,ll often find an increase in property value, and will never find such a depreciation as the above—and then consider the rent saved.

BUILD A HOME

One title deed in the hand is worth a bale of rent receipts. You can go to the banker and borrow on the first, but you'd have to live far past the span of life before the bale of rent receipts would be worth a call of the old paper man and then they'd bring less that a penny a pound.

Think this over, and come and talk over "Build a Home" with us. You'll be interested in our collection of photos and plans of modern homes,and having closely studied building conditions we are in a position to be really helpful.

Spencerville Lumber Company

Everthing Needed in Home Building—including practical helps.

Spencerville, Ind.

The St. Joe News

William S. Quance,
Editor and Publisher.

One Year,	$1.50
Six Months,	.75
Three Months,	.40
One Month,	.15
Single Copy,	.05

(Advertising Rates on Application)

Entered at the postoffice at St. Joe, Indiana, as second class matter.

Foreign Advertising Representative
THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

Perry A. Foote of Richmond township has been appointed county highway superintendent to succeed Mr. Campbell.

Are YOU going to the Chicken Pie Supper next Saturday evening at the Lutheran church basement?

NEWVILLE

Friday will be the last day of this term of the Newville school.

Mrs. Jessie Fusselman is clerking in the Benner grocery.

Sam Tomelson with his force of men were bailing hay last week near Cheesetown.

Terry Traxler, Mrs. Hugh Traxler and little daughter Mona, were in Butler Thursday afternoon.

Terry Traxler and wife and Burl Rude, wife and son were Sunday guests of John Dove and family at Butler.

J. H. Benner, who fell from a load of hay on his head and shoulders, Monday of last week, was severely injured and is not yet able to be out of bed.

Terry Traxler, son of E. E. Traxler and wife of Newville, and Miss Lucile Dove of Butler, were united in the holy bonds of wedlock one day last week. The groom is 18 years of age. They were married in Michigan. We join their friends in wishing them a happy voyage.

Two of Malcolm Richmond's youngest children, the youngest child of Chubb Richmond and wife and the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Traxler, have all been quite ill with a cough and sore throat.

The Newville Township Sunday School Convention will be held nxet Sunday, April 22 in the U. B. Church. There will be Union Sunday School and an address by George Beugnot in the forenoon. Basket dinner in the basement. Rev. M. K. Richardson of Fort Wayne will make the address in the afternoon.

COLETOWN

Try a want ad in the News.

J. W. Hart and wife were Sunday dinner guests of Kell Hart and wife.

Morris Coaine spent Sunday in the J. D. Brown home.

Opal Walker spent Tuesday and Wednesday with Mrs. Henry Kling.

Dwight Coolidge and family called on Edwin Guthrie and wife Sunday afternoon.

Clarence Funkhouser and family visited Sunday evening with Alvin Walker and family.

Mrs. Emmet Ginther and daughter, Marie, called on Mrs. Lester Pierman Wednesday afternoon.

Fred Blaker and wife of near Butler visited Friday with their daughter, Mrs. Claud Laub.

For good glasses see Griest at American Building Hicksville, Ohio.

Lester Pierman and family, Joe Newton and family were Sunday guests of Frank Pierman and wife at Hicksville.

Dr. Bonnell M. Souder

HOSPITAL

Established in 1914
206 West Seventh Street
AUBURN, INDIANA

HERE AND THERE

Mrs. Frank Curie spent Saturday at Auburn.

Miss Katherine Shull was a Sunday guest of Miss Portia Hadsell.

John George and family of Auburn, were Sunday guests of Craig Sheffer and family.

Everett Mavis and family and Charles Curie of Auburn, spent over Sunday here with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs Fred Randall and children of Harlan, spent Monday with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Randall.

Mesdames G. M. Barney and J. P. Buckingham, spent Monday at Hicksville.

Grover Ward and wife of Albion were Tuesday dinner guests of Clay Coburn and wife.

J. E. Folts is very much improved from his recent illness. He is down town now every day.

Mrs. Fred Saylor has returned home from a several days' visit with her parents at Decatur.

Alice Timmerman and Violet May were Sunday afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. Will Koch.

The Pythian Sisters initiated six candidates Tuesday evening, serving a big potluck supper afterwards.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. F. Able visited with H. L. Dunkle and wife at Waterloo, Thursday.

Harry Hursh and wife were Sunday dinner guests in the Marsh Andress home.

Ross Abel and mother, Mrs. Anna Abel were Sunday afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. F. Abel.

John Dilley and family of near Waterloo, spent Sunday with his mother, Mrs. Anna Dilley.

Mrs. Charles Rice and Mrs. Earl Smith spent Monday at Ft. Wayne visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Horstmeyer.

Mrs. Nan Lysher went Monday evening to stay a few days with her sister, Mrs. Charles Jackson of Concord.

You want to see the Community Welfare Band grow. Eat at the Lutheran church basement Saturday evening, April 21.

The stork visited Widney Avenue again Wednesday morning bringing an eight pound baby boy to Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Woodcox.

Mrs. Hanna Ulm and her daughter, Mrs. Minnie Circle, the latter of Springfield, Ohio, were recent guests in the homes of Sherman Rickett and Charles Jackson.

Mr. and Mrs Florence Buchanan are at home again after having spent four weeks in the home of their daughter, Mrs. Frank Rhoads near Spencerville.

Frank Terman returned home Friday from the Garrett Sacred Heart Hospital where he had been a patient since the last week in February. He is much improved.

Mr. and Mrs. George Seevers and family of near Logan, Ohio, and Sidney Brunson of Newville, were Sunday guests of Tom Brunson and family and Mrs. A. D. Brunson.

Mrs. Nan Lysher has returned to her own home after having cared for Mrs. Virginia Lawson for a year or more. Mrs. Lawson will live with her daughter, Mrs. Harvey Lindley for the present.

Elijah Inhofe of Butler, were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Armstrong. Afternoon guests were Mr. and Mrs. Sam Wyatt and daughter, Miss Garnett, of near Newville.

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an Ointment which Quickly Relieves by local application, and the Internal Medicine, a Tonic, which assists in improving the General Health. Sold by druggists for over 40 Years.
F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

Notice of Final Settlement of Estate

Cause No. 2581.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to all persons interested in the estate of [illegible] deceased, to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held at Auburn, Indiana, on the [illegible] day of May 1923, and show cause, if any, why the Final Settlement Accounts [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

Chiropractor Optician

Calls made at your home by APPOINTMENT.

EARL E. FRISBIE,
Butler, Indiana.

Died of Pneumonia

Dallas Kelley died on Thursday morning near 12 o'clock at the Methodist hospital, at Ft. Wayne, of pneumonia, at the age of 59 years. Mr. Kelley had been quite ill for several weeks, having suffered a stroke of paralysis some time ago with a complication of diseases following.

Dallis M. Kelley, son of Samuel and Margaret Kelley, was born on a farm near Larue, Marion County, Ohio, December 29, 1863.

Mr. Kelley was the eldest of a family of five children who came to Indiana with his parents when only a small boy and located near Spencerville, Indiana, where he spent practically all his earthly career.

His chief occupation was farming and threshing and in this capacity rendered a very valuable service to his many friends and neighbors.

On February 6, 1885 he was united in marriage to Ida Louise Shutt, who preceded him in death eight years ago, April 9, 1915.

To this union was born five children, viz:—Clarence and Vernie of near Spencerville, Corma of Salt Lake City, Utah, Lena Zimmerman of Spencerville, Nellie Carr of Auburn and one son who died in infancy.

Several years ago he united with the M. E. Church at Spencerville and at a later date became a member of the Concord Masonic Lodge No. 556.

His illness was due to a complication of diseases. The children who were desirous of his recovery resorted to the best known aid and took him to the Methodist Hospital at Fort Wayne, but a contraction of pneumonia caused the fatal blow and he beparted this life April 12, 1923, age 59 years, 3 months and 13 days, with the testimony "he was ready to go."

He leaves behind a father, one brother, three sisters, three sons, two daughters, five grand children and many friends and acquaintances.

The funeral was held on Saturday afternoon from the Methodist Church, Rev. Fred Brewster officiating. Interment in White City cemetery.

Those who attended the funeral from a distance were J. D. Kelley and wife, Halleck Kelley and wife, Horace Kelley and Clifford Jackson all of Toledo, M. L. Jackson and wife of Ligonier, George Bindle and wife of Fort Wayne, Calvin Baker and wife, Wm. Wearley and wife, Harley Wearley and son Homer of Woodburn, Walter Carr and wife, Aaron Carr and wife, William Carr, wife and daughter Nora of Auburn, John Stafford, wife and son Dayton of Newville Center and Corma Kelley of Utah.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire in this manner to publicly express our thanks and appreciation to the friends and neighbors who so kindly administered to us with their words and deeds of kindness during the sickness and death of our beloved father. Also to Rev. Brewster and the choir and especially to the lodges for their work and beautiful floral offerings.
The Bereaved Children.

H. R. Minnick, M. D.
St. Joe, Indiana
Office at Residence
PHONE NO. 16X

Make Your Trip More Enjoyable by a Refreshing Night on Lake Erie
(Your rail ticket is good on the boats)

Thousands of east and north bound travelers say they wouldn't have missed that cool, comfortable night on one of our fine steamers. A good bed in a clean stateroom, a long sound sleep and an appetizing breakfast in the morning!

Steamers "SEEANDBEE"—"CITY OF ERIE"—"CITY OF BUFFALO"

Daily, May 1st to November 15th

Leave Cleveland - 9:00 P.M. Arrive Buffalo - 7:30 A.M.	Eastern Standard Time	Leave Buffalo - 9:00 P.M. Arrive Cleveland - 7:30 A.M.

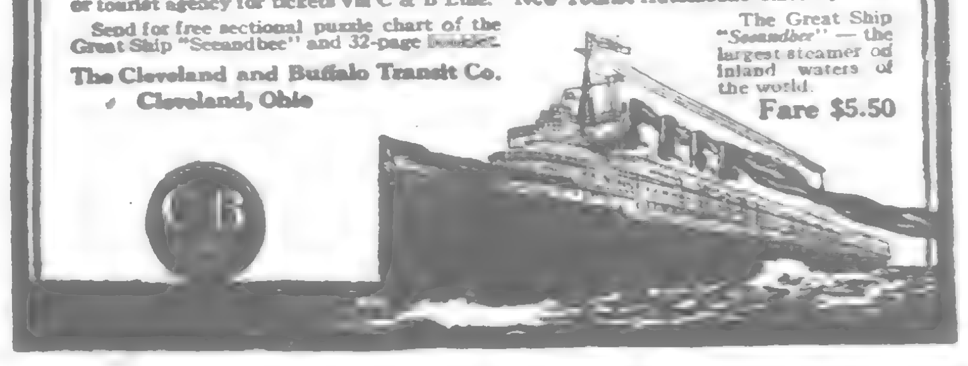
Connections for Niagara Falls, Eastern and Canadian points. Ask your ticket agent or tourist agency for tickets via C & B Line. New Tourist Automobile Rate—$10.00.

Send for free sectional puzzle chart of the Great Ship "Seeandbee" and 32-page booklet.

The Cleveland and Buffalo Transit Co.
Cleveland, Ohio



The Great Ship "Seeandbee"—the largest steamer on inland waters of the world.

Fare $5.50

Get Your

Daily Bread and Welcome Flours

at the J. C. Bailey Store St. Joe

Made By G. A. Ward of the

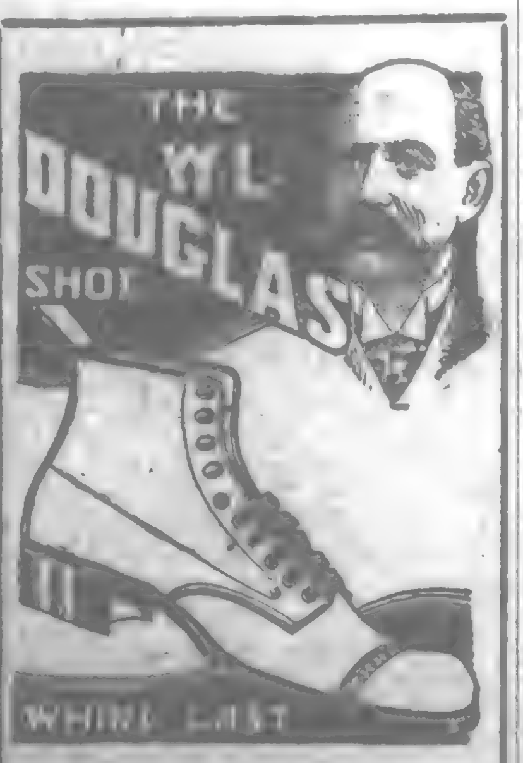
ALBION ROLLER MILLS, Albion, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs Virgil Perry moved their household goods from Ft. Wayne, Monday and stored them at the home of Mr. Perry's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Brown. Mr. and Mrs Perry will leave soon for Colorado.

Frank L. Milliman
TRUSTEE
Concord Township

Office Day Friday of Each Week at his residence 2 miles north and 1-2 mile West of St. Joe.



THE W. L. DOUGLAS SHOE
WHITE LAST

For Sale Only At
Chaneys'
Auburn, - - - - Ind.

Mrs. Mary Myers of Mt Olivet, was an afternoon guest of Mrs. Nan Lysher Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Myers and family of Mt. Olivet, were Sunday afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Crothers.

Mrs Neva Hursh entertained the Culture Club Wednesday evening. This will be the last meeting of the season. Two new names have been added to the roll for next year, Mrs. Ed Leighty and Mrs. H. R. Minnick.

Mrs. Fred Hart left Monday for Fremont, Mich., to spend the week with relatives. She will return home with her son, Glen, who is teaching school near there and who will have finished teaching there the last of this week.

Sunday was the sixty-seventh birthday of Daniel Baker of Fort Wayne and it was also the birthday anniversary of his daughter, Mrs. F. R. Bowman. Unfortunately the burial of Mrs. Anna Baker came the same day.

Notice to members of the M. P. Church.—You will be called upon this week by a solicitor to give definitely the number of delegates you will be able to entertain for lodging and breakfast May 8, 9, 10, the dates for the big state convention you read of above.

A motor party comprised of the Misses Emma Seiter, Martha Hayden, Opal Fulton, and Margarette Milliman, and Mr. J. Goggerty, all of Fort Wayne, were Friday evening dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Milliman.

NERVOUS HACKING
Can not be cured by a glass of water, but will disappear under the healing and soothing effect of
CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY
Every user is a friend

H. O. WILLIAMS

THE Abstracter

is able to furnish you with a complete Abstract of Title to any description of Real Estate in DeKalb County.

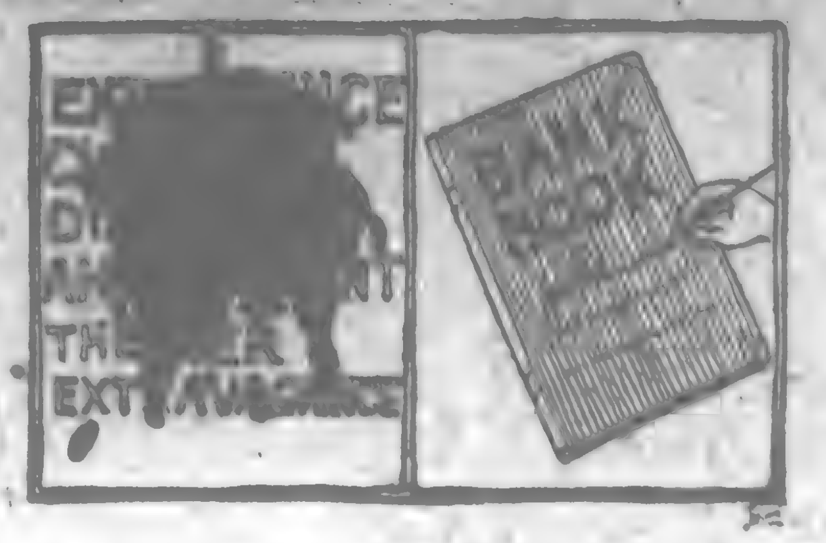
OFFICE
West Seventh Street
AUBURN

FIRE INSURANCE NOTARY PUBLIC

118 1-2 EAST HIGH STREET

Lehman's
CLOTHING HOUSE
MENS AND BOYS OUTFITTERS
ESTABLISHED 1867
810 CALHOUN STREET
Fort Wayne, Ind.

APRIL



That Saving Habit

Saving is a matter of habit. And the habit grows, just like the savings.

To acquire the habit when young with small sums is to practice the habit when older with larger sums.

So encourage the little fellows to start a savings account with us at once and watch the habit grow.

Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank

Capital Stock, - $25,000

Spencerville, Ind.

The Bank of Personal Services

SPENCERVILLE

Mrs. S. D. Steffey was hostess to the Ladies Aid of the Lutheran church Wednesday afternoon.

For Sale—Rural New York Potatoes. J. R. Doll,
Spencerville, Ind.

Miss Ailleen Allen was an over Sunday guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Allen and family.

Edward Billman and wife very pleasantly entertained the following at their home east of town in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bazaska of Fort Wayne, who is a guest at their home: Frank Wertman and wife, Gust Hafner and family, Walter Perkins, wife and son of Harlan, Louis Markle and wife and Samuel Markle.

(Editor's Note.)—Saturday evening the Community Welfare Band of St. Joe is giving a chicken pie supper between the hours of 5 and 7:30. Spencerville patrons and any one else are cordially invited to attend this supper and enjoy one of the best times of your life. This band is a big asset to St. Joe just like the Community Hall is to Spencerville.

For Sale—Good Tinner's outfit. D. Coolidge

Kenneth Coburn spent Friday night at the home of Vern Wilmot and family.

John Hobaugh celebrated his 81st birthday anniversary on Monday at his home. Mr. Hobaugh has been quite ill but is improving.

Corma Kelley, who attended the funeral of his father, Del Kelly, was called home by the serious illness of his brother-in-law, Earl Dockstater of Salt Lake City.

Samuel Kelly, who has made his home for several months at the home of his son, has gone to make his home with his daughter, Mrs. William Wearley of Woodburn.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Beery and Mrs. Merriel of New Haven spent Sunday with Henry Beery and wife. Mrs. Beery has been quite ill with bronical pneumonia but is better at this writing.

Mrs. James Monroe and three children, Mrs. Carl Wilmot and two girls, and Carl Monroe, all of Fort Wayne, Berry Hefielfinger and wife, Wallace Heffelfinger, wife and son, all of Hicksville, were Sunday dinner guests of Wesley Zimmerman and family.

Start Them Right Raise More Chicks

[illegible]

Conkey's

Buttermilk Starting Feed

[illegible]

Announcing

Our Co-Operation in the New

FORD WEEKLY PURCHASE PLAN

Following out our policy of extending the facilities of this bank in whatever way we can to serve the public, we have arranged to give our co-operation to the new Ford Weekly Purchase Plan.

We realize what the automobile means to the average family in bringing them greater enjoyment of life, and believe our action in helping those who desire to become Ford owners will be appreciated by many families who can now realize that ambition through the new Ford Weekly Purchase Plan.

Under this plan, you can begin with an initial deposit as low as $5.00. Then select the type of Ford Car you want—Touring Car, Runabout, Coupe, Sedan, etc.,—and arrange to make weekly deposits on which interest will be computed at our regular savings rate.

Come in and let us explain the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan to you, or, if you wish, go to the nearest Ford Dealer for further details.

Start today, and before you realize it you will be driving your own car.

Farmer's & Merchants State Bank

SPENCERVILLE, IND.

A [illegible] will be given on May 2, by [illegible] and Doris Rhoades and [illegible] of Miss Charlotte Miller at the Lutheran church. Mrs. A[illegible] will render several [illegible] the same evening.

On May 7 at the Community Hall [illegible]

Renew your subscription.

Mrs. [illegible] Koontz, who has been visiting relatives at Fort Wayne, returned home Saturday.

Frank Wertman and wife, Walter [illegible]

[illegible]

Edward Billman and wife spent Sunday the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bazaska of Fort Wayne. The latter returned home with them for a few days visit.

Sunday School Report.

The following is a true and correct report of the [illegible]

[illegible]

Fred Ulm is the owner of a new Ford Roadster.

C. R. [illegible], D V M

Veterinarians

OFFICE and HOSPITAL
SPENCERVILLE, - IND.

Phones—Office No. 7

F. W. [illegible], D. V. M.

[illegible]

THE JOY OF LIVING

By SIDNEY GOWING

Copyright 1922 by Sidney Gowing

Illustrations by ELLSWORTH YOUNG

"PARTNER!"

SYNOPSIS.—Disliking the prospect of a month's visit to her austere aunt, Lady Erythea Lambe, at Jervaulx abbey, and her cousin, Alexander Lambe, Aimee, vivacious daughter of the Very Reverend Viscount Scroope, wanders into the park, there encountering a strange youth. He laughingly introduces himself as "Billy," American. The two ride on his motorcycle, the "Flying Sphinx," and part. With Georgina Berners, her cousin, Aimee sets out for Jervaulx. She decides that Georgina shall impersonate her at Jervaulx, while she goes on a holiday. Georgina's horrified protest is unavailing. Aimee again meets "Billy." He tells her his name is Spencer, and she gives hers as Amy Snookes, at present "out of a job." Billy offers to take her into partnership in selling the Sphinx. In a spirit of madcap adventure, she accepts. The two proceed to the town of Stanhoe, taking separate lodgings in Ivy cottage. That night Aimee visits Georgina and learns that the deception has not been discovered. She compels Georgina to continue the subterfuge. On a trial spin, with Billy, Aimee almost collides with a carriage in which are her aunt, Georgina and Alexander. The pair escape unrecognized. Georgina learns that Lord Scroope is coming to visit Lady Erythea and is in hopeless bewilderment. While Aimee is secretly visiting Georgina at Jervaulx, the place is burglarized. Aimee escapes. Police decide the thieves are "Jack the Climber" and "Calamity Kate," who travel on a motorcycle. Billy, who has shadowed Aimee to Jervaulx, follows the thieves. He is knocked out, but finds he has some costly emeralds. Realising they must be part of the loot from Jervaulx, he starts for the abbey. He meets Aimee, with the police in pursuit.

CHAPTER XI—Continued.

—5—

"Close call, partner," he observed.

"I thought it must be they," said Aimee breathlessly. "I wonder they haven't called out the military as well. All the countryside seems to be chasing me! Billy!" she said, with a suspicious tremble in her voice, "you'll help me, won't you? I'll tell you about it. I—I've kept it from you, but I won't any longer. I—"

Billy laid a hand on her arm.

"Amy," he said quietly, "just repeat this piece to yourself. Say: 'I'm safe, my partner's lookin' after me.' Got that? I'll see you through; you've nothin' to worry for at all. But we can't talk here. We've got to beat it."

He picked up the Sphinx.

"Follow close after me, an' keep quiet."

He wheeled the machine along the field path at a run, passed through another gate, crossed a stretch of heathery common-land, and made for a small copse at the foot of the slope. Aimee trotted behind silently, with an odd sense of relief and security. Billy would see it through. He had said so. He halted by the copse, and looked round to make sure of his bearings.

"It ought to be close handy here," he said. "Yes—I've got it."

He pushed on to a small bosky dell which led into a series of old crag-pits, masked with brambles. Aimee wondered how he could find his way so confidently in the dark; she had not the remotest idea where she was.

"Wait here a minute. I'll come back for you," said Billy.

He wheeled the Sphinx away along a scarcely visible path, and presently returned without it.

"I was fooling around here on an off day, first time I came to Stanhoe," he said, "an' I lit on something that's goin' to be mighty useful. The old Sphinx has got to disappear for a bit, an' you'll soon understand why. Follow behind; there's only room for one at a time."

He led the way through the brambles and, pressing ahead, turned on the light of his pocket torch cautiously. Aimee, close at his heels, presently found herself in the entrance of a sandy cave with a very small mouth, screened by rough creeper and brush.

"There's several of these around here," said Billy, "but this is one you don't find unless you hunt for it with a sounding pole. It's a heap quieter spot than the high roads tonight. Suppose we sit down."

[illegible]

and the butler's got yards of my skirt!"

Billy wiped his eyes with his sleeves.

"An' you can laugh," he said, with intense delight, "after all that! Gee, but you're the stuff! Sand right through. You're all right. As long as you can laugh, the Red Gods'll stand by you! An' so will I. I'm one of 'em."

"Billy! There's nothing but you between me and those beastly police. But I'll bet it's enough. What's to be done?"

"Hear my side of it!" said Billy, dropping on his knees and producing the jewel case. "Here's the first item!"

He opened the case and shone the torch upon it. Aimee gave a little cry. Billy explained briefly how he had come by the gems. He said little about the struggle; that point was as sore as the side of his head. The best of us have our pride.

Aimee Gave a Little Cry.

"One of them knocked me out for a spell, and like a fool I let 'em get away," he said. "I guess I didn't get all the goods, but this looks like an ace flush to me."

"How splendid you are!" cried Aimee, a catch in her voice. "Why, those will be the Lambe emeralds. I've heard of them—everybody has. They belong to my Aunt Erythea!"

"Then I shouldn't wonder if they scooped the jack-pot. But there's some high cards out against us. See here. We had to run for it. Here's the police prancin' over the country after a man and a woman on a motorcycle—for I guess they must be wise to it. Here's me with the stuff in my pocket, and you with a dress sample in the hands of the sleuth-hounds. Been the station-house for ours, if they'd got us just now—an' there'd be too much explaining to do. We'd have hit the cells for the night, sure. No place for you, partner. And all the newspapers spreading themselves over it."

"I know. It's f-fearful!"

"Not a bit!" cried Billy. "For now you can get in ahead of the cops. Don't you see? Put your folks wise to it—lay down all your cards. You're Lord Scroope's daughter—you ain't a burglar. Give it them straight. I'll stand by an' see you through."

"But—I can't, Billy! It'll all have to come out, then. Every bit of it," said Aimee with a gasp.

"Why, of course it will! It was bound to come out anyway, soon or late. You didn't think you could keep up this Jervaulx racket? I don't see any way you could do that. But you can keep it in the family. You've got to face the music."

There was a long pause.

"I—can't," said Aimee, scarcely audibly.

Billy was amazed. If it had not been so [illegible] an incredible supposition he [illegible] have [illegible] that she was crying.

"You aren't afraid?" he said wonderingly.

"Of a row? No! It isn't that."

[illegible]

[illegible] he said gently.

[illegible]

CHAPTER XII

[illegible]

recognized it. He laid a hand on her shoulder.

"This thing's got me guessing," said Billy slowly. "I—I don't know what—"

"Of course, you never thought twice about it. And no more did I!" said Aimee. "I didn't care! And I don't care now! or I wouldn't if it wasn't for Dad. But people—it's all this miserable sentiment — that's what's wrong."

"Yes?" said Billy dizzily. "Well—"

"And now—why, the police are looking for a man and woman on a motorcycle, and they'll find out we were at Ivy cottage. They'll get my description. And even when they find out who I really am"—

Billy drew in his breath sharply.

"Georgie told me it was my finish—even before this silly burglary happened," continued Aimee gloomily. "Georgie knows about these sort of things. It isn't the burglary that matters. I could get over that. It's this—this other thing."

Billy was silent.

"The idea is," continued Aimee, with the same remarkable calm, "that I've lost my character; like a housemaid that's been stealing, or a groom caught selling the corn. Only I haven't been caught—yet.

"But—if Dad knew! You don't know my father, Billy. I couldn't explain him to you. Dad is just about the dearest thing that ever lived—in his way. But he belongs to a time about two hundred years back. Mother would understand; but not Dad. It's his creed that a girl mustn't be even—suspected. It was only tonight Georgina told me this thing would—well, it would break his heart. And I know him; I see she's right. If you and I—"

"Stop!" said Billy hoarsely. "Don't say any more. I—I've got to think this thing out."

Aimee found that he had suddenly left her. Presently she became aware of the outlines of his big figure, standing motionless just outside the cave. He was there quite a long time. Aimee sat where she was, twisting her handkerchief between her fingers. She felt very much calmer. The trouble and the stress were now with Billy.

He came back, and stood over her.

"I'm a coyote," he said quietly. "What I need is a quirt laid across me. I've been a fool."

"Not a bit!" said Aimee quickly. "How should you know?"

"It was my business to know! There isn't any excuse. But—things are so different, where I come from. And I don't know anything about women. We think a lot of women, down my way, but we don't talk about them—much. Partner, this thing I've let you in for through my foolishness—it's broken me all up."

"Because I'm Lord Scroope's daughter?"

"No!" said Billy shortly. "Be the same if you were his housemaid. But it's up to me to see you clear—you and him, too. And I'll do it."

His voice was so confident that Aimee's trouble fell away from her, as a sun-ripened chestnut sheds its prickly husk.

"What are we to do then, Billy?"

"It seems to me," said Billy gently, "that the simplest way is the best way. Let's you an' me go to the old man. No use talkin' about it here. I'll put it straight for you, partner."

"No!"

"I hope I can make him see sense—even if he's two hundred years old, as you say. It's all my fault. It isn't yours—not one scrap of it. I won't say much—but come right along with me to your father now—an' leave the talking to me."

Aimee rose.

"Never! I won't have it, Billy!" she said desperately. "I don't know—I don't know what you might say. If it comes out I'm done for anyhow. I'm going to take the chance that it won't! There must be a way to stop it—there must be some way.

"It's my trouble—mine! And I won't have it given away."

Billy drew a quick breath and straightened himself.

"Right!" he said. "Those are the orders. I accept them. I [illegible] a man can't give away a girl's [illegible] if she wants it kept. I [illegible]."

"Why, of course," said Aimee simply. "But will you please understand, Billy, that I'm not going to drag you into this. The [illegible] is to get away out of it all. I shall manage all right. I don't want to—"

[illegible]

He flashed the torch round the walls of the cave.

"What d'you think of this place?"

"It's—snug."

"Snug!" echoed Billy admiringly. "That's you! It would give some women fits. But you've sand. Do you think," he added diffidently, "that you could make out here for a bit? Could you sleep here?"

"Certainly I could. Why, they'll never find me—!"

"Come up here," said Billy, leading the way along the cave, which turned in a long curve, narrowing to a very small space. At the end stood the Sphinx.

"She'll have to stay here, too. There's a bit of risk to that—but very little. We can't help it. In the pannier-case you'll find iron rations, a can-opener, biscuits, an' chocolate. I always carry those. Down the pit yonder, just by the alder bush, is a spring of water. That settles supplies.

"Now, the first deal is to keep you right out of the way. For a few hours, perhaps for a day or more—I can't say how long. But we've got to put up a bluff. And you'll be at least as safe here as anywhere in the British isles.

"Our best chance is that the police may get the bracelets onto the real thieves right away. I'm not much stuck on that chance. Police, wherever you strike 'em, are—well, they're just police. We're in a lot more danger from them than that dead-beat who broke into Jervaulx, and the female rattlesnake he had along. The police mustn't get you, at any price. And—they mustn't get me either. Only there's more to it than that. Half a hundred things. There's a mighty tangled deal in front of me.

"Now, I'm going to sail right in. All you've got to do is lie here in this cache till about seven or eight o'clock. I'll be back here by then. If I'm not," said Billy quietly, "it'll be because I've fallen through. You bet your life I won't. But—if I don't get here by then, you must throw your hand in, just get straight to your father, best way you can. Do you promise that?"

"Y-yes! But tell me what you're going to do, Billy!" she said breathlessly.

"I can't tell you anything. I'll have to play the hand as it's dealt me; it just depends how the cards fall. And don't you worry any!" he said earnestly. "If you get doubtful or scary, just wash it right out of your mind, an' say this: 'Billy's running the thing for me, an' he'll see me through!' I'm off. Shake!"

With a sudden gesture Aimee put both her hands in his. He gave them a crushing grip, and broke into the sunniest smile.

"We sure are seein' life, partner!" he chuckled.

Aimee replied with a rather tremulous laugh. The next moment Billy had dropped her hands, and was gone.

Once clear of the crag-pits, Billy made for the road by another route. While climbing a gate he glanced at the luminous dial of his wrist watch,

Billy Laid Before Her the Lambe Emeralds.

[illegible] tion. Aimee's account of herself was [illegible]

He also annexed a cake of soap, a towel and a brush and comb—these latter he had himself bought for Aimee at Syderford on the first morning. Billy again descended the trellis, raked over his footprints carefully, and with all possible speed shook the mud of Ivy cottage from his feet.

It was broad daylight when he had crossed the fields and came within sight of Jervaulx abbey. He hid the cloak and its accessories under a thorn bush, glanced at his watch again, seated himself under the hedge, and lit a cigarette.

He drew the jewel case from his pocket and examined the necklace, thoughtfully emitting puffs of smoke. Then he replaced the case in his pocket and finished his cigarette, his smooth forehead wrinkling into tiny lines. Finally he rose and walked briskly towards the entrance lodge of Jervaulx.

There was no electric bell in the great porch. He pulled a pendant handle of wrought iron, and was answered by an archaic clanging inside. After a brief pause the doors were thrown open by Tarbeaux the butler. He looked at Billy inquiringly.

"I want to see the proprietor—on urgent business," said Billy. "Is he up yet?"

"If you mean Lady Erythea Lambe," said Mr. Tarbeaux with dignity, "her ladyship has not yet risen."

"I am a stranger here," said Billy, "but what I want you to do is get a message to her ladyship that it will be worth her while to see me as soon as convenient. Say I've important news about some property that's missing from here."

Mr. Tarbeaux became more alert.

"Come this way," he said, and Billy followed him.

In less than ten minutes Lady Erythea arrived, pallid after her night of stress, but unconquerable, clad in a purple wrap. Billy turned to face that tremendous presence.

"What do you want to see me about?" she said sternly.

With his sunniest smile, Billy opened the leather case and laid before her the Lambe emeralds.

CHAPTER XIII

"Very Good, My Lady."

"Do these interest you, madame?" said Billy simply.

Lady Erythea stared as though the green gems hypnotized her. Then, with a little gasp of joy, she lifted them from the case with trembling fingers. It was one of the rare occasions of her life when Lady Erythea exhibited emotion.

She laid down the necklace and looked at Billy as one might regard a materialized angel. Before she could speak, however, Mr. Alexander Lambe entered the room.

It has been said that Mr. Lambe's eyes were large. They expanded indescribably when he saw the Lambe necklace lying on the table. He closed the door softly behind him, and approached the table in an awestruck manner.

He glanced from the emeralds to Lady Erythea's face, and then, somewhat sternly, at Billy.

"How did you come by these?" said Lady Erythea, pointing to the emeralds. Suddenly she presented the ear-trumpet at Billy. "Explain!"

The ear-trumpet startled Billy a little. He felt—so he declared to Aimee afterward—as if Lady Erythea had the drop on him. But his face, as he answered, was ingenuous as a baby's.

"I was passing by your park gates early this morning, on my way to Syderford. It was past one, an' the house was dark. When I got to the place where the lane turns into the road I heard a motorcycle coming up behind, h—l for—coming mighty quick," said Billy, turning pink. "It came right by me, pretty near out of control. It hadn't any lights, there was a bend just ahead, an' I heard it crash."

Billy delivered this with a beautiful fluency into the ear-trumpet.

"I just ran in on them," pursued Billy, "for I didn't have to stop an' figure it out that an outfit traveling that way with lights out at one in the morning was up to any good. They were just picking themselves up when I arrived, and they went for me—"

"Was it a man and a woman?" exclaimed Mr. Lambe.

"You've hit it, sir."

"My dear aunt!" cried Alexander, "the inspector told me, after you retired, that he suspected a man and a woman, on a motorcycle, of being the thieves! They can be no other than those people who ran into us yesterday on the Syderford road—"

"Hold your tongue, Alexander," interrupted Lady Erythea impatiently, "and allow this amazing young man to continue!"

"There was some scrap," said Billy diffidently, "maybe if there'd been two men I'd have done better, but the lady hampered me, and somehow I took the count. They knocked me out and got away. But they left this behind them," he pointed to the case of emeralds [illegible] not only intelligent, but extraordinarily gallant. May I ask your name?"

"Spencer. William Spencer."

"Mr. Spencer, it is impossible for me to express my gratitude in words. I thank you most heartily for what you have done; it is fortunate for me the emeralds fell into such good hands. Let me say that I was about to offer a reward for information leading to the recovery of the jewels; a reward of—" Lady Erythea hesitated, and achieved an inward struggle—"one hundred pounds. But I must really ask you to accept a hundred and fifty."

Lady Erythea unlocked a desk, and produced a check-book. Billy flushed red.

"Madam," he said quietly, "the service I did you cost me nothing. I'm glad you have your jewels back. I'm a man who earns his living, but I don't accept gratuities. And people very scarcely ever offer them to me."

Lady Erythea turned somewhat pink in her turn. She slid the check-book aside.

"I beg your pardon," she said, with some embarrassment, mingled with relief and a touch almost of annoyance. "It was the least I could do. You will accept no recompense?"

"None, madam. Anyway not in money."

"You are not English, are you?"

"American. And a Westerner, at that."

"Ah! You have done me a great service. Is there nothing I can do for you?"

Before Billy could reply, Mr. Tarbeaux opened the door.

"M'lady, Inspector Panke—"

Mr. Tarbeaux's gaze fell on the emeralds. He was very human for a butler, and it took him a fraction of a second to recover himself.

"Inspector Panke urgently desires to see your ladyship at once."

"Show him in here," said Lady Erythea grimly.

Billy did not move an eyelid. It seemed to him that Mr. Lambe's solemn eyes were watching him rather intently. Inspector Panke appeared. It was a great day in the Lambe emeralds' history. The inspector was the fifth person in whom they caused intense emotion.

"Well, have you caught the thieves?" inquired Lady Erythea, acidly.

"No-no, my lady," stammered Inspector Panke, gazing at the necklace.

"Perhaps you had better enlist the services of Mr. Spencer," said her ladyship, with a wave of her hand toward Billy. "This young man has already found the emeralds and restored them to me."

"Then," said Panke, with a searching glance at Billy, "I should like a full account, at once, of how you came by the jewels."

"Sure," said Billy genially.

Mr. Lambe set chairs for them both. All four seated themselves; Lady Erythea, with an avid determination to keep abreast of affairs, held her ear-trumpet close to Billy and the policeman.

Billy repeated his tale with fuller detail this time, and described, not without a twinge of embarrassment, his downfall at the hands of Calamity Kate. Lady Erythea's lips tightened grimly, the description did not surprise her. The inspector had his book before him and made careful notes. At the conclusion he regarded Billy pensively, and with a touch of envy.

"It's a pity you didn't hang on to them, when you'd got them in hand," said Panke. "But, of course, we know what Calamity Kate is."

"Who?" echoed Billy.

Panke described briefly the popular names of the two thieves, and what little was known about them.

"And now, Mr. Spencer, I have some questions to put to you—for the information of the police. This happened between one and two o'clock. It is now seven. What became of you in the meantime?"

Billy turned to the light and allowed Panke to inspect the wound on the side of his head, only partially concealed by his hair.

"If you'd had that," said Billy, "I guess you'd be lyin' on the grass yonder now."

"A severe cut," said the inspector, impressed.

"And you lay unconscious there till daybreak?" exclaimed Lady Erythea, with intense sympathy.

"It might have been a week, for all I knew when I woke up. When I'd got my senses back, an' made up my mind what to do," said Billy calmly, "I came along here."

"Didn't it occur to you," said Panke, "that the right thing to do was to go to the police?"

"No. It occurred to me the first thing to do was to get the stuff straight back to its owner."

"And perfectly right, too!" said Lady Erythea sharply.

"How did you know," persisted Panke, "that the necklace belonged here?"

Billy turned over the necklace and pointed to the [illegible] pendant that bore the Lambe arms in a lozenge.

"Those three sheepskins—" he began.

"[illegible] — fleeces, argent," murmured Mr. Lambe.

[illegible]

[illegible]

APRIL

DOES HOUSEWORK LIKE IT WAS PLAY

Mrs. Little Declares Tanlac Restored Full Strength After Overcoming Indigestion.

"Since taking Tanlac my troubles have left me, and I never tire of telling about it," declares Mrs. Johanna Little, 3032 N. 17th St., Kansas City, Mo.

"My food often caused me much distress from gas, sourness and heartburn, and I scarcely ever wanted to eat. Headaches, biliousness and pains in my back kept me in hot water, and I hardly ever got any restful sleep. My nerves were excited and I was so run down it was all I could do to look after my housework.

"I searched the city for the right medicine, and consider it fortunate that I found Tanlac. Indigestion, sleeplessness and nervousness never bother me now, I can do my housework like it was play, and am strong and happy. Tanlac is simply grand."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

The Disadvantages of Polygamy.

Occasionally the subject of polygamy comes up. And I have observed that women speak only of the hard fate of polygamous wives, and intimate that polygamy is always a joy for men. How about a man compelled to settle the rows of three or four wives and listen to their "jawing"? If a wife lacks ability to give an offending husband a whipping, it doesn't mean he escapes punishment.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Smart Boy.

"Your boy Josh is a smart kid."

"He is," replied Farmer Corntossel. "He's so smart that he kin take life easy an' leave me to do all the worryin' 'bout whether the farm will support him."

Sure Relief
FOR INDIGESTION

BELL-ANS
FOR INDIGESTION
25 CENTS

6 BELL-ANS
Hot water
Sure Relief
BELL-ANS
25¢ AND 75¢ PACKAGES EVERYWHERE

Instant relief from CORNS without risk of infection

Safely! You can end the pain of corns, in one minute. Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads will do it, for they remove the cause—friction-pressure, and heal the irritation. Thus you avoid infection from cutting your corns or using corrosive acids. Thin; antiseptic; waterproof. Sizes for corns, callouses, bunions. Get a box today at your druggist's or shoe dealer's.

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

Made in the laboratories of The Scholl Mfg. Co., makers of Dr. Scholl's Foot Comfort Appliances, Arch Supports, etc.

Put one on—the pain is gone!

DON'T DESPAIR

If you are troubled with pains or aches; feel tired; have headache, indigestion, insomnia; painful passage of urine, you will find relief by regularly taking

LATHROP'S
GOLD MEDAL
HAARLEM OIL

The world's standard remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles and National Remedy of Holland since 1696. Three sizes, all druggists. Guaranteed. Look for the name Gold Medal on every box and accept no imitation.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

[illegible]

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

Copyright, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.

LESSON FOR APRIL 22

MOSES, LIBERATOR AND LAWGIVER

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 14:10, 13-22.

GOLDEN TEXT—Fear ye not. Stand still and see the salvation of the Lord.—Exodus 14:13.

REFERENCE MATERIAL — Deuteronomy 3:23-28; Psalm 105:23-45; Matthew 17:3; Acts 7:17-44; Hebrews 11:23-29

PRIMARY TOPIC—Moses, the Boy Whom God Saved.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Moses Leads Israel Through the Red Sea.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Moses the Great Leader.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Character of Moses.

I. The Birth, Preservation and Education of Moses. (Exodus 8:1-8).

1. His Birth (vv. 1-2). His parents were of the tribe of Levi.

2. His Preservation (vv. 3-8). The faith of his parents caused them to ignore the command of the king and they hid him for three months (Hebrews 11:23). His mother discerned in him a proper child, or a child fair to God (Acts 7:20), and believed him to be the deliverer of his people. Perhaps led by the story of Noah's ark, she made him an ark of bulrushes and placed Moses in it and left it at the place where Pharaoh's daughter would be attracted when she came down to bathe. Miriam, his sister, was placed where she could watch the affair, and at the opportune moment she came with a suggestion of a nurse for the baby; securing her consent, Miriam brought the child's mother.

3. His Education (vv. 9-10). He was educated first at his mother's knee, the place where his character was formed. He was also educated at the Egyptian court, where he became acquainted with the wisdom of Egypt (Acts 7:22).

II. The Call of Moses (Exodus 3).

1. The Lord Speaks From the Bush (vv. 1-6). In the desert the Lord appeared in the vision of the burning bush. When Moses stepped aside to behold this strange thing God taught him the lesson of proper approach unto himself.

2. The Lord Commissions Moses (vv. 7-10). God assured him of his active interest in his people, having seen their affliction, heard their cry, and known their sorrows, and that he had come down to deliver them from the hand of the Egyptian through Moses as His agent.

III. Moses' Contest With Pharaoh (Exodus 5-12). The ten plagues reveal the contest carried on between Moses and Pharaoh before the people were set free. The tenth stroke from the strong hand of the Almighty made Pharaoh willing to let Israel go.

IV. Israel Crossing the Red Sea (Exodus 14:10, 13-22).

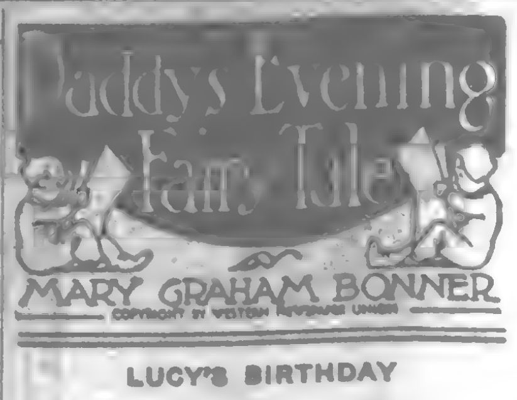
1. Israel's Straitened Circumstances (v. 10). At the Lord's direction they changed from their first course and were apparently in great difficulty. The Red sea was before them; the mountains on either side. Pharaoh with his chariots of war was closing in upon them. In their distress they cried to the Lord.

2. Israel's Miraculous Escape (vv. 13-22.) (1) Moses' words to the people (vv. 13-14). (a) "Fear not." Since God was leading them by day and by night with the pillar of cloud and fire they had no need of fear, even if they were in straitened circumstances. (b) "Stand still." Standing still in such a trial is faith taking hold of God's promise. (c) "See the salvation of the Lord." "The Lord shall fight for you." (2) God's words to Moses (vv. 15-18). (a) "Go forward." No use to pray longer when God says "Move forward." (b) "Lift up thy rod." This served as something tangible upon which their faith could rest. They were to go through the sea on dry ground. But the symbol of God's presence now passed to the rear to hold the enemy at bay. (3) The divided sea (vv. 21-22). As they went onward the very thing which they feared became a wall of protection on either side.

3. Overthrow of the Egyptians (vv. 22-27). Having seen the Israelites go across dry shod the Egyptians immediately pursued them, insanely thinking that they could follow in the wake of God's children. That which was a protection to God's children became an instrument of destruction to the Egyptians.

4. Israel's Song of Triumph (15:1-21). They attributed their deliverance and the overwhelming defeat of their [illegible]

[illegible]



Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale
MARY GRAHAM BONNER
COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

LUCY'S BIRTHDAY

Peter Gnome was very much excited. In fact he had been that way for some days.

Everyone in Fairyland spoke about it.

"Peter Gnome is much excited about something," they said to one another.

"What can it be?" they asked themselves and then one wise gnome said:

"We can never give the answer to our question this way, or at least it is doubtful if we will even be able to do so, and the best thing would be to ask Peter Gnome what it is that is making him so excited."

So they went to Peter Gnome and they said:

"Peter! May we ask you a question? We don't want to disturb you in these exciting thoughts you seem to be having these days, but our curiosity is getting the better of us, as the saying goes."

"Certainly, certainly," said Peter Gnome. "Do ask me your question.

"And so I've been showing that I had exciting thoughts; have I?" he asked. "Well, I'm glad to talk them over with all of you."

"Ah," they said, "that is fine! For our question to you was to ask you just what your exciting thoughts were."

"You see," said Peter Gnome, "this coming Saturday is Lucy's birthday.

"Of course you all know my friend Lucy? You've heard me speak of her so often."

"Oh, indeed, yes, we know of Lucy," the Fairyland people said. "She is the one with the lovely blue eyes and the fair hair and the soft, pretty skin. The one whose voice is so gay and happy, the one who is missed when she goes away for a visit but who is welcomed back again only more eagerly."

"Seaside Fairies Will Fly About Lucy."

"The very one," said Peter Gnome. "The very one!"

The Fairyland people smiled and nudged one another.

It really wasn't particularly clever of them to have told who Lucy was for they had heard of Lucy so very, very often.

But Peter Gnome was delighted that they had remembered and he showed his joy.

"Ah, yes," said Peter Gnome, "Saturday is Lucy's birthday. She is at the seashore this year and I have been so busy talking to all the Seaside Fairies and all of the other seaside creatures.

"I've talked to the Breaker Boys. I've talked to Old Mother Ocean. I've talked to Princess Foam and the other members of the Foam family.

"I've talked to the Wave children and the Ripple grandchildren. You've seen the Ripple grandchildren playing gently over the face of Old Mother Ocean?

"It is one of their favorite games and Old Mother Ocean loves it too.

"She's not a nervous sort. You know she never says:

"'Now, children, run away and play somewhere else. Your noise is almost driving me frantic!'

"No, Old Mother Ocean never says that.

"Well, they are all planning to have a splendid celebration in honor of Lucy's birthday.

"Old Mother Ocean has written a poem for the occasion. She cannot give a copy of her poem to Lucy for the little wet words would fall right through Lucy's fingers, but she is going to sing the song and this is how it [illegible] I cannot give the wonderful roaring notes Mother Ocean will give.

"Many happy returns of the day,
[illegible] away!
[illegible]
So that you'll always be merry and gay,

"Many happy returns of the day,
[illegible] I wish that always you may
[illegible]

[illegible]

Right Man Must Be There.

Chance in manifold instances has befriended man. Only—it is necessary that the right man should be on the spot at the right time. In invention and discovery as elsewhere, some men can take a hint and others never see it.—Exchange.

Fresh, sweet, white, dainty clothes for baby, if you use Red Cross Ball Blue. Never streaks or injures them. All good grocers sell it.—Advertisement.

Three Queens Her Guest.

Mrs. E. C. Tylden of Sandringham was the proudest woman in all England when she celebrated her one hundredth birthday and had as her guests three queens. Queen Mary called first to offer her congratulations, and later in the day Queen Alexandra and Queen Olga of Greece honored her with a visit.

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS

is often caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing may be destroyed forever.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE will do what we claim for it—rid your system of Catarrh or Deafness caused by Catarrh. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE has been successful in the treatment of Catarrh for over Forty Years.

Sold by all druggists.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

He Got the Answer.

"Ah," said the keeper of the candy store, "and what are you going to be when you grow up?"

"I'm going to keep a candy store," said the boy, "and every time a little boy like me comes in I'm going to give him four caramels for a cent instead of two for a cent."

Cuticura Soothes Itching Scalp.

On retiring gently rub spots of dandruff and itching with Cuticura Ointment. Next morning shampoo with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Make them your everyday toilet preparations and have a clear skin and soft, white hands.—Advertisement.

REMAIN ALWAYS THE SAME

Overwhelming Proof That Finger-Prints Undergo No Change During Lifetime of Individual.

The finger print is a scientific method of identification. A movement is afoot in Michigan for a state-wide registration system under which every one would be finger-printed. It is also planned by the government to establish a central bureau of identification with a national registration. It is deduced that prints are more permanent than the body itself, as physiologists tell us that the tissues of the entire body change once in about seven years, but whorls, curves and lines of the papilla always are renewed in conformity with the lines of childhood.

After an attack of scarlet fever the cuticle peeled off of a child's fingers. As an experiment prints were made. They were found to be just the same as those made before the sickness. A man chanced to burn his fingers. They were badly blistered. After the blisters broke and the outer layer of the skin came off he made finger-prints each day until the fingers were completely healed. The ridges grew gradually until they made the same sharp prints that they had made before the accident.

Righto, Percy!

"And so, children, all these modern conveniences came into being by invention," said the teacher. "And now, Percy, tell me who invented the alarm clock."

"I dunno'm," said Percy, "but if my daddy ever meets him ther's going t' be trouble."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Smart Small Girl.

Small Girl (as sister's fiance slips on banana skin)—Look, mamma, he's worshiping the ground she treads on!—London Answers.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Much Interest Being Shown in the Large Number of Women Safely Carried Through the Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The Following Letters Are Impressive

Owing to modern methods of living, few woman approach this perfectly natural change without experiencing very annoying and often painful symptoms. Those dreadful hot flashes, nervousness, headaches, melancholia and irritability are only a few of the symptoms incident to this trying period of a woman's life, and the following letters prove the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to overcome these abnormal conditions.

"Fisherville, Ky.—"For several months I was under the doctor's care as he said my nervousness, chills, hot flashes and weakness was caused by the Change of Life, but I did not seem to get any better. I was not able to work and spent most of my time in bed. A friend called to see me and asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I cannot tell you how much good the medicine did me, as I had such a hard time before taking it. I can only advise every woman passing through the Change of Life to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it did so much for me."—Mrs. EDWARD B. NEAL, Star Route, Fisherville, Ky.

A Michigan Woman Helped

Ionia, Michigan.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and had been under the doctor's care without any relief. A friend in Lansing, Mich., asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I feel fifty per cent better already. If any one in this condition doubts the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to help them I will gladly answer their letters."—Mrs. MAX W. HAHN, 537 N. Jefferson Street, Ionia, Mich.

A New York Woman Helped

Syracuse, N. Y.—"I was used up with nervousness, weakness and hot flashes so I could hardly keep around, and could not get out much on account of those awful prickly feelings. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helping another woman with symptoms like mine. My husband got some for me, and after taking it five months I can get around and even do my housework, washing and ironing included, and my friends can see what a change it has made in me."—Mrs. SIDNEY HUMPHREY, 826½ Burnet Avenue, Syracuse, N. Y.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

Keep the Children Well!

During these days many children are complaining of headache, feverishness, stomach troubles, and irregular bowels. If mothers only knew what

MOTHER GRAY'S SWEET POWDERS for CHILDREN

Will do for children no family would ever be without them. These powders are so easy and pleasant to take and so effective in their action that for over 30 years mothers have used them and told others about them. Sold by Druggists everywhere.

Do Not Accept Any Substitute for MOTHER GRAY'S SWEET POWDERS.

MOTHER GRAY'S

Restored Lille Turns to Autos.

The city of Lille is again taking on an aspect of prosperity, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from Vice Consul J. G. Finley, and is fast assuming the character of a thriving center of commercial and industrial activity worthy of its synonym as capital of the north of France. A considerable change has taken place since 1921, the consul states. Stores situated in the districts not damaged are well stocked and apparently enjoying a good business and electric signs, unknown in 1921, have appeared in various parts of the business centers which give much animation to the city at night. The number of automobiles, almost imperceptible in 1921, has increased in an exceptional degree.

Couldn't.

Dick—"What did she say when you kissed her?" Ted—"She didn't say a thing until afterward."

Flattery will open a woman's heart much quicker than it will a man's purse.

Practical Innovation.

Recent discussions concerning the decimal system of weights and measures render more interesting a curious paragraph reprinted in the Journal des Debats from its issue of August 22, 1806, when Napoleon I was at the height of his power. It states that there were two dials on the principal building of the Tuileries, one counting the hours by twelve and the other by ten. Taking advantage of the need for repairs, the dial divided into ten hours was destroyed, since, as the report goes on to say, "it had served for no purpose, except to show to what point the mania for innovation was capable of mounting in opposition to the settled habits of all times and all peoples."—Washington Star.

Equipped for It.

She (describing Canadian trip)—Then we watched a boat shoot the rapids.

He—Ah, a gunboat, I presume.

Old habits in old people are still amenable to a bit and bridle, if they choose.

Here's the Food-Iron Nature intended you to have ~

Grape-Nuts
Made of Wheat and Barley
Postum Cereal Company, Inc.
Battle Creek, Mich., U.S.A.
ECONOMY

KIND and skilful Mother Nature [illegible]

[illegible] nourishment and easy digestion [illegible] builder of health and energy.

[illegible]

Grape-Nuts [illegible]

"There's a Reason"

APRIL

27/

New Parking Rules

UNLIMITED

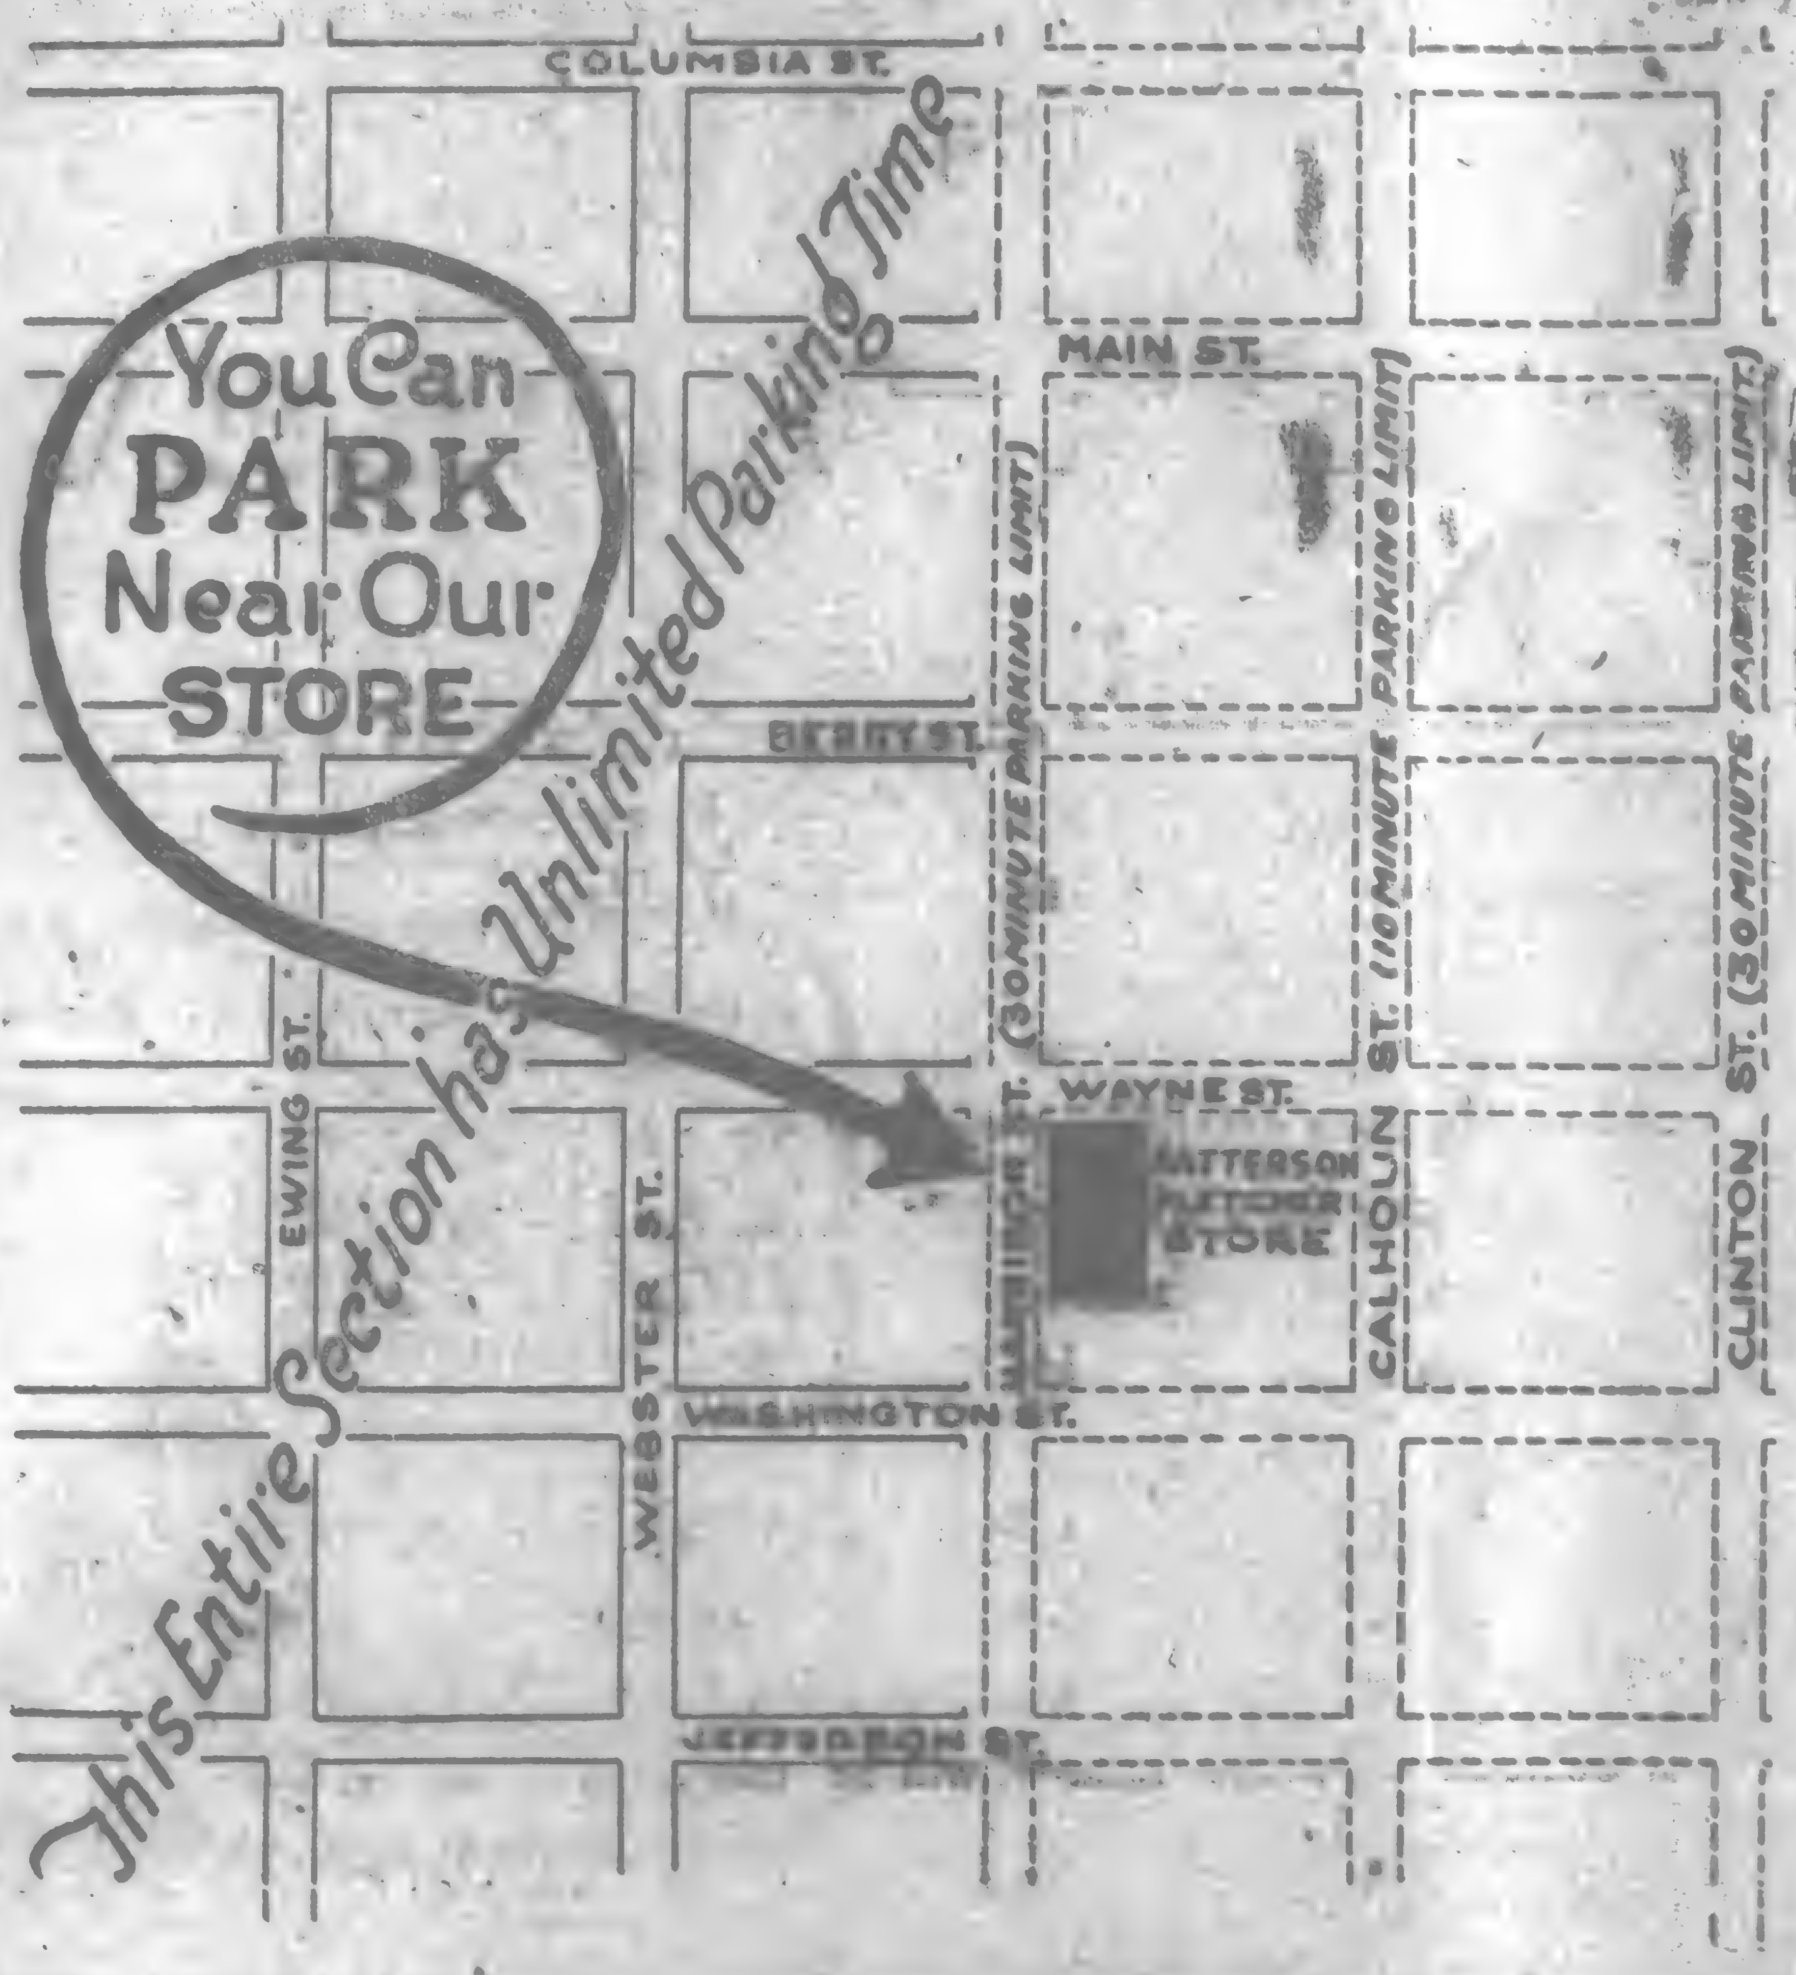
PARKING TIME IN THIS SECTION, DAY OR NIGHT

Including all north and south and east and west streets, west of Harrison

TIME LIMIT

In this section daily and until 9 o,clock P. M.—30 MINUTES

Excepting on Callioun street, and the limit here is 10 minutes



COLUMBIA ST.
MAIN ST.
BERRY ST.
WAYNE ST.
WASHINGTON ST.
JEFFERSON ST.
EWING ST.
WEBSTER ST.
HARRISON ST. (30 MINUTE PARKING LIMIT)
CALHOUN ST. (10 MINUTE PARKING LIMIT)
CLINTON ST. (30 MINUTE PARKING LIMIT)
PATTERSON FLETCHER STORE
You Can PARK Near Our STORE
This Entire Section has Unlimited Parking Time

Top Coat Week

AT OUR STORE.

A Great Purchase of Several Hundred of Hart Schaffner & Marx and Michaels Stern & Co.

TOP COATS

Allows Us to Save You From $5 to $20 on Your Spring Coat.

WE WILL SELL YOU:

A Silk-Trimmed Gaberdine for.......................$15
A Fine Whipcord Coat for.......................$20
All-Wool Topcoats for.......................$15 and $20

Hart Schaffner & Marx Topcoats made from imported fabrics.......................$[illegible]
Bedford Cord Topcoats, light and dark shades, waterproof.......................$[illegible]

And the Finest Topcoats That Money Will Buy: Coats That Should Sell at $[illegible] to $[illegible].

Will Go This Week at

$30 - $35 - $40

Regulars, Stouts, Slims, Longs, Extra Sizes

We Can Fit You

Patterson-Fletcher Company

[illegible]

EGGS! EGGS! EGGS!

Give us the credit for the top-notch price you are getting for your eggs.

You will always find a fresh line of groceries here. Use your telephone.

E. LEIGHTY, Grocer

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Only eighteen more days remain in which to pay taxes.

The saw mill is running nearly every day now.

For Sale—22 acres of land for sale, $50.00 per acre.
Mrs. Mary Shuff.

Miss Marjorie Brown of Montpelier, Ohio, spent Saturday night and Sunday in the home of F. E. Kinsey and family.

Several people were disappointed during the cold snap last week to find that they could not buy coal in St. Joe.

The Spencer Township Sunday School Convention was held at Coburn's Corners church last Sunday. Both the afternoon and evening sessions were well attended and greatly enjoyed.

Dr. C. S. Johnson was not able to meet an appointment at the Sunday school convention at Coburn's Corners Sunday afternoon on account of being called on to conduct the funeral of Mrs. Willis Baker in the absence of Rev. C. H. Havens.

If you are interested in Sunday school work, don't fail to hear Clyde Carlin, of Angola, next Sunday afternoon and David H. Hogg, of Fort Wayne, in the evening at the Concord Township Sunday School Convention held in the Christian church.

Friday evening while returning home from school Robert Morr, his sister, Cleota, and friend, Miss Jaunita Kinsey, were thrown from their buggy in which they were riding when their horse became frightened and turned sharply around in the road. Miss Kinsey received injuries about the forehead. She has been quite sick as a result since.

St. Joe grade school and high school pupils have been invited by Indiana university to compete in the first Indana state pentathlon to determine champion athletics of the state. The contest is patterned after the old Greek games and is said to be unique in the history of American athletics in that it is the first all-around athletic tournament to decide championships among both boys and girls by a point system based on winnings in five different events in which the contestants are grouped according to weight classes.

Summer School

"Ya flunked, d'ya say, and can't go swimmin' or fishin' or nuthin' this summer, but have to go to summer school? Well, c'mon with me, and you can do both."

That's the story that awaits every Hoosier lad who has to go to school during the summer.

Camp Roosevelt, the educational-training encampment, which is located not far from LaPorte, on Silver Lake, Indiana, has received the stamp of approval of the Indiana State Board of Education, which has awarded the summer school a certificate

File your Mortgage Exemption with S. S. Widney, St Joe.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Miller and Albert Wade of Detroit spent over Sunday here with relatives.

Master Ralph Keeler spent Saturday and Sunday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Engle north of town.

For Sale—Light driving horse. Inquire of John Crothers, St. Joe.

Frank Davis of Fort Wayne spent Saturday night and Sunday a guest of his sister, Mrs. John Wineland and husband.

Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Kosht and daughters, Marguerite and Phyllis, of Decatur spent Saturday and Sunday with the Don Hindman, Ray Wade and S. P. Kosht families.

Mrs. Lester Pugsley and son, Carl, spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Al Jennings near Newville. Mrs. Jennings being quite ill with heart trouble.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Myers and children of Hicksville, John Hart Jr. and Robert Payne of Fort Wayne, spent Saturday night and Sunday as guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Kees.

GLASSES—$2.50 up, Benj. F. Griest, Eyesight specialist, American Bldg., Hicksville, Ohio.

The household goods of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Kosht have been stored in the Don Hindman farm house north of town which he recently purchased of Mrs. Harriet Haifley. Mr. and Mrs. Kosht plan to rebuild at once. They are staying with Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Jackson for the present.

The Culture club was entertained Wednesday evening by Mrs. Kate A. Leighty. Fourteen members and one guest, Mrs. Mary Bowman, were present. One new member, Mrs. H. R. Minnick was added to the club. The original poems as response at roll call were very interesting. The hostess served ice cream and cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cochran of Fort Wayne accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Claud Mason and daughter, Vivian, of this place spent the day Sunday with their sister, Mrs. W. E. Baxter and husband at Butler. The occasion was planned as a surprise for her, it being her birthday anniversary.

Ruth Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Perry of near here and Kenneth Buss of Albion were united in marriage April 3 at four o'clock at the home of the Rev. Mr. Franklin. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Joe Gatwood. A six o'clock dinner was served in the beautiful decorated rooms of Mrs John Buss. The newly wedded pair received many useful gifts. They will reside in Albion.

Out of town relatives who attended Mrs. Baker's funeral Sunday were; O. F. Saylor, Indianapolis; Mr and Mrs. Wm. Saylor, Hicksville; Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Wolford and family and V. Likens of Ft. Wayne and Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Teeters of Hudson, Indiana.

STATIONERY SPECIAL

Three days only
Thursday, Friday, Saturday of this week

5c PER BOX

[illegible]

5c

NEWS OFFICE

APRIL

L 912

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXXVII — ST. JOE DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1923 — No. 17

Alumni to Have Formal Banquet

At the meeting of the Alumni Society Monday evening, certain plans were made for a banquet to be given Saturday evening, May 19. It was decided that only paid up members of the society will be privileged to attend or invite friends. Dues cannot be accepted after May 10.

Bids are being solicited from the different ladies organizations of the churches or lodges to serve the banquet and for that reason the place cannot be annouuced.

Another business meeting of the whole Alumni society is called for next Monday night, to be held at The News office.

Entertainment at Coburn's Corners

The Young people's class of the Coburns Corner's Sunday School have obtained Mrs. Daria Fusselman, reader, and Jesse Klopfenstine, one of Fort Wayne's popular baritone singers, to give an entertainment at the Coburn's Corners church, Wednesday evening, May 2, at 7:30 o'clock, standard time. Admission charges will be 15 and 25 cents.

I turned the plea of a beggar down
He gave me a look that was mean and black,
He got even with me as I walked down-town,
He ran me down with his Cadillac.

Farm Sale

Meade Baker, of 2 miles east of St. Joe on the river road, will sell at public auction on Friday, April 27, at 10 A. M., his live stock, some machinery, some household goods and hay and grain. Mr. and Mrs. Baker are expecting to move to town. Rhodenbaugh & McNamara are the auctioneers.

Notice

Please return all dishes to Kinsey's Hardware that were taken from the basement Saturday evening and parties who have dishes coming will please call and get same.

W. C. T. U. NEWS

The W. C. T. U. will meet Friday afternoon, April 27, with Mrs. Jennie Sechler at 2 o'clock. The program will be as follows:

Devotional....Mrs. Rose Widney
Roll Call...Responses Home Helps
"Spring Cleaning"..Mrs. Etta Hull
"Short Cuts in Sewing"..........Edith Widney
"A Fight for Race Betterment"...........Lora Leighty
"The Home, the Family and Family Life"..........Pluma Hamilton
Business
Adjournment.

Found—1923 Auto license plate. Call at the News Office.

FEED

Hominy, Bran, Middlings, Tankage and many other feeds.

We have a full line at our elevator having just shipped in several carloads.

Cars are still scarce and feed mills are sold way ahead. Don't put off getting your feed until the last minute.

COAL

We have it and only the best grades. Try our Hocking and West Virginia.

We advise laying in your winter coal it looks like it will go higher.

Give your orders to Bert Jackson he will take care of you.

The St. JOE ELEVATOR

Samuel Kessler, Mgr. Grain Dept. — Bert Jackson, Mgr. Coal Dept.

Call on us—glad to see you. Come in whether you want anything or not.

Progressive Times

This is the day of the forward march. No farmer would now attempt to harvest his wheat with an old-fashioned cradle, nor thresh his grain with an old horse power machine.

There's the new radio outfits, the airplains, wireless telegraphy, submarines, hydro-electricy —a hundred new things every decade. And in money matters, are we keeping step? Most of us are. We keep a balance at the bank and pay our bills by check, instead of keeping our money somewhere about the house, subject to loss every day. Our modern Bank inviter you to do dusiness the modern way.

St. Joe Valley Bank—A State Bank

S. S. Convention Creates Interest

One of the very best Sunday school conventions of Concord Township was held Sunday afternoon and evening, April 22, 1923, in the Christian church.

Mrs. Lora Leighty led the singing with Miss Faye Hughs as pianist. M. T. Bishop read from the ninety-fourth chapter of Matthew for the scripture lesson while J. P. Buckingham offered prayer.

After a song the president, F. B. Leighty, called for reports. The first was the financial report of the Secretary-Treasurer. The departmental reports were not complete and shows the following:

Adult division, J. R. Shilling, Supt.

St. Joe M. P., chartered organized classes; not chartered 1; total membership of these classes 72.

Lutheran, chartered organized classes 3; not chartered 1; total membership 49.

Concord, chartered organized classes 3; membership 43.

Christian, chartered organized classes 3; membership 57.

Each school reported the loss of two members by death during the year as follows: St. Joe M. P., Mrs. Etha Jackson and Mrs. Julia Anne Baker.

Lutheran, Mrs. Elizabeth Leighty and Mrs. Ella Patterson.

Concord M. P., Mrs. Blanche Daily and Mrs. Elsie Bleeks.

Christian, Mrs. Dora Daily and Mrs. Emma Abel.

The young peoples superintendent, Roy Collins, was not present. Two schools reported however. Lutheran young people have 22 enrolled. The Christian have three classes with 41 enrolled.

The childrens division report was: Christian 34 enrolled with 19 enrolled on the cradle roll. Graded lessons are used and equipped with small chairs and sand table. M. P. St. Joe, 31 children enrolled with 8 on the cradle roll. Two classes using graded lessons. Separate room with small chairs and sand table. Lutheran, 32 children enrolled, equipped in primary department with colored charts, sand table, one long low table for class work and small chairs. One class has graded lessons. Concord Sunday school failed to report.

Educational report shows all the schools having missionary instruction and offerings and temperance instruction except the Lutheran and only one school with a teachers training class that being the Christian school with one of fourteen members.

J. N. George of Auburn, county adult superintendent was present and gave a short talk on the coming county convention. The nominating committee then reported the following officers as having been chosen to serve the coming year: President, F. B. Leighty; Vice President, John Sechler; Secretary-Treasurer, Ada Bassett; Divisional Superintendents—Childrens, Grace Sheffer; Young People, Roy Collins; Adult, J. R. Shilling; Educational, Martha Quance; Administrative, Jane Hull. The convention voted on and acepted them with J. N. George acting as chairman.

Address, "The Book Eternal," by Attorney Clyde Carlin of Angola. To describe this wonderful address on the Book of Books would be impossible. Mr. Carlin spoke in a very interesting way showing the infallibility of the most wonderful of all books, the Bible. He held his audience to the last word of his address in a very attentive way. The afternoon session was dismissed by Dr. B. S. Sheffer.

At the evening session which was largely for the young people, the church was crowded. A march opened the program played with Mrs. Lora Leighty at the piano accompanied by Miss Lucetta [illegible] and Robert Johnson with cornets. The chorus was composed entirely of young ladies and was led by Miss [illegible] Johnson.

[illegible]

[illegible]

Rhoades gave a recitation which was much appreciated.

The address, "The Measure of a Man" by Attorney David H. Hogg, of Fort Wayne was a splendid discussion given in a most interesting manner. A few points of his address are: "Life is what you put into it." "If we would measure up as men, and women, we must have clean minds. No farmer when storing his grain will put in a load of grain and then brickbats and trash, so why should we fill our minds with trash." "The world knows us not by what we are but by what we do." "Life is composed of four things, Knowledge, Wisdom, Goodness and Love." He closed his remarks by repeating the great commission and the command of love, "Love Thy Neighbor as Thyself."

Benediction by Dr. C. S. Johnson.

The program throughout was interspersed with musical numbers and songs by the entire convention.

Benediction by Dr. C. S. Johnson.

The program throughout was interspersed with musical numbers and songs by the entire convention.

Financial report—Money on hand, $26.09; afternoon offering, $4.54; evening offering $5.12; total $35.75.

Paid out—To Clyde Carlin, $5.00; to David H. Hogg, $5.00; to Wm. Quance for programs, $1.50; for telephone calls $1.10; total paid out, $12.60. Balance in treasury $23.15.

F. B. LEIGHTY, President.
ADA BASSETT, Secy-Treas.

Farm Bureau Notes

The St. Joe High School Assembly room was practically filled with enthusiastic farmers and their wives last Friday evening, who came to attend the special meeting of the Concord Township Farm Bureau. The St. Joe Choral Society very favorably rendered several splendid songs for the entertainment part of the program.

The secretary's report showed 30 paid up members and others to come in yet. Ben Markins, C. B. Lawson and Fred Elson were appointed to arrange a program for the next meeting which will be held May 13, at the High School building.

The special features on the program for each month during the remainder of the year are as follows:

MAY

5-Acre Corn Contest, Leader, E. Schraeder.

Wool Pool, M. J. Sechler.

JUNE

Better Shipping Facilities, Carl Perkins.

JULY

Debate on the heavy and light poultry. Heavy type will be defended by Mrs. Hattie Widney and Mrs. Wm Goldsmith. Light type Frank Milliman and Frank Johnson.

AUGUST

Purebred Seed Wheat, Leader, Ben Markins.

SEPTEMBER

Field seed corn selection to be on some afternoon.

OCTOBER

Ton Litter Contest, M. J. Sechler.

NOVEMBER

Achievement Meeting.

DECEMBER

Election of officers and a general social good time.

Died at Home of Her Sister

Miss Racheal Ann Metcalf, 63, died Saturday morning at the home of her sister, Mrs. Thomas McNa[illegible], west of Spencerville, following an illness of several weeks [illegible]

[illegible]

At Absolute Auction

Drake Brothers of Montpelier, Ohio, will sell at public auction on Saturday, May 5, at 2:30 p. m., all the property in St. Joe owned by Reese Brothers formerly of St. Joe. The property consists of real estate, lot 5 in block 4 of the old plat; three buildings, one the cement block, two-story structure now occupied by the E. Leighty Grocery; another the brick, two story building now occupied by the Schlosser Bros. Cream Station; and the third is a corrugated steel lumber shed at the rear of the lot. The latter may be sold in three sections.

A large ad on page 8 of this paper will give full details of terms, descriptions, etc.

There are several St. Joe business men considering the proposition and are expecting to place bids. The present occupants of the buildings have been notified to vacate within thirty days from date of sale if they do not buy.

Now would be the time for the M. W. A. to obtain the brick building for lodge rooms.

The Reese Brothers emphasized that the property would be sold regardless of price.

Notice

A joint Child's Clinic Conference of Concord and Spencer townships will be held Monday evening, May 7, in the Spencerville Community Hall. Dr. Ada Sweitser of the State Board of Health of Indiana, will deliver a lecture and will use lantern slides for illustrations.

Local talent will assist in the literary part of the program and promise a good entertainment.

The full program will be announced next week. The baby clinic will be held at Spencerville on May 7 and at St. Joe, at the school house, on the following day May 8.

Obituary Notice

RUDOLPH SAURER

Rudolph Saurer was born in Switzerland Jan. 1, 1844, and died April 20, 1923, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam. Feller, with whom he had made his home for the past two years.

On coming to this country in 1869 he settled at Waterloo, Indiana, and he remained a resident of DeKalb county until his death. The last fifteen years he has been afflicted with blindness. He was married [illegible] 14, 1872, to Mrs Susan Feller. Her death occurred Dec. 23, 1920. They leave no children. There are no near relatives, Mrs. Mary Dull of Waterloo being the closest, and he a niece. Other relatives by marriage are eight nephews and five nieces, and one brother-in-law.

Mr. Saurer was a member of the Reformed church, but [illegible] these latter years his blindness kept him at home. Here he was visited by neighbors and friends who held him in high esteem for his jovial disposition and general good nature.

Three weeks ago he contracted a cold and this was followed by a general breakdown and finally an apoplectic stroke. At his death he was aged 79 years, 3 months, 19 days. Sam Feller was his nephew by marriage and in this home he was cherished and received every attention, that filial devotion could suggest.

A brief funeral service was held at the home Sunday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock, and the burial was at Union Cemetery, northwest of Garrett.

Life, I know not what thou art,
But I know that thou and I must part;
And when, or how, or where we met
I own to me's a secret yet.
Life, we've been long together
Through pleasant and through cloudy weather;
'Tis hard to part when friends are dear—
Perhaps 'twill cost a sigh, a tear;
Then steal away, give little warning,
Choose thine own time;
Say not Good Night—but in some brighter clime
Bid me Good Morning.

CARD OF THANKS

We greatly appreciate the kindness and attention of our neighbors and friends received during the sickness and at the death of Mr. Saurer.

Sam Feller and Wife

Meal-Time Satisfaction

NEW PERFECTION
OIL STOVES AND OVENS

SATISFY
4,000,000 WOMEN

See a demonstration at our store.

E. R. KINSEY

Hardware — Furniture — Undertaking

APRIL

L 912

American Farm Bureau

Unloading the first co-operative purchase of acid phosphate made through the central purchasing department of the Louisiana Farm Bureau federation. Farm bureau members saved $38,295 on this one purchase of 5,420 tons of acid phosphate.

Letters received in the head offices of the farm bureau indicate that the farmers of Louisiana are highly pleased with the fertilizer. One south Louisiana planter stated that he saved $3,000 on his purchases of acid phosphate and nitrate of soda through the bureau, while proportionate savings were made by farmers in all sections of the state, it is claimed.

CO-OPERATIVES WILL COMBINE ALL FORCES

Eleven Farmers' Associations Set Up Information Headquarters at Ithaca, N. Y.

Eleven farmers' co-operative associations, organized in the New York State Co-operative council, have set up a central headquarters at Ithaca, N. Y., where information concerning all phases of co-operative marketing will be gathered with the purpose of perfecting the co-operative distribution of farm products in New York and decreasing the spread between producer and consumer. The information collected by the council, which will work closely with state and federal agencies, will be made available to farmers seeking help in setting up co-operative associations.

H. E. Babcock, general manager of the Grange League Federation exchange, is chairman of the council, and E. V. Underwood, secretary of the New York Farm Bureau federation, is secretary.

"The co-operative type of marketing organization is still new, and even those closely associated with the movement are uninformed on some phases of it," Mr. Babcock, chairman of the council, pointed out. "Some co-operatives have been set up with insufficient knowledge and no experience as a background. Learning their organization's weakness has been very expensive. It is to eliminate so far as possible these errors in the future that the council has been set up."

The council represents farm business in New York state of nearly $100,000,000 a year, having as its members all the big farmers' business co-operatives in the state.

The president and manager of the following organizations make up the council: Co-operative Grange League Federation exchange; Dairymen's League Co-operative association, Inc.; Maple Producers' Co-operative association, Inc.; New York Canning Crops Co-operative association, Inc.; New York Co-operative Seed Potato association, Inc.; New York State Co-operative Poutry Certification association; the New York State Guernsey Breeders' association. New York State Holstein-Friesian association; New York State Sheep Growers Co-operative association, Inc.; Empire State Potato Growers' Co-operative association, Inc.; Western New York Fruit Growers Co-operative Packing association.

A research committee composed of Mr. Babcock, K. C. Livermore, president of the Empire State Potato Growers' association, Rochester, and F. E. Robertson, manager of the New York State Sheep Growers' association, Syracuse, has been appointed to work with the various member co-operatives, the state college of agriculture, and state and federal authorities in collecting information concerning organization, merchandising, legal aspects and the like.

PLAN SALES AGENCY FOR DAIRY PRODUCTS

Organization Being Built on Ideas Submitted by Committee at Milwaukee Conference.

The establishment of a national co-operative sales agency for dairy products is under way. The organization is being built on the plan submitted by the committee of nine selected at the Co-operative Dairy conference in Milwaukee, Wis. [illegible] purposes given for creating the national sales agency.

[illegible]

The control of the agency is very definitely fixed in the hands of the members on the basis of one vote per member, but on demand of one-third of the members all shall recast their votes on the basis of an advisory vote cast directly or by mail on the basis of one vote for every ten or major fraction of patrons or producer members actually delivering milk to the plants of the member associations on the first day of the month of June of each year; or if no record exists for the first day of June, as determined by the board of directors of the central agency. This rule shall apply to any federation except where, by arrangement with its own locals, it may choose to have the local associations do direct voting on a similar basis. The member associations as such shall elect directors and determine any matter of policy on which they choose to instruct the directors.

The executive control was vested in the board of directors composed of 35 members and an executive committee to be selected by the board of directors composed of seven members including the president, three vice presidents and three other selected members.

The directors shall be elected by districts on the basis of the number of patrons, each district to contain approximately the same number of patrons as each other district; the territory to be redistricted from time to time, without overlapping on states, if avoidable.

PRAISE FOR MISS ARNQUIST

Assistant State Agent of Iowa to Take Team of Club Girls to France This Summer.

"The Lady From America" is probably what Miss Josephine Arnquist, assistant state agent, in charge of the girls' clubs in the state of Iowa, will be called by the French people during her visit to that country this coming summer.

It was Miss Arnquist's team of club girls, Katherine Bolibaugh and Beulah Rodgers of Eddyville, Iowa, who were Miss Josephine Arnquist.

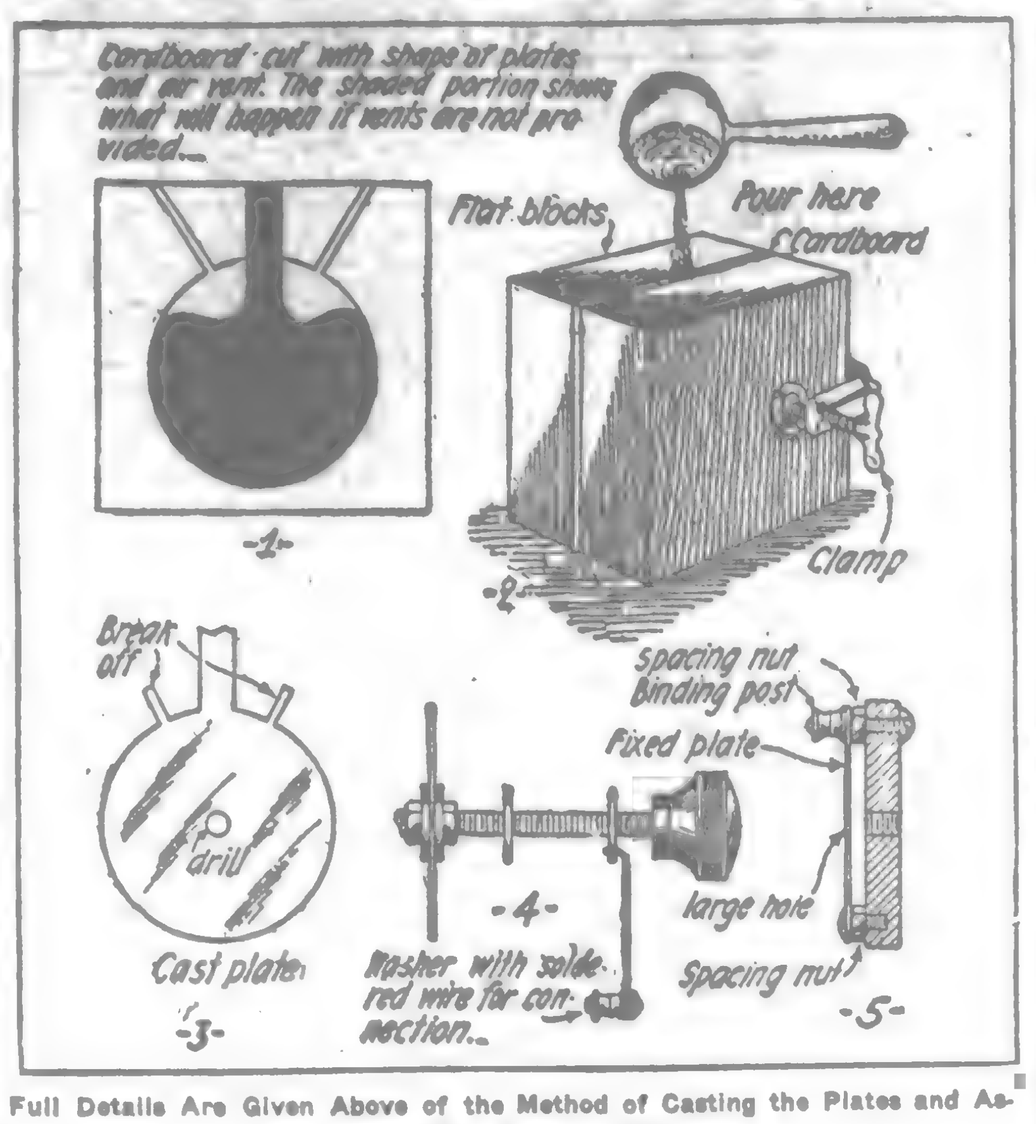
America's champion canning girls at the last International Boys' and Girls' clubs exposition at Chicago. They will tour France this summer to demonstrate [illegible]

[illegible]

HOME-MADE VARIABLE CONDENSER



Cardboard cut with shape of plates and air vent. The shaded portion shows what will happen if vents are not provided...
Flat blocks
Pour here
Cardboard
Clamp
-1-
-2-
Break off drill
Cast plate
-3-
Washer with soldered wire for connection...
-4-
Spacing nut
Binding post
Fixed plate large hole
Spacing nut
-5-

Full Details Are Given Above of the Method of Casting the Plates and Assembling the Condenser.

The principle of the condenser described here is not new, but its constructional details have been so simplified that it can be made at home with very few tools. Since its operation depends upon the distance separating the plates, it can be used in two ways; by having the plates close together the capacity is large enough for the condenser to work as the principal condenser; by separating the plates from half to quarter of an inch the capacity is lessened to a point where the condenser can be used as a vernier, and when employed in this way very selective results are obtainable.

Home-Made Condenser.

The most important details of the condenser are the two plates, which are die cast at home, in the following manner: A piece of cardboard of the right thickness and having a circle of the right dimensions cut in it is clamped betwen two pieces of smooth board. The melted metal is poured in through the slot, as shown in the accompanying illustration. When the first casting is made it will be found that the mold does not fill up perfectly, owing to imprisoned air. When the air pockets are located the fault can be remedied by cutting thin channels in the cardboard for some distance to allow the air to escape. These need not be given a definite vent connection with the outside air, as the mold works perfectly without it. The choice of metal is important, as pure lead or solder will not work right. A few pieces of linotype metal obtained from a printer friend will work very well, and this metal, which is used to cast printing types, has the further advantage of being quite brittle, so that it will not bend out of shape.

The insulating material is then drilled and tapped so that the rod carrying the movable plate can be placed in its proper position. Connection with the movable plate is made by means of a washer riding on the rod, a wire being soldered to this washer and carried out to the other terminal. It may be necessary to use a spacing washer on the rod to prevent the two plates from touching, or a piece of mica or celluloid sheeting can be used to separate the two. A rubber binding post cap on the threaded rod completes the condenser.

Eliminates Danger of Shortage.

Editor's Note—If a piece of mica is cut to the size of the stationary plate and fastened to it danger of shortage is eliminated. This is particularly beneficial if the condenser is used in shunt to the phones and "B" battery, as a short here would hurt the "B" battery.

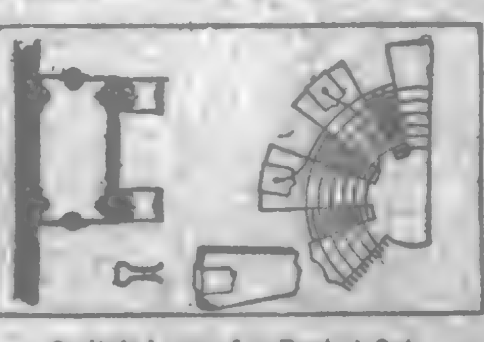
The fixed plate is fastened to an insulating base, which can be either a small piece of insulating material, or the panel of the set, by two screws and nuts, one at the other end of the plate. A large hole is drilled through the center of this plate so that no contact with the movable plate is possible. It will be necessary either to raise the movable plate from the insulation or to countersink the insulation so that the nut on the movable plate will not interfere with the plates being brought very close to each other.

After a number of plates have been broken from the fixed plate, as it is used for a connecting lug, but on the movable plate it is broken off and the rough place smoothed down with a file. The movable plate is drilled through the center and fastened to one end of a short-threaded rod by means of two nuts and washers. The nuts and washers should be filed plain so that the plate will be exactly at right angles with the rod.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)

Proper Switch Lever for the Pocket Sets

Many amateurs are beginning to make pocket sets, but they sometimes experience difficulty in the selection of a proper switch lever and become quite puzzled because of the fact that the ordinary switch is too big for the small space allotted to it. A suitable switch for such work can be made from a binding post. The style with the rubber knob and threaded washer is best. A piece of brass ⅛ inch high and 1-32 inch in thickness should be bent and made to fit the threaded screw and a steel spring which will fit loosely over the brass sleeve procured. It will be best to cut the lever out of a springy piece of brass. On tightening the washer, the switch will never become loose.



Switch Lever for Pocket Set.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)

News of Lost Aviators.

Two Portland, Oregon, aviators undertook to circle Mount Hood. They failed to return within a reasonable time and word was broadcasted over a wide area. In a short time radio reports came in [illegible]

[illegible]

May Obtain Improved Parts for the Radio

Dispatches from one city state that the local university will not equip the institution this term with radio equipment because its authorities believe that probable radical changes in radio apparatus make it inadvisable to purchase at this time.

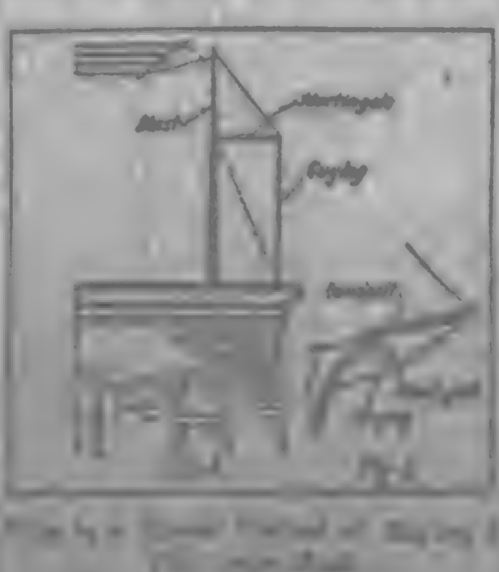
Effective radio sending and transmission are dependent upon two different phases of the art, methods and equipment. No one conversant with radio engineering doubts that the story of radio is to be one of rapid progress. On the other hand, the development, it seems, is to be along the lines of improved circuits and parts rather than in its entirety.

The nature of radio apparatus is such that it permits of substitution of improved circuits and improved parts for obsolete ones. It seems unfair to students to deprive them of radio instruction and demonstration at the present time for the reason given by the college authorities. It is accomplishing marvels right now.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)

Guying Aerial Mast for Antenna Wires

The method used in old-time sailing ships for guying the bowsprit against the pull of the jib can be used with equal success in strengthening



[illegible]

GOOD HIGHWAYS

RAILROADER BOOSTS ROADS

President Finley of Northwestern System Praises Work of Highway Construction.

President William H. Finley, of the Chicago & Northwestern railway, sounded what automobile industry officials declare is a sensible opinion when he came out before a meeting of the Illinois Association of Highway and Municipal Contractors, in a pronounced boost for hard-surfaced highways. Mr. Finley is one of the first railroad magnates to see the light, and to oppose the theory that hard-surfaced highways will ruin the railroads.

When trolley lines were first built there was a hue and cry that they would take all the business from the railroads, declared Mr. Finley.

"Nothing like that happened," he added, "but the trolley lines merely created more business for everybody. Every great development is the result of evolution, not revolution."

Mr. Finley praised the work of highway building but warned against the tendency toward overtaxation.

"It is extremely gratifying to see big men like Mr. Finley come out in the open and declare the truth about hard-surfaced highways," said Henry Paulman, chairman of the good roads committee of the Illinois State Automobile association, "especially since he holds such a commanding position in the railroad world. It is sound doctrine ably given.

"While it is true that the hard-surfaced highways have put several short railroad lines out of business, taken as a whole our federal and state systems of roads in this country simply coordinate with the trunk line railroads. The highways for the most part act as feeders of the railroads and increase their business. It is my firm conviction that the railroad officials should be boosters of highway construction and not obstructionists. President Finley's speech on the subject is timely."

CONGRESS AIDS GOOD ROADS

Encouragement Given to Better Highways Throughout Country by Passing Appropriations.

The session of congress which ended March 4 gave encouragement to the good roads movement throughout the country by continuing appropriations for federal aid to the states, but it failed to take action in connection with other matters of moment to motorists. Disappointment was caused at the failure to provide money for the building of roads in the national parks, but this was due to the fact that the budget submitted did not provide for such appropriation, says the National Motorists' association.

OPPOSE OVERLOADED TRUCKS

Problem of Preventing Destruction of Improved Roads Discussed at Recent Meeting.

The problem of preventing the destruction of improved highways by the overloaded motor truck, which transfers a freight train load to a pavement designed for only a lawful maximum limit of eight tons to the axle, or four tons a wheel, was discussed at the recent good roads congress held in Chicago. A committee was appointed to wait upon county boards and city authorities in order to get better enforcement of the laws regulating truck loads.

PHILOSOPHY OF GOOD ROADS

Difference in Enthusiasm of Jitney Owner and Farmer Who Is Living on Muddy Road.

Texas Farm and Ranch says: "You know there must be some difference about the enthusiasm over a good roads movement of a second-hand jitney owner, living in a rented flat in town, owing nobody but his landlord and grocer, and me, living on 200 acres mortgaged to the limit and taxed a little over the limit," and it might have added, "and then have the $80,000 a mile road built so that I would have to go seven miles through the mud to get to it."

MINNESOTA BUILDING ROADS

Millions of Dollars Will Be Spent in Next Few Years in Perfecting Its System.

Minnesota is one of the states which is going ahead in a road-building campaign. [illegible]

[illegible]

After Every Meal
WRIGLEYS
Top off each meal with a bit of sweet in the form of WRIGLEY'S.
It satisfies the sweet tooth and aids digestion.
Pleasure and benefit combined.
Save the Wrappers
FOR THE CHILDREN

Thought for the Day.

You can insure against theft, fire and murder, but not against the teller of smutty stories. No insurance company could possibly pay the damage done your character.

Aspirin

Say "Bayer" and Insist!

BAYER
Genuine

Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer product prescribed by physicians over twenty-two years and proved safe by millions for

Colds — Headache
Toothache — Lumbago
Earache — Rheumatism
Neuralgia — Pain, Pain

Accept "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" only. Each unbroken package contains proper directions. Handy boxes of twelve tablets cost few cents. Druggists also sell bottles of 24 and 100. Asperin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.—Advertisement.

A fine orator finds, after awhile, that his greater difficulty is to find subjects suitable to orate on.

A servant may know his place, but he doesn't always keep it.

Backache Is a Warning!

Those agonizing twinges across the small of the back, that dull, throbbing backache may mean serious kidney weakness—serious if neglected, for it may lead to gravel, stone in the kidneys, bladder inflammation, dropsy or fatal Bright's disease. If you are suffering with a bad back, have dizzy spells, headaches, nervous, despondent attacks or disordered kidney action, heed Nature's warning. Get after the cause. Doan's Kidney Pills have helped thousands. They should help you. Ask your neighbor!

An Ohio Case

Allen Writh, 504 W. Market St., Warren, O., says: "My kidneys were out of fix. Stabbing pains cut through my back and when I tried to get up my back became stiff. If I worked steadily my strength left me and the kidney secretions passed too frequently. I tried Doan's Kidney Pills and it didn't take them long to fix me up."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 60c a Box
DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

Vaseline
Reg U.S.Pat.Off.
CARBOLATED
PETROLEUM JELLY
No skin break too small for notice.
Be very wary of cuts, scratches and skin abrasions, no matter how slight. "Vaseline" Carbolated Petroleum Jelly—applied at once—lessens the possibility of infection.
It comes in bottles—at all druggists and general stores.
CHESEBROUGH MFG. COMPANY
State St. New York
[illegible]

YOU CAN
[illegible]

STRAHL FEELS LIKE NEW MAN

Portland Citizen Declares Tanlac Completely Overcame Stomach Troubles.

J. P. Strahl, 6517 88th St., Portland, Oregon, speaking of his experience with Tanlac, says:

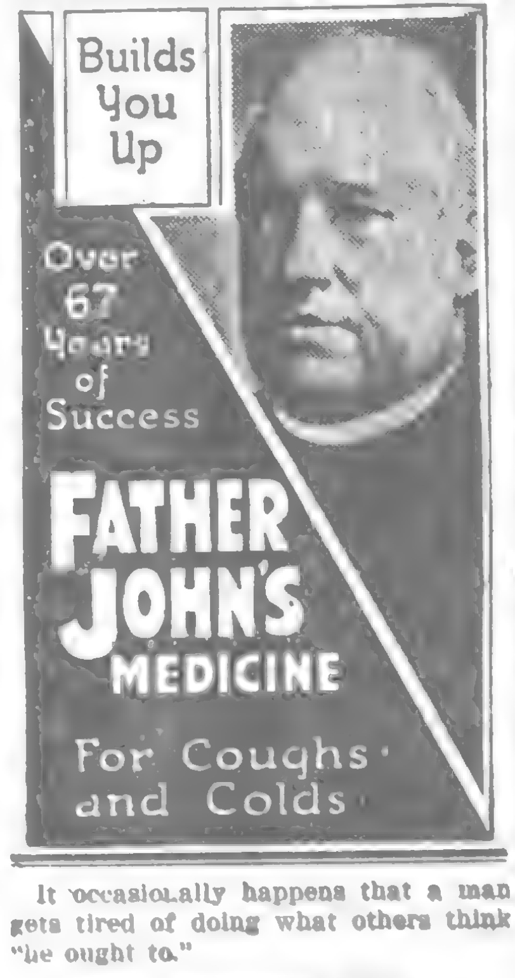
"Tanlac has ended my stomach trouble, built me up eighteen pounds and I now enjoy the best health of my life. But for two years before I got Tanlac, stomach trouble had me in its grip, and all sorts of ailments kept bobbing up to cause me misery. Scarcely anything I ate agreed with me, and I kept falling off till I was sixteen pounds underweight. Gas on my stomach bloated me till I could hardly breathe. I had attacks of biliousness and had to be all the time taking laxatives.

"Tanlac put me on my feet, fixed me up so I can eat heartily, sleep like a top and work at full speed. There's no two ways about it: Tanlac sure builds a solid foundation for health."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

A Test.

It's a case of genuine love if he keeps his eye on the girl and not on the taximeter.—Bison.



It occasionally happens that a man gets tired of doing what others think "he ought to."

"COLD IN THE HEAD"

is an acute attack of Nasal Catarrh. Those subject to frequent "colds" are generally in a "run down" condition.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a Treatment consisting of an Ointment, to be used locally, and a Tonic, which acts Quickly through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces, building up the System, and making you less liable to "colds."

Sold by druggists for over 40 Years.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

Most of the good things to eat were discovered in America and more of them are eaten there.

A LIFE SAVER

"My trouble was SCIATICA. My back was affected and it took the form of LUMBAGO. Also had NEURALGIA, CRAMPS in my muscles, PAIN and ACHES on top of my head and different parts of my body. Nervous spells, felt dizzy at times. Symptoms of KIDNEY trouble. I commenced to take DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS. They were the means of saving my life.

REV. W. H. WARNER,
158 East Ridge St., Nanticoke, Pa.

If you are not a sufferer, you can do some friend a good turn by clipping this ad and forwarding it to him. And don't wait yourself until Kidney trouble attacks you. Thousands of healthy people take DODD'S Kidney Pills every year during Spring and Fall, as directed, simply to keep their Kidneys in perfect condition at all times.

Be sure you get the genuine DODD'S —3 D's in the name. Tried and tested for over 40 years. Do not accept any Substitute of a similar name—see that you get DODD'S. Always glad to receive a letter from users of DODD'S Kidney Pills, informing us as to result. We can then give advice regarding Diet, etc., FREE OF ALL CHARGES. DODD'S Kidney Pills are sold by all Druggists. Large box 60 cents. Prompt relief or your money back is our guarantee. If your Druggist's supply happens to be out, he can easily secure same from his Jobber or wholesale house, or you can send 60 cents in stamps direct to us. But ASK YOUR DRUGGIST FIRST.

DODD'S MEDICINE CO.
700 Main St. Buffalo, N. Y.

Shake Into Your Shoes

And sprinkle in the foot-bath Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic, healing powder for Painful, Swollen, Sweating feet. It prevents blisters and sore spots and takes the sting out of corns and bunions. Always use Allen's Foot-Ease to break in new shoes and enjoy the bliss of feet without an ache. Those who use Allen's Foot-Ease say that they have solved their foot troubles. Sold everywhere. Trial package and a Foot-Ease Walking Doll sent Free. Address Allen's Foot-Ease, Le Roy, N. Y.

PILES [illegible] MIRO [illegible]

American Individualism

A Timely Message to the American People

By HERBERT HOOVER
Secretary of Commerce.

4—ECONOMIC PHASES

THAT high and increasing standards of living and comfort should be the first of considerations in public mind and in government needs no apology. We have long since realized that the basis of an advancing civilization must be a high and growing standard of living for all the people, not for a single class; that education, food, clothing, housing, and the spreading use of what we so often term nonessentials, are the real fertilizers of the soil from which spring the finer flowers of life. The economic development of the past fifty years has lifted the general standard of comfort far beyond the dreams of our forefathers. The only road to further advance in the standard of living is by greater invention, greater production and better distribution of commodities and services, for by increasing their ratio to our numbers and dividing them justly we each will have more of them.

The superlative value of individualism through its impulse to production, its stimulation to invention, has, so far as I know, never been denied. Criticism of it has lain in its wastes but more importantly in its failures of equitable sharing of the product. In our country these contentions are mainly over the division to each of his share of the comforts and luxuries, for none of us is either hungry or cold or without a place to lay his head—and we have much besides. In less than four decades we have added electric lights, plumbing, telephones, gramophones, automobiles, and what not in wide diffusion to our standards of living. Each in turn began as a luxury, each in turn has become so commonplace that seventy or eighty per cent of our people participate in them.

To all practical souls there is little use in quarreling over the share of each of us until we have something to divide. So long as we maintain our individualism we will have increasing quantities to share and we shall have time and leisure and taxes with which to fight out proper sharing of the "surplus." The income tax returns show that this surplus is a minor part of our total production after taxes are paid. Some of this "surplus" must be set aside for rewards to saving, or stimulation of proper effort to skill, to leadership and invention—therefore the dispute is in reality over much less than the total of such "surplus." While there should be no minimizing of a certain fringe of injustices in sharing the results of production or in the wasteful use made by some of their share, yet there is vastly wider field for gains to all of us through cheapening the costs of production and distribution through the eliminating of their wastes, from increasing the volume of product by each and every one doing his utmost, than will ever come to us even if we can think out a method of abstract justice in sharing which did not stifle production of the total product.

It is a certainty we are confronted with a population in such numbers as can only exist by production attuned to a pitch in which the slightest reduction of the impulse to produce will at once create misery and want. If we throttle the fundamental impulses of man our production will decay. The world in this hour is witnessing the most overshadowing tragedy of ten centuries in the heart-breaking life-and-death struggle with starvation by a nation with a hundred and fifty millions of people. In Russia under the new tyranny a group, in pursuit of social theories, have destroyed the primary self-interest impulse of the individual to production.

Although socialism in a nation-wide application has now proved itself with rivers of blood and inconceivable misery to be an economic and spiritual fallacy and has wrecked itself finally upon the rocks of destroyed production and moral degeneracy, I believe it to have been necessary for the world to have had this demonstration. Great theoretic and emotional ideas have arisen before in the world's history and have in more than mere material bankruptcy deluged the world with fearful losses of life. A purely philosophical view might be that in the long run humanity has to try every way, even precipices, in finding the road to betterment.

But those are utterly wrong who say that individualism has as its only end the acquisition and preservation of private property—the selfish snatching and hoarding of the common product. Our American individualism, indeed, is only in part an economic creed. It aims to provide opportunity for self-expression, not merely economically, but spiritually as well. Private property is not a fetich in America. The crushing of the liquor trade without a cent of compensation, with scarcely even a discussion of it, does not bear out the notion that we give property rights any headway over human rights. Our development of individualism shows an increasing tendency to regard right of property not as an object in itself, but in the light of a useful and necessary instrument in stimulation of initiative to the individual; not only stimulation to him that he may gain personal comfort, security in life, protection to his family, but also because individual accumulation and ownership is a basis of selection to leadership in administration of the tools of industry and commerce. It is where [illegible] private property is [illegible] the hands of the [illegible] [illegible] use of capital by crushing the initiative that makes for its creation.

Some discussion of the legal limitations we have placed upon economic domination is given later on, but it is desirable to mention here certain potent forces in our economic life that are themselves providing their own correction to domination.

The domination by arbitrary individual ownership is disappearing because the works of today are steadily growing more and more beyond the resources of any one individual, and steadily taxation will reduce relatively excessive individual accumulations. The number of persons in partnership through division of ownership among many stockholders is steadily increasing—thus 100,000 to 200,000 partners in a single concern are not uncommon. The overwhelmingly largest portion of our mobile capital is that of our banks, insurance companies, building and loan associations, and the vast majority of all this is the aggregated small savings of our people. Thus large capital is steadily becoming more and more a mobilization of the savings of the small holders—the actual people themselves—and its administration becomes at once more sensitive to the moral opinions of the people in order to attract their support. The directors and managers of large concerns, themselves employees of these great groups of individual stockholders, or policyholders, reflect a spirit of community responsibility.

Large masses of capital can only find their market for service or production to great numbers of the same kind of people that they employ and they must, therefore, maintain confidence in their public responsibilities in order to retain their customers. In times when the products of manufacture were mostly luxuries to the average of the people, the condition of their employees was of no such interest to their customers as when they cater to employees in general. Of this latter, no greater proofs need exist than the efforts of many large concerns directly dependent upon public good will to restrain prices in scarcity—and the very general desire to yield a measure of service with the goods sold. Another phase of this same development in administration of capital is the growth of a sort of institutional sense in many large business enterprises. The encouragement of solidarity in all grades of their employees in the common service and common success, the sense of mutuality with the prosperity of the community are both vital developments in individualism.

There has been in the last thirty years an extraordinary growth of organizations for advancement of ideas in the community for mutual co-operation and economic objectives—the chambers of commerce, trade associations, labor unions, bankers, farmers, propaganda associations, and what not. These are indeed variable mixtures of altruism and self-interest. Nevertheless in these groups the individual finds an opportunity for self-expression and participation in the molding of ideas, a field for training and the stepping stones for leadership.

The number of leaders in local and national life whose opportunity to service and leadership came through these associations has become now of more importance than those through the direct lines of political and religious organization.

At times these groups come into sharp conflict and often enough charge each other with crimes against public interest. They do contain faults; if they develop into warring interests, if they dominate legislators and intimidate public officials, if they are to be a new setting of tyranny, then they will destroy the foundation of individualism. Our government will then drift into the hands of timorous mediocrities dominated by groups until we shall become a syndicalist nation on a gigantic scale. On the other hand, each group is a [illegible] of [illegible] mutuality of [illegible] some element of [illegible] each is a [illegible] ty. In the [illegible] [illegible] larged field for initiative, and at the same time reduce many of the great wastes of over-reckless competition in production and distribution. Those who either congratulate themselves or those who fear that co-operation is an advance toward socialism need neither rejoice or worry. Co-operation in its current economic sense represents the initiative of self-interest blended with a sense of service, for nobody belongs to a co-operative who is not striving to sell his products or services for more or striving to buy from others for less or striving to make his income more secure. Their members are furnishing the capital for extension of their activities just as effectively as if they did it in corporate form and they are simply transferring the profit principle from joint return to individual return. Their only success lies where they eliminate waste either in production or distribution—and they can do neither if they destroy individual initiative. Indeed this phase of development of our individualism promises to become the dominant note of its Twentieth century expansion. But it will thrive only in so far as it can construct leadership and a sense of service, and so long as it preserves the initiative and safeguards the individuality of its members.

The economic system which is the result of our individualism is not a frozen organism. It moves rapidly in its form of organization under the impulse of initiative of our citizens, of growing science, of larger production, and of constantly cheapening distribution.

A great test of the soundness of a social system must be its ability to evolve within itself those orderly shifts in its administration that enable it to apply the new tools of social, economic, and intellectual progress, and to eliminate the malign forces that may grow in the application of these tools. When we were almost wholly an agricultural people our form of organization and administration, both in the governmental and economic fields, could be simple. With the enormous shift in growth to industry and commerce we have erected organisms that each generation has denounced as Frankensteins, yet the succeeding generation proves them to be controllable and useful. The growth of corporate organizations, of our banking systems, of our railways, of our electrical power, of our farm co-operatives, of our trade unions, of our trade associations, and of a hundred others indeed develops both beneficent and malign forces. The timid become frightened. But our basic social ideas march through the new things in the end. Our demagogues, of both radical and standpat breed, thrive on demands for the destruction of one or another of these organizations as the only solution for their defects, yet progress requires only a guardianship of the vital principles of our individualism with its safeguard of true equality of opportunity in them.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

(Copyright, 1922, by Doubleday, Page & Co. Published by arrangement with Western Newspaper Union.)

ONE-TIME MAGNIFICENT CITY

Palmyra Began to Sink Into Decay in Fifteenth Century, Under Rule of Turks.

In ancient times, from about the year 100 A. D. to the Fourteenth century, more especially in the second and third centuries, Palmyra was a wealthy and magnificent city of northern Syria, standing in an oasis on the northern edge of the Arabian desert, about 150 miles northeast of Damascus. Its Semitic name was Tadmor, and Palmyra (city of palms), is the Greek equivalent. According to the old tradition, it was founded by King Solomon. It became the commercial center of northern Arabia.

During the long-protracted wars between Rome and Parthia, Palmyra acknowledged the supremacy of Rome, and secured great commercial advantages. From the Emperor's Hadrian and Septimus Severus it received special favors and privileges.

One of Palmyra's rulers, Odaenathus, extended his power over most of the adjoining countries from Egypt to Asia Minor. Then came the fatal war with Rome. Adaenathus was murdered and his famous queen, Zenokia, took up the reins of power. In the year 272 she was crushed by the Romans and carried captive to Rome. The Emperor Aurelian presented her with large possessions near Tivon where she passed the rest of her life in comfort and even splendor.

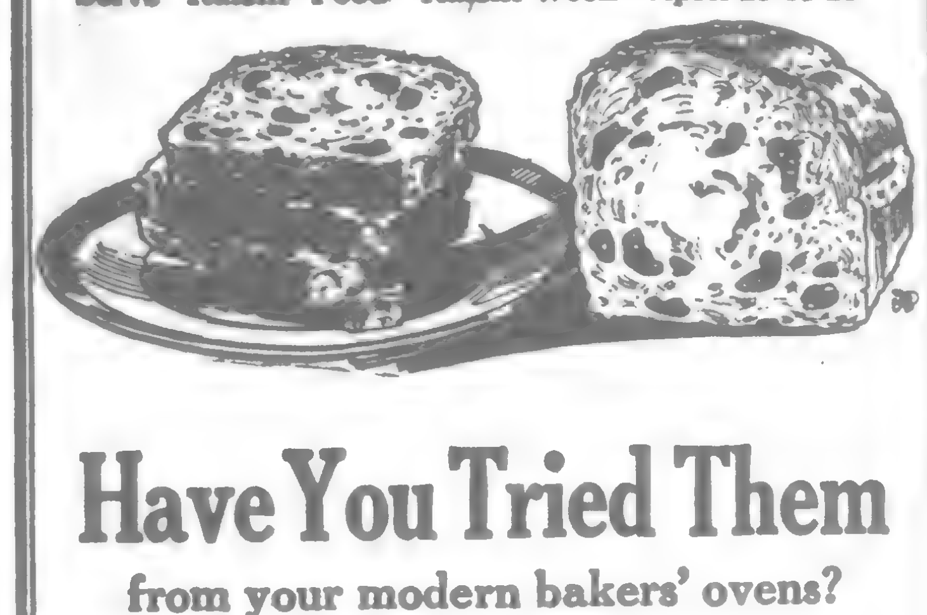
After the Roman empire became Christian, Palmyra was made a bishopric. When the Moslems conquered Syria, Palmyra also submitted to them. From the Fifteenth century it began to sink into decay with the rest of the East that had fallen into the hands of the Moslems, or, in this case, Turks.

Magnificent remains of the ancient city still exist, chief among them being the great temple of the Sun or Baal. An old and high authority on this once famous city bears the title, "Ruins of Palmyra," by Wood and Dawkins, published in London in 1753.

Tarsus.

In apostolic times, the part of what is now Asia Minor, on the northern [illegible]

Serve Raisin Food—Raisin Week—April 23 to 29



Have You Tried Them

from your modern bakers' ovens?

—These big, brown loaves of "old-fashioned" full-fruited raisin bread?

Note the raisin flavor that permeates these loaves.

Count the big, plump, tender, juicy raisins in each slice.

It's real raisin bread—the kind you're looking for.

Ready-baked to save baking at home. Delicious and convenient — and economical in cost.

We've arranged with bakers in almost every town and city to bake this full-fruited raisin bread.

Order from your grocer or a neighborhood bake shop.

Say you want the bread that's made with Sun-Maid Raisins.

Good raisin bread is a rare combination of the benefits of nutritious cereal and fruit—both good and good for you, so serve it at least twice a week.

Use more raisins in your cakes, puddings, etc.

You may be offered other brands that you know less well than Sun-Maids, but the kind you want is the kind you know is good. Insist, therefore, on Sun-Maid brand. They cost no more than ordinary raisins.

Mail coupon for free book of tested Sun-Maid recipes.

SUN-MAID RAISINS

The Supreme Bread Raisin

Sun-Maid Raisins are grown and packed in California by Sun-Maid Raisin Growers, a co-operative organization comprising 14,000 grower members.

SUN-MAID RAISINS

Blue Package

CUT THIS OUT AND SEND IT

Sun-Maid Raisin Growers,
Fresno, California

Please send me copy of your free book, "Recipes with Raisins."

NAME ....

STREET ....

CITY .... STATE ....

Is there anything else about us besides the appendix and the tonsils that seems to be a mistake?

Important to All Women Readers of This Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and maybe despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by parcel post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Broken-Hearted.

"The late Lillian Russell," said a friend of the dead actress, "thought that the morals of young people had deteriorated since her own youth. She thought there was no real feeling any more.

"To illustrate her point she used to quote a dialogue between two film stars.

"'I hope,' said the first star, 'that in jilting young Venables I haven't broken his heart.'

"'You have, though,' said the second star. 'You've broken it, darling, in half.'

"'What do you mean?' said the first star impatiently.

"'I mean,' said the other one, 'that he takes two girls out to supper in his car every night now.'"

Poor Fish!

Consider the fish . . . . If he didn't open his mouth, he wouldn't get caught.—Jack-o-Lantern.

Easter Eggs.

"What are these gay eggs?"

"Laid by flapper hens," said an old rooster, shaking his head.

To Have a Clear, Sweet Skin

Touch pimples, redness, roughness or itching, if any, with Cuticura Ointment, then bathe with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Rinse, dry gently and dust on a little Cuticura Talcum to leave a fascinating fragrance on skin. Everywhere 25c each.—Advertisement.

She Was Willing.

Gerald—I'm going to steal a kiss.

Geraldine—Let the crime wave begin.—New York Sun.

Just say to your grocer Red Cross Ball Blue when buying bluing. You will be more than repaid by the results. Once tried always used.—Advertisement.

She Figured It Out.

A youth in an Indianapolis school was absent from school for a number of days. A teacher, who shows real interest in the progress of her pupils, called the mother on the telephone and inquired concerning the lad.

"John's afraid to come back," said the mother. "He says you threatened to throw him into the furnace."

Perplexed, the teacher for a day or two wondered what could have put that silly notion in the boy's head. Then she remembered. Some days before she had told that class some recalcitrants had been absent more days than good scholarship permitted. She had announced to her class then that if these persons missed another session she would be compelled to "drop them from the register."

Connects Twelve States.

The Lincoln highway connects 12 states and is laid out between New York and San Francisco as directly as possible consistent with the topography of the country. Its length is about 3,284 miles, but this will be shortened by improvements and the elimination of curves. It is the longest road in the world and is to be of concrete wherever practicable.

An equinox is as good as a boost.

What to Eat and Why

Making a Big Word an Easy Part of Your Diet

Car-bo-hy-drates make up about 60 per cent of the average diet. They produce heat and energy. [illegible]

[illegible] its splendid, building nourishment. It is a food for strength and energy, [illegible] crisp and appetizing, [illegible] by the same [illegible] to health [illegible] phosphorus and the essential [illegible], so often lacking in modern, "refined" foods.

[illegible] servings of real food [illegible]

A Wonderful Sale of

TOPCOATS

Sure many of them are a "Special Purchase," that's the only reason why we can sell them to you at

$20 to $40

Instead of $25 to $60.

We never hesitate to make special purchases from our regular house when by so doing we can pass on to our customers high-grade merchandise at a special saving---that's why we say---

"The Store That Does Things"

Bear in mind that we sell all-wool suits with 2 pants at $18—and a wonderful showing of two-pants suits at $25.

Patterson-Fletcher Co.

Wake Up! Build a Sleeping Porch

It's a great way to solve the extra bedroom question. You can add on a sleeping porch for a small sum--and you'll have the whole family scrapping for uppers and lowers in the outdoor Pullman.

We have the stuff sleeping porches are made of at a price that won't give you any bed dream.

Spencerville Lumber Company

Everthing Needed in Home Building—including practical helps.

Spencerville, Ind.

The Alumni of the Spencerville High School very pleasantly entertained the graduation class and friends at a banquet on Saturday evening. Rev. Steffey acted as toastmaster, Those who responded were Florence Beams, Gaylon Markle, C. E. Mitchel of Orland, and Prof. Flemming.

118 1-2 EAST [illegible] STREET PHONE 146

Over [illegible] [illegible] Ohio

[illegible]

The St. Joe News

William S. Quance,
Editor and Publisher.

One Year,	$1.50
Six Months,	.75
Three Months,	.40
One Month,	.15
Single Copy,	.05

(Advertising Rates on Application)

Entered at the postoffice at St. Joe, Indiana, as second class matter.

Foreign Advertising Representative
THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

Notice of Final Settlement of Estate

Cause No. 2581.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to all persons interested in the estate of Baltzer Koontz deceased, to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held at Auburn, Indiana, on the 21st day of May 1923, and show cause, if any, why my Final Settlement Accounts with the estate of said decedent should not be approved; and said heirs, and all others interested, are notified to then and there make proof of heirship or claim and receive their distributive shares.

Witness, my name, this 4th day of April, 1923.

SARAH E. KOONTZ, Executrix,
Link & McClintock,
Attorneys.

Dr. Bonnell M. Souder

HOSPITAL

Established in 1914
206 West Seventh Street
AUBURN, INDIANA

NEWVILLE

For good glasses see Griest at American Building Hicksville, Ohio.

The Sunday School Convention held in the U. B. church Sunday was well attended.

Frank Griest and family of Hicksville were the Sunday guests of David Griest and wife.

Earl McDonald of Butler were Sunday afternoon guests of the John Miller family.

Henry Fuller and family of Garrett, were Sunday evening guests of the John Miller family.

Leighton Tombow and wife of Butler, were Sunday afternoon guests of A. L. Gengnagle and family.

Mrs. E. E. Traxler and Mrs. Terry Traxler were Wednesday dinner guests of Mrs. John Miller and family.

The school closed here Friday with a good program. Five pupils have taken the eighth grade examination.

Miss Leona Keesler spent the first half of last week with her bother, Jake Keesler, and wife at Fort Wayne.

Argyl Sechler and wife are the proud and happy parents of a five and one-half pound boy, born Wednesday, April 18.

Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Hattie Sechler of St. Joe, spent part of last week in the Argyl Sechler home caring for the mother and baby. All are doing fine.

COLETOWN

Sunday Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hart took dinner with Mrs Jane Coburn.

The Misses Marie and Julie Varner spent Monday with Mrs. J. W. Hart.

The following couple young people of Corunna, [illegible] licence at Auburn on [illegible] April 22: Charles J. [illegible], a school teacher and [illegible] look, 19, teacher.

Cole's [illegible]

Chiropractor Optician

Calls made at your home by APPOINTMENT.

EARL E. FRISBIE,
Butler, Indiana.

38 Years Ago

From Our Files

Dr. Emanuel's office at Spencerville was partly destroyed by fire last Wednesday night.

Billy Currie's mules got naughty one day this week and tumbled him out on the ground.

Rev. L. L. Carpenter of Wabash, Indiana will preach at the church at this place on next Saturday evening, Sunday morning and evening.

The following persons have found use for safety pins since last issue: Wm. Koch a girl, Wm. Bleeks a boy, Milliard Dermott a boy, Jake Sechler a boy. They are all doing as well as could be expected.

Simon Wineland lost a valuable horse through sickness last week.

Mahlon Baker has resigned his position as weighmaster at this place, and Sell Bowen has been appointed in his stead. Mahlon is looking for an appointment from the government He wants to be a minister to some foreign country. Mahlon would make a spanking good minister.

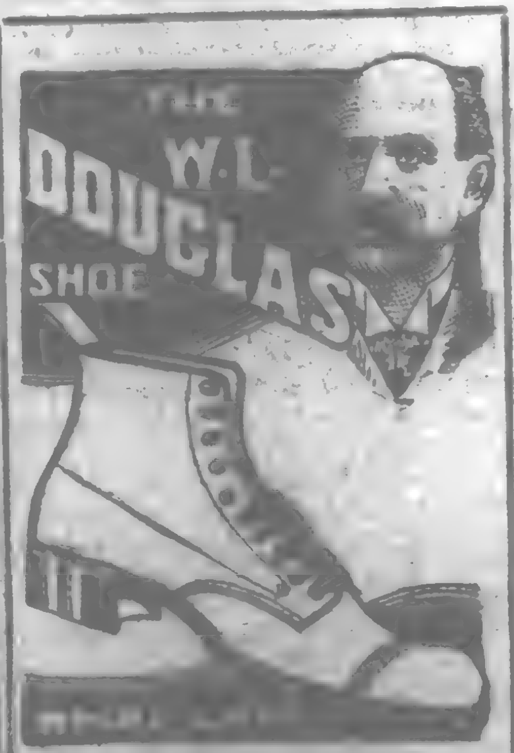
Russ Kopp is putting up quite a large building one door east of Curri's Meat Market; the lower part will be used for a shop, and the upper story will be fitted up into a dwelling.

Set a New Truck Record

Sales of 41,681 Ford Trucks during the first quarter, setting a new record, bear out predictions made earlier that the use of the one-ton truck in hauling and delivery systems will be greater this year than ever before.

Not only is the Ford Truck rapidly coming into more general use in the commercial field, where its dependability, ease of operation and adaptability to all requirements make it the most popular, but throughout the agricultural sections of the country it is fast being adopted by the farmer as the best means of solving his problem for quicker and cheaper transportation of his products from the farm to the city.

March sales of Ford Trucks, which reached the new high mark of 18,717, exceeded by more than 1,000 the sales for the first three months of 1922, totaling 17,856, and were 50 per cent higher than the sales in February of this year.



THE W. L. DOUGLAS SHOE

For Sale Only At
Chaneys'
Auburn, - - - - Ind.

Make Your Trip More Enjoyable by a Refreshing Night on Lake Erie

(Your rail ticket is good on the boats)

Thousands of east and north bound travelers say they wouldn't have missed that cool, comfortable night on one of our fine steamers. A good bed in a clean stateroom, a long sound sleep and an appetizing breakfast in the morning!

Steamers "SEEANDBEE" — "CITY OF ERIE" — "CITY OF BUFFALO"

Daily, May 1st to November 15th

Leave Cleveland - 9:00 P.M. } Eastern { Leave Buffalo - 9:00 P.M.
Arrive Buffalo - 7:30 A.M. } Standard Time { Arrive Cleveland - 7:30 A.M.

Connections for Niagara Falls, Eastern and Canadian points. Ask your ticket agent or tourist agency for tickets via C & B Line. New Tourist Automobile Rate—$10.00.

Send for free sectional puzzle chart of the Great Ship "Seeandbee" and 32-page booklet.

The Cleveland and Buffalo Transit Co.
Cleveland, Ohio

The Great Ship "Seeandbee" — the largest steamer on inland waters of the world.

Fare $5.50

Get Your

Daily Bread and Welcome Flours

at the J. C. Bailey Store St. Joe

Made By G. A. Ward of the

ALBION ROLLER MILLS, Albion, Ind.

PUBLIC SALE!

The undersigned will sell at Public Auction at his residence located 2 miles east of St. Joe on the river road, 40 rods west of the Alton Cemetery, and 1 1-4 miles north of Coburns' Corners Church, on what was formerly known as the Henry Saylor farm, on Friday, April 27

Commencing at 10 o'clock the following property, to-wit:

4 - Head Horses - 4

Bay brood mare, 10 yr. old, weighing about 1400 lbs.; Gray gelding colt coming 4 yrs. old, well broke, weighing about 1700 lbs.; Sorrel gelding colt, coming 3 yr. old, weighing about 1500 lbs.; Gray mare colt, coming 2 yr. old, weighing about 1400 lbs. These are extra good colts.

2 - Head Cattle - 2

Jersey cow, good one, 6 yr. old, with calf by side old enough to veal. Jersey cow, 8 yr. old, with calf by side.

Chickens

About 60 well bred Rhode Island Red hens.

Hay and Grain

4 or 5 tons of mixed and clover hay in mow; Corn in crib; About 50 bushels of oats

Miscellaneous

Clover leaf manure spreader; Bryan disc; 2-horse cultivator; Feed cutter; Self feeder for hogs; Portable hog house; 2-seated surrey; Set double work harness; Several well made chicken coops; Burch walking plow; Fruit jars; Crockery, Some dishes and household furniture, and numerous other articles.

Warm lunch served on grounds.

TERMS OF SALE—Sums of $5.00 or under, cash. Sums over $5.00 a credit of 8 months will be given, by purchaser giving his note with approved security, without interest if paid when due, but if not so paid to bear 8% interest from date until paid and attorneys' fees. No property to be removed until settled for. 4% discount for cash on note amounts.

MEADE BAKER

Auctioneers, Rhodenbaugh & McNamara Clark Scholes, Clerk

Christian Church Notes

The Delta Alpha Class will have charge of the Sunday School next Sunday.

The Loyal Training Class will meet with Miss Flossie Keeler and brother, Clayton Keeler, next Friday evening.

The ladies of the Church have made plans to serve meals at the County Sunday School convention, May 22 and 23.

TWO TO-NIGHT for loss of appetite, bad breath, coated tongue, biliousness. Without griping or nausea

CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS

Set your liver right—only 25c

H. O. WILLIAMS

THE Abstracter

is able to furnish you with a complete Abstract of Title to any description of Real Estate in DeKalb County.

OFFICE
West Seventh Street
AUBURN

FIRE INSURANCE NOTARY PUBLIC

Try a want ad in the News.

Lehman's
CLOTHING HOUSE
MENS AND BOYS OUTFITTERS
810 CALHOUN STREET
Fort Wayne, Ind.

APRIL

Do You Ever Think of Tomorrow?

There is a class of people who do not and there is another class who do.

We find that the latter class is the one who gets along better in this world. It is that class who have a savings account in our bank and who are saving systematically of their weekly income.

The business men of our town would go to the walls before they new it if they did not look out for the morrow—did not plan ahead and prepare for a rainy day.

You can start a savings account in our bank now and you will find it a way of looking out for tomorrow.

Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank

Capital Stock, - $25,000

Spencerville, Ind.

The Bank of Personal Services

SPENCERVILLE

Miss Marcella Zimmerman is spending this week with her aunt, Mrs, Isabelle Baltsli, of Ft. Wayne.

Bernie Rhoads and family spent Sunday with his parents, Charles Rhoads and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. James Vallieu and two sons spent Sunday at Waterloo.

Mrs. Gertrude Markle and children and Mort Shutt spent Sunday at the home of Jack Beams and wife of Fort Wayne.

Walter Silberg of Toledo, and Miss Vera Silberg of Garrett, spent the weekend with their mother Mrs. M. J. Silberg and family.

C. G. Goldsmith and wife of Ft. Wayne, were Sunday afternoon guests of J. S. Hollabaugh and family.

Harold and Glen Bowser of near New Haven were weekend guests of their uncle, R. U. Bowser and family.

Members of the Lutheran Orchestra motored to Auburn Monday afternoon and visited friends at that place.

J. D. Markle and son of Fort Wayne spent Sunday afternoon here with relatives.

The Red Cross nursing class will hold an all day meeting at the K. of P. Hall next Monday.

Earl Stiman and family of Rehobeth, were Sunday guests of Ray Farver and family.

Mrs. Mary Hoover, Dwight Coolidge and family spent Sunday afternoon with friends at Hicksville.

William Sommers and wife were Friday guests of Jacob Balts and wife.

Miss Mary Provines of Auburn, is spending a few days with Donald Kimes and wife.

Miss Bina Zimmerman is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Carl Wilmot and family of Fort Wayne, a few days this week.

The Martha class of the Lutheran Sunday School were very pleasantly entertained Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Mandy Rhoades.

Mr. and Mrs. Rolla Moffit and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Rhoderfer, all of Auburn, were Sunday guests at the home of Jacob Balts and wife.

Start Them Right

Raise More Chicks

You can [illegible] by feeding the genuine and only

Conkey's

Buttermilk Starting Feed

[illegible]

Try It and You'll Never be Without It

[illegible]

Sold and Recommended by

[illegible]

$5.00 Deposited in this Bank Will Enroll You in the

FORD WEEKLY PURCHASE PLAN

◆ ◆ ◆

Most of your neighbors drive motor cars. They can go where and when they choose. Their cars play a large part in their daily life, furnishing them with quick and convenient transportation for both business and pleasure.

Realizing what the automobile means to the average family in bringing them greater enjoyment of life, we have arranged to extend the facilities of our bank to those who desire to become owners of Ford cars through the new Ford Weekly Purchase Plan.

Under this plan, you can begin with an initial deposit as low as $5.00. Then select the type of Ford car you want—Touring Car, Runabout, Coupe, Sedan, etc.—arrange to make weekly deposits on which interest will be computed at our regular savings rate.

Come in and let us further explain the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan to you, or, if you wish, go to the nearest Ford Dealer for further details.

Start today, and before you realize it you will be driving your own car.

◆ ◆ ◆

Farmer's & Merchants State Bank

SPENCERVILLE, IND.

Mrs. Jennie Steward is visiting with Mrs. Byron W[illegible] and other St. Joe friends part of this week.

Richard Culbertson and wife of Auburn, spent the weekend at the home of her daughter Mrs. George Henderson and family.

[illegible]

Samuel and Chrystal Wearley of Fort Wayne, and Miss Bertha Thornbaugh of Columbia City, were weekend guests in the Greeley Wearley home. Miss Ellen Lake was also a Sunday guest in the same home.

Honored by State

[illegible]

Sunday School Report.

The following is a true and correct report of the various Sunday Schools in this neighborhood for last Sunday.

Christian	95	$ 4.29
M. P.	68	5.68
Lutheran	89	5.06
M. E. Spencer	73	4.40
Lutheran	90	4.47
[illegible]	158	8.10
[illegible]	[illegible]	2.34
[illegible]	62	2.43
[illegible]	[illegible]	2.11
[illegible]	19	[illegible]

[illegible]

Fred Ulm is the owner of a new Ford Roadster.

C. R. Baumgartner, D V M

Veterinarians

OFFICE and HOSPITAL

SPENCERVILLE, - IND.

Phones—Office No. 7

F. W. Silberg, D V M

Stop Coughing

[illegible]

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

[illegible]

APRIL

THE JOY of LIVING

By SIDNEY GOWING
Illustrations by Ellsworth Young
Copyright 1922 by Sidney Gowing

AMY SNOOKS

SYNOPSIS.—Disliking the prospect of a month's visit to her austere aunt, Lady Erythea Lambe, at Jervaulx abbey, and her cousin, Alexander Lambe, Aimee, vivacious daughter of the Very Reverend Viscount Scroope, wanders into the park, there encountering a strange youth. He laughingly introduces himself as "Billy," American. The two ride on his motorcycle, the "Flying Sphinx," and part. With Georgina Berners, her cousin, Aimee sets out for Jervaulx. She decides that Georgina shall impersonate her at Jervaulx, while she goes on a holiday. Georgina's horrified protest is unavailing. Aimee again meets "Billy." He tells her his name is Spencer, and she gives hers as Amy Snookes, at present "out of a job." Billy offers to take her into partnership in selling the Sphinx. In a spirit of madcap adventure, she accepts. The two proceed to the town of Stanhoe, taking separate lodgings in Ivy cottage. That night Aimee visits Georgina and learns that the deception has not been discovered. She compels Georgina to continue the subterfuge. On a trial spin, with Billy, Aimee almost collides with a carriage in which are her aunt, Georgina and Alexander. The pair escape unrecognized. Georgina learns that Lord Scroope is coming to visit Lady Erythea and is in hopeless bewilderment. While Aimee is secretly visiting Georgina at Jervaulx, the place is burglarized. Aimee escapes. Police decide the thieves are "Jack the Climber" and "Calamity Kate," who travel on a motorcycle. Billy, who has shadowed Aimee to Jervaulx, follows the thieves. He is knocked out, but finds he has some costly emeralds. Realizing they must be part of the loot from Jervaulx, he starts for the abbey. He meets Aimee, with the police in pursuit. In a secure hiding place, a cave among the crag pits, Aimee tells him the whole story. He urges her that she make a frank confession to her father, but on reflection both realize Aimee's good name has been compromised by her two nights' stay at Ivy cottage. Assuring Aimee he has a plan to save her, Billy leaves her in the cave and, proceeding to Jervaulx, restores the emeralds to the astounded Lady Erythea.

CHAPTER XIII—Continued.

—6—

"Mr. Spencer, not being a policeman, uses his common sense," interposed Lady Erythea with extreme aridity. "Are you suggesting that he stole emeralds worth a fortune, for the pleasure of returning them with thanks—besides wounding himself on the head?"

Mr. Panke heaved a heavy sigh.

"No, my lady, I am endeavoring to collect facts that may help in the tracing of the thieves." The inspector ran through his notes, detailing the information Billy had given him during the first part of the story. "Full name, William Spencer, on your way from Beechwell to Stanhoe railway station, intending to catch the 2:15 a. m. mail train to London, when you encountered the thieves about 1:30 a. m. Is that correct?"

"Precisely," said Billy, annealing the statements into his memory. It would not do to forget any of them. The thought of the work he was giving the Recording Angel caused him not a tremor. He was thinking only of Aimee, hiding in her cave behind the bramble bush. "Do you want me to come to the station house?"

"Not necessary," said the inspector, after a moment's hesitation, "but I want to know where you can be found immediately in case anything further transpires—and your testimony will be wanted if we apprehend the thieves." He avoided Lady Erythea's eye.

"Overseas club, London, will find me. I've quarters there."

The inspector made a note.

"What is your occupation?"

"Motor engineer."

"Engineer?" queried the inspector, glancing at his hands.

"Well, say motor mechanic," said Billy grinning, "and proud of it."

"Are you employed with any firm?"

"I am on my own at present."

Inspector Panke closed his notebook with a snap.

"I must return to my duties, your ladyship. I congratulate you on recovering the emeralds." He bowed gloomily to Mr. Lambe and darted at Billy a parting glance that said: "Young man, however little you desire to see me again, I shall find you when I want you. I am Inspector Panke."

The door closed behind him.

"It is a pleasure," said Lady Erythea grimly, "to reduce the self-esteem of that very fatuous person." She turned to Billy with increased interest. "You are, it seems, a motor mechanic. And out of employment. Would you care for a situation as chauffeur? I can offer you," said Lady Erythea, "four pounds a week, and all found."

Billy was submerged by two waves of emotion. The first was a strangled desire for laughter. The second, an [illegible] determination to clutch at the offer, with its amazing possibilities [illegible] advantages that opened before [illegible] thought was a very fluid [illegible]

[illegible] he exclaimed.

[illegible]

[illegible] visiting; I found him philandering most indecorously with one of my maid-servants." She fixed Billy with her eye. "I trust you have no such propensity as that."

"I should," said Billy indignantly, "as soon think of drinking a gallon of petrol."

"Precisely," said Lady Erythea with approval. "Then I should like you to enter upon your duties today. Say this afternoon. There are quarters for you over the garage, and the uniforms of the man I discharged. You will only be required to go out once this evening. At five-thirty—" Lady Erythea checked herself. "But I forgot. You will require a day or two's rest. You have had a strenuous night, your head is injured—"

"That doesn't amount to a skeeter-bite, my lady," said Billy quickly. "My head's all right. I can be ready by this afternoon."

"Very well, if you are sure. It will be convenient. My coachman is away for the day. I believe the two motors are in order. Take the smaller one, the Panhard luggage-car, and meet the 5:30 train at Stanhoe. There will be a young woman on the train. She is coming here as parlor maid. Bring her and her boxes. You understand?"

"Sure—very good, my lady," said Billy. "What's her name?"

"The name is immaterial. She is for Jervaulx. It is curious," added Lady Erythea impatiently, "how my memory fails me. I forget the woman's name. Alexander, you remember I spoke to you of this matter? The girl from Scroope, that I engaged on the recommendation of your uncle—she was in his service. The daughter of one of his keepers—Lord Scroope gave her an exemplary character, she is coming on a fortnight's trial."

"Snooks was the name you told me," said Mr. Lambe.

"To be sure. The young person's name is Snooks," said Lady Erythea to Billy. "That will preclude all possibility of mistake. I regret, Spencer, that you would not allow me to recompense you, but I have no doubt that I have acquired an excellent chauffeur. And now—you will be glad of a bath and a meal."

She rang for the butler, and gave him an order. Mr. Tarbeaux and Billy departed in each other's company.

Alexander Lambe breathed heavily.

"My dear aunt," he said, "you are a law unto yourself, and I have known you do some remarkable things. But is it wise to engage as servant a man of whom you know nothing, without character or references?"

"Alexander," said his aunt, "you almost betray imbecility. What better references could I have than the restoration of the Lambe emeralds and the refusal of a reward, when the man could have made a fortune for himself without any risk of detection?"

Mr. Lambe was dumb.

"That abominable creature Boxall," said Lady Erythea, "had unexceptionable references, and was chauffeur eighteen months to the bishop of Latchester. You know what his record was here." She turned upon Alexander. "Do you, a shepherd of men, pretend to say that you think that young man anything but absolutely honest?"

"I observed him, and I am certain he is honest," said Alexander after a pause. "But—er—his manner is very peculiar."

"We must make allowances," proclaimed Lady Erythea, "for the independence of the American. In theory I have always believed it detestable. Actually I find it not unattractive."

CHAPTER XIV

The New Parlor Maid.

Aimee, sitting in the morning sunlight near the mouth of her burrow, heard a rustling among the bushes and at once dived back into shelter. Presently there was a soft whistle, which she answered. Mr. William Spencer parted the brambles very quietly and entered the cave.

"Billy!"

He clicked his heels together and touched his cap.

"Anything I can do for you, miss?" he said grinning. "Got a new job. Chauffeur to her ladyship. Four a week and all found."

"What!"

Billy sat down beside her and made his report. Aimee heard it, at first, with the air of Desdemona listening to Othello. Then she rolled on the sand in helpless spasms of laughter.

"How absolutely gorgeous," she panted, sitting up and wiping her eyes. "You've done splendidly. I wish I'd been there to hear you bluff the fat policeman. But—what's the good of the chauffeur's job, Billy? That will hamper you."

"Not a bit! It's great. I [illegible] at it. You see I've got a [illegible] now, right close [illegible] want to be. I'm your [illegible] And she's some old girl [illegible]

[illegible]

"Of course there's danger still. It wasn't any good my giving a false name. That would have been fatal in the end. But there's the trouble that they knew me as Spencer, in Stanhoe. I'm going off right now to try an' put that straight," said Billy. "I can see a light. Yes, I believe I can get away with it. That inspector will be a nuisance, I'm afraid. But he's a fool, anyway."

Aimee looked at him admiringly.

"What a lot of whoppers you must have told, Billy. Did you mind?"

Billy put a twig between his white teeth and bit it in half thoughtfully.

"Where I come from, we hate a liar," he said. "But there's just one time when a man can lie, an' it's up to him to do it. Mind? I—I enjoyed it."

"But I don't see how you can do it so well, if you've had no practice."

"It's wonderful how you fall into it, when there's something worth doin' it for," said Billy simply. "Well, I must get busy. I've got till the evening, when I fetch a hired girl from the station. She's from down your way. Name," he added, grinning, "of Snooks. What d'you think of that, partner?"

"What?" cried Aimee. "It must be Amy Snooks—daughter of Dad's second keeper, who was killed in the war. I know her as well as I know—myself. I gave you her name when you asked me mine—it was the first I could think of. You say Aunt has engaged her!"

"Yes. On your father's recommendation."

"How beastly awkward! Directly she sees Georgie the game's up!"

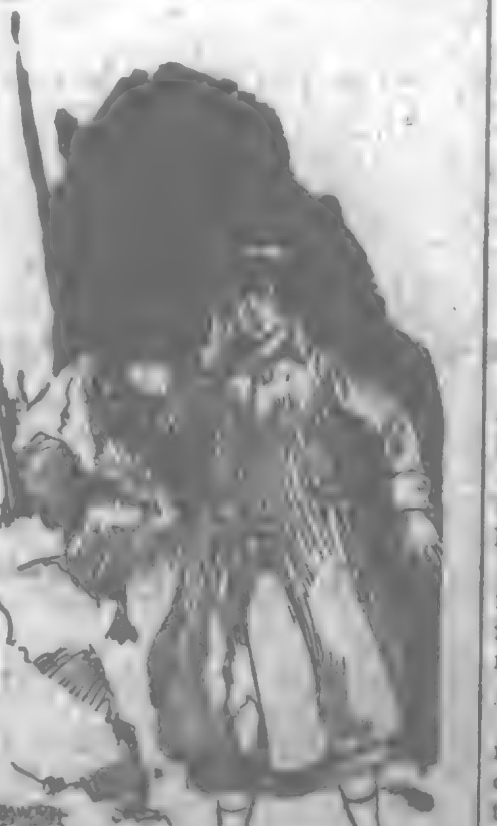
"That's rotten," said Billy seriously; "we've got enough on our hands as it is. If she wasn't a woman, I'd spill the car and put her out of action for quite awhile, so she couldn't give you away. As it is, seems to me the only thing is for me to get hold of your cousin Georgina an' show her how to keep the Snooks girl quiet. I think it can be done, if Georgina has any sense."

"Yes, that might do. I don't think we need worry much about Amy Snooks, after all. I wish I could get a word with Amy myself. She'd do any blessed thing I told her—even if it was to throw herself into a furnace. I can manage Amy. You'll just have to do your best, though. But look here, Billy," said Aimee earnestly, "you haven't told me yet how you're going to pull me out of it all. It's getting a worse tangle every hour. What's the plan?"

"I'll be back here about seven this evening," said Billy seriously, "and by then I'll bring you good news—you trust me. Gee! why didn't you remind me?" he exclaimed with self-reproach, dragging a paper parcel from his pocket; "you must be starving."

"I had some chocolate from the Sphinx's pannier."

"Well, try this." Billy exposed some rashers of bacon between slices of bread, and a lukewarm sausage. "I wish it was something better. They gave me a meal at the abbey, and I pinched these for you. And here's your blue dust-cloak from Ivy cottage.



Aimee Started to Her Feet in Sheer Panic.

Put that on. It'll cover the tear in your dress in case anyone came across you. I'll try an' raise a new skirt for you. An' now I've got to slide out and get to work."

He rose quickly, and was gone before she could say a word. Aimee went to the cave's mouth and watched him out of sight.

"I wonder what he'll do," she said to herself. [illegible] reflected on the situation. [illegible] Snooks, the new parlor maid, was [illegible] said so. The burglary, intervening, swamped all memory of it. But, after all, Lord Scroope's arrival would be worse than the burglary.

[illegible]

"It absolutely tears everything!" said Aimee desperately. "What am I to do? If only I'd told Billy! But even he wouldn't be able to do anything here."

She paced the floor of the cave. The bottom had dropped out of the entire scheme of things. Then her face lit up with a gleam of hope, and she stopped short, thinking swiftly.

"There might be time. It's frightfully risky. But if I don't try it I'm done for."

She buttoned up the dust-cloak with nimble fingers.

"As well be hung for a sheep as a lamb," said Aimee.

She left the cave, ran up to the crest of the crag-pit, and looked round cautiously. Then she picked up the skirts of the dust-cloak and scudded across the common like a hare.

* * * * * * *

The Panhard luggage-car from Jervaulx wound its way through the lanes, with Mr. William Spencer at the steering-wheel, clad in a dark green uniform overcoat with brass buttons. The time was 5:15 p. m.

The Panhard was running badly. In spite of Billy's overhaul, two of the cylinders misfired; presently the car stopped with a cough and splutter. Billy, using blood-curdling language anent the profligate Mr. Boxall, late chauffeur of Jervaulx abbey, got down and opened the bonnet. It took him several minutes to start the Panhard again, and when finally he arrived at Stanhoe railway station, the train from Burnt Ash was alongside the platform.

A painfully obvious policeman in plain clothes was lounging in the station approach. He did not waste a second glance on Billy; the driver of the Jervaulx abbey car had no interest for him. Billy, anxious to pick up his passenger, the disastrous parlor maid, hurried onto the platform.

He sighted his quarry at once. A young woman in a cheap black tight-fitting coat was standing by the luggage-van. Baggage checks are unknown in England. A tin trunk was hurled out of the van by a blind, invisible force, and Billy, approaching the passenger, raised his peaked cap politely.

"Are you for Jervaulx abbey?" he asked.

The young woman turned round.

"I'm the new parlor maid," she said primly in broad Eastshire dialect. "You might carry my box for me, if that ain't too heavy."

Billy's head swam. His fingers opened, and feebly closed again. His eyes bulged.

It was Aimee. Aimee in a black coat over a print dress, and sensible boots. Her bronze hair was drawn straight back and plaited into a respectable knob, her eyes were preternaturally solemn.

They passed out. Billy took his place at the wheel, Aimee seated herself beside him.

"I'll sit here," she said serenely, "and you can tell me about the place as we go. What's it like? They say her ladyship is something chronic."

Billy glanced at her dazedly, and let in the clutch. The transit of Stanhoe was made at something over the speed limit. When clear of the town, Billy gave the coughing Panhard a full throttle and roared along the Jervaulx road. He did not look at Aimee, who was staring straight in front of her. Billy switched the car down a narrow lane, covered by overarching trees, and stopped the engine. He turned to face Aimee.

"Partner," he said, "what in thunder does this mean?"

Aimee looked at him, and dissolved into spasms of laughter.

"What do you think of it, Billy?" she said. "Aren't I the complete Amy Snooks?"

"It don't go!" said Billy, almost fiercely. "Let me in on this. What have you been doing?"

"When you left me this morning, I remembered something positively awful. Dad was coming here this afternoon—at five o'clock."

Billy whistled with dismay.

"The police business had driven it right out of my head. And I couldn't consult you. I thought the only thing was to get to Scroope Towers and try to put it right. I knew there was a train about ten at Stanhoe, and I started for the station. But I never got there."

"Thank the powers you didn't!" said Billy fervently. "All the stations are watched. You'd never have passed through alone without getting pinched by the cops."

"Well, the train wasn't necessary. A car overtook me on the road—driven by a young man. He pulled up and offered me a lift."

"Oh!" said Billy.

"He was quite a good sort. Inclined to be a bit sentimental, but it was a fast car, and he was [illegible] driving. What's the [illegible]

There was an expression [illegible] face that she had not [illegible] He was [illegible]

[illegible]

head off one of the cylinders, and I heard him grumbling to the gardener about having to drive Dad to Jervaulx and back the same evening. I hid in the laurels till Grundle went to his dinner, and then I attended to the car—especially the magneto. I did it artistically. You can take it from me, the old 'bus will never leave Scroope today. Dad's visit is a washout. He's no time to get here except by car—I know he has to catch the ten o'clock mail train from Seabridge. He'll have to take the carriage there—and start early, too."

Billy emitted a stifled noise.

"It's all to save Dad pain and worry," said Aimee complacently. "One must consider one's parents. Never do to have him coming here just now."

"Great Christopher!" said Billy. "But that doesn't explain how—"

"I'm coming to that. I made a circuit through the Home wood to the cottage where Amy Snooks lives with her old grandmother. I tacked up and down in the offing till I saw grandmamma toddle away on her usual after-dinner visit to the woodcutter's wife, and I nipped indoors to have it out with my dear old Snooks. I found her packing for Jervaulx, and I told her what I wanted her to do.

"Amy Snooks is what you call stolid, and I've broken her in very well—but I'm bound to say she was absolutely paralyzed this time. But she surrendered, before I'd done with her. She just came to heel. It may surprise you, Billy, but she simply adores me. Amy never refused me anything in her life.

"Having melted her into flexible condition, I borrowed one of her print dresses (she hadn't another black one) and her second-best coat, and did my hair like hers. I'm jolly good at doing hair.

"To cut it short, I cleared out and tramped across country to Pilbrook station and took the afternoon train. Amy joined it with her two tin boxes at Burnt Ash, and I got into her carriage at the next stop. I gave her all the money I had, and made her go on to Seabridge with one of the boxes. She'll get herself lodgings there and have a good time till further orders—she can last a week, anyhow. I took the other box and came on here. And now, partner—what about it? Wasn't it a brain-wave?"

Billy took off his cap and made disorder of his honey-colored hair.

"You mean to tell me," he said dizzily, "that girl fell for it—just because you told her to?"

"Ah, you don't understand the feudal spirit," said Aimee complacently. "There have been Snooks in the Home wood ever since there were Scroopes in Scroope Towers. They help each other. When Amy and I were kids and went birds-nesting, she was always underneath when I fell out of the tree. She has irregular features, but a heart of gold. And, by the way, of course Aunt Erythea has never seen Amy—she engaged her on Dad's recommendation."

"But she's seen you!" exclaimed Billy, "when you crashed the Sphinx into her carriage."

"Only for half a second. She's blind as a bat. She'll never know me. Isn't it great, Billy?"

He looked at her thoughtfully.

"Great Caesar's ghost!" he said, explosively, "it is! You're right. The last place on earth those fool police would ever find you or look for you, is the house where the burglary happened. It's better than the cave, anyway. You'll be right under my eye; and among your own folk in case real trouble came. But—"

"But what?"

"Why, you can't do it! You, parlormaid to Lady Erythea? It's the acid test! Partner, you could never get away with it."

Aimee regarded him pityingly.

"Billy, I may not know anything about men," she said, "but you know, less than nothing about women. There isn't the woman living, from six years old upwards, that isn't a born actress when she has to be. Most of us are acting all day and every day—whether you guess it or not. I don't do that myself—that's why you and I get on. But I can! I can get away with it, Billy!"

He put on his cap with a bang.

"Then let's get on!" he gasped. "There's nothing else for it now. The boats are burned. Away for Jervaulx!" He leaned over and opened the rear door of the car. "Jump down, partner, and get in behind."

"I shan't! What for?"

"Get down, I tell you," said Billy, sternly. "I've been warned about this. If I'm seen [illegible] to parlor maids I get fired. In with you!"

Aimee obeyed like a lamb.

"This has set my nerve," groaned Billy, as he let in the clutch. "Here's where we [illegible]"

He drove at a furious pace till, turning into the park he approached the abbey and drew up at the side entrance. The door stood open, and Mr. Tarbeaux, seeing the car, came out as Amy descended.

"Miss Snooks?" he asked patronizingly.

"Yes," said Aimee shyly.

Mr. Tarbeaux beamed. In spite of the [illegible] the print skirt, he [illegible] a vision of [illegible] erect before the fire, knitting. She did not turn her head.

[illegible]

"The young person, my lady," said Mr. Tarbeaux softly.

CHAPTER XV

Exposed.

Lady Erythea laid aside her knitting, and picking up a lorgnette, inspected the new parlor maid with icy deliberation. Aimee, though presenting an unmoved front, trembled inwardly. There was a faint chance that her aunt might recognize the female cyclist. Lady Erythea's lips tightened to a thin line.

"I was given to understand," she said in the voice of counsel for the prosecution, "that you were considerably less prepossessing in appearance than I find you."

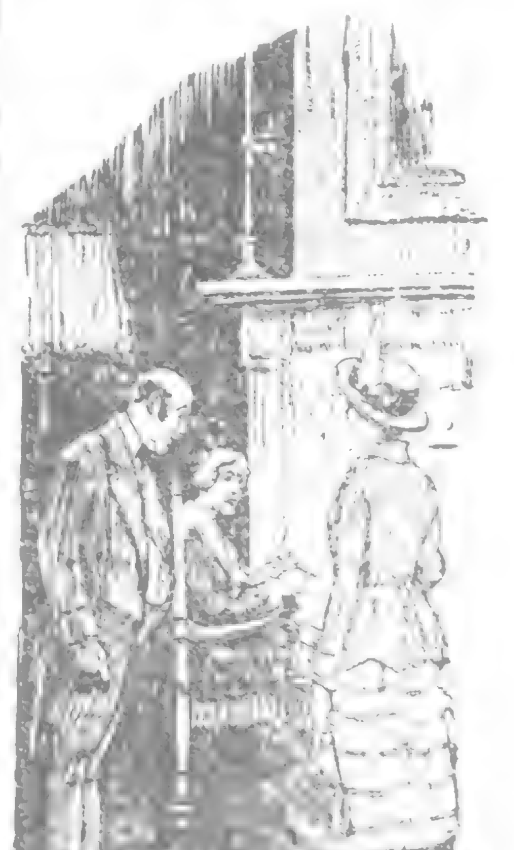
"Yes, m' lady," said Aimee meekly.

"H'm!" said Lady Erythea.

The lorgnette continued to direct itself at the parlormaid's face.

"Really, Anthony should wear stronger glasses," muttered Lady Erythea. The neatness of the girl, however, her demure air, and the hideous manner in which her hair was dressed, diluted her ladyship's disapproval a little.

"I need not examine you as to your capacity for your duties, or your character. These have been vouched for by Lord Scroope. My housekeeper will instruct you in the rules of the establishment, which all my domestics are required to keep rigidly. There is, however, one warning that I must give you."



"The Young Person, My Lady," Said Mr. Tarbeaux Softly.

She was interrupted by the arrival of the butler with a telegram. Lady Erythea opened it; its message was not unwelcome to her.

"Car broken down. Regret impossible arrive Jervaulx. No time. Must leave for Closeminster tonight.
"ANTHONY."

"There is no answer," she said to the butler. "Lord Scroope is prevented from coming. Cancel the orders I gave you regarding his arrival."

"Very good, my lady."

Aimee's heart leaped with joy. But her face remained unmoved. She continued to look demurely at the carpet.

"I was about to warn you," said Lady Erythea, "that your predecessor was discharged at a moment's notice for allowing one of my menservants to make advances to her of an amatory nature."

"I don't understand, my lady," said Aimee faintly.

"She permitted," said Lady Erythea grimly, "my chauffeur to kiss her."

The startled look of horror and disgust which Aimee's features respectfully expressed, carried conviction even to Lady Erythea's mind.

"It is an unpleasant subject," said her ladyship, "which I should have wished to spare myself mentioning to you. It was necessary, however, to clear the ground. I hope to hear good reports of you. You may go to the servants' hall."

Aimee bobbed to her mistress, and left the room quietly. Outside she found Mr. Tarbeaux waiting for her. Everything depends on the angle from which one regards so supreme a person as the butler. The new parlor maid looked at him timidly. Mr. Tarbeaux, with an air of mingled satisfaction and apprehension, conducted her to the women-servants' hall. The housekeeper was absent.

At Jervaulx the male and female servants were segregated in separate apartments for meals. Mr. Tarbeaux took his charge to a room next the vast kitchens, where a meat tea was in progress, presided over by a cook of vast [illegible]. The pageboy was the only male in the room. Mr. Tarbeaux presented the newcomer in form.

"Quite right," said Aimee. "I am your cousin, Aimee. And that's my cousin, Georgina Berners."

(TO BE CONTINUED)

[illegible]

MOTHER OF LARGE FAMILY

Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to Other Mothers

Windom, Minn.—"I was so run-down that I was just good for nothing. I was to become the mother of my ninth child, and I thought I did not have the strength to go through with it. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has surely done all I could ask it to do and I am telling all my friends about it. I have a nice big baby girl and am feeling fine. You may use this letter to help other sick mothers."—Mrs. C. A. MOEDE, Box 634, Windom, Minn.

My First Child

Glen Allen, Alabama.—"I have been greatly benefited by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for bearing-down feelings and pains. I was troubled in this way for nearly four years following the birth of my first child, and at times could hardly stand on my feet. A neighbor recommended the Vegetable Compound to me after I had taken doctor's medicines without much benefit. It has relieved my pains and gives me strength. I recommend it and give you permission to use my testimonial letter."—Mrs. IDA RYE, Glen Allen, Alabama.

SPOHN'S DISTEMPER COMPOUND

A safe, dependable and effective remedy for Coughs, Colds, Distemper, Influenza, Heaves and Worms among horses and mules. Absolutely harmless, and as safe for colts as it is for stallions, mares or geldings. Give "Spohn's" occasionally as a preventive. Sold at all drug stores.

SPOHN MEDICAL CO. GOSHEN, IND. U.S.A.

NR
25 TABLETS
NR Jrs

NR To-NIGHT Tomorrow Alright

NR A vegetable aperient, adds tone and vigor to the digestive and eliminative system, improves the appetite, relieves Sick Headache and Biliousness, corrects Constipation.

Used for over 30 Years

Chips off the Old Block

NR JUNIORS—Little NRs

One-third the regular dose. Made of same ingredients, then candy coated. For children and adults.

SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST

WATCH THE BIG 4

Stomach-Kidneys-Heart-Liver

Keep the vital organs healthy by regularly taking the world's standard remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles—

LATHROP'S GOLD MEDAL HAARLEM OIL

The National Remedy of Holland for centuries. At all druggists in three sizes. Guaranteed as represented.

Look for the name Gold Medal on every box and accept no imitation

Laxatives Replaced By the Use of Nujol

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication. Try it today.

Nujol

[illegible]

What is more [illegible] than [illegible] others [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]?

CASTORIA

[illegible]

In Use For Over 30 Years

[illegible]

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

Sunday School 'Lesson'

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

Copyright, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.

LESSON FOR APRIL 29

RUTH THE FAITHFUL DAUGHTER

LESSON TEXT—Book of Ruth.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thy people shall be my people and thy God my God.—Ruth 1:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story of Ruth.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Ruth and Naomi.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Ruth's Choice and Its Outcome.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Secret of Ruth's Noble Life.

I. Ruth's Connection With Naomi (Chapter 1:1-15). On account of famine in Bethlehem of Judah, Naomi with her husband and two sons sojourned in the land of Moab. After the death of her husband her two sons married Moabitish women. After a time her sons died also. After the death of her sons Naomi resolved to return to her homeland, having heard that the Lord had visited His people in giving them bread. They went to Moab to escape trouble but only got into more. It was not until Naomi was thus chastised that she resolved to return. Naomi had the good sense to recognize that the hand of the Lord was upon her for good. When the time came for her to go Ruth and Orpah accompanied her, for a distance. This she permitted but determined to place before them frankly the difficulties which would necessarily confront them. It was this frank presentation of the difficulties and her repeated urging them to go back that called forth from Ruth the expression of her noble choice.

II. Ruth's Noble Choice (1:16-18). Much as Naomi loved her daughters-in-law, she would not have them go into this matter blindly. She told them the worst that could come upon them. This principle ought to be carried out by us in all our relations in life. In business the spirit of frankness should be manifest. At home we should deal with each other in the most straightforward way. The same thing should characterize our behavior in the church and society. Note the difficulty which confronted Ruth:

1. No Chance to Marry Again. Naomi told her that she had no more sons for whom she could wait. In that day to be unmarried was the greatest disgrace. Society differed then from now.

2. She Must Renounce Her Gods. Her idolatrous worship could not be carried on in the land where God's people dwelt. This was delicately touched upon when Orpah went back (v. 15). Orpah went back when it was plain there was no chance to get a husband. Now Naomi puts an additional test upon Ruth, that of giving up her religion. Ruth was equal to the occasion. Her mind was fully made up. She was willing to accept as her God the one who was able to produce in his subjects the nobility of character she had observed in Naomi. Naomi's very frankness in dealing with her caused Ruth to be more determined to cast her lot with her. Ruth's position was so definite and unfaltering that the very expressions have come down to us in words which "no poetry has out-rivaled, and no pathos has exceeded, and which has gone through centuries with the music that will not let them be forgotten." She was determined to share Naomi's journey, her home, her lodge, her lot in life, and her grave in death, whatever that would be. To crown it all she would renounce her heathen gods and worship Jehovah.

III. Blessings Which Attended Ruth's Faithfulness. Ruth was never sorry for her choice, because—

1. She Found the True God (1:16). Instead of her heathen gods who were unable to help her she now had a living God, the God of Israel, as her God.

2. She Found Human Friends. (Chapter 2). As she went to glean in the field she was led to the field of Boaz, a man of wealth and grace. The servants of Boaz treated her with consideration. Even Boaz gave instructions for special consideration to be given her.

3. A Good Husband and a Happy Home (3-4). She not only secured a husband, but a man of God who had an abundance of this world's goods.

4. An Honored Place in the Israelitish Nation (4:13-17). Though she had to forsake her own people she became one of a nobler people.

5. She Became a Link in the Chain of Christ's Ancestry (4:[illegible]; compare Matthew 1:5). The one who fully decides for Christ and gives up all for him shall get a hundredfold in this life, and in the world to come eternal life.

Sharing Misfortunes.

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

PIGS' PASTIME

"Grunt, grunt," said Grandfather Porky Pig.

"Can't you think up anything new to say?" inquired Miss Ham.

"Nothing," said Grandfather Porky Pig, "which better tells the way I feel than those two expressive words, 'Grunt, Grunt'."

"Well," said Miss Ham, "I will admit that 'squeal, squeal,' are two words of which I'm particularly fond, but still you begin all conversations, it seems to me, with 'Grunt, Grunt.'

"Perhaps we should not call them two words. After all, they're only one."

"Now be careful," said Grandfather Porky Pig. "Don't try to be too fussy about words or you'll get all mixed up. You were getting in pretty deep when you were saying that the two words, after all, 'were only one.' Curious speech, that."

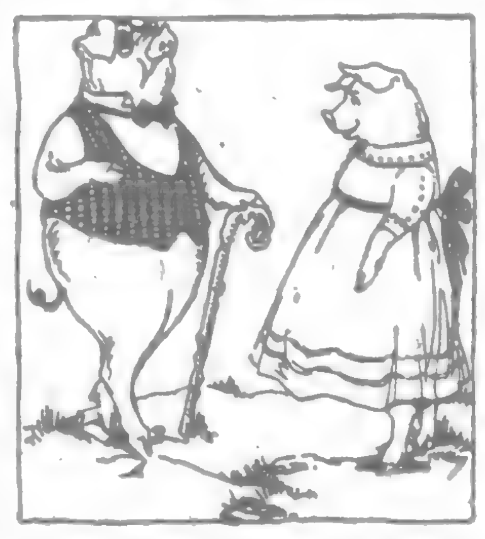
"What do you mean by saying I was getting in deep?" asked Miss Ham. "Deep in what?"

"Deep in mistakes," said Grandfather Porky. "You were getting beyond your depth in what you knew. That can be done. Oh, yes, one can get beyond one's depth in more than the water.

"When people try to talk about something which is beyond their knowledge they get in too deep, too. They get all confused and mixed up.

"That is what I mean.

"You said I began all conversations woth 'Grunt, Grunt.' Maybe I do. I can think of no better way of beginning a conversation, and surely a conversation must be begun somehow.



"I Can Always Be Sure of Myself."

"You can't just plunge into a conversation right in the middle. That isn't polite, and it wouldn't be fair to the conversation.

"It would surprise it too much.

"Yes, the best way is to have a good beginning. Now, I say 'Grunt, Grunt' just as some would say:

" 'How-do-you-do?'

"That's my way."

"You almost speak as though a conversation had feelings," said Miss Ham.

"A conversation," she continued, "wouldn't care if you did jump right into the middle of it."

"You can't tell," said Grandfather Porky. "Very strange things happen.

"But you're not letting me get far in my talk," he added.

"Dear me, did you have something else to say?" asked Miss Ham.

"Of course," said Grandfather Porky. "I have something else to say. I merely begin by 'Grunt, Grunt' and then I grunt a long, interesting conversation."

"I'd let some one else call it interesting," said Miss Ham.

"Perhaps no one will," said Grandfather Porky. "I thought I'd make sure of some one and so I said it myself. I can always be sure of myself."

"It's something that you're pleased with yourself," said Miss Ham, as she twisted her little tail.

"Well, let me hear what you have to say," she added. "I know you want to tell me."

"Not unless you want to hear," said Grandfather Porky.

"If I should say I didn't you'd be a sad pig," said Miss Ham.

And, as Porky knew that was the truth, he didn't say anything more about being anxious that she should want to hear him, but began to talk right away.

"I heard the other day that everyone had a favorite pastime.

"That meant that everyone had a favorite amusement or way of passing time pleasantly and enjoyably.

"And so I decided we should have a pastime—we pigs.

"The pastime which we would decide upon as our favorite [illegible]

"The pastime which receives the greatest number of votes will be chosen."

So all the pigs were called, and [illegible]

And [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

For a light, sweet dough set your sponge tonight with Yeast Foam

Nothing equals the thrill of pride that comes from a fine baking of home-made bread made with your own hands to supply your own family table.

Send for free booklet "The Art of Baking Bread"

Northwestern Yeast Co.
1730 North Ashland Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

Woman Expert Bellringer.

Mrs. Arthur Shurtleff of Boston is said to be the only native American woman bellringer who has succeeded in ringing a "peal." On a recent visit to England Mrs. Shurtleff astonished veteran bellringers there with her perfect mastery of the bell ropes.

An executive is one who knows what ought to be done, and selects the man to do it.

Among the minor annoyances probably simplified spelling is the most conspicuous.

For true blue, use Red Cross Ball Blue. Snowy-white clothes will be sure to result. Try it and you will always use it. All good grocers have it.—Advertisement.

When one devours a book it indicates a taste for literature.

GET IN THE MOVIES! Wonderful opportunity, big demand for new faces. The chance of a lifetime. My book, "The Way to Get in the Movies," tells all. Price one dollar. W. F. BASSETT, Box 518, Hazelwood Sta., PITTSBURGH, PA.

Make Big Money—Be Independent—Start Your Own Business. Manufacturing Automobile and Furniture Polish. Send us 25c and we will mail you formula for one of the very best polishes made. Covers all scratches on surface, leaving a high luster. Anyone can mix the ingredients, which can be purchased from your local dealer. Be the first one in your community to start this profitable business. Unlimited Profits. WASHINGTON POLISH CO., 325 10th St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

WHY BUY ALFALFA HAY? GROW IT! We have genuine Dakota grown seed. Write for sample and price. FARMERS' ALFALFA SEED COMPANY, RAPID CITY, S. D.

HOUSE CLEANING TIME IS HERE. 50c brings World's best rug cleaning formula. WILBUR KLUGH, Hartford City, Indiana.

Hemstitching and Picoting Attachment. Fits any sewing machine. Easily adjusted. Fully guar't'd. $2.50 prepaid. Full instructions. Art Mfg. Co., 14 Art Bldg., Hamtramck, Mich.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM Removes Dandruff-Stops Hair Falling Restores Color and Beauty to Gray and Faded Hair 60c and $1.00 at Druggists. Hiscox Chem. Wks. Patchogue, N. Y.

HINDERCORNS Removes Corns, Callouses, etc., stops all pain, ensures comfort to the feet, makes walking easy. 15c. by mail or at Druggists. Hiscox Chemical Works, Patchogue, N. Y.

Comfort Baby's Skin With Cuticura Soap And Fragrant Talcum

Soap 25c, Ointment 25 and 50c, Talcum 25c.

W. N. U., FORT WAYNE, NO. 17—1923.

10 Cents Gives Charming New Color Tone to Old Sweaters

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES—dyes or tints as you wish

Foolish One Is Heard From.

There are all sorts of foolish ways to spend money, including that of the Massachusetts man who offers $5,000 for automobile license No. 1.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sure Relief FOR INDIGESTION

BELL-ANS FOR INDIGESTION 25 CENTS

6 BELL-ANS Hot water Sure Relief

BELL-ANS

25¢ AND 75¢ PACKAGES EVERYWHERE

RESCUED LADY IN DISTRESS

Indianapolis Citizen Probably Wondered Later Just Why He Obeyed Order to "Beat It."

One night several weeks ago a nonfrivolous citizen, in his quite proper sedan, was driving sedately along on his homeward way. The shades of night had fallen. No air of mystery pervaded the city, and all was well.

Bangety-bang-bangety began the hood over his engine. Something was coming loose. He drew up to the curb and opened the door to get out to see about the thing.

He opened the door to get out. He didn't get out because—a woman tore open the rear door of the car on the opposite side and sprang into the back seat, whacked him on the shoulder, and cried:

"Beat it, honey, beat it, they're raidin' me again!"

A few minutes later, about twenty blocks away, an automobile with a loose hood rattled up to the curb. It contained a man in the front seat and a woman in the rear seat. The man was heard to say to the woman:

"Now you beat it—and get out of here!"—Indianapolis Star.

WAS BY NO MEANS SATISFIED

Modern Girl Made That Clear by Her Outspoken Opinion Concerning Well-Meaning Parents.

"Did you tell her that she could not go to that party?"

"I did."

"Did you explain to her that we considered it not a fit place for our daughter to be seen?"

"Yes."

"You know it is not enough merely to deny a young person's request. You should always explain your reasons. I trust you told her of the dangers of a promiscuous gathering?"

"I did."

"And warned her of the folly of late hours; the hurt of gossiping tongues; in short you did your best to make her see that it is for her welfare that we are denying this seeming bit of pleasure?"

"I did all that."

"And is she now satisfied to forego this needless amusement and remain contentedly at home with us?"

"She is not."

"What does she say?"

" 'Oh, gee! ma, you and pa are so far behind the times you don't know anything.' "—Detroit Free Press.

Chair Named for Englishman.

The morris chair, which was once considered essential to the comfort and appearance of every home, in living room and library, was named for William Morris, an Englishman, and yet it is distinctively an American product. Latter-day critics are inclined to condemn the morris chair on artistic grounds, yet its comfort and utility can hardly be denied. Where the morris chair is known abroad, it still retains the same name and is regarded as strictly American in its origin.

Not What He Thought.

"We were at their house for dinner the other night and his wife took a shot at him."

"With a revolver?"

"No, with sarcasm."—Detroit Free Press.

When two live cheaper than one they feel that way.

In every way, too, the days are getting longer and longer.

Europe is getting no better and no better every day in every way.

London women dine better than men. Well, the men probably pay the bill.

An economic expert is any wage earner who keeps four small sons in shoes.

Paris doctor says appendicitis comes from mouth-breathing. You can take your choice.

A writer dwells on where the bee remains in winter while everybody else doesn't care.

Read Fables and Live Long.

The problem of how to live to the century mark has been solved again.

This time the wizard is Prof. Pierre Armaingaud of Bordeaux, France, who is ninety-four years old. He says any one can live to 100 if they follow his example and read La Montaigne's fables regularly every night before going to bed.

"For sixty years I have never missed my Montaigne," Armaingaud told the French Academy of Medicine. "He is worth all medicines in the world."

Some of the offended doctors present, however, pointed out that La Montaigne himself had a different view of life, as explained in a passage where he says: "Long life or short life, it's all the same when one's dead. All your life you are living at the cost of life."

Big Holders of Timber Lands.

A little more than one-third of the virgin timber supply of this country is now owned by the federal and state governments.

When the price of $5 groceries goes to $10, most people change the variety of their groceries.

When do you really "wake up" in the morning?

Do the golden morning hours find you wide-awake and fit, or do they find you sleepy and tired?

Coffee is a common cause of sleepless nights, which bring drowsy days with their usual train of neglected opportunities.

Why not get a new, firm grip on yourself by leaving off coffee for awhile and drinking Postum, a wholesome, delicious, [illegible] beverage, with a fine, full-bodied flavor you will like.

You can drink Postum any time, day or night, without interference with nerves or digestion.

Postum FOR HEALTH

"There's a Reason"

[illegible]

[illegible] Postum Cereal Company, Inc., Battle Creek, Michigan

APRIL

Reese Bros. Will Sell All Their Property in St. Joe at

ABSOLUTE AUCTION

SAT. MAY 5

at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

Two large fireproof business properties on south side of West Main Street in St. Joe, Indiana.

Desciptions of Properties

One two story cement block building with full basement, furnace heat, electric lights, large plate glass display windows, well ventilated and well lighted. This building is now occupied by the E. Leighty Grocery

Also a brick store room, two story, now occupied by Schlosser Bros. cream station.

Personal Property as follows:

Corrugated lumber shed located on rear of lots occupied by store buildings. Easy to move and will be sold in three sections or as a whole. Will make splendid garage, hen house, machine shed, etc. Will save any farmer money. About 100 cement blocks, gasoline filling station pump, some store fixtures, shelving, etc.

A Genuine Auction

The owners, who are non-residents, have commissioned Drake Bros. of Montpelier, Ohio, to sell these valuable properties at auction without any upset price, reserve, by-bids, or protection. MAKE ARRAMGEMENTS WITH YOUR BANKER. Come to this sale and take advantage of any sacrifice the owners may have to make. If it sells too high, leave it alone. But if it sells too cheap, buy it yourself.

FREE! 10 Cash Prizes FREE!

Every person gets a free ticket at opening of sale. Meet us at 2:30 p. m.

Terms on Real Estate

25 % cash on sale day. Balance on long time at 6 %. Possession in 30 days.

TERMS ON PERSONAL PROPERTY, Cash

Reese Bros. Owners

DRAKE BROS., Auctioneers

Montpelier, Ohio

NEWS OF THE TOWN

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Price visited relatives in Fort Wayne Sunday.

S. D. Gee has purchased a new Ford coupe.

Leave your order for carnations for Mothers Day at the News office.

Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Myers and [illegible], of Hicksville spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. [illegible]

Mr. and Mrs. Fred [illegible] spent [illegible] at [illegible] with [illegible] Henry [illegible] who is [illegible]

[illegible]

Mr. and Mrs. Milo Provines and children of near Auburn spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Gee.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sechler of Fort Wayne are moving [illegible] into the Frank Sechler residence.

Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Brown of Auburn spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. George [illegible]

Simeon [illegible] of Auburn [illegible] of Fort Wayne were Sunday guests [illegible] with Mrs. [illegible]

[illegible]

H. R. [illegible], M. D.

[illegible]

File your Mortgage Exemption with E. A. [illegible], St. Joe.

[illegible]

[illegible]

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hickman entertained Sunday Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Bayliss and sons [illegible] of New [illegible] Ohio, and Dr. M. L. [illegible] of Toledo, Ohio.

The Culture Club [illegible]

Frank L. Millhouse

[illegible]

Renew your subscription.

O. E. Ginther was at Toledo over Sunday.

Cabbage and tomatoe plants at the News office

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Northrup spent Friday afternoon and night with Will Hamilton and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Haner of Butler, were Sunday afternoon guests of Craig Sheffer and wife.

Mrs. Vina Fish spent Wednesday and Thursday with Hicksville relatives.

Mrs. Pauline McDaniels spent over Sunday in Fort Wayne, visiting with her husband and son.

For Sale—22 acres of land for sale, $50.00 per acre.

Mrs. Mary Shuff.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Henley and three children and Mrs. Blanche Leighty were recent Hicksville visitors.

Dell Crawford and wife and Asa Crawford and wife of Kunkle, Ohio, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Termon.

The children in the public school of Auburn have saved $3,150 since the week before Christmas when school banking was started.

Lost, Strayed or Stolen: A large single shovel plow blade. Its value not mentioned. Finder please leave at The News office.

The Nathan Grain Coal yards are under-going improvements. The floors of some of the bins are being concreted.

Mrs. Emma Skilling of Baltimore Md., came Sunday evening for a week's visit with her mother, Mrs. Catherine Curie and other relatives.

Mrs. Clyde Havens visited her husband at the Hope Methodist hospital at Fort Wayne, Monday and Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kees of Marion, were over night guests Saturday of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Woodcox.

St. Joe is now getting mail off of B. & O. train No. 10, from Chicago. The first was received Tuesday. No. 10 is due here about 1:30 p. m.

Rev. C. H. Havens is reported much improved since his operation and is expected to be able to be brought home Sunday or Monday.

Charles Collins who was operated on at Peru last week for a double hernia and also for appendicitis is reported to be doing fine.

Mrs. J. W. Hart received a box of wintergreen berries from her sister-in-law, Mrs. C. M. Coburn of Hesperia, Michigan, Thursday morning.

Mesdames John Benninghoff, Jr. Wm. Benninghoff and Guy Pettit of Fort Wayne and Mesdames O. E. Ginther and Paul Curie, were guests on Wednesday of last week of Mrs. F. B. Leighty.

O. J. Burnier has been re-elected president of the Union Township Sunday School Association. Mr. Burnier has remained active in Sunday School work since he left St. Joe several years ago.

The street lights are certainly on the BUM. Monday night there were not less than six out of commission. I wonder if bulbs the size required are no longer on the market?

Mrs. Everett Mavis and children of Auburn, spent over Wednesday night with her [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. Louis [illegible] The children [illegible] Sunday [illegible] were Mrs. Sechler and son Merritt [illegible]

Miss Susan Sechler entertained at Sunday dinner her sister, Mrs. Rose Widney. Mrs. Harriett Draggoo was a supper guest.

GLASSES—$2.50 up, Benj. F. Griest, Eyesight specialist, American Bldg., Hicksville, Ohio.

Mrs. Anna Dilley will spend from Thursday of this week until the first of next visiting relatives at Ft. Wayne and Albany.

Mrs. Fred Badman and son, Harry, of Lima, Ohio, visited their daughter and sister, Mrs. Charles Brown and family northeast of town from Saturday until Tuesday.

Post master, Samuel Armstrong of St. Joe, had made some complaints to Washington concerning certain unsatisfactory postal service from the railways here and on Tuesday the Assistant Chief Clerk of railway mail service from Cincinnati was sent here to clear up those defects.

Wilbur Campbell of Auburn was a Saturday night guest of Howard Williams. Sunday the two gentlemen with their friends the Misses Carrie Davidson and Kathryn Curie motored to Auburn and were dinner guests in the former's home. They visited Angola in the afternoon.

The Concord township Home Economic Club met at the home of Mrs. William Hamilton Friday, April 20. The subject for the day was "Beautifying the Home." Leader, Mrs. W. J. Staman. "Living and Dining Room Floor and Wall Coverings," Mrs. Elsa Fetters. "Bed Room Furnishings," Mrs. Lloyd Draggoo. "Kitchen Furnishings," Mrs. Fred Elson. Twenty-five members responded to roll call with some household hint. Ten new names were added to the membership of the club.

Those who attended the funeral Rudolph Saurer Sunnay afternoon were, Mr. and Mrs. Frank May of Rolleys Corners, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Feller, James May, Charles Barkle and family, Ida Wolf of Auburn, Mr. and Mrs. Page Hathaway and daughter, Jennie, of Corunna, Mr. and Mrs. William Doll and son, Chester, of Waterloo, Mrs. Horace Walford and granddaughter, Dovear Roffner, of Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Christ Feller and family of Fort Wayne, Mrs. Milton Hathaway and son, Clood, and Fred Feller and sons, John and Charley, of Altona.

A Success

The supper given last Saturday night for the benefit of the Band was a success, due to the co-operation and good community spirit. The Band wants to thank the people for their generous giving toward the supper and the ladies who worked in various ways, also the Lutheran Church for the use of the basement.

The total receipts for the evening were $60.85. Again we thank you all.

St. Joe Community Welfare Band.

Lutheran Notes

This is to invite you to the Lutheran Church next Sunday morning at 10:30. The sermon will be for the edification of the church. Come and worship.

The Sunday School opening exercises will be conducted by the [illegible] Mr. [illegible]ingham's [illegible] Come. Be there promptly at [illegible]

S. D. [illegible], Pastor.

GARDEN PLANTS

[illegible]

CARNATIONS

[illegible]

NEWS OFFICE

L 917

58U

MAY

L 912

MAY

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXXVII — ST. JOE DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, MAY 3, 1923 — No. 18

Ford Sedan Burns

O. E. Ginther was forced to jump from his Ford sedan and watch it go up in smoke last Wednesday morning along the Leo road about five miles north of Ft. Wayne.

Mr. Ginther was coming from Fort Wayne and was startled when he discovered unusual heat and smoke coming up thru the floor at his feet. Presently a blaze followed and pefore he could stop the car he jumped, taking a roll in the dust. The car ran to the side of the road and into a fence and when it stopped soon such parts as were inflamable, except the four tires, were destroyed.

To top off the situation, while Ginther was away telephoning his accident, three good tires of the four not burned because of the protection of the fenders, were stolen from the wheels. The machine was insured for fire.

Agents Wanted

The J. R. Watkins Company will employ a lady or gentleman agent in St. Joe. Watkins Products are known everywhere and our salespeople make big incomes. Investigate this opportunity. Full particulars and valuable samples sent free to hustlers who mean business. Write today, The J. R. Watkins Company, Dept. 88, Columbus, Ohio.

Child Health Conference

A Child Health Conference will be held at Spencerville, May 7th. and at St. Joe, May 8th., with Dr. Ada Schweitser, of Indianapolis, in charge. The conference is conducted by the Child Hygiene Division of the State Board of Health and deserves the attention of every parent in the community. These will be all day meetings.

The work is done free of charge by the state to interest every one in more frequent examination of children to determine whether they have any defects or habits which if corrected would make them more fit. Many children are backward in school because of physical defects which have never been discovered because the child has never received a thorough physical examination.

On Monday eve, May 7, a special program will be held jointly by Spencer and Concord Townships, at the Spencerville Community Hall. There will be five reels of pictures and a lecture accompanying on child welfare. This is a wonderful opportunity for parents to give their children the best opportunity in the care of their health and developement.

Those from St. Joe who will take part in the literary part of the program are as follows:
Cornet Duet, Louetta Daily and Robert Johnson. Vocal solo, Alice Tustison. Reading, Katherine Kinsey. Solo, Dorothy Scholes.

FEED

Hominy, Bran, Middlings, Tankage and many other feeds.

We have a full line at our elevator having just shipped in several carloads.

Cars are still scarce and feed mills are sold way ahead. Don't put off getting your feed until the last minute.

COAL

We have it and only the best grades. Try our Hocking and West Virginia.

We advise laying in your winter coal it looks like it will go higher.

Give your orders to Bert Jackson he will take care of you.

The St. JOE ELEVATOR

Samuel Keesler, Mgr. Grain Dept. — Bert Jackson, Mgr. Coal Dept.

Call on us—glad to see you. Come in whether you want anything or not.

The Lure of a Dog Fight

A public speaker once said: "There are not many moral teachers who can hold the attention of a crowd against the lure of a dog fight."

Neither will the stereotyped, dignified, highbrow advertisement appeal to the average reader, like one that has a live kick in it that will make him sit up and take notice. We want your banking business. We would like to have you as a customer. We come right out frankly and say so, without frills. We have a good bank. The more customers we have the better the service we can render. We offer fair, square, honest treatement. That's the "Word with the bark on it."

St. Joe Valley Bank—A State Bank

Blood Poison Results

D. C. McCann is suffering in the Garrett hospital with blood poisoning in his hand and arm, resulting from a scratch he received on his thumb a week ago Tuesday while cutting timber.

The scratch itself might have not resulted in any alarm had it not been for the poison ivy vines which came in contact with the sore as he continued to work that day. The poison began its effect yet the same day and by morning of the next day he was in a serious condition.

His hand and arm was lanced four times before he was taken to the hospital Sunday and then they were lanced eight times. A late report is that he is getting better.

On Intermediate Credit

The following article which recently appeared in the Chicago Tribune, is printed at the request of the officials of the St Joe Valley Bank:

"Wallace's Farmer, April 6, 1923, castigates the Chicago Tribune's quotation on intermediate credit, which reads as follows: 'It can not cure their (the farmers) troubles, because their fundamental needs are higher prices for their products and cheaper marketing costs, not facilities for getting deeper into debt'.

In the same article Wallace's Farmer accuses a level headed man like the late Bourke Cockran of New York of being sufficiently misinformed on this subject because he made a statement in a debate in congress that since every one with money, including the banking business, is quite as anxious to loan as any borrower is to obtain, the only fair and sensible deduction from these statements is that the farmer through this measure proposes that he shall be able to obtain more money on his property than the property is worth.

Wallace's Farmer's own comment is, 'The bankers argue, of course, that intermediate credit is already being provided after a fashion; that the farmer can borrow for periods of a year or more. So he can, but he must do it by a succession of ninety-day notes. Any time that the banker is being pressed for funds as in the crisis of a couple of years ago, he can call the loan, regardless of whether the farmer is in shape to sell the crop or the live stock by which the loan was secured.'

The Tribune and Bourke Cockran are right. Wallace's Farmer is in the wrong.

No real bank, having the interests of its depositors and borrowers at heart does or did the things Wallace's Farmer accuses them of. I have been borrowing money from my bank in good and bad times for over twenty years, and never has my bank called a loan on me, regardless of whether I was in shape to sell my crop or the live stock by which my loan was secured.

It depends upon yourself and the bank. If you are one of those farmers who is trying to live without working, the bank soon notices it, too. A man working to live can always borrow all the money he needs.

Intermediate credits will not help the farmer nor any [illegible] man. The only thing [illegible] the farmer is [illegible] work as every [illegible]

[illegible]

A Reading Nation

It doesn't mean much to a citizen of this community to be told that newspapers and magazines of this country use 2,710,000 tons of white paper a year—but read on. There are more than 22,000 newspapers in the United States, of which about 18,000 are small-town weeklies The circulation of all these papers runs well over 50,000,000 every week.

This tremendous output of printed matter gives every American an opportunity to keep informed as to what is going on in the world, and in the community about him, for the service of the average paper is almost perfect. When any event of importance transpires there is no waiting for the news. The public gets it within a few hours after it happens instead of weeks and months later, as was the case in the days of our grandfathers.

The man or woman too poor to spend a few cents for a newspaper does not exist in this country outside of poor houses and charitable institutions. But even these institutions usually take a number of papers so that those they shelter can read, understand and appreciate. With the amount of news and information printed in the dailies and weeklies of this country there is no excuse for any person who can read to be ignorant of current events or of what is going on in their neighborhood, their state and the world at large. Read your paper—not just the headlines; not just because you think you are helping the editor out; but because it is your friend, your companion, a teacher and a guide. No other nation on earth possesses the intelligence; or enjoys the prosperity of America. And that is largely due to the fact that in no other nation are there as many newspaper readers.—Syracuse Journal.

Notice To Patrons

In order to give The News force an opportunity to attend all sessions of the State M. P. Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Union which will be held here at the M. P Church next week, Tuesday evening, Wednesday and Thursday, the paper will go to press Tuesday noon. Therefore all copy must be in our hands not later than Monday night. We prefer that all ad copy be sent in Saturday of this week.

Lutheran Notes

The sermon on the "Second Day of Creation," will be preached next Sunday evening at 7:30 at the Lutheran church. We want you to hear all of these sermons. Let us study the word and decide for time and eternity some of the things that make for doubts and fears. Creation was so important that God considered it well. Let us take our time to the study and know the Word.

If you were not at Sunday School last Sunday you missed something. Come next Sunday and see.

S. D. Steffey, Pastor.

M. P. Ladies Aid Meets

The ladies of the M P. church will meet with Mrs. Etta Hull Thursday afternoon, May 3, at 2 o'clock. A Mothers Day program and a cradle roll party will be the features. Mothers are cordially [illegible] to come and bring the babies. [illegible] Mrs. Herma Ha-[illegible] Mrs. Lew Leighty.

Christian Church Notes

[illegible]

Letter from Florida

April 23, 1923.

Editor St. Joe News,
St. Joe, Ind.

Dear Sir:

Spring has come again in dear old Indiana,
I can feel it tho' I'm far away today,
And the song birds there are singing,
As from tree to tree their winging,
And the sunbeams 'mong the budding flowers play.

Spring has come again in dear old Indiana,
If you doubt it, listen to the whispering trees,
For the buds will soon be breaking,
And their perfume yours for taking,
As its gently wafted on the evening breeze.

Spring has come and like the homing pigeon fleeting,
Does the heart of Hoosiers in a distant place,
Pulse and quicken with the thinking
Of its joys and sorrows drinking,
Of its dear old scenes and friends familiar face.

Spring has come and by a little placid river,
That is flowing 'mid the paths and haunts we love,
Is a tiny village lying,
Made of people who are trying,
To reflect the grace of heaven from above.

Spring has come again in dear old Indiana,
In no other place can spring come in so sweet
Can't you feel it, can't you smell it?
To the world you ought to tell it,
That Indiana's spring is hard to beat.

P. S. Spring has come! and do you guess why I am writing?
Mr. Printer of the little St. Joe News,
Well, some news I am imparting
Of a very early starting,
And you may change my address if you choose.
Change it back to Indiana while your changing
Change it to the little village that you know
For its northward we are flitting
And the long, long trail we're hitting
With our destination little St. Joe.

Sincerely,

Mrs. H. C. Borthick,
Seabreeze, Florida.

39 Years Ago

From Our Files

Nels Thomas is braking [illegible] B. and O.

William Vanzile is workin[illegible] carpenter shops at Ga[illegible]

The [illegible] Butler burned down [illegible]

The Old Settler's me[illegible] held at Waterloo this [illegible]

Walt Cheeseman was [illegible] day last week

Hanford T[illegible] home in [illegible]

Mr. Harter has [illegible] Bleek's Orangevill[illegible] make that his [illegible]

P. A. Shirt [illegible] fever and offers [illegible] at a bargain.

Harve Ackley [illegible] ville, were in to[illegible] ing friends.

Quite a num[illegible] from this place [illegible] Tack social at [illegible] evening.

Vester Widney [illegible] next to the one h[illegible] upon, and will [illegible] to raising chickens [illegible] furnish eggs at a[illegible]

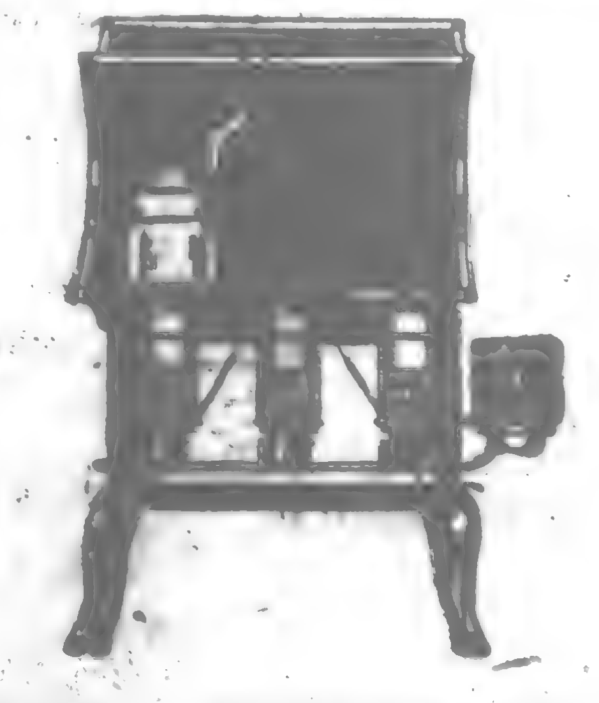
Barcus Resurrected

Barcus Q. Hippenhammer [illegible] following to say in his colum[illegible] St. Joe News on May [illegible] reference to spring hou[illegible]

In the spring tyme gentel Anni[illegible]
Wen the frogs begin tu hum,
Then's the tyme wen tray tare up
Carpets an clean hous an scrub
An a feller has tu eat a cold bite
On a flower barrell.

I think that poetry is emmenc; the latter end ov it don't rime eggactly, but there's lots of centiment in it espeshily to a man who is unfortunate enuf tu be married. Hous cleaning tyme is the most delitefful season ov the year; it is then that you ears ar greated with the musickal voic ov your wiffe as she yelles "James come hear an help me take down this stov pipe," or "Jake you hurry yourself around hear an shake that ar carpet." Its stacks ov fun i tel you. If i was cauled upon tu chuse betwean hous cleaning tyme an a Picknick i druther go tu the Picknick.

Meal - Time Satisfaction



NEW PERFECTION
OIL STOVES AND OVENS

SATISFY
4,000,000 WOMEN

See a demonstration at our store.

E. R. KINSEY

Hardware Furniture Undertaking

MAY

WANTS PUBLIC TO KNOW FACTS

Cannaday Eager to Tell Sufferers How Tanlac Restored Him.

"If I had the time I would sit down and write a letter to everybody in Indiana and tell them about this wonderful Tanlac," is the enthusiastic statement made by Augustus Cannaday, a railroad shop man, living at 1738 North Fifth St., Terre Haute.

"Two years ago I had an awful attack of 'flu' that left my stomach all out of fix, and from that time on until Tanlac set me right I was a very sick man. I was troubled with gas pains, bilious spells, and splitting headaches. I had no appetite and was so weak I was continually losing time from my work.

"Before I ran across Tanlac I had about given up hope, but five bottles of this medicine has ended my troubles and built me up to where I feel like a man made all over again."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

Breaking It Gently.

The lieutenant's orderly had been taking too many privileges in the opinion of his gold-barred boss, and the latter had decided to call him down for it at the next opportunity. It presented itself shortly.

"Sir," the orderly approached him one day, "I'm gonna go to town to see my girl tonight and I should like to borrow your leather puttees."

"Wuff—wuff!" choked the lieutenant by way of a preliminary. "Wuff—"

"And, sir, I have them on."—American Legion Weekly.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

It's Worth the Trip to Europe.

And what I (Rumanian born) thought, and what my wife Jeanne (French born) thought, upon revisiting Europe, was this: That once in a long while, just for a brief moment, she was the tiniest bit thankful to her stars that she had thrown in her lot with an American, even if he was not quite 100 per cent. I am willing to say publicly that that is worth to any husband the cost of a trip to Europe.—Youth's Companion.

A Lady of Distinction

Is recognized by the delicate, fascinating influence of the perfume she uses. A bath with Cuticura Soap and hot water to thoroughly cleanse the pores followed by a dusting with Cuticura Talcum powder usually means a clear, sweet, healthy skin.—Advertisement.

Merciful.

"The Rev. O. Goode Evans is a very considerate gentleman," states old Festus Pester.

"How so?" we inquired.

"Why, since his return from the Holy Land he hasn't told anything about it except to such persons as questioned him."—Kansas City Star.

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an Ointment which Quickly Relieves by local application, and the Internal Medicine, a Tonic, which assists in improving the General Health.

Sold by druggists for over 40 Years.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

His Translation.

"Well, ho!" chuckled Skinny Simpson in the midst of his reading.

"What now?" inquired his wife.

"Why, [illegible] the criminal went forth with the mark of Cain on his brow.' That's a [illegible] way to get a [illegible]"—Kansas City Star.

There is nothing more satisfactory [illegible]

[illegible]

American Farm Bureau

These Calves Will "Go to College."

Ralph W. Selkirk of Fishtail, Montana, recently gave three Hereford calves to the endowment fund of Beloit college, Beloit, Wisconsin. Selkirk agreed to raise the calves and sell them when fat, giving the proceeds to his Alma Mater. "The Herefords will double in weight and probably triple in value," he said. "The college will get about three times as much money as it would if I simply made a cash donation." Selkirk graduated from Beloit in 1911.

AMERICANS CONSUME LESS MEAT IN 1922

Report on Per Capita Consumption Made Public by the Agricultural Department.

The individual American ate 25.4 pounds less meat in 1922 than he did in 1900. That is the substance of a report on per capita meat consumption just made public by the Department of Agriculture. This report has been received with intense interest by live stock raisers, packers, retailers and others whose business it is to supply meat.

These interests have recently perfected an organization which will conduct a nation-wide educational and advertising campaign to increase the consumption of meat. The live stock and meat board is composed of 11 representatives of producer organizations and six representatives from commission firms, packers and retailers. The board has selected R. C. Pollock as managing director in active charge of the campaign work.

R. C. Pollock, Managing Director.

The Department of Agriculture is actively backing the educational campaign of the board. Just recently a poster indorsing the food value of meat has been printed by the department. This poster will play an important role in the national campaign.

Live stock interests in general feel that the bringing of meat consumption to normal would have a great influence toward national prosperity.

It is a common belief among live stock men that unscrupulous statements by various interests have made a false impression upon the minds of the general public as to the food value of meat and its relation to health and vigor. With this in mind the educational campaign which is now under way is not to tell the general public to eat more meat but to tell the truth about meat.

ILLINOIS EXCHANGE DOES BIG BUSINESS

Report Shows That 1,022 Cars of Fruit Were Distributed During Season of 1922.

[illegible] ing an aggregate value of [illegible]. One or more cars of fruit found market in at least 115 points in 24 states and four Canadian provinces.

[illegible]

totaled 76 and 50 cars, respectively. In addition, three mixed shipments were made.

The Illinois Fruit exchange was organized in 1921 by county farm bureaus in co-operation with the fruit and vegetable marketing department of the Illinois Agricultural association. Counties now having local organizations are: Adams, Clay, Jackson, Jefferson, Johnson, Marion, Massac, Pulaski, St. Clair, Union and Williamson.

The work of directing the carlot sale and distribution is done at the headquarters in Centralia, Ill.

Assembling of the products was accomplished through the local organizations in the various counties. A majority of these locals had their own packing houses, including, in their equipment, modern sizing machinery. Standardization and grading of the fruit was done at the local warehouses according to accepted Illinois and government regulations.

Adoption of the special trade brand "Illini," which appeared on trademarks on all the fruit shipped by the exchange, gave distinction and valuable advertising to the fruit shipped and a good name was made by the product in all markets where shipped.

Wide distribution of products is one of the big reasons attributed to the success of the exchange during 1922. Formerly it was the practice of the majority of growers to consign to Chicago, causing a flooding of that market, and consequently low prices. With such a distribution system as was built up, fruit was kept away from Chicago, preventing that market from being flooded.

In one vicinity, the growers belonging to the local sold strawberries for a net average of $2.52 per crate while a large grower in the vicinity, not selling through the exchange, sold his product for $1.97½, or 54½ cents less per crate.

Many new locals are being organized in southern Illinois, and a most successful outlook for 1923 is apparent.

SYRACUSE SELECTED FOR BIG DAIRY SHOW

Farm Bureau Federation and Other Farm Organizations Are Given Much Credit.

Syracuse, N. Y., has been selected for the National Dairy show this year, it has been announced by W. E. Skinner, secretary of the show. The show will be staged at the New York State Fair Grounds the week of October 6, coincident with the World's Dairy Congress.

The board of directors and executive committee of the National Dairy association which was entrusted with the selection of the site for the big exposition chose Syracuse after the qualifications of several eastern cities had been carefully considered.

Enos. R. Lee, president of the New York State Farm Bureau federation, in expressing gratification that New York State had secured the show, pointed out that Syracuse was awarded the honor in competition with several larger cities chiefly because of the active interest of the Farm Bureau federation and other farm organizations of the state, the State College of Agriculture, and the State Fair commission.

The exposition, which is arranged under the auspices of the United States government, will be one of the [illegible]

[illegible]

Cash refunds of $78,322 are ready to hand back to patrons of the Central Co-operative Commission association [illegible]

[illegible]

RADIO

Loud Speaker Is Made From Chopping Bowl

The average amateur, although he would like very much to be the possessor of a radio loud speaker, often lacks the funds, or if he has them, will probably take pride in constructing one of his own. The following is a description of a loud speaker made from a chopping bowl and a few pieces of brass and wood:

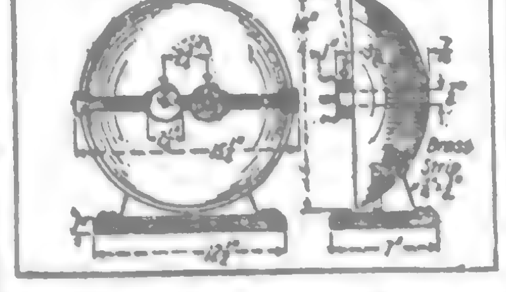
First procure an ordinary wooden chopping bowl, 14 inches in diameter, and sandpaper it well inside and out. Secure a base 12½ inches long by 7 inches wide and 1 inch thick, and sandpaper this thoroughly. Stain both with any color desired and give one or two coats of varnish. A strip of wood for the front cross piece is next cut to the shape shown. This should be finished in the same way as the bowl and base.

One and three-eighths inches on each side of the center of this cross piece a hole ⅜ inch in diameter is bored. As shown in the accompanying diagram, two holes are drilled and tapped at right angles to these ⅜-inch holes. Set-screws for these holes are provided. The cross strip is then fastened directly across the exact center of the chopping bowl.

Two pieces of brass are next obtained and a hole slightly less than ⅜ inch in diameter drilled in the middle of each. These pieces are then cut in the form of a clip, which will hold a receiver as shown. Two brass tubes, 3 3-16 inches long are provided, and one end of each is soldered to each of the clips.

The completed holders are then inserted in the holes in the cross strip.

Three brass strips, 1-16 inch thick by ½ inch wide, are bent to the shape shown and the bowl mounted on the base by means of them. The finished instrument should now appear as shown in the photograph.



Features of Loud Speaker Made from Wooden Chopping Bowl.

A pair of radiophone receivers are inserted in the clips and the seat adjusted for the loudest signals. The brass tubes may be varied back and forth in the holes until maximum reflection of sound is obtained. By tighening the set-screws this adjustment is made permanent.

Using a detector and one or two steps of amplification, this loud speaker should give results equal to any of the same general type on the market.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)

Heard 186 Miles With Window-Screen Aerial

At the military academy, Kearney, Neb., remarkable results in reception were recently obtained by using a window screen for an aerial and a three stage amplifier and a 14-inch magnavox.

A phonograph record and market reports could be heard at least 100 feet away. The screen was connected with the receiver only by bending a wire and hooking it through the mesh. No solder was used. The screen was located about 20 inches from the ground on a porch on the west side of a three-story, steel reinforced concrete building. At the same height with the screen and not more than 50 inches away were some trees. One end of the screen rested on the railing of the porch, the other on the floor. The insulated wire connecting the screen with the instrument lay along the floor of the porch and ran in through the window. Two high-tension lines carrying 2,300 volts ran parallel to the screen about 100 inches away. This sort of an aerial may solve some problems for radio enthusiasts in cities.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)

The Rubberized Panel Gives Satisfaction

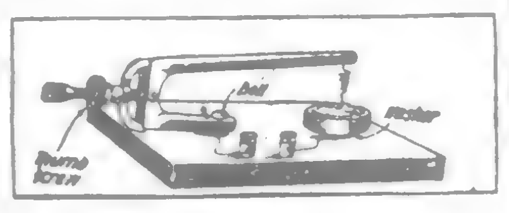
A great many fans who make their own sets and cannot afford to use bakelite may be glad to know that they [illegible] use wood and that their panels will give satisfaction.

[illegible] waterproof [illegible] or two light coats of the solution. One-fourth inch wood is of correct thickness for most small receiving [illegible]

Device for Regulating Pressure on Crystal

Essentially designed for galena or silicon, this stand provides close regulation of the degree of pressure on the crystal. The importance of this feature is not to be overlooked if maximum efficiency is desired. When completed, the stand is placed on a solid base out of the way so that when once adjusted, movement of the receiver or accidental jars will not affect the adjustment. It would be well, in building a crystal receiver, to keep this point in mind.

As may be seen in the diagram, a compass or divider is used as the movable arm and pressure regulator. Secure a good compass; cut off one leg at the point indicated and bore two holes for the insertion of the pivot-contact. The arm may be cut off with a good hack-saw or sharp file and should be rounded off. The holes are to be cut with sufficient diameter to pass an 8-32 round-headed nickel machine screw. For a crystal cup use an old battery carbon terminal, although a purchased cup will not cost much and presents a neater appearance. If desired, the holder can be made after the builder's own ideas. A clip is sometimes employed with good results. As the size of the compass will vary, the exact distance between the swivel and cup cannot be given; however, the correct space is easily ascertained and should be marked on the base for drilling. Hardwood, fiber, bakelite, rubber or other good insulating material can be used for the base, the size of which will depend upon the type of compass employed. Secure a heavy piece and after the stand is assembled it would be well to glue a thick layer of soft felt to the under surface. The felt will serve the dual purpose of preventing harm to polished tables and will allow the absorption of slight shocks and jars. A piece of old storage battery can be used for the base after shining it up.



An Excellent and Exceedingly Simple Crystal Detector.

To assemble the instrument, it is necessary to drill two holes at one end for binding posts and two holes for the detector cup and adjusting arm. Use a good grade of well-insulated wire for connections and be sure that all points are soldered. For the cat-whisker, a No. 28 bare copper wire will give as good results as any. In actual use, the end of the wire touching the mineral should always be clean.

If it appears as though the sensitivity of the mineral has faded, a new surface may be scratched with a knife. Either unmounted or mounted crystals give satisfaction with this stand. In general, keep the mineral as small as possible, to allow only a short separation between the point of cat-whisker contact and the holder. This is said after the fact has been learned that most large crystals are "sensitive" near the edge. The stationary contact should be made to cover as large a portion of the unused surfaces as possible.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)

Great Opportunity for the Radio Genius

The crystal set employs nature's own means of rectification. Were it not for the absence of a means of amplification the results obtained from this set would excel. Compared to the volume obtained through the vacuum tube, however, the work of the crystal is disappointing and no way has yet been found to increase the volume. Reception through the crystal from distances up to 25 miles is marvelous in its beauty, but in the great majority of cases the owner of a set prefers quantity to quality and often noise to harmony. A great opportunity presents itself to the radio experimenter to add amplification to the crystal without destroying the beauty of its reception. Who will accomplish this?

The successful experimenter will deserve the renown that will undoubtedly be his.

Use Radio to Teach All Kinds of Music

The millions who have heard the impressive reception of violin, piano and other instrumental music and the artistic radio rendering of vocal selections, have no doubt wondered what the future had in store along these lines.

Much has been written of the adaptability of radio for general instruction in the home and in the school, but the ability of radio to general instruction seems to have been overlooked. This field for radio seems to be especially promising. It is easy to picture regular series of lessons by radio, with appropriate demonstrations with the voice or on the various instruments.

(© Science & Invention and Radio News.)

Radio Aids Churches.

In Pittsburgh recently one of the churches was without a minister. A [illegible]

[illegible]

The Greatest Body Builder
ALL PURE FOOD
FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE

It looks as if the world were about to get used to trembling on the verge.

Home is a place where somebody knows how to make thickened gravy.

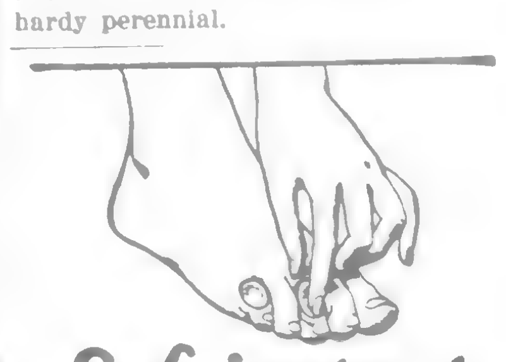
A hick town is a place where very little is required to arouse suspicion.

No woman likes to shoot her husband. It frightens away all the other men.

Making Germany knuckle down was a small job compared with making her dig up.

There never was half the need of a war substitute as there is for a substitute for war.

The survival of jay walkers would indicate that the blooming idiot is a hardy perennial.



Safe instant relief from CORNS

One minute—and the pain of that corn ends! That's what Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads do—safely. They remove the cause—friction-pressure, and heal the irritation. Thus you avoid infection from cutting your corns or using corrosive acids. Thin; antiseptic; waterproof. Sizes for corns, callouses, bunions. Get a box today at your druggist's or shoe dealer's.

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

Made in the laboratories of The Scholl Mfg. Co., makers of Dr. Scholl's Foot Comfort Appliances, Arch Supports, etc.

Put one on—the pain is gone!

Metal Long in Use.

Tin is found in the East Indies, Bolivia and Cornwall; in cassiterite or tin-store, a compound of tin and oxygen. Tin was known to the ancients. It has been found in Egyptian tombs.

Betting Is Wrong.

Co.—Do you think that betting on football games is wrong?

Ed—The way I bet is.

CASTORIA

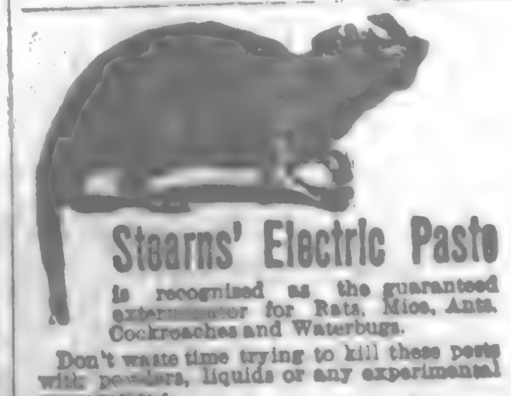
For Infants and Children

In Use For Over 30 Years

Always bears the Signature of Chas H. Fletcher

Let Cuticura Be Your Beauty Doctor

Soap 25c, Ointment 25 and 50c, Talcum 25c.



Stearns' Electric Paste

is recognized as the guaranteed exterminator for Rats, Mice, Ants, Cockroaches and Waterbugs.

Don't waste time trying to kill these pests with powders, liquids or any experimental preparations.

Ready for Use—Better than Traps

2-oz. box, 35c 15-oz. box, $1.50

SOLD EVERYWHERE

16799 DIED

in New York City alone from kidney trouble last year. Don't allow yourself to become a victim by neglecting pains and aches. Guard against trouble by taking

LATHROP'S GOLD MEDAL

[illegible]

MAY

Matrimonial Adventures

The Ants

BY

James Hopper

Author of "The Scoop of Charles Hamilton Potts," "Caybigan," "9009," "Trimming of Goosie," "The Freshman," and "What Happened in the Night."

Copyright by United Feature Syndicate

A FOREWORD OF JAMES HOPPER

James Hopper started his literary career on a San Francisco newspaper. Shortly after this he was one of those who answered a call for 1,000 teachers to go to the Philippines, and was sent to the Island of Negros. He joined that pedagogical company to gain the opportunity to study the life around him, which later he could weave into stories. The result of his stay in the Philippines was a series of stories which appeared first in McClure's Magazine, and then in the book called "Caybigan," which means "friend" in the Philippine language.

In 1914 Mr. Hopper went to France as a war correspondent. In 1916 he returned to this country and went to the Mexican border with the American army. When we entered the World war he again went to France, still as a correspondent, but he joined in the fighting, going over the top with the Twenty-eighth infantry at Cantigny. He says that this is his main war feat, but that in college he played football! His story "The Scoop of Charles Hamilton Potts" gives a realistic and human but intensely humorous account of a reporter in battle.

The Philippine stories, continued for a number of years, were followed by fiction of France, and then Mr. Hopper turned to writing of our own great West. All of this material was published in our leading magazines.

At present Mr. Hopper's work leans toward introspection. It shows rare quality and variety. "The Ants," written for the Star Author Series of Matrimonial Adventures, touches one of the big problems of marriage. It is told with a poignant skill.

MARY STEWART CUTTING, JR.

Peter left the studio, where he had been painting steadily for hours, and stepped out into the garden. It was full moon; he blinked under the high sun and stretched, still a little dazed from his long plunge in toil; he inhaled full the perfume of roses.

A short distance from him, on the edge of the driveway, was a big hole—dug, he surmised, to receive some transplanted bush, lilac or magnolia. Water, trickling from a hose that stretched like a black snake across the lawn, was making of this excavation a small lake. Peter stepped to the little gurgling lake, and sat himself contentedly near its bank. A small lake sufficed Peter; he did not need a big one.

It was lovely here. The water sang; slowly, it rose; the flowers perfumed; Peter's soul dilated deliciously. Far above, in the blue, a hawk circled.

But this did not last. Within the circle of Peter's carefully established vacuum, a small hard thing began to intrude. The rasp of a rake, there behind the hedge, at his back. His face darkened and puckered.

He knew who was raking there behind the hedge. Not only did he know; with that implacable vision given to him with life, he also saw.

It was his wife who was there behind the hedge, raking. And though behind the hedge, which was at his back, he saw her.

He knew exactly how she looked, there, behind the hedge. She had on the wrapper with the big flower pattern; it was tied around her with a cord at the end of which was a worn tassel. Underneath, the soiled white hem showed off the gown she had worn in the night—for from her bed she had gone to her garden. Her bare feet were in old brown slippers; there would be streaks of wet ground across the part of the feet which showed between the flaccid slippers and the soiled gown.

They pressed the earth, these feet, firmly; set down well apart in a solid wide base, they pressed it familiarly. They might—he had seen that—be sunk, in their flaccid slippers, into soft manure, unshrinkingly.

Her hair would be tied tight in a small knot behind. She squatted often over some seed, some weed. She was like a strong thick coolie of the rice paddies.

Peter's face puckered still more. Not with anger, not with disgust, but with a sort of mournful helplessness. Then, abruptly, another vision came to him. He saw her as she had been years ago.

She was waiting for him at a stile, on the far edge of a golden field. She was slender, fragrant and soft. Her pretty frock was cut low at the neck; the beginning of her virgin breasts swelled [illegible] there. And her eyes, turned up to him, were a little wet, as Venus is at dawn, and the red chalice of her lips was [illegible].

Peter [illegible] the hopeless [illegible] deepened still on his face.

[illegible]

not the only one about. An army of ants was passing close to his feet; so close, in fact, that they swirled about these extremities as a host, following a valley, doubles some rocky El Capitan. Peter hastily withdrew his feet, kneeling down, stretching his rather long neck, he proceeded to observe what was happening.

Across the drive, from the excavation of which Peter's fancy had made a lake, from that hole to the hedge, the ants stretched, a broad rusty-red ribbon. At first Peter thought they were marching one way, then he saw that the movement was a double one. Hundreds of thousands of the small carapaced creatures were marching from the hole to the hedge; but as many were marching from the hedge to the hole; they threaded their way in and out of each others' course, the two movements interpenetrated each other. And bringing his long nose still lower, Peter saw that all this had a character of panic and dismay; that, had this multitude not been denied voice, a great confused clamor would be rising to his high-perched ear.

Of these hastening from the vicinity of the excavation, every one was laden. Carrying it high in their mandibles for short exhausting runs, or dragging it fiercely after them; over sticks that were great logs to them, or pebbles that were Himalayas; skirting or piercing clumps of grass which were impenetrable jungle, they bore each a small whitish thing which looked like a grain, which, in fact was grain—the grain, the life spark, the existence itself of this agitated nation.

Peter ran a glance backward over their march and found its starting point. The ants had all emerged, they were emerging, from five small holes near the excavation; five little holes smaller than the hollow of a wild-oat straw. Out of them, ceaselessly, in a constant trickle, they appeared into the sunlight, carrying on high before them, as the monk does the cross, the sacred larva; or, backing up, fiercely snatching it along after them. Here those of the army who marched the reverse way, and which all were without burden, met those that were coming out and, letting them pass, after a moment's hesitation during which they seemed to be calling to themselves all their courage, resolutely plunged head first down into the earth. Peter now understood. He was the witness, the god-like witness of just such a catastrophe as, in the tenebrous past, again and again had nearly wiped out his own kind. The water, which was filling the excavation dug in the garden, from below had established communication with the city of the ants. It was rising slowly down in there; slowly, mysteriously, inexorably; filling the lowest chambers, rising along the galleries, bursting into halls; and the population, in mute uproar, was fleeing its crumbling city, hugging tight to itself its life kernel.

Peter's heart thumped and his brain flamed. He saw clearly the great underground city, its vast halls and dim secret chambers, its intervened galleries vibrant with peril and disaster. He heard the sullen roar of sudden inrushing waters. Walls fell in large flakes, ceilings collapsed, floors sucked in, and thousand upon thousand every second died. He saw the stubborn citizens, in this immense dissolution of all they had ever been sure of, tenaciously toiling to snatch from this cataclysmic threat the future of the race, the grains which were the concentrated promise of future generations. Down there, at every heart beat, thousands died a sacrificial death; down there, under ground, a great holocaust was taking place, made splendid by a myriad heroisms. Peter became much excited;

But a broom, a big, capable garden broom now planted itself down at his side; and without looking at more than the broom, which he could see out of the corner of his eye, he knew that his wife was standing by.

"Look, Daisy," he said, inviting her to share his emotion. "Look at the ants."

There was a moment's silence up there. Then: "Ants! I should think there were! Why, they'll get into the house! Let's kill them!"

He stretched out his hand and turned his fingers around the broom handle. "Get down here with me and look," he said. "It's an extraordinary sight. It's like Sodom, Babylon, Atlantis all rolled into one!"

"Yes—and they'll be in the pantry next. It'll be Babylon in the pantry. Come—let's sweep them off."

The broom stirred in his hand; he detained it. "Don't. They are the survivors of a terrible disaster. They have seen thousands of their mates swept to horrible death. They are safe, bearing with them the future life of their nation. Why, it would be as if men escaped from a city destroyed by flood, standing at last on high ground, naked, exhausted, but alive, saw now upon them the mountain falling!"

"It won't be a mountain," she said. "It will be a broom!"

"Hold on; wait," he pleaded hurriedly, trying a more intimate appeal. "Let me watch them. Daisy—wait—I'm getting something out of it! Let me watch it!"

But the broom was now out of his hand, and in three, four [illegible] strokes the thing was done. [illegible] sessed Peter. He had, during his contemplation, shrunk himself to the size of the ants; or, rather, he had swelled them to his dimensions; so that the terrific completeness of the execution performed by these three simple sweeps of a simple broom left him profoundly astonished. Then, as the daze left him, a violence took its place. He faced her, he wanted to speak, and he knew that what he wanted to say was something irreparable. But no words came; his throat was altogether tight, his mind a whirling blank.

[illegible]

Peter turned on his heel and walked away. He walked out of the garden, and up the path which led to the village. In the village was a place where one could drink; the plan at the back of his head was simple enough. He would go to that place and drink; drink till he fell like an ox struck by the slaughtering hammer. But that fixed point of intent within him was small within the turmoil he had become. He felt as if poisoned, absolutely poisoned. His head was hot, he trembled; and a singular part of him, detached and wraith-like, hovering above him looked down with amazement at his state.

He had seen something so clearly; he had felt it so poignantly—the minute cosmic tragedy of these ants. Had she seen nothing at all? Had she felt nothing?

A reservoir deep within him began to surge. It was a reservoir which had been filling there in the dark, drop by drop, for years. Several times it had surged as it was now doing. But only with a tentative pulsing which did not reach the rim. Now, each surge brought the accumulated reserve higher. Like some alchemist's brew boiling on the fire, it rose, neared the margin, collapsed, rose again. But each of its ebullitions was raising it higher; nearer to the film which curtained his consciousness from the dark secrets beneath; nearer his clear consciousness, nearer his mouth—his tongue, his lips.

And suddenly, with a new effort, it had done it—it had brimmed! Clearly he heard the words spoken in the silent sunlight. The little glade resounded to them, spoken loud.

"Cruel—and stupid!"

That was it. "Cruel and stupid."

Three times he heard the words spoken before complete understanding searched out his heart. And then, to this full comprehension, he felt his legs wobble, and abruptly sat down on a little mound of grass.

He remained seated thus, immobile, his eyes fixed ahead as if upon a ghost.

So this is what it had come to after all those years. To this he had come, after all those years.

To these words, spoken not merely of the lips, but explosively expelled by his entirely certain being, every drop, every cell, every nerve.

These words, final judgment.

"Cruel—and stupid."

The glade was very quiet in the sun, and insects hummed. Thoughts also hummed about his head, vague, formless, buzzing thoughts, circling and circling. But always, fixed in the center, was the kernel fact.

"Cruel and stupid"—that is what he had called her.

It seemed to him that a long time had passed when suddenly, like a mirage descended from the sky, an image came clearly before his eyes.

It was that picture of her as she had been years ago. Standing at the stile on the edge of the golden field; with her red mouth, her dewy star-like eyes, her gentle breasts.

He contemplated this long, and then was forced to ask himself a question.

As she stood there, that time long ago, so pretty, so tender and so warm, and his arms ached, was she then, already, what today he had called her?

If that were true, then women were indeed terrible.

But if not true—what then?

A strange new kind of discomfort took possession of him; his mind, as if affrighted, shied to one side, tried to bolt. He forced it back to the path. "Consider," he said to his mind. "Consider—you must consider that."

Her life, immediately, passed by him in one streak. Her life since their two lives had been side by side.

He squirmed.

A drab life it was, a drab streak of life. Poverty—to dullness—monotony—smallness.

And loneliness. Yes, very probably, loneliness.

He? He had been absorbed. He had been combing and brushing and sleeking and curling his soul. He had been a coxcomb of the soul.

He had cultivated it, enriched it. He had colored it, chiseled it, cherished it. Like a diamond cutter absorbed, without cease he had ground it to new iridescences.

He had climbed a hill, ceaselessly climbed a hill carrying his soul. And left hers down there like a stone. And Time had worked its will upon the abandoned soul. Duller and duller it had become with layer upon layer of dull Time.

Peter did not go up to the village. When he rose after a while it was toward home he made his way, at first on hesitant feet [illegible]

[illegible] her lying across her bed [illegible] face down, framed within the [illegible] of her arms [illegible]

[illegible]

She had laid out fresh things. Some already clothed her; others were about, scattered on chairs, across open drawers.

She had gone about doing this in a trepidation of haste, as a child desperately hastens who has been threatened by its parents with being left behind. And hurrying, she had been crying; sobs had sounded in this lonely room as she hurried.

Finally, to a larger burst of woe, coming probably from some last small straw (perhaps one of her shoes had refused to button, or some hook had been found without an eye, or some ribbon had slipped back into its sheath), she had thrown herself across the bed to give way, altogether uncontrolled. And weeping thus, had fallen asleep.

Standing here, his eyes upon this past scene which he saw so well, Peter remembered that which he ever promised himself to remember and which ever he forgot. That she was a child. After all, but a child.

As in the days when she had waited for him at the stile, so now she was a child. The rest—the robust matron's ready, almost rough assurance; its firm contempt for all that which was haze, and halo and opalescence and not core—all that was mere front. She was a child.

He should remember that always. Of course, he should always remember it.

Peter lay down by his wife, and found her hot lips, and awakened her; she clutched at him convulsively.

They murmured together. "I'm sorry, Peter; I'm sorry."

Then later: "Peter, you do so madden me at times, dear. With your airs—no, I don't mean that. But you do shut the door upon me, Peter—you do shut me out so much!"

Still later: "And, Peter, you are of those that like the flowers but not the gardening.

"Polished floors, but not the polishing."

"I know, dear. I know."

"Peter, listen: I am of the earth. I accept. You're always somewhere up above."

"I know, dear. Not far above, either. A fool place, in between. I know."

"I accept. I am getting old. Everyone does, Peter. I am willing to grow old."

She whispered now. "Peter—I'm even willing to die!"

He pressed her closer, but the old desolate helplessness had come back.

"You, Peter—you are such a rebel, Peter! How you shut your eyes and fight! Trying to hold what cannot be held. And hating me because I can't. For I can't, Peter, I can't!"

This a child? A strange child! No—a child. Since in children was wisdom. Was this wisdom? A spasm of revolt tightened his heart.

But she was weeping now, softly, against his breast. He regathered her in his arms, and with this gesture felt a new large tenderness fill him. A tenderness which was not only for her, but for many others—for the whole world. The whole poor purblind peering world which could not see straight, which could not see clear, which suffered dimly, in a sort of vague hot delirium.

Near the end of the day, Peter stood once more alone in the garden. For what had passed in the afternoon, he felt something like embarrassment, a slight distaste, that strange revulsion we feel whenever we have made the gesture of plumbing life's emotional depths. As if there were something wrong about it, something unnatural; as if life were meant to be lived altogether on the surface, carefully on the surface.

He felt the need of levity. That is what, perhaps, made him remember the ants; the ants which had been the beginning of the afternoon.

A slight breeze, ruffling the pool, had pushed together the dust, the ants and the eggs in a pitiful dead huddle against a bank.

"Where did they come in?" he asked himself.

He and his wife had this day made one of those complete circles which, as if by some natural law, recurred almost at certain intervals. From a state of hostility into which they had slipped, through a crisis, to a renewed gentleness of each other. They were happy once more, Daisy and he. But what about the ants? Where did they come in? It was over their backs this had happened. They had paid for it. Didn't they count at all?

An idea came to him. He raised his face to the skies.

Whenever he did this, sensuous painter that he was, he was much more apt to visualize the old familiar Greek deities than any more abstract, single and terrible god. So he did this time.

A fog had come in from the sea; it made a low floor of the heavens, and on that floor Peter imagined the gods walking—Zeus, Hera, the whole galaxy, democratic, familiar, with robes a little disordered and wreaths a little askew. He hailed them.

"Heigh, up there, Zeus, Hera, Venus, all of you, tell me please!

"When, down here, the earth shakes, mountains slide, or the sea overflows.

"When, down here, there is a Noah flood, a San Francisco earthquake; when China drowns and Saint Pierre, when the beach of its volcano is blasted—

"Does this mean, merely, that up there, where you dwell, some small [illegible] is being resolved?"

[illegible]

CHEVROLET

for Economical Transportation

OF

Farm Products

Modern, progressive farmers, being also business men, now depend on fast cheap motor transportation to save time, save products and get the money.

Chevrolet Superior Light Delivery, with four post body was built especially for farm needs. It has the space and power for a big load, which it moves fast at a very low cost per mile.

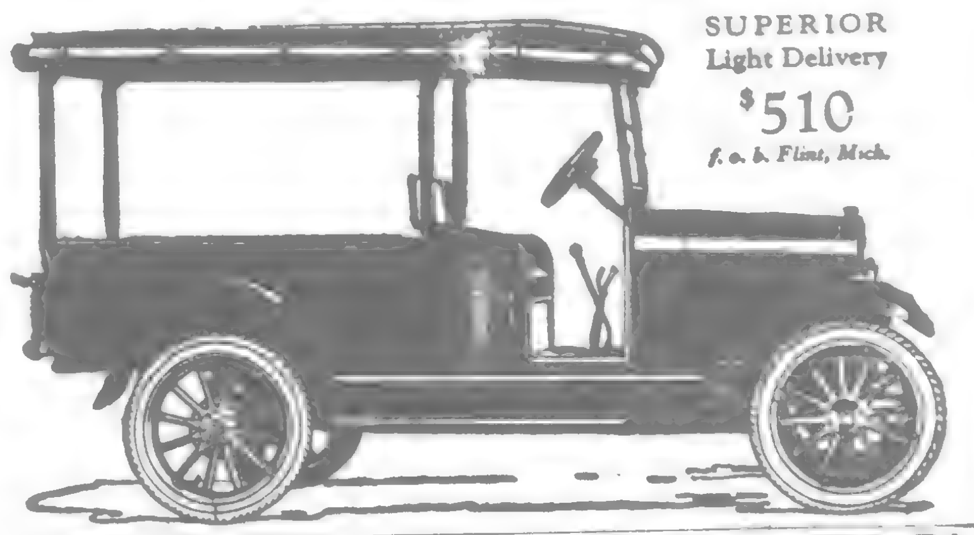
For heavy work, Chevrolet Utility Express Truck at only $575, chassis only, offers remarkable value. Fits any standard truck body.

Prices f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

Superior 2-Pass. Roadster $510
Superior 5-Pass. Touring . 525
Superior 2-Pass. Utility Coupe 680
Superior 4-Pass. Sedanette 850
Superior 5-Pass. Sedan . . 860
Superior Light Delivery . 510
Superior Commercial Chassis 425
Utility Express Truck Chassis 575

Chevrolet Motor Company
Division of General Motors Corporation
Detroit, Michigan

Dealers and Service Stations Everywhere



Regular Course of Events.

"I was over to Clapboard Springs, my old stamping ground, tuther day," related a resident of Straddle Ridge.

"Anything coming off there?" asked an acquaintance.

"Nope; nuth'n special. Some of the folks have died off. The young 'ns have growed up, more or less. Uncle Riley Rickadoo has got him a new pipe. A feller slipped off'n the roof of his house just before I got there and landed with his head jammed into an iron kittle, and when I left they were still figgering on how to get him out and save the kittle. And Claib Slade and Bud Rucker were shooting at each other as usual. That's about all I heerd of whilst I was there."—Kansas City Star.

The Call of the Code.

He had gone South on a hurried business trip and his "underthings," as they say in the stores, were of winter weight. He wished lighter apparel and he sent the following code telegram to his wife:

"S-O-S-B-V-D-P-D-Q."

When a man tells how he has been bunkoed he arouses more curiosity than sympathy.

PILES of the most stubborn kind relieved in 3 to 10 days
One trial convinces MIRO
AT ALL DRUGGISTS

Your Hair need not be thin or streaked with gray—Q-BAN HAIR COLOR RESTORER will quickly revive it and bring back all its original color and luxuriance. At all good druggists, 75c, or direct from HESSIG-ELLIS, Chemists, MEMPHIS, TENN.

Paying Postage in Russia.

Under the new rate of postage from Russia to the United States it costs two hundred thousand rubles to mail an ordinary letter, though the letter weighs less than an ounce. That is only ten cents in American money, but if the purchaser of the stamp should decide to pay for it in one-ruble notes he would need nearly two hundred pounds of paper money.—Youth's Companion.

Better Show for the Empire.

Uncle Hiram—They say that the sun never sets on the British empire.

Aunt Hannah—Doesn't it, now? And we have such lovely sunsets over here.—Judge.

Ask Your Dealer

ASK your local dealer to recommend a practical decorator. If you are unable to secure one you can do the work yourself, tinting and stenciling your walls to give beautiful results.

Alabastine

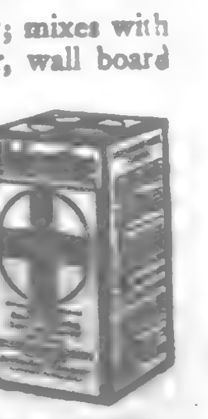
Instead of Kalsomine or Wall Paper

Alabastine is a dry powder; mixes with cold water; directions on each package. Used on plaster, wall board and all wall surfaces. White and artistic, durable tints. Cross and circle printed in red on each package.

SPECIAL STENCIL OFFER

We will supply cut stencils to any user of Alabastine—one stencil for each room requiring not less than two packages, if you will send the large words ALABASTINE cut from the face of the packages over the cross and circle, accompanied by 15c in stamps or silver for each stencil desired, covering postage and packing. Write for free booklet, "Nature's Beautiful Tints."

THE ALABASTINE COMPANY
1648 Grandville Avenue Grand Rapids, Michigan



Come One! Come All!
Clean Up!
and keep it up—
Make Your Town
Spotless
Town
SAPOLIO

10c Gives New Life to Old Stockings
Putnam Fadeless Dyes—dyes or tints as you wish

- GARDEN PLANTS -

There seems to be a general scarcity of early cabbage plants and for that reason we could not supply our customers. We have plenty of tomato plants. Celery, sweet potato and other plants in season.

Give us your order for
CARNATIONS
for Mothers' Day, May 13th. We can furnish the very finest at a moderate price.

NEWS OFFICE

The St. Joe News

William S. Quance,
Editor and Publisher.

One Year,	$1.50
Six Months,	.75
Three Months,	.40
One Month,	.15
Single Copy,	.05

(Advertising Rates on Application)

Entered at the postoffice at St. Joe, Indiana, as second class matter.

Foreign Advertising Representative
THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

Frank L. Milliman
TRUSTEE
Concord Township

Office Day Friday of Each Week at his residence 2 miles north and 1-2 mile West of St. Joe.

Wake Up!
Build a Sleeping Porch

It's a great way to solve the extra bedroom question. You can add on a sleeping porch for a small sum--and you'll have the whole family scrapping for uppers and lowers in the outdoor Pullman.

We have the stuff sleeping porches are made of at a price that won't give you any bed dream.

Spencerville Lumber Company

Everthing Needed in Home Building—including practical helps.

Spencerville, Ind.

118 1-2 EAST HIGH STREET PHONE 146
Over Central Grocery, Hicksville, Ohio
Office hours from 1 to 5 and 7 to 8 p. m.
Sunday by appointment
Calls made any time any place

LOCAL NEWS ITEMS

Mr. and Mrs. Will Sommers and guests, Mrs. A. W. White and daughter, Marian, of Akron, Ohio, were Sunday dinner guests of Ray Rhodeffer and wife of Auburn,

The class play of the St. Joe High School, "Civil Service" will be given at the School building on Friday and Saturday evenings, May 11 and 12. Admission will be 15 and 25 cents.

April 16th was a big "pay day' for the world's greatest banker. On that day Uncle Sam turned over $125,000,000 to holders of Fourth Liberty Loan Bonds. Indiana's slice of this "mellon" amounted to about $3,000,000. Holders of these bonds are urged to clip their coupons promply and to reinvest their interest in the new U. S. "Baby Bonds" which are now selling for $20.50 each and which will be worth $25 in five years.

The M. P. Orchestra had its picture taken Saturday at Auburn. Each member of the organization and several from the Sunday school are buying pictures. A picture will probably be hung in the church also.

Allen Coburn received one day last week, a neat little memorandum book from the Omaha National Bank, Omaha, Nebraska. This memorandum was issued to all radio fans who hearing the programs given by this institution on a certain evening of a week or so ago, reported the same within twenty-four hours from the time of hearing same, giving name of the musical number and also of the artist rendering same. We are indebted to Paul Curie our enthusiastic radio fan for the pleasure of listening in, to this, and other superb musical and educational features.

Notice Of Administration

ESTATE No. 2724

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the undersigned has been appointed by the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, of the State of Indiana, Administrator of the Estate of Dause M. Kelley, deceased, late of said County.

Said Estate is supposed to be solvent.

Clyde G. Reetenwall
Administrator.
April 27, 1923.
Atkinson & Husselman
Attorneys

Dr. Bonnell M. Sounder
HOSPITAL
Established in 1914
206 West Seventh Street
AUBURN, INDIANA

NEWVILLE

Everybody in this locality is busy getting ready to plant their crops.

Miss Freda Martin of St. Joe is staying with her sister, Mrs Argyl Sechler, a few days.

Virgil Royer has built a new garage on the south side of town which adds to the benefit of Newville.

Sam Wyatt and family were Ft. Wayne visitor Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Martin of St. Joe, was the Saturday afternoon guest of her daughter, Mrs. Mrs. Argyl Sechler.

A boy was born one day last week to Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ayers.

S. Path and family of Robison Park Ft. Wayne, were Sunday guests of the Alvin Keesler family.

Mrs. Julia Wyatt is at present making her home with her son, Sam Wyatt, and family.

Mrs. Omo Richmond and little daughter and Mrs. Alfred Smith are at present on the sick list.

Mesdames Julia Wyatt and Elisabeth Benner were Wednesday supper guests of Mrs. John Miller and family.

Mrs. Ophelia Headley spent Sunday in her home Newville. Mrs. Headley keeps house for the Rev. Denham family.

Nelson Ayers returned the first of last week to Newville from Detroit, Michigan, where he has been employed all winter.

Mrs. Hattie Sechler returned to her home in St. Joe Friday after staying a week with her son, Argyl, and family.

Quite an excitement prevaled here after the last day of school. It was reported that the victrola had been stolen from the school house. The trustee and upper teacher got busy trying to locate it but found out later that Miss Bernice Hart the primary teacher, had taken it home with her, which was quite satisfactory.

There came pretty near being a fire in the Alvin Keesler home one day last week. Some goods had been placed in an unused room during house cleaning time. The three year old boy having seen trash piled and burned, concluded to have a bon fire. He lighted a match and started a blaze which was discovered in time to prevent much damage being done.

COLETOWN

Morris Conine left for North Dakota, Thursday.

Irene Pierman spent the week-end with Mrs. Mildred Welch.

Opal Walker visited Sunday with Lillian Koch.

Clinton Anderson and family spent Tuesday with Henry Kling and family.

Edwin Guthrie and wife called on Emmet Ginther and family Sunday afternoon.

J. W. Hart and wife called on John Acton and wife Sunday afternoon.

Harry McCurdy and family, spent Sunday evening with Alvin Walker and family.

Mrs. Cora Waltz, Mrs Mettie Hart, Mrs. [illegible] and Miss Gladys Place, called on Mrs. Emma Hart, Wednesday afternoon. She treated them to maple taffy and sugar.

A delivery truck passed through town one day last week, [illegible]

HOW'S THIS

[illegible]

Chiropractor Optician

Calls made at your home by
APPOINTMENT.

EARL E. FRISBIE,
Butler, Indiana.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Try a want ad in the News.

Mrs. Rose Meese went to Hicksville Tuesday morning for a couple days visit with Mrs. Lucy Koch.

O. J. Baker who suffered a light stroke of paralysis last week is improving.

Lee Mereer, wife and children of near Hicksville spent Sunday with her mother, Mrs T. H. Shull.

Alva Place and family of Fort Wayne, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reed Place.

Claud Lamb and family visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bleeker near Butler Sunday.

Edward Scott and wife of near Butler, spent Thursday evening with the former's aunt and husband, Laney Gee and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Craig Shefier and son spent Saturday night and Sunday guests of Burl Duncan and wife at Butler.

Mrs. Paul Curie and children returned home Monday after spending several days with her parents at Waterloo.

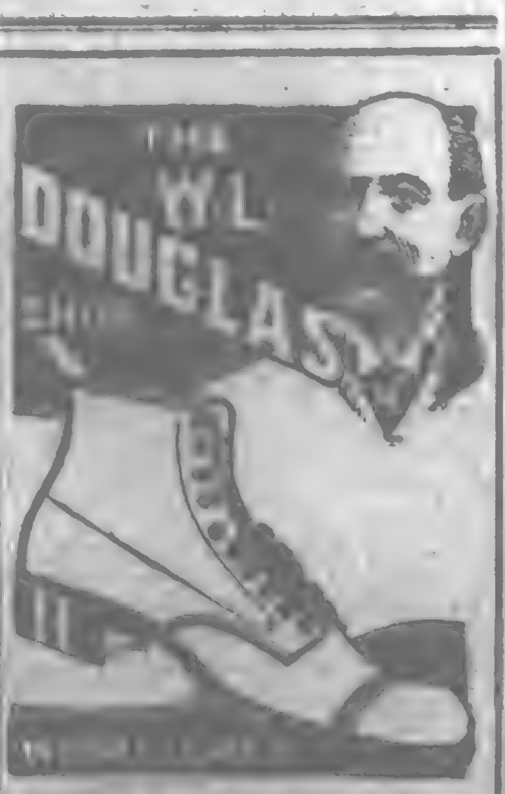
Rev. N. L Martin will preach at Coburn's Corners church again Saturday evening, Sunday morning and evening.

Mrs. Foster Gee and chidren are spending two weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Carper near Auburn.

Merritt Sechler and Carl Perkins spent Sunday at Niles, Michigan. Jacob Sechler and wife spent over Sunday in the former's home during his absence.

Mrs. Caroline Sommers, Mrs. A. W. White and daughter of Akron, Ohio, came last week for an indefinite visit with Mr. and Mrs. Will Sommers and other ralatives.

The M. P. church is expecting a big time here next week for that is the time of the State Sunday School and Christian Endeavor union. The complete program will appear in next week's issue.



For Sale Only At
Chaneys'
Auburn, - - - - Ind.

Make Your Trip More Enjoyable by a Refreshing Night on Lake Erie
(Your rail ticket is good on the boats)
Thousands of east and north bound travelers say they wouldn't have missed that cool, comfortable night on one of our fine steamers. A good bed in a clean stateroom, a long sound sleep and an appetizing breakfast in the morning!
Steamers "SEEANDBEE" — "CITY OF ERIE" — "CITY OF BUFFALO"
Daily, May 1st to November 15th
Leave Cleveland - 9:00 P. M. } Eastern { Leave Buffalo - 9:00 P. M.
Arrive Buffalo - 7:30 A. M. } Standard Time { Arrive Cleveland - 7:30 A. M.
Connections for Niagara Falls, Eastern and Canadian points. Ask your ticket agent or tourist agency for tickets via C & B Line. New Tourist Automobile Rate—$10.00.
Send for free sectional puzzle chart of the Great Ship "Seeandbee" and 32-page booklet.
The Cleveland and Buffalo Transit Co.
Cleveland, Ohio
The Great Ship "Seeandbee" — the largest steamer on inland waters of the world
Fare $5.50

Farm for Sale

The undersigned administrator of the estate of Sarah Jane Wade, deceased, will offer for sale at public auction at the court house door at

Auburn DeKalb County Indiana
at 2 o'clock P. M. on
MAY 12, 1923
the Ninety Acre Farm
of said decedent situated three miles east and one half mile south of Spencerville, Indiana; six miles west of Hicksville, Ohio; and two and one half miles south and two miles east of St. Joe, Indiana.

This is a good general purpose farm with a good eight room frame house and a hip roof barn 36x60, built about five years.

ROY WADE, Administrator

Walter Keesley and family have moved into the A. Points residence.

Mrs. Charles Jordon and son, came the last of the week to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Barney.

An eleven pound son was born Thursday noon to Mr. and Mrs. Tom Brunson.

William Curie and Ward Woodcox spent from Friday until Sunday at Cold Springs, Hamilton.

A real estate transfer has recently taken place in Spencer township from Aaron Hart and wife to R. U. Bowser, pt. lot 1, north addition.

Frank Long and family of Fort Wayne spent Sunday with William Miller and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Wilmot of Fort Wayne, spent Saturday night and Sunday with William Quance and wife.

Mrs. H. C. Hathaway of Auburn, spent Thursday night and until Friday noon a guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Bishop.

Mrs. J. C. Hull spent Saturday night with J. O. Quance and family in Fort Wayne. Her husband joined her Sunday morning and they returned in the evening.

A dipper is operating in the Baltz gravel pit and a fine pile of material is being taken out, which will be used on the Lancaster Morr road now under improvement.

Ed Woodcox of Logansport, was a Saturday night and Sunday guest of Arthur Woodcox and family of Auburn. Sunday guests only of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Woodcox.

Mrs. Charles Rice spent the past week visiting her mother, Mrs. Belle Harmon and sister, Mrs. William Harshmeyer and family at Fort Wayne.

INDIGESTION
causes bloating—gassy pains that crowd the heart—constipation.
Always find relief and comfort in
CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS
No griping—no nausea—only 25 cents

H. R. Minnick, M. D.
St. Joe, Indiana
Office at Residence
PHONE NO. 16X

Honor Class President

As a token of their appreciation members of the high school graduating class surprised Miss Florence Beams on Friday evening. Miss Beams had very successfully lead her class through the four years of high school. A bounteous supper was served, games, music and a good social time was enjoyed. Those present were the Misses Ellen Lake, Esther Henderson, Clarice Hahn, Helena Fairfield, Marjie Spitler, Cleo Bowser, Helen Lake, Doris Beams, Florence Beams, Vaughn Allen, Forrest Beams, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Beams and Miss Ida Reed.

H. O. WILLIAMS
THE
Abstracter
is able to furnish you with a complete Abstract of Title to any description of Real Estate in DeKalb County.
OFFICE
West Seventh Street
AUBURN
FIRE INSURANCE NOTARY PUBLIC

Lehman's
CLOTHING HOUSE
MENS AND BOYS OUTFITTERS
810 CALHOUN STREET
Fort Wayne, Ind.

MAY

I 91

SATISFACTION!

We Endeavor to Satisfy With Service

It is the aim of the officers of the Farmers & Merchants State Bank never to lose sight of the fact that a bank is a semi-public institution deriving its right to a profit from the service which it gives.

A bank does a large amount of work for its customers that is practically nothing but the exchange of one dollar for another. This work is of course done at a loss and is done on the theory that when the customer has a profitable business the bank will receive it, and thus a business will be built up, which in the aggregate, will be profitable.

We will appreciate your business and will aim to serve you that you will appreciate our services.

This Bank Will Help You Save.

Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank

Capital Stock, - $25,000

Spencerville, Ind.

The Bank of Personal Services

SPENCERVILLE

Mrs. Pauline Murray left last week to spend the summer with her daughter at Hicksville.

Miss Ellen Lake took the teachers examination at Fort Wayne last Saturday.

Gale and Ada Bowser were visitors on Sunday at the home of their uncle, Homer Bowser and family near Huntertown.

The social meeting of the C. C. Club has been postponed until Friday, May 11, ann will be held at the home of Mrs. Golden High.

The Misses Elisabeth Thorne, Nellie Shull, Beatrice Wasson, Audra Wasson and Mabel Rhoades left Monday morning to accept positions in Fort Wayne.

The directors of the White City Cemetery Association met at the home of B. F. Markle Friday evening to make plans for the coming year.

Mr. and Mrs Darrel Van Buskirk of Fort Wayne, Mr. and Mrs. William Vallieu and family and Mrs. Clara Smith of Harlan, were Sunday guests at the James Vallieu home.

Walter Tyndall and Walter Beerbower have accepted positions at South Bend.

Miss Ida Reed an over Sunday guest of Miss Bertha Thornburg at Columbia City.

Alva Place, wife and babe of Ft. Wayne, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Vol Hay.

The Mite Box opening will be held at the M. E. Church on Sunday evening. A special program is being prepared.

Miss Florence Beams is spending a few days with her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Klopfenstein, near Leo.

Mr. and Mrs. Olen Helf of Defiance, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Fay Reichelderfer and son and Mr. and Mrs. Houch and son of Fort Wayne were Sunday guests of Joel Betz and wife.

Mrs. LeAnna Steward was very pleasantly surprised on Saturday evening by members of her Sunday School class and several others in the appreciation of the faithful services given in behalf of the class. A potluck supper was enjoyed and games were played. The class presented Mrs. Steward with a beautiful candy jar.

Start Them Right Raise More Chicks

[illegible] feeding the genuine and only

Conkey's

The Original

Buttermilk Starting Feed

[illegible]

Try It and You'll Never be Without It

[illegible]

Sold and Recommended by

[illegible]

ENROLL

IN THE

FORD WEEKLY PURCHASE PLAN

◆ ◆ ◆

$5 Will Start You on the way to Ford Ownership

Recognizing the universal desire for motor car ownership, we have given our co-operation to the New Ford Weekly Purchase Plan.

Here is your opportunity to become the owner of an automobile in a simple yet practical way which will enable you to pay for the car out of your earnings. Your weekly payments deposited with us will draw interest.

If you would like to own an automobile start today, and before you realize it you will be driving your own car, enjoying all the advantages of motor transportation.

Ask us for full particulars or go to your Ford Dealer, F. W. Silberg.

◆ ◆ ◆

Farmer's & Merchants State Bank

SPENCERVILLE, IND.

Patronize the advertisers.

Mrs. Vern Wilmot and son left Saturday morning for Detroit to visit her daughter, Mrs. John House and husband.

The nursing training class will hold their review meeting on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

[illegible] and family of near [illegible], Mrs. Emila Gloyd and [illegible] were Sunday guests of Mrs. [illegible]

[illegible]

For good glasses see Griest at American Building Hicksville, Ohio.

Miss Dorothy Wilmot of Fort Wayne, came Saturday evening to visit Wesley Zimmerman and wife.

Miss Marjorie Hollabaugh and Miss Florence Beams visited the Leo High school on Friday

[illegible]

Sunday School Report.

The following is a true and correct report of the various Sunday Schools in this neighborhood for last Sunday.

Christian	95	$ 4.94
M. P.	60	5 74
Lutheran	106	5.57
M. E. Spencer	98	5 60
Lutheran	100	6 16
Hewville U. B.	60	3.77
Christian	73	2 77
[illegible]	79	3.80
[illegible]	62	2.24
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]

Wonder what an oyster thinks about.

C. R Baumgartner, D V M

Veterinarians

OFFICE and HOSPITAL
SPENCERVILLE, - IND.

Phones—Office No. 7

F W Silberg, D V M

[illegible]

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

MAY

L 912

The Joy of Living

By
Sidney Gowing
Illustrations by
ELLSWORTH YOUNG

Copyright 19[illegible] by Sidney Gowing

COUSIN ALICK

SYNOPSIS.—Disliking the prospect of a month's visit to her austere aunt, Lady Erythea Lambe, at Jervaulx abbey, and her cousin, Alexander Lambe, Aimee, vivacious daughter of the Very Reverend Viscount Scroope, meets a young man who laughingly introduces himself as "Billy," American. The two ride on his motorcycle, the "Flying Sphinx," and part. With Georgina Berners, her cousin, Aimee sets out for Jervaulx. She forces Georgina to impersonate her at Jervaulx, and she goes on a holiday. Aimee again meets Billy. He tells her his name is Spencer, and she gives hers as Amy Snookes, at present "out of a job." Billy offers to take her into partnership in selling the Sphinx. In a spirit of madcap adventure, she accepts. The two proceed to the town of Stanhoe, taking separate lodgings in Ivy cottage. While Aimee is secretly visiting Georgina at Jervaulx, the place is burglarized, and the famous Lambe emeralds are stolen. Aimee escapes. Police decide the thieves are "Jack the Climber" and "Calamity Kate," who travel on a motorcycle. Billy, who has shadowed Aimee to Jervaulx, follows the thieves. He is knocked out, but emerges from the fight with the Lambe emeralds. He meets Aimee, with the police in pursuit. In a secure hiding place, a cave among the crag pits, Aimee tells him the whole story. He urges her that she make a frank confession to her father, but on reflection both realize Aimee's good name has been compromised. Assuring Aimee he has a plan to save her, Billy leaves her in the cave and, proceeding to Jervaulx, restores the emeralds to the astounded Lady Erythea. Billy tells a story that satisfies the police, refuses a reward and accepts a chauffeur's job from Lady Erythea. Aimee gets the place of parlor maid at Jervaulx.

CHAPTER XV—Continued.

—7—

"Ladies," he said gravely, "Miss Amy Snooks. Late of Scroope Towers." And took his leave.

Aimee said "good-evening" shyly, and seated herself. It occurred to her that she had never seen so many plain women gathered at one table. With the exception of the cook, they were all angular and scraggy. Pulling herself together with an effort, Aimee took a generous mouthful from a slice of thick bread and butter. The fewer words the better, until she knew her ground. She seemed to detect an air of faint hostility in the others.

"What's the feedin' like at Scroope?" asked an elderly housemaid opposite her, in a hollow voice.

"They fare pretty good," said Aimee, with her mouth full of bread and butter, "but the place is dull. I been at home some time."

"You won't be 'ere long," said the pageboy regretfully, neglecting his tea to stare at her.

"Why not?" said Aimee with some pertness.

"You're a sight too good-lookin'," replied the page gloomily.

"Albert!" said the cook with austerity, "pass this cup o' tea an' don't talk rubbish!"

Aimee took refuge behind her stoneware teacup. She was aware of a crossfire of glances, so sour and sidelong, that the very milk seemed to curdle in sympathy.

* * * * * * *

The morning sun, full of the promise of a fair day, shone through the windows of the long drawing room. Aimee, in a snow-white cap and apron, was wielding a feather brush among priceless knick-knacks. Her manner of dusting was desultory.

"I wonder how long I can stick it?" she murmured in despondent tones. A Watteau shepherdess escaped destruction by a miracle.

"In all my life I never saw such a lot of frumps. And the taste it leaves in one's mouth—it's awful. It's all very well sitting tight and saying nothing. I shall break out—I know I shall, unless I can see Billy soon."

She observed a large photograph of the Rev. and Hon. Alexander Lambe, in an ornate silver frame, standing on a table. Aimee recognized the portrait, and flicked at it viciously with the feather brush. She miscalculated, the portrait crashed on to the floor. When she picked it up the glass was shattered.

"That's torn it. All breakages come off my wages. I wish it had been his silly face!"

At that moment Miss Georgina Berners entered by one of the French windows. She was aware of a slimmer and more youthful figure than any she had yet seen in the household. Georgina made a point of always being civil to her [illegible] servants.

"[illegible] the new parlor maid?" she [illegible]

[illegible] and faced her.

"[illegible]!" she exclaimed.

[illegible]

You'll give the whole show away!"

"Honk! Honk! Honk!" said Georgina.

Aimee had once heard a physician declare that sympathy and kindness merely made hysterics worse. It was time to change the treatment. She grabbed her cousin by the shoulders.

"Shut up that beastly row!" said Aimee fiercely, shaking her till her teeth rattled. "Stop it! Do you want to get me handcuffed and put in the cells? Idiot!"

Georgina gasped, choked, and sat up. She clung to her cousin desperately.

"I will be quiet. I will," she said faintly. "Wh-wha-what does it mean, Aimee? Why—?"

"Try to behave like a reasonable being, and I'll tell you."

"Yes, yes! I'm better now, dear."

Aimee inspected her and, judging the danger to be past, kissed her affectionately. After a cautious glance at the windows she proceeded, as Billy would have phrased it, to put her cousin wise.

Georgina, having heard her to the end, pressed both hands pathetically to the sides of her head.

"And—you're living in the servants' hall?" she said feebly.

"It's no catch, I can tell you, Georgie. But one mustn't grumble. Billy's living at the garage—in a green uniform with brass buttons."

"That—that extraordinarily good-looking young chauffeur?" said Georgina, staring at her. "Then he is—"

"Now don't get sentimental," said Aimee warningly. "Yes, he is not bad-looking, is he? Billy's great. If it hadn't been for him—" she checked herself. "Don't you see what an excellent arrangement it is, my being here—in spite of the little drawbacks?"

Georgina gave a sigh—positively of relief.

"It's better than having you wandering about the country, getting into all sorts of horrible scrapes. It will have to come out soon, and then Lady Erythea—"

"Yes, yes. Never mind Aunt. What I want you to do, Georgie, is this—oh, bother! Look out!"

Aimee seized her brush and, darting to the sideboard, began dusting busily. A step was heard on the gravel, and Mr. Alexander Lambe entered by the window.

"Cousin Aimee, you are looking pale," he said in tones of concern. "It is delightful out of doors, the air is so balmy. Shall we—er—take a little walk in the rose—"

Alexander stopped short, and his features frose. He had caught sight of Aimee's face, with the light full upon it, reflected in the mirror before her. He stared for a moment with remarkable intentness.

Aimee Flourished the Feather Brush in His Face.

"Who is this?" he said sharply, stepping towards her. There was menace in his voice. "Who are you?"

Aimee, preparing to meet her destiny, turned composedly and faced him. She dropped him a small curtsey.

"Please sir, the parlor maid," she said.

Mr. Lambe's eyes were nearly starting out of his head.

"Parlor maid? You?" he said sternly. "You are the woman who drove that motorcycle. I could vouch for you anywhere. You are"—he shot the words out with extraordinary vehemence—"you are that [illegible] creature, Calamity Kate! You are the woman who knocked me down!"

[illegible]

placed his thumb on the bell-push.

"Aimee," he said sharply, "go out—go out quickly! I will deal with her."

"What are you going to do?" gasped Georgina. Instead of obeying him she came forward, trembling.

"Go out! I am going to give this woman in charge!"

"In pity's name, don't do that!" Georgina gulped, and struggled for breath. "She—she is your kik-kik-Cousin Aimee!"

Georgina dropped into a chair and began to cry. Alexander, taking his hand from the bell, wondered if she had suddenly become insane.

"Quite right," said Aimee. With the calm of despair she planted herself in front of him, her eyes defiant. "I am your kik-kik-Cousin Aimee. And that's my cousin, Georgina Berners. I made her take my place here, because I thought it would be dull, and Dad insisted on my coming. So now call the police, Cousin Alick, and let's get it over."

It seemed to Alexander that he had suddenly been transported into Bedlam. He stared from Aimee to the gently sobbing Georgina. And then, as the door began to open, Mr. Lambe turned swiftly and caught the handle, preventing the intruder from entering.

"Did you ring, miss?" inquired Mr. Tarbeaux's voice.

"A mistake," said Alexander, quickly. "I will ring if I want you." He closed the door, and peered searchingly at Aimee.

"I do not understand what this means," he said coldly, "but it does not seem an occasion for the intrusion of servants. We are alone. Will you explain?"

Aimee felt a sudden relief; a twinge almost of gratitude. She had not expected Alexander to do anything so sensible.

"I'll make it clear if I can," she said, and, looking Alexander in the face with an angelically simple expression, she told him the tale from the beginning, briefly, yet comprehensively. As she was speaking, Aimee watched Mr. Lambe's face. The waves of emotion that passed over his usually serene features made them interesting, suggesting some delicate instrument subjected to shocks for which it had never been designed. At the end he was gasping faintly, like a stranded but still dignified fish.

"And so," concluded Aimee, "you see it's a piece of my skirt the police have got. And it was I who tripped you up the stairs. I'm sorry—Cousin."

Mr. Lambe passed a somewhat unsteady hand across his forehead. He looked at Aimee, and then turned slowly to Georgina.

"Miss Berners—" he said.

Georgina's answer was a sob. Immediately Aimee stepped across, raised her from her chair and, with an arm round her waist, faced Alexander.

"Stop! Not a word from you to Georgina!" she said defiantly. "There's no one to blame but me. Everything she's done, I made her do. She wanted me to own up. All this, she's done to try and save me. Georgie's the best thing that ever happened."

Alexander looked at Aimee.

"My dear child," he said gently, "I have only one wish and that is to help you."

Aimee's lips parted; she stared at him incredulously. She saw the most human sympathy in the clean-shaven, priestly face; the kindliest light in his large eyes.

"Miss Berners," said Alexander, still more gently, "will you leave me with your cousin? I should like to speak to her alone. I will see you presently, if you will give me an opportunity."

Georgina nodded brokenly, and moved to the window.

"Georgie," whispered Aimee quickly, as she passed, "meet me by the little arbor down the gardens in half an hour—it won't be safe here—after this."

Aimee and Alexander were left together, facing each other. There was an embarrassed pause.

"Tell me, Cousin," said Alexander, quietly, "why have you done this mad thing?"

"Well," said Aimee, for once at a loss, "I—you see—I was afraid of you, Alexander." She glanced up at him almost shyly. "I didn't want to come to Jervaulx. I thought it would suit Georgie much better than me."

Alexander's firm lips twitched very slightly.

"I got fed up at home," continued Aimee, desperately. "Everybody was so solemn. They drove me to it! I just did it on the impulse. And then I—things sort of happened—I—"

She made an [illegible] gesture with her [illegible].

[illegible]

For I can see," he said, "that you have courage."

"No," said Aimee decisively, "it is impossible."

Alexander's eyes became keener. He looked a little contemptuous.

"Are you afraid?" he said. "Do you not see that you must face the consequences of this foolish thing you have done? Once the truth is told, you have nothing to fear from the police."

"The police!" said Aimee scornfully. "I'm not afraid of the police. I'm not much afraid of Aunt Erythea. It isn't that at all. It's—the other thing."

"What other thing?"

Aimee looked at him with growing embarrassment.

"Oh!" she said at last, desperately, "have I got to put it in so many words? My staying at Ivy cottage! Didn't you understand what I told you? I was there—two nights."

Mr. Lambe, to her surprise, did not look forbidding or censorious. Instead, he looked a little puzzled. And in that moment Aimee conceived a liking for Alexander.

"Now that I have seen you, and heard your story," he said, "I attach no importance to that incident, whatever."

"Ah," said Aimee sadly, "but other people will, you see."

Alexander suddenly flushed crimson, and he avoided Aimee's eye. But his face grew peculiarly grim.

"I have only this to say. That man—that Spencer—who dared to expose you to such a situation, is the culprit I wish to see. He deserves—"

Aimee's heel smote the floor.

"Not a word against Billy! It's he who saved me, right from the beginning. He begged me to let him own up. But he has kept my secret, at his own risk, because I wanted it kept. He is a gentleman!"

Alexander winced. At that moment, out of the tail of her eye, Aimee caught sight of a tall figure in overalls crossing the gravel-walk beyond the lawn.

"Here he is!" exclaimed Aimee. "Let him answer for himself, if you want to see him."

She ran to the window and called recklessly:

"Billy!"

Mr. William Spencer looked towards her, glanced quickly left and right to see if the coast was clear, and hurried to join Aimee. He stepped in through the window.

"Billy," said Aimee, "this is my Cousin Alexander. And he's—he knows all about it. It seems this is our finish, Billy."

The two men turned and faced each other.

CHAPTER XVI

"They Must Be Told."

Mr. Lambe's serious eyes had become hard and penetrating as a pair of crystal lenses. They gave the impression of piercing the exterior of the man before him, and reading his mind. Alexander looked, at that moment, rather like an inquisitor of Torquemada's court.

"You are Mr. William Spencer?" said Alexander icily.

"That's so. You don't know me? I guessed you wouldn't. But I remember you very well, though I never connected your name till now," said Billy calmly. "You were chaplain to the Tenth Rutlands, in 1918. Came from China to join 'em, I heard."

Mr. Lambe was silent.

"I was a sub in the Ninety-seventh of the line, lying next the British Seventieth division at Arras," added Billy. "I remember you because you brought in six wounded who got left after the raid on the pillboxes. Two of them were ours. You got the military brass."

Aimee stared at Alexander in blank amazement.

"That will do," interrupted Mr. Lambe impatiently. "We are not dealing with the war. Do you realize," he said in his grimmest tone, "the position in which you have placed this lady?"

Billy looked straight at him.

"You are Miss Scroope's cousin," he said quietly, "and a parson. I guess I'll take lying down, from you, anything you choose to say or do. Of course I realize it, and it's why I'm here. I've been a fool. I didn't seem to know. But I ought to have known."

He sighed.

"Things are so different, where I [illegible]

[illegible]

Billy nodded. He turned to Aimee with a smile.

"Don't you worry," he said quietly, "the padre's white."

Billy disappeared with extreme suddenness through the window. Alexander came slowly up to Aimee.

"That young man," he said, "has the heart of a child. It is a good thing to have. And rare, at his age. That does not alter the fact that your situation is dangerous, and even terrible. My decision is final," he said earnestly. "There is but one thing to do. The plain, honest course. Aunt Erythea must be told immediately. Then you will be safe."

"And I repeat it's impossible," returned Aimee quickly. "Can't you see? You understand. And Georgie understands. But there is one who will never understand. My father. He doesn't belong to our time. He'll consider only one thing—that his daughter has been disgraced before all the county. Her name a by-word among the rabble. That's how he'll take it. It will simply be Dad's finish."

Aimee Seized His Hands in Hers.

Aimee sniffed miserably.

"I never thought about it. But Georgie told me what it would mean to my father. And she's right. You don't know Dad."

Alexander had turned rather white. He walked to the door and back, in some agitation.

"It is some years since I have seen your father. But I knew him very well. And I believe you are right. This would be a heavy blow to him. But—it has got to be faced."

"And I will not let Dad face it!" said Aimee hotly. "I don't care, for myself. But I'm not going to have him made miserable—for all the parsons in the country!"

"You have no choice. You do not suppose for a moment this thing can be concealed and overcome!"

Aimee turned to him with supreme confidence.

"Of course I do. Billy will see it through!" she said triumphantly.

Alexander gasped.

"I cannot countenance deceit. The whole thing is known to me—my position is impossible," he said. "I should be abetting a lie."

"There's no need for you to do anything at all. Nobody wanted you to butt in, Alexander. The secret is mine, not yours. Go to Aunt Erythea if you must!" said Aimee bitterly. "Oh, I'm not complaining—I can see that you must. Only you'll do it without my sanction. Go to her, and tell her all you know about me."

Alexander groaned. For awhile he was silent. The perspiration stood out on his forehead. The anguish in his face was so plain that even Aimee felt compunction.

Alexander sighed aloud.

"I shall keep silence," he said. "It is impossible for me to betray a woman's secret without her consent—or to utter one word that may affect her reputation. But what will come of it—"

"Ah!" said Aimee eagerly, "you need know nothing at all. Whatever happens, I'll keep you out of it."

"On the contrary! I implore you, whatever difficulty arises, to come to me. I—I will do all I can." He gulped. "I want to help you, Aimee."

Aimee seized his hands in hers.

"Alexander," she cried breathlessly, "I am sorry I knocked you down!"

The next moment she had fled through the window.

* * * * * * *

Half an hour later Aimee, a somewhat [illegible]

[illegible]

There she is—oh bother!—Alexander again!"

Aimee retreated out of sight into the arbor.

Georgina came slowly along the path, her countenance pale and downcast, like a recalcitrant novice who fears the Lady Superior. Mr. Alexander Lambe, looming through the forest of standard roses, quickly overtook her.

"Miss Berners!"

Georgina turned to him with frightened eyes.

"I wish to speak with you," said Alexander with suppressed agitation. "Shall we be seated?" He led her to a rustic seat close against the arbor.

"It distresses me," said Mr. Lambe earnestly, "to see, as I cannot help seeing, the effect this has had upon you. The shock to your sensibility. Let me set your mind at rest, as far as I can. I hardly dare to think how it will all end. But your cousin is as innocent as an infant of any real intent to deceive. She has behaved as inconsequently as a child—that is all. One—one must try to make allowances for her. She should be still at school. That is what I think of her."

"Yes," murmured Georgina miserably, "but what must you think of—me!"

"Of you!" said Mr. Lambe with strong feeling. "Your loyalty—your unflinching attachment to that young madcap, stirs my admiration. It is dreadful to think of what you must have suffered. Purely to protect Aimee. You faced my aunt." Mr. Lambe clasped his hand and drew his breath in sharply. "Yes, you risked the displeasure of my aunt! And—of course, the police. For days this sword of Damocles has been hanging over your blameless head. You—you have not been guilty of deceit. No, no! Only of silence. I think you have behaved, on the whole, admirably."

"Oh!" gasped Georgia faintly, hardly daring to believe her ears, "you cannot mean it!"

"I do mean it!" exclaimed Mr. Lambe warmly. "Miss Berners, from the first hour I saw you, I was convinced of your—your essential goodness! It betrays itself in all that you do. Anything that is underhand or questionable, glides away from you—" proclaimed Mr. Lambe, with a sweeping movement of his hand, "as the turbid stream flows over the riverbed of white marble, leaving its purity unsullied. My admiration for you is greater, if that is possible, than ever."

Georgina's heart fluttered delightfully.

"I think," continued Alexander, with growing enthusiasm, "that you exist to sacrifice yourself for others, Miss Berners. You have more than piety—you have charity. It is one of the sweetest qualities in a woman."

Georgina turned to him with swimming eyes.

"Oh, Mr. Lambe!" she murmured with delicious confusion.

Alexander answered her with a hollow groan. She was startled at the sudden distress in his face.

"The question is not what I think of you," he said bitterly, "but what you think of me! You know the principles I profess, and that I impressed on you. Out of my own mouth I am condemned. How can you feel anything but contempt for me! I have consented to connive at this mad escapade of Aimee's and all its consequences. To keep silent. To—to bolster it up," he said with a gulp. "I have passed my word."

Georgina's eyes shone.

"You have done that!" she cried eagerly. "Why, now that you are on her side, she may be saved from exposure after all! I think it is splendid of you—absolutely splendid!"

"How can you think of me, but as a hypocrite? You do not mean, Miss Berners, that you feel any respect for me now?"

"Mr. Lambe, when I first knew you, I thought you my ideal as a churchman. I think so more than ever. When I was in trouble, and consulted you, I seemed to find you a little hard. Poor Aimee had enough to bear. But now," gasped Georgina, quite carried away, "I consider your conduct noble—really noble! I admire you more than ever."

"Miss Berners," said Alexander, husky with emotion, "if only you knew what a relief it is, that I have not forfeited your regard! I have only known you a few days, but your kindness, your sympathy—" his hand closed almost convulsively on hers—"Miss Berners, may I call you Aimee—I—I mean Georgina—!"

"Poof!"

A stifled, explosive sound caused Mr. Lambe to start violently and look round him.

"Snooks! You're [illegible] Scroope! [illegible]

[illegible]

WOMAN SICK TWO YEARS

Caused by Troubles Women Often Have—Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Medina, New York.—"I had a great deal of trouble such as women often have, and this affected my nerves. For over two years I suffered this way, then I read in the 'Buffalo Times' about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and have taken it with very good results. I am very much better and feel justified in praising the Vegetable Compound to my friends and neighbors who suffer from anything of the kind."—Mrs. WM. H. ADKINS, 311 Erin Road, Medina, N. Y.

Feels Like Girl Sixteen

Rochester, N. Y.—"After my twin girls were born I was all run-down. My neighbors thought I was going to die. I saw your advertisement in the paper and bought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The first bottle helped me and I kept on taking it. I only weighed ninety pounds when I began taking it, and I have gained in weight and feel like a girl of sixteen. I never can say enough for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. NELLIE DOREY, 16 Skuse Park, Rochester, N. Y.

Constipation

Relieved Without The Use of Laxatives

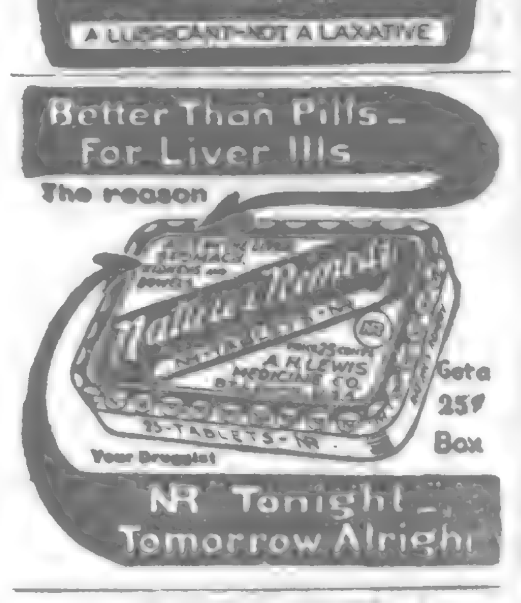
Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe.

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving.

Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication. Try it today.

Nujol

A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE



Better Than Pills— For Liver Ills
The reason
Nature's Remedy
Gets 25¢ Box
Your Druggist
NR Tonight— Tomorrow Alright

WANTED—WOMEN to introduce our line to new prospects. Experience not necessary. Pay $5 to $8 a day. Whole or part time. DEPENDABLE KNIT GOODS COMPANY, Buffalo, New York

DOGS—BLACK ENGLISH AND WELSH SHEPHERDS, 30 generations breeding from proven sires and dams from natural herders. 4-month pups working with old dogs. Few choice of old blue English Bobtails from imported sire and dam. Circulars free. GEORGE BOORMAN, MARATHON, N. Y.

ABSORBINE

Will reduce Inflamed, Strained, Swollen Tendons, Ligaments, or Muscles. Stops the lameness and pain from a Splint, Side Bone or Bone Spavin. No blister, no hair gone and horse can be used. $2.50 bottle at druggists or delivered. Describe your case for special instructions and interesting horse Book 2 A free.

W. F. YOUNG, Inc., 310 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

Collapsing Mountain.

The surface of Black Diamond mountain, near Carmel, Pa., is slowly sinking on account of a fire in the coal beneath. The fire has been raging for 12 years and eventually, it is feared, the side of the mountain will drop.

Read and heed. Yes, indeed!

Sure Relief

FOR INDIGESTION

BELL-ANS

[illegible]

GREEN MOUNTAIN

ASTHMA

Hoosier News Briefly Told

Terre Haute.—Labor organizations of Terre Haute probably will buy a home within the next few weeks. A 60-day option on the building occupied by the Phoenix club at Fifth and Walnut streets has been obtained by the Labor Temple association. Efforts will be made by the Labor Temple to dispose of the lot owned by it at Eighth and Cherry streets. The proceeds from the lot together with money on hand will enable the associations to pay for the Phoenix club property.

Monticello.—Permission to raise the bridges and repair roads affected by the Norway dam, which will hold back the water in Shafer lake, was granted the Indiana Hydro-Electric Power company by the White county board of commissioners at a special session. This permit brings to a close a controversy between the power company and the farmers of the north part of the county. The power company will pay all the costs of the changes.

Jeffersonville.—Willard Swartz, age forty-eight, and Arthur Wolf, age twenty-three, both of Utica, were found guilty by a jury in the Clark circuit court at Jeffersonville and were each sentenced to serve six months at the Indiana state farm, fined $50, and disfranchised for four years. It is alleged they stole two hams valued at $10 from Edward Clappoart, a farmer of Utica township.

Logansport.—Seventeen names were signed to a remonstrance against the bond issue for the construction of the 17th street road. The contract for the construction of the road was let by the county commissioners several days ago, on a bid of $90,000. The remonstrance alleges that the proposed improvement is not a public necessity. The date for the hearing has not been announced.

Indianapolis.—The Wabash Valley Electric company petitioned the public service commission at Indianapolis for authority to buy the Putnam Electric company, Cayuga Electric company, Martinsville Gas and Electric company, Spencer Light, Power and Water company, Gosport Electric company, Morgan County Light and Power company, and Roachdale Electric company.

Indianapolis.—Recommendations that the state farm colony for feebleminded remain at Butlerville, instead of being removed to a site near Fort Wayne, are made in the report of a special investigating committee which was submitted to Governor McCray. The provisions of the report mean that the institution will not be moved, it was said.

Shelbyville.—The Shelby county council, meeting here in special session, appropriated $2,000 for the cost of the construction of a permanent drive from a highway to the Shelby county infirmary. The council also appropriated $1,500 to meet fees which are made payable to the county auditor under a law which was passed by the last session of the legislature.

Warsaw.—Thomas Keesey, seventy-two years old, retired United Brethren minister, is dead at his home in Silver Lake, following an illness of paralysis. He leaves the widow and three children. Rev. Mr. Keesey was well known throughout northern Indiana, having filled numerous pulpits in the St. Joseph conference.

Indianapolis.—Prohibition in Indiana received a near death blow when the Supreme court handed down a decision which virtually says possession of intoxicating liquor is not an offense. The court held unconstitutional the 1921 amendment to the 1917 prohibition law which made possession of intoxicating liquor unlawful.

Laporte.—Lacrosse and Wanatah carried off the honors in the county oratorical and reading contest at Laporte. First honor in the oration was won by Frank Machler of Lacrosse, and the first place in reading was won by Elmer Kettner of Wanatah.

Seymour.—Deputy state game wardens, assisted by members of the Jackson County Fish, Game and Forest Protective association, have started a campaign to enforce protection laws. Several arrests have been made for illegal possession of seines and nets.

Goshen.—Mrs. William Delcamp, age fifty, and her niece, Electa Hardesty, age seven, were burned to death, and William Delcamp, age fifty, was seriously burned when the dwelling, in which they lived at the edge of Goshen, burned.

Valparaiso.—Morris Claussen, age five, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gust Claussen, was killed at Valparaiso when the bicycle on which he and another boy were riding struck a [illegible] overturned and threw the Claussen boy under the rear wheels of a delivery truck.

Indianapolis.—State money is available for the maintenance of the free employment [illegible] of the state [illegible]

[illegible]

Anderson.—At a meeting of the Muncie, Elwood and Anderson cantons of the Patriarchs Militant Independent Order of Odd Fellows here, the formation of the Third battalion, First regiment of Indiana, was completed, with E. F. Spradley, of Muncie, president; Charles Benbow, of Anderson, vice-president, and J. C. Sipe, Muncie, adjutant. H. T. Moore, of Terre Haute, colonel of the regiment, addressed the meeting.

Franklin.—Retail clothing dealers of the Fourth district met in Franklin and discussed trade problems. Walter Caplinger, of Madison, president of the organization, had charge of the meeting, which was attended by representatives from Madison, Greensburg, Seymour, Columbus, North Vernon and Edinburg. A. L. Taylor, secretary of the Franklin chamber of commerce, made an address of welcome.

Sullivan.—Laurel Welch and Harry Buckley of Shelburn, who were convicted by a jury in the Sullivan circuit court recently of the robbery of a filling station, and who were sentenced by Judge W. F. Wood to terms of from ten to twenty-one years in the Indiana reformatory, have given bond for an appeal to the Indiana supreme court and have been released from prison. Their appeal bonds are $10,000 each.

Muncie.—To protect the property of the Indiana State Normal school here from being near unsightly buildings, the city council will be asked to pass a special zoning ordinance for the part of town of which the institution is the center. The proposed ordinance provides that no permits will be issued for the construction of buildings save dwellings and private garages within certain distances of the school campus.

Laporte.—Northern Indiana farmers near Laporte are suffering from lack of farm labor. In some places help cannot be obtained at any price. Farm laborers are now getting from $30 to $40 a month, with board, room and washing included. The scarcity of labor is said to be due to the migration of farmer boys to the cities, to work in factories and offices.

Greensburg.—Under the weight of a 25-ton traction engine and crusher an iron bridge spanning a creek, near Springhill, collapsed. Roy Cheek and Edgar White who were taking the outfit from the farm of Floyd Delwert near Clarksburg to the stone quarries at Harris City had a narrow escape from injury when the structure collapsed.

Indianapolis.—Governor McCray, at Indianapolis announced the appointment of Eph Dailey of Fort Wayne to a four-year term on the state industrial board, at a salary of $4,000 a year. Mr. Dailey succeeds Kenneth Dresser of Peru, whose four-year term has expired. Mr. Dailey will begin his term at once. Both men are Republicans.

Fort Wayne.—A marked shortage of labor is shown by the report of the Indiana free employment bureau at Fort Wayne. Last week in the men's department there were 340 positions open and 290 persons were placed. Of those given work, 239 were common laborers. In the women's department there were 74 calls and 41 were given positions.

Ligonier.—Miss Rosabelle Brode of Ligonier won the first prize for Indiana in the national safety essay contest under the auspices of the highway education contest board. She will receive a gold medal and a prize of $15.

Delphi.—Arthur Shaw, age seventeen, was fatally injured and three other persons were hurt when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a Monon freight train after it had stalled on a grade crossing at Delphi.

Columbus.—Miss Kate Irwin, stenographer, was seriously injured when she was struck by an automobile driven by a young girl and dragged several feet along the pavement. She was severely cut and bruised and her scalp was badly lacerated.

Shelbyville.—A conference for the purpose of discussing plans for the organizatoin of a branch of the Young Men's Christian association was held in Shelbyville. Shelbyville business and professional men are interested in the organization.

Seymour.—C. H. Hurd, of Indianapolis, a consulting engineer, has entered into a contract with the Seymour city council to make a survey for a new drainage system. The cost of the improvement will be approximately $100,000.

Columbus.—Miss Rosamond Greenlee of Clifford was the winner in the annual discussion contest held in Hope. All of the high schools in Bartholomew county, outside Columbus, were represented in the contest.

Bluffton.—Mrs. Roscoe Slusher, age thirty-seven, died at the county hospital at Bluffton, four hours after she had been burned in an explosion of kerosene at her home five miles south of Warren.

Terre Haute.—Oliver Francis Gray, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gray, died at Terre Haute of burns suffered Friday when he fell over a [illegible]

[illegible]

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

Copyright, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.

LESSON FOR MAY 6

SAMUEL—JUDGE AND PROPHET

LESSON TEXT—I Sam. 12:1-25.

GOLDEN TEXT—Only fear the Lord, and serve him in truth with all your heart; for consider how great things he hath done for you.—I Sam. 12:24.

REFERENCE MATERIAL—I Chron. 9:22; 29:29; Ps. 99:6; Jer. 15:1; Hb. 11:32, 33.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Samuel, the Boy Who Served in God's House.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Boy Who Heard God's Call.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Samuel, the Upright Judge.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Samuel, the True Prophet.

Samuel means "asked of God." God gave him in answer to his mother's prayer. She promised to give him back to God. In his early childhood, his mother cared for and taught him. There is no teacher or nurse like the mother of the child. At an early age, she handed him over to the care of Eli to minister unto the Lord in the tabernacle. While ministering unto the Lord in the tabernacle, God called him. He responded to this call and spent a long life in useful service to God and his nation as judge and prophet. Our lesson today is his farewell address.

After Saul was made king, he retired and turned over the authority to the newly-chosen ruler.

I. Samuel's Challenge to the People. (vv. 1-5).

1. Reminder of the Way the King Had Been Given. (v. 1). He showed that they were directly responsible for the change in government. Though keenly feeling the reflection upon himself and their ingratitude to God in their demand for a king, he has not resisted their wish. He reminded them that they now had what they wanted.

2. Review of His Own Administration. (vv. 2, 3). (1) Walk from childhood (v. 2). Samuel's was a remarkable life; from childhood to old age he had lived an upright and pure life. How satisfying it must be to come to the end of life and to look back even to childhood days without regrets. (2) Career as judge and ruler (v. 3). He boldly challenged them to show where and how he had even in the smallest matters defrauded or oppressed anyone. He courted the most searching investigation of his life, even calling upon the Lord Himself to bear witness.

3. The Vote of Confidence by the People. (vv. 4, 5). It was Samuel's right as he laid down the reins of government to have his record vindicated and to have his integrity established beyond a doubt so that no evil-minded man could ever be able to cast reproach upon him.

II. Samuel Reviews God's Dealings from the Time of Moses. (vv. 6-15).

He reasoned with them concerning the good hand of the Lord upon them from the time of Moses. Though they with ingratitude turned from the Lord and demanded a king like the other nations, he had acceded to their request and set a king over them.

1. National Prosperity Conditioned by Obedience. (v. 14). Though they had displeased God in choosing a king, if they would fear the Lord and render obedience, national prosperity would still be given. The nation which will not walk in God's way cannot expect God's blessing.

2. Disobedience to God Meant the Nation's Ruin (v. 15). It is folly to ask God's blessing upon a nation while it is living in rebellion against Him. True statesmanship is to find out God's will concerning the nation and so direct it that in all its laws and customs there may be harmony with that will.

III. Samuel's Own Vindication. (vv. 16-19).

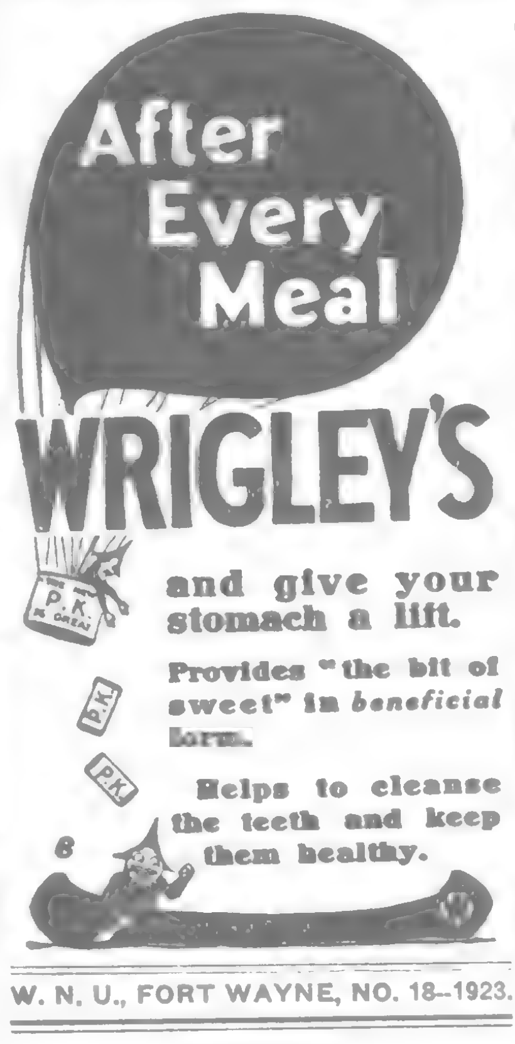
This was such a critical hour in the history of the nation that Samuel sought to indelibly impress this moment on their hearts. This he did by means of the thunder and rain out of season. Harvest time was not the season for thunder and rain so when it came at the call of Samuel, the people were frightened. The sign had its designed effect. The people confessed their sin of asking for a king and besought Samuel to pray for them.

IV. Samuel's Gracious Response. (vv. 20-25).

1. "Fear Not—Serve the Lord With All Your Heart." (vv. 20-22). Samuel did not minimize their sin but assured them if they would serve the Lord wholeheartedly, He would not forsake them.

2. "God Forbid That I Should Sin Against the Lord in Ceasing to Pray for You" (v. 23). Though the people had rejected Samuel, yet he had such magnanimity of soul that he had not allowed their ingratitude to keep him from [illegible] for them. Such failure on his part he regarded as sin.

[illegible]



and give your stomach a lift.

Provides "the bit of sweet" in beneficial form.

Helps to cleanse the teeth and keep them healthy.

Conspiracy.

First Doctor—I don't favor this safety-first movement at all.

Second Doctor—Neither do I. It looks to me like a combination in restraint of trade.—Life.

A Long Look Ahead.

"It is amazing how many people are already planning their next summer automobile trips," said one of the young men at the Detroit Automobile club headquarters in the Hotel Tuller. "Members come in and ask for maps of certain tours as well as 'logs' covering the routes. I asked one man what was the idea of the midwinter activity. He said he and his wife liked to map a tour, then read all they could of the country and cities through which they expected to pass. Then they traveled with their eyes open and got much more pleasure.—Detroit News.

Baby's little dresses will just simply dazzle if Red Cross Ball Blue is used in the laundry. Try it and see for yourself. At all good grocers.—Advertisement.

Weally?

"Every woman who pronounces 'r' as 'w' will find a mate; it appeals to all that is chivalrous in a man." From the stage directions of "Dear Brutus", by J. M. Barrie. We hardly think so, Sir James. For our part, if one should call us "Wobert" we should feel like pinching her.—Boston Evening Transcript.

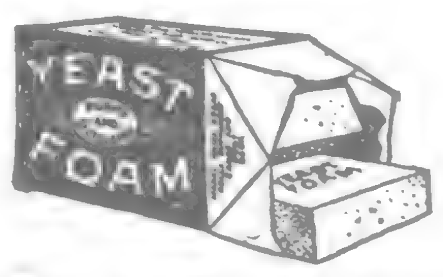
One minute of real work beats an hour's talking about it.

It is about as hard to control frowns as it is to force smiles.

Yeast Foam Good bread-makers everywhere prefer it

What a girl learns about oven temperature when baking bread is valuable when it comes to baking cakes, pies, meats, fish, etc.

Send for free booklet "The Art of Baking Bread"



Northwestern Yeast Co.
1730 North Ashland Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

Find What CANADA has to offer YOU!

If your dream of success seems like a hopeless ambition, if you are discouraged trying to get ahead on high priced land, if your present location fails to give you opportunity, there is a new deal for you, a new chance in the fertile, virgin farms of Western Canada, where wheat produces 20 to 40 bushels to the acre, where the 1922 crop was biggest in history, where oats, barley and hay and fodder crops are the basis of a great dairy industry, and a man's work brings him success and prosperity.

Low Priced Land—the Last Great West

In Western Canada you still can buy virgin prairie land at $15 to $20 per acre, on long terms if desired, near to town, railroads, etc.—land such as has for many years produced the world's prize winning wheat, oats, barley, flax, rye, alfalfa. Canada had no "war time" land boom; prices are not inflated—you get in on the ground floor.

Taxes Favor the Farmer as Values Increase

The tax laws of Western Canada encourage the producing farmer. The tax on land is reduced when it is brought under cultivation—while on your buildings, machinery, improvements, personal property, automobiles, there is no tax at all. A single crop is often worth more, acre for acre, than the cost of the land.

Rent Now—Buy Later Pay Out of Profits

Canada welcomes the industrious settler. What you have now isn't so important. If your capital is small, or you cannot sell your present buildings to advantage, rent a fertile Canadian farm and "try it out" for a season or two. Make a good living, increase your capital, and buy later. Farms may be rented from successful settlers on easy terms; in some cases with option of purchase.

Buy on Exceptional Terms—32 Years to Pay

For the benefit of those wishing to buy land a national non-profit sharing organization—the [illegible] has been [illegible] with head office at Winnipeg, and [illegible] office at St. Paul. This [illegible] offers selected land convenient to railways [illegible] at $15 to $20 per acre [illegible] very small cash payment; no further payment until third year; balance extended over thirty years, but purchaser may pay up and obtain title at any time if desired. Interest six percent per annum on deferred payments.

Special Excursion Rates to Western Canada

In order that you may inspect the land—see for yourself—judge of its value and fertility—[illegible] on the first and third [illegible] of each month. [illegible] $2 for the round trip, available from all [illegible] trip of inspection. Mail the coupon.

FREE HOMESTEADS are still available in some localities. Canada welcomes TOURISTS—Come and see our country for yourself. No passports required.

Address Nearest Agent:

W. S. NETHERY, Desk W, 82 E. [illegible] St., Columbus, Ohio; M. J. [illegible], Desk W, 116 Monument Pl., Indianapolis, Ind.

Please send me your Free book on Canada. I am [illegible] interested in

[illegible] Canada
Eastern Canada
[illegible]
Diversified Farming
Special Railway Rates

Name...

.......................R. F. D. No................... or Street Address

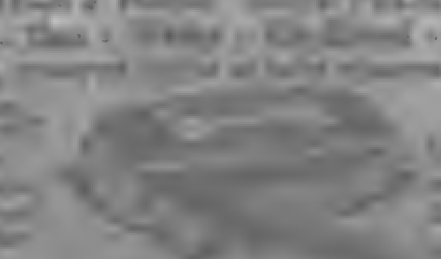
P. O.............................State..............

SHINOLA

AMERICA'S HOME SHOE POLISH

[illegible]



MAY

Reese Bros. Will Sell All Their Property in St. Joe at

ABSOLUTE AUCTION

SAT. MAY 5

at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

Two large fireproof business properties on south side of West Main Street in St. Joe, Indiana.

Desciptions of Properties

One two story cement block building with full basement, furnace heat, electric lights, large plate glass display windows, well ventilated and well lighted. This building is now occupied by the E. Leighty Grocery

Also a brick store room, two story, now occupied by Schlosser Bros. cream station.

Personal Property as follows:

Corrugated lumber shed located on rear of lots occupied by store buildings. Easy to move and will be sold in three sections or as a whole. Will make splendid garage, hen house, machine shed, etc. Will save any farmer money. About 100 cement blocks, gasoline filling station pump, some store fixtures, shelving, etc.

A Genuine Auction

The owners, who are non-residents, have commissioned Drake Bros. of Montpelier, Ohio, te sell these valuable properties at auction without any upset price, reserve, by-bids, or protection. MAKE ARRAMGEMENTS WITH YOUR BANKER. Come to this sale and take advantage of any sacrifice the owners may have to make. If it sells too high, leave it alone. But if it sells too cheap, buy it yourself.

FREE! 10 Cash Prizes FREE!

Every person gets a free ticket at opening of sale. Meet us at 2:30 p. m.

Terms on Real Estate

25 % cash on sale day. Balance on long time at 6 %. Possession in 30 days.

TERMS ON PERSONAL PROPERTY, Cash

Reese Bros. Owners

DRAKE BROS., Auctioneers

Montpelier, Ohio

NEWS OF THE TOWN

Mr. and Mrs. John Ulm spent Tuesday in Fort Wayne.

Mrs Tom White has been quite ill for the past few days.

Glen Cole and Amos Levy. spent Sunday afternoon at Hicksville.

J. C. Baily and wife visited their daughter, Mrs. Marvin Poper and family Sunday.

Mrs. Lillian Buckingham will entertain the Lutheran Missionary Society Saturday afternoon.

Miss Susan Sechler had a recent all day guest, Mrs. Jennie Steward of Iowa.

For Sale—22 acres of land for sale, $50.00 per acre.

Mrs. Mary Shuff.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. F. Abel left Tuesday morning for a few days visit. with their son, Glen, and wife at Peru.

Francis Hickman, wife and son spent from Friday until Sunday guests of her parents, E. A. Bayliss near Ney, Ohio.

Our special correspondent, Mrs C. C. Bassett, was quite sick the fore part of the week, hence the scarcity of local items. We hope she will soon be able to get out.

Relatives here have received word of the death of Mrs. Joseph Saylor of near Butler, which occurred early Monday. The funeral took place Wednesday from the home.

,Edith Widney will spend Friday and Saturday of this week a guest of Mrs. Will Henderson at Antwerp. The two ladies will attend the concert to be given by Schumann-Heink at Fort Wayne, Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs Ray Reasoner and Mr. and,Mrs. Sam Mumaw visited a dog farm at Bryan, Ohio, Sunday afternoon to purchase a police dog to protect the Leighty Apple orchards.

C. J. Foltz, daughter Pauline, and Mrs. Margaret Foltz of Holgate, Ohio, visited from Wednesday until Friday with J.P. Buckingham and wife and Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Foltz. Mr. Foltz returned with them for a few days visit.

H. C. Cook of Lepsic, Ohio, and J. H. Norris and Harry Randall of Ottawa, Ohio,spent Saturday night and Sunday with William Randall and wife. Little Harry Randall,Jr. who has been staying with his grandparents here, returned with his father to Ottowa, Sunday evening.

Ed Miser and wife entertained at a birthday dinner Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Miser and son, Joe, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miser and son, Carlton, Mrs. Martha Miser and Mrs. Nina Hollett of Waterloo and Mr. and Mrs. Will Franks of Garrett, honoring Mrs. Martin Miser.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Buckingham and Mrs. J. E. Foltz visited Sunday afternoon at the Al Hull home northeast of town. The father and son, Floyd, were in a serious condition. The latter was taken to the Stamets hospital at Fort Wayne, Monday, for a few weeks treatement.

Patronize The Advertisers.

Frank Sechler celebrated his birthday Saturday by fishing. He reports he got some nice ones.

GLASSES—$2.50 up, Benj. F. Griest, Eyesight specialist, American Bldg., Hicksville, Ohio.

Mrs' Albert Wade and little daughter left Sunday for Detroit, to join her husband,who is employed in the Ford Auto Plant.

Frank Kinsey, who has been suffering with neuralgia in his head for the past two weeks is able to be about again.

Mrs. Mary Bets is much improved from her illness which has confined her to her home for a week or more.

NOTICE—I have taken the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazeett route and will have extra Sunday papers on sale at Brown's Restaurant.

Glen Brown.

Rev. Clyde Havens returned home Sunday from the Hope Methodist hospital at Fort Wayne where he had submitted to an operation for appendicitis recently. His condition is very satisfactory.

John Bets and wife entertained Sunday his sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs Olen Helf of Defiance, and nephew, Faye Reichelderfer, wife and son and Homer Houck,wife and son of Fort Wayne.

Rev. John B. Dickson has resigned his pastoral work with the Hicksville Church of Christ to accept an offer to become pastor of a church near Chicago at an advance of $650 in salary.

Meade Baker, who for the past two years has been superintendent of the Coburn's Corners Sunday School has resigned his office and Abner Trostel has been selected to succeed him. Mr. and Mrs. Baker are moving to St. Joe is the reason for Mr. Baker's resignation.

J. C. Provines has resigned as President of the DeKalb County Farm Bureau and by unanimous choice of the members Mr Larry Brandon, now trustee of Union Township, has been elected. Mr. Brandon is an energetic farmer and has been successful in his business.

Members of Concord Township Sunday School Council attended a meeting of the DeKalb County Council at the M. E. Church, in Auburn, Sunday afternoon. The purpose of the meeting was to make plans for the State Convention to be held at Indianapolis, June 19-21 inclusive. Over one hundred delegates from DeKalb are expected to go, among whom will be the county officers of the Young Peoples Division.

Orange Herrick and wife and Roy Kinsey and wife visited Thursday and Friday with the former's son, R. D. Herrick and family and others at Fort Wayne. Thursday afternoon they attended the anniversary of the founding of the I. O. O. F. Lodge. Mrs. Herrick and children returnd home with them to remain until Sunday visiting relatives here,being joined then by her husband. They together with Mr. and Mrs. Orange Herrick spent Sunday with the Roy Kinsey family.

We Don't Want to Sell

You a Florence Oil Stove and have you dissatisfied. But we do want to sell you a Florence Oil Stove because you will be satisfied--we gaurantee that. The prices have not been raised despite the recent advances. Ask you neighbor, maybe he has one.

CORN PLANTERS

A good supply of corn planters and corn plows. We are holding the prices down.

WM. CURIE

HARDWARE IMPLEMENTS

CHICK FEEDERS

Chick feeders of all kinds. Chicken coops, Troughs. Etc. A most complete line.

WE ARE READY TO SERVE YOU WITH QUALITY, QUANTITY AND PRICE. A TRIAL TELLS THE STORY.

MAY

L 912

589

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXXVII ST. JOE DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, MAY 10, 1923 No. 10

Reese Property Sold

The Reese property in St. Joe consisting of the cement block building, occupied by the Ed Leighty grocery, the brick building adjacent on the east, occupied by the Schlosser's cream station, and the storage shed at the rear, were sold at public auction Saturday afternoon by Drake Bros., real estate auctioneers from Montpelier, Ohio.

Ed Leighty was the highest bidder on the block building and is its new owner. His bid was $1200 The brick building was bid off by J. P. Buckingham for $375. The corrugated steel shed was bought by E. R. Kinsey for $45.

It is a satisfaction to know that Mr. Leighty will continue his clean business here and by owning his own building he will be able to give better service and make even a more pleasing appearance.

Mr. Buckingham will probably rent his building for a time at least.

Mr Kinsey will tear down the old building at the rear of his business lot and will move the new shed he purchased on his lot for storage purposes.

The sale was conducted in a fare and square way. The Drake Bros. lived up to their advertisement to the letter and won the respect of the citizens of St. Joe. The ten cash prizes which they gave away were good drawing cards and held their crowd together in a fine way.

Reese Brothers let this property go at a great sacrifice, but made no particular fuss about it and went away feeling good.

COAL

Fill up and keep filled up. Don't forget that the place to store your coal is in your bins, not in your dealer's yard, not at the mines.

Prices are now lowest of the season with all prospects of them going up, as coal is being mined below the cost of production at the present time.

We are trying to give you good advice. It is up to you to take it.

Place your orders now for the following coals:

Hocking Valley, Egg and Lump
Buffalo White Ash, none better
Hard Coal Chestnut and Egg

Please settle your last season's accounts now and make your credit good.

FEED

Hominy, Bran, Middlings, Tankage and other feeds.

The St. JOE ELEVATOR

Samuel Keesler, Mgr. Grain Dept.
Bert Jackson, Mgr. Coal Dept.

Call on us—glad to see you. Come in whether you want anything or not.

The Lure of a Dog Fight

A public speaker once said: "There are not many moral teachers who can hold the attention of a crowd against the lure of a dog fight."

Neither will the stereotyped, dignified, highbrow advertisement appeal to the average reader, like one that has a live kick in it that will make him sit up and take notice. We want your banking business. We would like to have you as a customer. We come right out frankly and say so, without frills. We have a good bank. The more customers we have the better the service we can render. We offer fair, square, honest treatement. That's the "Word with the bark on it."

St. Joe Valley Bank---A State Bank

County Convention to Be Here

DeKalb county's 58th annual Sunday School Convention, will be held May 22nd and 23rd in the St. Joe churches. The meeting, as planned for this year, is to be such a big affair, that it is going to require all three of the town's places of worship to accomodate the ten convention sessions.

Never in the history of the county association has such real high class Sunday school talent been secured as this year. Two of the speakers hardly ever appear on anything less than state convention programs. One of these is the biggest and best known of the International Association field workers, a man whose services are really hard to obtain for a state meeting, being so much in demand.

St. Joe is planning on entertaining the largest Sunday school gathering ever brought together in this county. At least one thousand delegates are expected for the two-day meeting. All delegates who care to stay over night, will be entertained in the St. Joe homes for lodging and breakfast with out charge. Mrs. Grace Sheffer is chairman of the entertainment committee.

Prof. M. A. Honline, Superintendent of the Educational Division of the International Sunday School Association. Has been religious director of the International Y. M. C. A Director of religious education for years of the United Brethren in Christ churches. Professor of religious education of the Bonebrake Theological seminary. Mr. Honline is today the final word in teacher training, week day schools of religious education and all educational forces within the International Association.

PROF. M. A. HONLINE

Harry G. Rowe—Pastor of the [illegible] Christian church of Warr[illegible] He served as president of the [illegible] Sunday school association [illegible] years adult superintendent of the Illinois association. Led the adult work in Billy Sunday's Chicago campaign. Has been on the programs of most of the state conventions in the middle west. Mr. Rowe is an inspirational as well as a practical speaker, one who knows and who can keep an audience interested every minute.

HARRY G. ROWE

Miss Nellie C. Young—Superintedent of the children's division of the state council of religious education. Considered by those who know as the most efficient children's worker ever on the state force, and one who will round out the DeKalb program, so as to make it the very best possible.

MISS NELLIE C. YOUNG

Officers of Association

Following are the officers of the DeKalb County Sunday School Association.

President, Geo. E. Beugnot, Auburn.

Vice President, Forrest Harding, Corunna.

Secretary-Treasurer, Miss Sadie Coy, Auburn.

Children's Division Supt., Mrs. Mary Knauer, Corunna.

Young People's Division, Miss Dora Carnahan, Auburn R. F. D.

Adult Division, John N. George, Auburn.

Administrative Division, Ward Jackman, Waterloo.

Program for Convention

Following is the program for the two-day session.

Convention Theme—"Christ and the Teacher and Officer."

TUESDAY MORNING
Christian Church

9:00—Registration Headquarters open.

9:30—Song Service, Convention Devotional.

9:50—Remarks, President.

10:00—"The Teacher of Children," Nellie C. Young.

10:30—Township Reports Awarding Penants.

10:50—County Reports.

11:05—"Training the Worker," Harry G. Rowe.

11:40—Announcements.

Offering.

Song

TUESDAY AFTERNOON
Christian Church

1:30—Song Service, Convention

[illegible]—"Place of the Child in Religious Education," M. A. Honline

2:30—Song, Convention

2:35—"An Opportunity," Miss Young.

3:00—Song, Convention

3:05—"Learning to Teach from the Master Teacher," Mr. Rowe

[illegible]—Offering. Announcement. [illegible]

TUESDAY EVENING
Christian Church

7:30—Song Service, Convention.

7:50—"Assets, Liabilities, Investments," Mr. Rowe

Lutheran Church

7:30—Song Service, Convention

7:50—"Child Nature and Child Nurture," Mr. Honline.

WEDNESDAY MORNING
Methodist Protestant Church
Children's Division Conference.
Mrs. Mary Knauer, presiding

9:30—Song Service, Convention

9:45—"Program Plans for Worship." "Proper Use of Hand Work," Miss Young Questionaire conducted by Miss Young.

11:45—Adjourn.

WEDNESDAY MORNING
Christian Church
Young People's Division Conferance
Miss Carnahan, presiding.

9:30—Song Service, Convention.

9:45—"Some Adolescent Characteristics," Mr. Honline.

Round Table Discussion led by Mr. Honline.

11:45—Adjourn.

WEDNESDAY MORNING
Lutheran Church
Adult Division Conference
John N. George presiding.

9:30—Song Service, Convention.

9:45—"A Program of Service in Adult Classes," Mr. Rowe.

Discussion led by Mr. Rowe.

11:45—Adjourn.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON
Christian Church

1:30—Song Service, Convention.

1:50—"Place the Child in the Program," Miss Young.

2:20—Song, Convention.

2:25—"Actualizing the Program," Mr. Rowe.

3:05—"Place of the Bible in Religious Education," Mr. Honline.

3:50—Election and Installation of Officers.

4:20—Offering. Song. Adjourn.

WEDNESDAY EVENING
Christain Church

7:30—Song Service, Convention.

7:50—"The Needs of Religious Education," Mr. Honline.

Lutheran Church

7:30—Song Service, Convention.

7:50—"Three Things for Which the Modern Sunday School Should Stand," Mr. Rowe.

Honored at Wittenberg

Miss Jeanne Mumma, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. A. K. Mumma, of Harlan, was nicely honored at Wittenberg college, Springfield, Ohio, last Friday evening, when she was presented with a certificate of scholarship merit by Dean Shatzer of that institution at the annual Honor Day banquet.

The certificate was presented in recognition of the fact that Miss Mumma was an all "A," or perfect grade student at the college during the first semester of this college year, the only one in the Senior class of 80 to be perfect grade students.

Miss Mumma is a senior at Wittenberg. She received high scholarship honors during her junior year also.

Miss Mumma is prominent in literary, religious and social activities at Wittenberg.

H. S. Play "Civil Service"

[illegible] Senior Class play of [illegible] high school will be given [illegible] and Saturday nights [illegible] week at the school building [illegible] night at eight o'clock

The high school auditorium [illegible] only available place for [illegible]tion was considered [illegible] accommodate the crowd [illegible] night, hence the arrangement [illegible] the second night

Tickets are on sale by any [illegible]ber of the class. Buy for the night that you can best attend [illegible] ticket sale will be limited and [illegible] must buy early to insure [illegible] for either night

The play, "Civil Service" is a first [illegible]ype play and the class is working hard to make a pleasing presentation.

The baccalaureate services will be held next Sunday evening [illegible] at the Methodist church [illegible]ens will preach the sermon

The graduation exercises will [illegible] held at the Christian church [illegible] Thursday evening, May 17. J. [illegible] Hatch of South Bend, will give the address Smile!

It Takes Sixty-Five Muscles of the Face to Make a Frown and Thirteen to Produce a Smile.

Why Waste Energy?

Commencement Exercises
of the
St. Joe High School
at the
Church of Christ
Thursday Evening
May 17th

J. M. Hatch of South Bend
will deliver the Address
Music by the St. Joe M. P. Orchestra

Sanitary Vitreous Enamel
Quartz Rock Surface

"CESCO"

White Enamel Ware

Steel Base
Standard Quality

Very Special

99c

E. R. KINSEY

Hardware Furniture Undertaking

After Every Meal

WRIGLEY'S

Chew your food well, then use WRIGLEY'S to aid digestion.

It also keeps the teeth clean, breath sweet, appetite keen.

The Great American Sweetmeat

Save the Wrappers

FOR BETTER DIGESTION

If most men had known then what they know now, they'd have been able to make their mistakes more interesting.

Old-fashioned youngsters spent the evening holding hands; the moderns spend it complaining about the hands they hold.

Statistics show that the average farmer's net income is $465 a year. Still, that's pretty good, if he raises all he eats.

"More oxygen is to be found in the first six feet of the earth's crust than on the surface."—But who in thunder wants it then!

One harmless amusement which begins at about this time of year is trying to notice whether the days are growing longer.

FORD OWNERS

IMPORTANT!

Special introductory price on Wright Storage Batteries with Rubber Case. Guaranteed 12 months by old established manufacturer.

Car	Special Price	Regular Price
Ford, Chevrolet, etc., 6-volt..	$12.60	$27.00
Buick, Nash, etc., 6-volt....	15.60	35.00
Dodge, 12-volt..........	17.00	38.00
Radio, 120 amp. hour.......	11.90	29.85

You get this chance but once. We want batteries in your territory to prove their quality. Just stop and think—a fully charged battery, rubber case, delivered to your door in 2 days—we prepay express charges. Tell your friends. Send money order with letter and car model, or we will ship C. O. D. Write at once. WE WANT A DEALER, TOO.

WRIGHT BATTERY CO.

906 Leith Street Flint, Michigan

Shake into your Shoes

ALLEN'S FOOT=EASE

For Corns, Bunions, Tired and Aching Feet

Trial package and a Foot=Ease Walking Doll sent Free. Address ALLEN'S FOOT=EASE, Le Roy, N. Y.

Ladies Keep Your Skin Clear, Sweet, Healthy With Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Talcum

IF YOUR VETERINARIAN Uses "Cutter's" Serums and Vaccines he is doing his best to conserve your interests. 25 years concentration on one line count for something.

The Cutter Laboratory

"The Laboratory that Knows How"

Berkeley (U.S. License) California

PILES of the most stubborn kind relieved in 3 to 10 days One trial convinces MIRO AT ALL DRUGGISTS

NO DYE To restore gray or faded hair to original color, don't use a dye—its dangerous—Get a bottle of Q-Ban Hair Color Restorer—Safe as water—apply it and watch results. At all good druggists, 75c. or direct from HESSIG-ELLIS, Chemists, Memphis, Tenn.

W. N. U., FORT WAYNE, NO. 19–1923.

Just as Noisy.

Mrs. Johnsing—Ah thought you-all said you was gwine to name your new baby "Victrola," but Ah hears you all done make a change.

Mrs. Moses—Yes, Ah expected it would be a girl an' Ah had decided to name her "Victrola," but she turned out to be a boy, so Ah done name him "Radio."—The Christian Advocate.

Would Economize.

"And will you treat me nice, after we are married?" she [illegible]

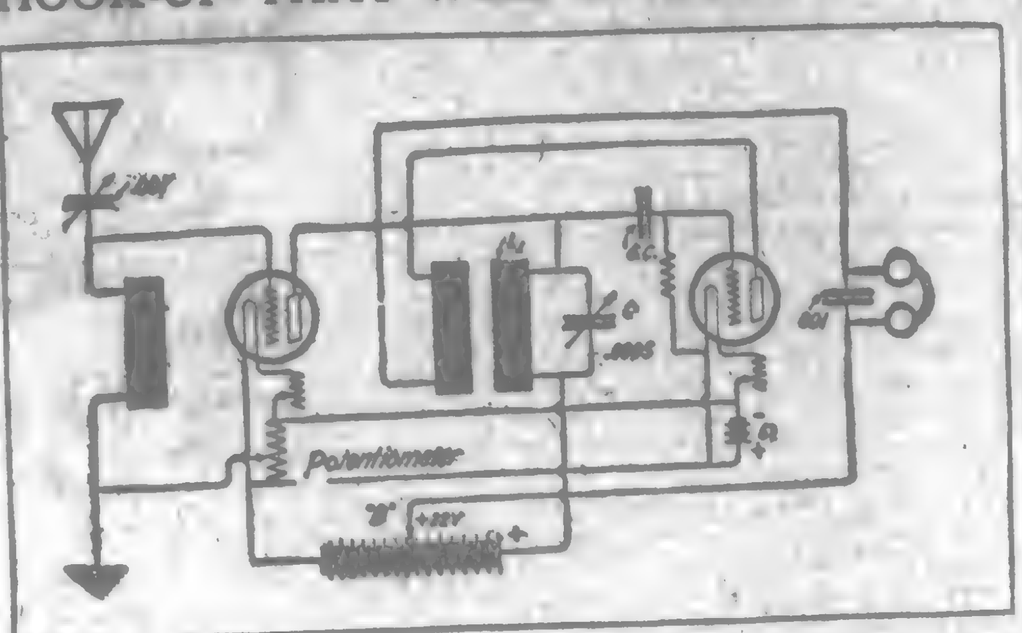
[illegible]

There are times when [illegible] for.

CASTORIA

[illegible]

HOOK-UP THAT WILL INTEREST MANY

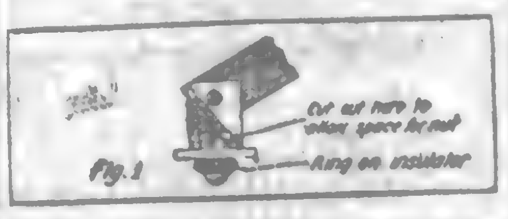


A hook-up of an efficient one-step radio frequency amplifier, together with detector and tuner, to use unit inductance throughout in order to receive all wave lengths is shown above. In place of the tuned circuit, C. L., a resistance of about 80,000 ohms may be successfully used for reception of waves over 1,000 meters. The potentiometer is quite important and should be used for the best results. A hard amplifying tube of low internal capacity should be used in the amplifier socket. All leads should be short.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)

Novel Aerial Switch Cuts Out the Leaks

The weak point of most aerial systems is the lightning switch. This is true especially in wet weather, the radiation often being halved, or in very bad cases the spark jumps directly to ground, making use of the wet switch base in so doing. Various methods of setting the switch blade and jaws on insulators to overcome this leakage have been described, but in most cases the construction has been rather complicated, and considerable time and energy have been required to make a neat job. The switch illustrated in the sketch was made in the spare hours of an off afternoon, and the time spent was fully repaid in the comfort derived from it.



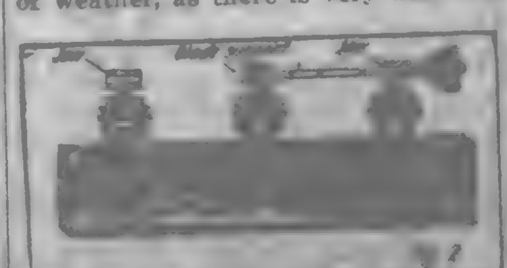
Simple Method of Improving Efficiency of Lightning Switch.

A regulation 500-volt 100 amp. S. P. T. D. knife switch, mounted on a composition base that leaked badly at the least sign of dampness, was used. Three electrode ball insulators were procured, care being taken to see that the iron rings were in line with each other and fastened tightly. If they are not in line and rigidly fastened the jaws will either be mounted crooked or will wobble.

The blade and jaws were removed from the base and three-quarter inch holes were drilled one-half inch in from the edge, directly opposite the original ones, as shown in Fig. 2. These holes must be countersunk on the under side of the base so that the screw heads will not project beyond the surface. They must be measured accurately, as otherwise the insulators will have a certain amount of play and at the least little knock or jar they will become out of line, throwing the jaws and blade out also.

A hole must now be cut in the blade support, Fig. 1, to accommodate the nut, B. This is done by drilling a one-eighth inch hole through both sides of the support and cutting out with a thin-bladed fret saw to a size that will easily allow the nut to be slipped in. However, care must be taken in turning corners with the saw or there will be a pile of broken blades lying on the bench. The insulators are fastened to the base by one-eighth inch brass bolts, nuts and washers. The jaws and blade are attached to the other end of the insulators in like manner. Looking down on the finished switch it should resemble Fig. 2.

Of course larger insulators may be used, resulting in a somewhat higher efficiency, but for all practical purposes and moderate powers the small electrode ball insulator, retailing at about 35 cents, is as good as any. The switch may be mounted in any convenient position and place irrespective of weather, as there is very little corrosion, and the losses, even in very wet weather, are practically nil. It is suggested that if it is desired to further protect the metal parts from corrosion they may be painted, leaving bare, of course, any parts where contact is made.



[illegible]

WHO IS MY NEIGHBOR?

Almost every week reports come to the papers of radio concerts clearly received as far as 2,000 miles from a broadcasting station. Half a hundred cities of Northwest United States and Southwest Canada recently held a great "community dance," all dancing simultaneously to music broadcasted at Seattle.

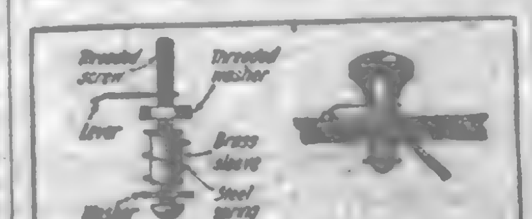
Imagine a "block party," the limits of the block being 2,000 miles from the center, and you can get some idea of how radio is annihilating distance. Right now it is possible for two households 4,000 miles apart to dance to the same radio music at the same time if it is sent by one of our high-power stations halfway from one to the other. On two steamships, one 50 miles out in the Atlantic and the other 50 miles out in the pacific, the passengers might dance to a jazz broadcasted at Ellsworth, Kan.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)

Good Mounting for the Spider-Web Coils

Spider-web coils are very easily constructed and because of their efficiency they have found favor for amateur receiving sets. The difficulty in mounting these coils has presented a stumbling block to beginners and has more or less retarded their general adoption.

First obtain some fairly thin sheet brass, cutting it to size and shape as required. For a movable or coupling mounting, two right-angle brass strips are fastened to the panel as shown. They can be ⅛-inch wide, the length depending upon the personal wishes of the builder. Two more strips of almost the same size, except for the flanges which are set as shown to clasp the coil terminals, are cut and pivoted to the first angles. Use 6-32 inch machine screws and hexagon nuts for pivots and for clamping the angles to the panel. To each coil affix the small brass strips cut to the shape indicated, driving the pointed tips into the coil for securely. The strips are spaced the same distance as the clasps on the panel to permit contact. (The wire leads are soldered to their respective brass strip.)



Simple and Convenient Manner of Mounting Honeycomb Coils.

A stationary coil mounting may be designed in the same manner so that, if it is ever desired, it too may be varied. Be certain that the clasps have sufficient spring to securely hold and make good electric contact with the coil terminal strips. It is not necessary to have the coils running a certain direction as they can be inserted in the holder in either direction, an important feature.

Possibly a word concerning the spider-web coils themselves would not be out of place here. [illegible]

SIMPLE STATEMENT OF FACT

Explanation Showed That Both Manager and His Assistant Had Told the Truth.

With a firm tread and a masterful air the woman stepped into the florist's shop.

After gazing about for some moments her choice fell upon a green palm in an ornamental pot.

The assistant approached with deference.

"Will it grow well in the sunshine?" she inquired.

"Yes, madam."

"Don't say it will if it won't," she snapped. "If it does well in the sun, will the shade hurt it?"

"Oh, no, madam."

"What!" she exclaimed. "You tell me it will thrive equally well in sunshine or shade? Young man, you don't know your business. Fetch the manager."

The manager was summoned. Even he quailed before her; but, all the same, he backed up his assistant's statement.

"Then it is really a remarkable plant," she commented, sarcastically. "My good man, it is both ridiculous and unnatural."

"That's just it," said the manager, quietly; "it's an artificial plant."

Statistics show that if a man and a woman are riding together in a train which meets with disaster, the woman has more chances of escaping death than the man.

IMPORTANT: Save this announcement, read it carefully, and keep for reference. It may mean money and knowledge to you.

Over $7500.00 for Grape-Nuts Recipes

The Postum Cereal Company will buy not less than 101 Recipes or suggestions for new Uses of Grape-Nuts, paying $50.00 for each one accepted. And in addition—

Good Housekeeping Institute, conducted by Good Housekeeping Magazine, will decide an award of $2500.00 for the best four of the 101 or more Recipes or suggestions for new Uses of Grape-Nuts, so purchased:

$1000.00 for the 1st selection $750.00 for the 2nd selection
$500.00 for the 3rd selection $250.00 for the 4th selection

Read carefully the terms of this offer so that you may have the fullest opportunity to share in its benefits. The conditions are so simple and fair that every housewife in the United States can take part in this National Recipe Festival!

There Is No Other Food Like Grape-Nuts

WHILE practically every man, woman and child in the English-speaking world knows Grape-Nuts as a delicious, nourishing and wholesome cereal, and while it is common knowledge that Grape-Nuts with milk or cream is a complete food, many housewives do not know of the appetizing and economical dishes that can be prepared with Grape-Nuts. It lends itself, we believe, to more uses than any other cereal. The convenience and economy of Grape-Nuts, and the flavor, zest and wholesomeness which it imparts to other food, make it invaluable in every home.

Frequently we receive interesting letters from women throughout the country, telling about the attractive dishes they make with Grape-Nuts—delicious puddings, salads, dressings for fowls, etc. No doubt there are thousands of women who are finding varied uses for Grape-Nuts in their home cooking, and even more thousands who will be glad to learn of those varied uses; for while we all cling to old favorite dishes, we also welcome and enjoy a change.

So that is the thought back of our offer of more than $7500.00 in cash for new ways of using Grape-Nuts. To those women who are already using Grape-Nuts in various ways, other than as a breakfast cereal or in the recipes given here, and to those women who would like to try their hand at developing some new way to use Grape-Nuts, we offer to buy at $50.00 each not less than 101 new Grape-Nuts Recipes. We plan to include these new Recipes in a beautifully illustrated cook book.

What Is Grape-Nuts?

Grape-Nuts is a highly nutritious food in the form of crisp, golden granules. It contains the full nutriment of wheat and barley, including vitamin-B and mineral elements required for building sturdy health. These elements are often lacking in the ordinary diet, chiefly through "over-refinement" in the preparation of food.

No other food is so thoroughly baked as Grape-Nuts. More than 20 hours are consumed in the baking process which makes Grape-Nuts easy to digest, and also develops a natural sweetness from the grains themselves.

The form and crispness of Grape-Nuts invite thorough mastication—a decided advantage because this not only provides proper exercise for the teeth, but makes for good digestion.

Every housewife in the Land should take advantage of this extraordinary opportunity to earn the tidy sum of $50.00 by a little pleasant and educational effort in her own home. Also the fair and equal chance to secure one of the liberal awards to be made by Good Housekeeping Institute.

Moreover, there's the greater knowledge of the value of Grape-Nuts, not only as a delicious breakfast cereal, but in the preparation of a variety of appetizing dishes that add to the health and pleasure of the whole family.

Where you don't find Grape-Nuts you won't find people

"There's a Reason"

Sold by grocers everywhere!

Conditions Governing the Purchase of, and Awards for Grape-Nuts Recipes

The Postum Cereal Company will buy not [illegible] every person in the United States.

[illegible]

[illegible] between May 1st, [illegible]

[illegible]

award identical in all respects with that tied for will be made to each one tying.

It is not necessary to purchase Grape-Nuts. A [illegible] upon request to those [illegible] recipes.

Your Recipe should state the exact number [illegible] and directions for preparing will bring best results.

Form of Recipe: First, write name of your Recipe [illegible]

[illegible] and for [illegible]

[illegible] of expression

[illegible]

Below are ten Recipes showing a few of the many appetizing dishes that can be made with Grape-Nuts. Read them over, try some of them, and then you will find it easy to work out a new Recipe or think of a new use for Grape-Nuts, that we may purchase. And remember, your Recipe or suggestion for new use of Grape-Nuts may also merit one of the large awards.

GRAPE-NUTS Ice Cream

Prepare plain flavored ice cream in the usual way. Just before the cream hardens in freezing, add Grape-Nuts as it comes from the package, in the proportion of one-half cup of Grape-Nuts to one quart of ice cream. If you buy ice cream ready made, add Grape-Nuts in place of nut-meats. You'll find the resulting flavor unique.

GRAPE-NUTS Salad

1 cup Grape-Nuts
1 sliced orange
½ cup cubed pine-apple
2 cubed bananas
2 teaspoons lemon-juice
Cream Salad Dressing

Cut up the fruit, add lemon-juice, mix with Grape-Nuts, and serve on bed of lettuce with Cream Salad Dressing. Makes four to six portions.

GRAPE-NUTS Six Minute Pudding

1 cup Grape-Nuts
1½ cups scalded milk
1 tablespoon sugar
½ cup raisins

Cover Grape-Nuts with scalded milk. Add sugar, raisins, and a little nutmeg. Cook six minutes directly over the heat, stirring constantly, and serve with any good pudding sauce. Makes four to six portions.

GRAPE-NUTS Cookies

1 cup Grape-Nuts
½ cup shortening
1½ cups light brown sugar
½ cup milk
2 well-beaten eggs
2¼ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking-powder
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup chopped seeded raisins

Cream shortening and sugar. Add milk and well-beaten eggs. Add well-sifted dry ingredients, and raisins that have been dusted with part of the flour, and then the Grape-Nuts. Beat thoroughly and drop from a spoon on baking sheet one and one-half inches apart. Bake in a moderate oven for fifteen minutes.

GRAPE-NUTS Cheese Casserole

¾ cup Grape-Nuts
1½ cups milk
1 tablespoon butter
¼ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1¼ cups chopped American cheese
2 eggs
Few grains paprika

Scald the milk. Add Grape-Nuts, butter and seasonings and combine with the cheese and eggs, the latter slightly beaten. Pour into a buttered baking dish, surround with hot water and bake slowly for forty-five minutes in a slow oven. Serve as the main course at luncheon, supper, or a meatless dinner. Makes four to six portions.

GRAPE-NUTS Fruit Pudding

1 cup Grape-Nuts
1 package lemon Jell-O or lemon flavored gelatine
1 pint boiling water
½ cup seeded raisins or chopped dates

Add the boiling water to the Jell-O or lemon flavored gelatine and stir until it is dissolved. Pour into a mould, and after the mixture has cooled slightly, add the Grape-Nuts and fruit; then allow the mixture to chill and harden. Makes four to six portions.

GRAPE-NUTS Meat Loaf

1 cup Grape-Nuts
1 pound veal, mutton or beef
⅛ pound salt pork
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons milk
1 egg
½ tablespoon lemon-juice
2 tablespoons tomato catsup
⅛ tablespoon chopped parsley
½ minced onion

Put the meat through a food chopper, add seasonings. Brown minced onion in a little fat before adding Grape-Nuts, milk, and slightly beaten eggs. Pack in a baking dish, shaping like a loaf of baked bread and smooth evenly on top. Bake for forty-five minutes, basting frequently using one-half cup of hot water, a tablespoon at a time. Just before taking from oven, brush with some of the beaten white of egg and a little milk. Brown for one minute. Makes four portions.

GRAPE-NUTS Loaf Cake

1 cup Grape-Nuts
⅓ cup butter
1½ cups sugar
3 eggs
1 cup milk
2½ cups Pastry flour
2 teaspoons baking-powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter and sugar; add egg-yolks well beaten; then milk and Grape-Nuts. Beat the mixture thoroughly, fold in alternately the stiffly beaten egg-whites and flour sifted with baking-powder [illegible] floured; fill [illegible] and bake in a moderate oven for [illegible].

GRAPE-NUTS Tomato Soup

¼ cup Grape-Nuts
1 [illegible] tomatoes
[illegible]
[illegible] peppercorns
3 tablespoons [illegible]
1 [illegible] onion
2 [illegible] salt
⅛ [illegible] soda
4 [illegible] cloves

Cook tomatoes [illegible] twenty [illegible] strain and [illegible] individual [illegible]

GRAPE-NUTS [illegible]

[illegible] sugar
[illegible] chocolate
[illegible] butter

[illegible]

MAY

Matrimonial Adventures

The Indissoluble Bond

BY

Samuel Hopkins Adams

Author of "Success," "The Great American Fraud," "The Flying Death," "Average Jones," "The Clarion," "The Unspeakable Perk," "Our Square and the People in It," etc.

Copyright by United Feature Syndicate

SPEAKING OF SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS

Samuel Hopkins Adams is one of the few American authors who does not come from the West. He was born in New York state, and can trace his ancestry back to two signers of the Declaration of Independence.

He started writing while still in college, and when he graduated joined immediately the ranks of the journalists in Park Row. For ten years he was on the New York Sun. During that period his stories were appearing in every big magazine in the country, and two of his novels, "The Clarion" and "Success," deal with his knowledge of behind-the-scenes journalism.

Not only a reconstructionist, powerful and far-reaching in his manner of presentment, he writes as well with great delicacy of feeling and a charmingly romantic touch. "The Indissoluble Bond," written expressly for the Star Author Series of Matrimonial Adventures, is a splendid example of this style. It is an idyl—what everyone, deep in his heart, wishes might happen to him.

MARY STEWART CUTTING, JR.

I

Nine minutes had passed since the tower clock boomed high noon. The organist was harmoniously killing time. The ushers were striving to look easy and unconcerned. The congregation was beginning to rustle and whisper and I was sharing the incipient nervousness since, as best man, it was my responsibility to put the wedding through without mishap, and the absence of the bride was a decided impediment to my plans. My cousin, Chester Lipscomb, who was supposedly the person most interested, was taking it coolly, in that immovably self-confident, self-satisfied manner of his, as if proceeding upon some superior assurance that nothing in which he was concerned could go far wrong.

Well, nothing ever had. That is why the match was deemed such a good one for Eleanor Jermyn. If I maintained my private misgivings about mating of the girl's vivid, mirthful, adventurous romanticism with Chester's solemn rigidity of spirit, it was not my business as best man to voice them. My business was to get that twain safely married.

At sixteen minutes and six seconds (by my stopwatch) past twelve, the sexton brought me a note, which read:

"Dear Vix:

"It's all off. I simply can't go through with it.

"NORRIE."

Through the agency of a hastily inspired usher the news was gradually disseminated through the church that the bridal gown had suffered a last-minute injury of a serious though not necessarily fatal nature, while I was speed-limiting to the Jermyns' house in a car which I had commandeered from the end of the line. The running board was unsuitably decorated with a young man whom I had never seen until he attached himself to it at the moment of starting. He was spare and lithe and deep-browned by a sun harsher than ours, and there was a hard-controlled excitement in his curiously luminous eyes.

"She isn't coming, is she?" he demanded. Then, reading my expression and in a flash of triumph, "I knew she wouldn't."

"Where do you come in on this?" I retorted.

All the answer that I got as he dropped with sure-footed nonchalance from the speeding car was, "I'm at the Pioneers' club when she wants me."

A flustered maid admitted me to the house and piloted me to Eleanor's room. As I entered a strange expectancy died out of the bride's face.

"Oh! It's only you, Vix. I thought—"

"Think afterward. I'll give you three minutes to be in the car."

"There isn't going to be any afterward. Go back and get rid of them, Vix."

"Oh, yes! Certainly! Just like that!" I returned bitterly. "Including Chester, I suppose."

"Especially Chester. I hate him."

"A nice time to find it out! What's the idea, Norrie?"

"Nothing," replied the bewildering rebel. "I hate him for—oh, just for wanting to marry me."

"See here, Norrie Jermyn," said I authoritatively. "You can't pull this sort of thing just on a bunch of [illegible] You're either going to produce a [illegible] reason or you're coming with me [illegible] get away from it. Never! Not if I married Chester a hundred times . . . Was he there at the church?"

[illegible]

That "he" never meant Chester Lipscomb; not in that tone! I appreciated that and answered, before I could catch myself:

"Yes."

A swift radiance intensified the loveliness of the bride's face. "Oh, Vix! Did he send me a message?"

Suddenly I felt sorry for our wedding party; I knew from that moment it was a hopeless case. I also felt wrathful.

"So this is a put-up job," I accused her. "Don't you think it's pretty raw to—"

"The message; his message!" she besought. Then, as I shook my head she continued: "It wasn't put up. I hadn't seen him or heard from him. Not for months. Oh, it's been long!" There was a heart-wrenching quiver in her voice. "Then something told me he was here. That's the way it happened with us at the first. So I knew I couldn't go through with it with Chester."

I surrendered. "I'll give you the message when I come back," I promised.

"Come soon," she whispered.

A sort of well-bred social riot followed my return to the church, in which the coolest figure was the bridegroom. You might know he'd take it that way and go off dignifiedly to Japan or Jugo-Slavia or somewhere, which is exactly what he did.

When what was left of wilted Me got back to the Jermyns', Norrie was after me instantly.

"Where is he, Vix?"

"At the Pioneers'. What are you going to do about it?"

"Send for him."

"To come here? The family will love that!"

"The family aren't speaking to me anyway. Can you blame them?"

"You might at least spare them an extra scandal. If he comes here now, the reporters, massed outside, will catch him and things will be worse than before, if possible."

Norrie thought that over, not being wholly beyond reason—yet. "Vix, will you be very good to me?"

"Me! I'd like to beat you to a frazzle!"

"You're a dear," was the singular interpretation she put upon this. "I want you to go and see him."

"I don't even know his infernal name."

"Calvin Sennett."

"Which means nothing to me," said I, after considering it.

"It means everything in the world to me."

"Oh, darn it, I'll go!" I yielded.

Calvin Sennett received me with a matter-of-fact air which did not soothe my sense of injury.

"Since you had to come back," said I, "couldn't you have contrived to get here earlier?"

"Sorry," he returned composedly, "but I've only just landed."

"From where?"

"South America. We were lost in the wilds."

"At least you might have sent word ahead."

"I wired yesterday. Her parents must have intercepted it."

"They would," I reflected aloud. "Well, what am I here for?"

"The most blessedly sane thing that ever happened," he averred. "The other would have been the lunacy. But it couldn't have happened. Not again." He leaned forward to me. "Have you ever heard of Scatchердsville?"

"No. Minor geography isn't my strong point."

"Being a Vickert, I thought you probably derived from central New York. It doesn't matter; Scatcherdsville has dropped out of the geographies this half century and more. It doesn't exist except for the dead. That is where Eleanor and I will lie some day."

"The devil you will!" said I, startled by the calm assumption of the announcement.

"Yes, together. The faithful of our blood, hers and mine, go back there at the last sleep. You'll see that it must be so when you know it all." And he settled back in his chair and spoke.

II

The Deserted Village lies asleep beside a singing stream. Years and long years ago, before it had lost its name and faded from the activities of men, there were busy mills there, a group of sturdy mansions, cottages, a church, and a brisk street of stores; there was labor and ambition and love and warm hearthstones; until the newly projected railroad turned and passed it by. Then its life waned. The mills crumbled, the cottages yielded to the slow encroachment of tree and ivy, the mansions and stores stood empty and lifeless. But the church, with its surrounding graveyard still maintains itself stanch against the years, for the ancient blood that built and loved the place comes back, by a [illegible] tradition, to bury its dead there, even unto the third and fourth generations. Death alone gives to the Deserted Village the [illegible] of life.

[illegible]

the Deserted Village from the world of actualities than the spell of peace enfolded her. Through the soothing cadences of the burial service she stood, half hypnotized, her face at once piquant and dreamy, vivid and possessed, in the dappled movement of shadows.

It was thus that Robert Sennett first saw her.

Was there some signal that passed from him to her, at once occult and compelling, drawing her gaze to the spot in the far corner of the churchyard where he sat leaning against the bole of a giant elm? She answered that long, immovable look of his with the unconscious response of widened eyes and parted lips of wondering. And after the last motorcar had lurched across the bridge at the close of the ceremony, she remained, making the excuse to her family that she was tired and wanted to be alone for a while, they could send for her later. She stood studying, with an eerie feeling of disembodiment, her own name carved in the gray stone of a tall monument in the Jermyn plot.

"Eleanor Jermyn, wife of Samuel Jermyn; Born 1827, Died, 1867."

And beneath it that tryst of invincible faith, "Whither thou goest I will go; thy people shall be my people and thy God my God."

Opposite stood the headstone of Samuel Jermyn, dead three years before his wife.

A voice spoke quietly behind the living Eleanor Jermyn: "That pledge was not for him."

"Not for Samuel Jermyn?" she queried. It seemed quite in keeping with the place and the spell that the voice of the stranger who had silently bidden her to stay should be telling her secret things of the past.

"You mustn't think it was for him," insisted the voice.

"How strangely you say that! As if you were angry. Or jealous."

"Jealous? Perhaps I am. Do you want to know the rest?"

She followed him to the corner under the elm where he silently pointed out another stone inscribed:

"Calvin Sennett, Born 1822, Died 1859: 'Where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried.'"

There, then was the clue to the dead; she sought the clue to the living. "Did you come to the funeral?"

"Not your funeral. Mine." Both laughed—the implication and the tensity was for the moment relaxed. "My grandmother's. She was buried three days ago. All of us Sennetts come back here. It's in my great-grandfather's will that we shall."

"And all of us Jermyns. I'm Eleanor Jermyn."

He nodded. "Of course. You had to be."

"Did I? Why?"

"That's what has kept me here waiting, when I should be home packing up for the interior of Brazil. I knew there was something telling me to wait. But I didn't know what. Until I saw you."

"Don't be absurd," she chided him. But there was a tone of expectancy, of acceptance, of suspense in her voice.

"Do I go too fast? I suppose I do. But, you see, I've waited so long."

"So long? Three days by your own account."

"Seventy-five years," he retorted with a gentle but inflexible assurance.

"You talk like a ghost."

"Perhaps I am. Part ghost, at least. Aren't you? Aren't we all?"

"Ghosts of past lives?" she queried thoughtfully. "Like those lying here about us? Tell me about them."

"I know only a little about those two, the only two that matter to us two. My great-grandfather, Calvin Sennett, left here when he was a young man and went to the Mexican war. He never came back alive. He married my great-grandmother in the South years later. But there was a broken romance stronger than his marriage that drew him back here, and all of us after him. I never knew what it was until, at Grandmother's funeral last week, I read the inscription on your headstone."

"I wish you wouldn't call it mine," she protested. "It gives me such an uncanny feeling! The whole thing is uncanny."

"Uncanny?" he repeated in a low voice. "Oh, no, Eleanor. Not uncanny it's—it's almost holy."

"That's worse," she complained. "I don't think you're a pleasant companion for a graveyard at all. And I've got to go anyway. There's a frightful storm coming up."

"Too late to get away," said he, as a few slow, heavy raindrops sounded crisp on the leaves overhead, through the stillness. "Come to the church."

The first flash [illegible] to overtake them as they ran for shelter deep in the portico, [illegible] just as the rain whelmed everything in [illegible] gray.

[illegible]

"After what we have been to each other?"

"That was our sin. . . . Oh, Calvin, why did you not write?"

"I wrote. My messenger died on the way."

"That was our punishment," said the woman-voice fearfully. "You must go, Calvin."

"Go? Leave you? You are my wife, not his, in the sight of Heaven."

"No," the woman-voice denied, wearily and inflexibly. "I am bound in honor and in duty and in law. He is a good man."

"Eleanor!" cried the man-voice. There was a sound of sobbing, hushed sharply, a cry of the agony of parting in the woman-voice, and the man-voice once again, fading:

"I will go. But I hold you through time and eternity. Ours is the true marriage. I will return to claim you, though it were a thousand years. I bind you to wait for me."

The sun shot through between massed clouds, drawing back to the world of the living the two still figures in the church portico. The girl's eyes were heavy with tears and passion and wonder as she turned them upon her companion.

"Did you kiss me?" she murmured. "Or was it—"

"No." He shook his head. "It was in the dream."

"The dream! The voices! You heard them, too?"

"Everything."

"What does it mean?"

"What could it mean, except that we have come back to each other?"

"Don't!" she rebelled. "You frighten me."

He smiled at her, and her breath quickened in her throat. "Why should you be afraid, beloved?"

The blare of a motor horn brought Eleanor Jermyn to a sense of realities. She jumped to her feet. "Whew!" she whistled briskly. "We're lucky to be alive after that close call. Look!"

A bough, riven by the thunderbolt from the great elm, covered Calvin Sennett's mound as with a massive wreath.

"There's the car, come back for me," she added.

"You're not going, now?" he said, incredulously.

"Of course," she laughed. But there was a tremor in her voice.

"Eleanor!" He held out his arms. She swayed to him, pressed to him, set her lips to his in a swift, soft caress.

"That's for good-by," she said, breathlessly. "It's all nonsense, you know. And we must forget."

He wrote her once, a long, passionate, yearning letter, ending, "I bind you to wait for me." Then the land of vast forests and unmapped rivers swallowed him up.

And Eleanor Jermyn told herself that it was only a strange and sweet and finished episode.

III

"And now," said Calvin Sennett, "when may I see her?"

By all the proprieties I should have consulted the Jermyn family. But, what use? Those two would have been drawn together as inevitably as magnet and steel.

"Tomorrow morning. At my apartment," I replied.

"Not tonight?" he asked, gently.

"You can talk with her," I partly yielded, "if anything so modern as a phone will serve your purpose."

I called Norrie and relinquished the instrument to him. What they said I can only surmise. Probably it could have been as effectually communicated by telepathy.

He was at my apartment, writing, when Norrie came. I was there also. I might as well have been in Patagonia for all that they reckoned when they saw each other. He called her name, and there came from her lips a broken breath like the sigh of respite from long-borne pain of yearning and deprivation, as she ran to his arms. I found the street scenery sufficiently engrossing until Norrie's voice notified me that they were aware of my existence again.

"We're going away," she announced. "You must tell the family, Vix, dear."

"Must I? When are you going?"

It was he who answered, "Tonight."

"Indeed! Where?"

"Does it matter?" said she.

I perceived that it did not; that nothing in the universe mattered to those two but their rejoined selves. To me, however, as representing the world of hard actualities, there was a phase that did matter. "Without ceremony?" I inquired.

They started, brusquely recalled from their exclusive absorption in each other.

"We do have to be married, don't we?" said he in a bemused voice.

"It seems absurd," said the girl; "but I suppose we do."

"I suppose you do, indeed."

And so, as they say in the tales of [illegible]

[illegible]

A BRUSH
A PAIL
and

Just mix Alabastine with water cold or hot and apply to any interior surface. The sure result is beautifully tinted walls in exactly the color you wish.

None genuine without the Cross and Circle printed in red.

Alabastine comes in all standard colors and these intermix to form countless others so that your decorating taste may be accurately followed.

Alabastine

Instead of Kalsomine or Wall Paper

SHINOLA

AMERICA'S HOME SHOE POLISH

Black - Tan - White - Ox-Blood - Brown

In the handy box that opens with a turn of the key. No broken nails or soiled hands. Softens and preserves leather. Sheds moisture. Shoe shining with SHINOLA is a nifty thrifty habit.

"The Shine for Mine"

Roman Remains in Britain.

Excavating for the foundation of a new factory to be erected at Keynsham, near Bristol, England, workmen recently unearthed Roman remains. The Daily Chronicle of London reports the discovery of coffins containing skeletons, a Roman needle about six inches long, a spoon and a brooch. The brooch is believed to have put the finishing touch upon the toga of a Roman gallant.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription.

Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparartion send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

But Did He Buy Several?

Bill—Did Dan kill the fatted calf when his prodigal son came home?

Sam—He was goin' to, but the boy wouldn't let him; he took the animal to the state fair and won a hat full of ribbons, and sold him for enough to buy several fatted calves.—Farm Life.

The Girl at the Phone.

The average telephone operator has to be understood to be appreciated.—Life.

Lloyd Pat. Process LOOM Products

Baby Carriages & Furniture

Ask Your Local Dealer

Write Now for 32-Page Illustrated Booklet

The Lloyd Manufacturing Company
(Heywood-Wakefield Co.)
Dept. E
Menominee, Michigan (16)

Another Early One.

The wild ginger has large, broad heart-shaped leaves which are most conspicuous objects on the rocky hillsides in early April, says Nature Magazine. Their thick stems rise some six or ten inches above the ground, but the dull, purplish, cup-shaped blossoms must be searched for at the roots, well hidden among the dead leaves.

Snowy linens are the pride of every housewife. Keep them in that condition by using Red Cross Ball Blue in your laundry. At all grocers.—Advertisement.

Beyond Her.

"Madame, I am going to prove that your husband has money," said counsel to a woman in court.

Woman—Then you're clever; I've never been able to.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Time is not money if you don't know what to do with it.

Yeast Foam makes good bread

Bread making is easy to learn and is in itself an education in other cooking.

Send for free booklet "The Art of Baking Bread"

[illegible]

Get in the Swing

It is time to make your porch baskets or boxes or get out the old ones and paint and fix them up.

We have the plants to make them beautiful.

Vinca, Snow in the Mountain, Jacop,s Coat, Salvia, German Ivy, Vining Geranium, Geraniums, Colus, Wandering Jew, etc.

NEWS OFFICE

The St. Joe News

William S. Quance,
Editor and Publisher.

One Year, - - $1.50
Six Months, - - - .75
Three Months, - - - .40
One Month, - - - - .15
Single Copy, - - - - .05
(Advertising Rates on Application)

Entered at the postoffice at St. Joe, Indiana, as second class matter.

Foreign Advertising Representative
THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

Frank L. Milliman
TRUSTEE
Concord Township

Office Day Friday of Each Week at his residence 2 miles north and 1-2 mile West of St. Joe.

To be Married

The following is a clipping from a Portland, Indiana, paper sent to us we believe will be of interest to many of our readers:

"County Auditor Henry Martin and wife, of East Race street, announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Grace Martin, to Levi B. Mumma, of Cincinnati, Ohio, the wedding to take place at the Martin home some time next month. Miss Martin is employed as Latin teacher in the local high school and is a graduate of Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio. The bridegroom is employed as consulting engineer for the Williamson Heater Company, of Cincinnati, and is also a graduate of Wittenberg College and of Purdue University. They will make their home in Cincinnati."

Mr. Mumma is also a graduate of the Spencerville high school and was well known at that place.

A FIFTY DOLLAR TOPCOAT $35

Until Saturday night the Patterson-Fletcher Co., of Fort Wayne, will give you your choice of any Hart, Schaffner & Marx fancy topcoat or any gaberdine in the store for $35. The selling season is nearly over but men are just starting to wear their light weight topcoats. Patterson-Fletcher Co. expect to close out every topcoat and gaberdine before the store closes Saturday night.

38 Years Ago

We received another interesting and spicy letter from John Leighty this week which we shall publish in our next issue.

Report of the primary department of the St. Joe school for the month ending April 24th, 1885:

Names of those neither tardy or absent: Artie Woodcox, Myrtle Hall, Delbert Meek, Jimmie White, Charlie Hart, Cora Widney, Frankie Bishop, Ray Sheffer, Lizzie Dilley, Mattie Testison, Lina Sheffer, Violet Barney, Earnest Hollabaugh, Minnie Testison, Andred Reed, Frank Testison, Pearl Shurts, Frank Curie, Harper Leighty, Maude Curie, Roy Kinsey, Johnnie Hart, Johnnie Washler, Bertha Hart, Elma Wineland, Frank Kinsey, Nena Leighty, Rettie Bishop, Harry Ulm and Willie Hamm; those absent but one day: Wallie Depew, Music Woodcox, Bessie Patterson, Tillie Hamm and Early Shuler. Time lost by tardiness 1 hours and 5 minutes.

DELOA SWINEFORD, Teacher.

Harry Meek is making quite an improvement on his house.

Dr. Sheffer has quite a collection of stuffed birds in his office.

Billy Curie keeps on hands at all times Fresh and Smoked Meats.

Eck Fales found a five dollar gold piece in front of Barney's store a couple of weeks ago.

Rev. E. K. Baker will preach in this place next Sunday evening.

The lawsuit last Saturday between Dr. Bowman and Ben Wasson was decided in favor of the former.

Notice Of Administration

ESTATE No 2724

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the undersigned has been appointed by the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, of the State of Indiana, Administrator of the Estate of Dallas M. Kelley, deceased, late of said County.

Said Estate is supposed to be solvent.

Clyde G. Rectenwall
Administrator.

April 27, 1923.

Atkinson & Husselman
Attorneys

Dr. Bonnell M. Souder
HOSPITAL

Established in 1914
206 West Seventh Street
AUBURN, INDIANA

FENCE POSTS!

Just unloaded a carload of

Genuine Eastern Posts

Do not be misinformed—

The low prices of these posts will actually surprise you.

Spencerville Lumber Co.
[illegible]
[illegible]
Spencerville, Ind.

M. P. Church Notes

Next Sabbath is Mother's Day. Every one should wear a flower on that day in memory of mother.

There can not be too much reverence nor too much honor placed about our mothers.

Will you wear a flower, a white one if your mother is dead and a pink or red one if she is living, and go to church in her honor?

9:30 Sabbath School.

10:45 preaching service at Concord. Subject, "Our Mothers."

In the afternoon at Concord a Mother's Day program.

7:30 in the evening at St. Joe M. P. Church Baccalaureate services. Your cordially invited to attend all these services.

C. B. HAVENS, PASTOR

Lutheran Notes

Next Sunday morning at 10:30 a Mother's Day program will be given at the Lutheran Church.

The program is being prepared by the two choirs of the church. The pastor will make a short address on the occasion.

The opening of the Sunday School will be in charge of Mrs. Curie's class. Be sure to come.

Rev. S. D. Steffey, Pastor.

Attention!

The laws of this state are severe on parties or people who visit cemetaries and take flowers and destroy and mark tombstones

There has been reports of parties breaking glass jars which hold flowers on the graves. Any more reports coming to us will be reported to the grand jury.

Also the parties having key to the tool house and took any tools such as garden hoe had better bring them back to avoid further trouble.

We welcome everybody to visit the cemetery but please do not molest flowers, cans, or anything else connected with the cemetary.

By the order of the Board of Trustees.

Ed Leighty
Ray Reasoner
William Curie

Your Back Yard Flock

In deciding on the size of the backyard poultry flock, says the United States Department of Agriculture, two things must be taken into consideration—the space available and the quantity of table scraps available. It is not often that the flock will consist of more than 20 or 25 hens and for a flock of this size there should be a yard space not less than 25 by 30 square feet for each bird. About the only way table scraps can be made to bring in a return in the small town or suburb is through the medium of a flock of hens. Each hen in her pullet year should produce at least 10 dozen eggs, or on the average an egg every three days. Thus, a flock of 10 laying hens would yield 100 dozen, worth, at a conservative estimate, $40. It also is worth something to have eggs concerning which there can be no doubt, and to have a supply of potent fertilizer for the garden.

Agents Wanted

The J. R. [illegible] Company will employ a lady or gentleman agent in St. Joe. [illegible]

HOW'S THIS?

[illegible]

Chiropractor Optician

Calls made at your home by
APPOINTMENT.

EARL E. FRISBIE,
Butler, Indiana.

NEWVILLE

Miss Hilda Larney is working in Fort Wayne.

Mothers Day will be observed at the U. B. church next Sunday.

Mrs. Anna Griest of Hicksville is here visiting relatives for a few days

Elmer McDonald of Butler, was the guest of the John Miller family Saturday night and Sunday.

Alvin Keesler and John Miller were business callers at Auburn the first of last week.

Miss Fern Tarney returned home Sunday from Byran, where she has been employed in a hotel.

Archie Dean and family and Harry Dean and family of Auburn were Sunday guests of Chide Dean and wife.

Chub Richmond and his mother, Mrs. Ella Richmond, spent a couple of days in Auburn last week on business.

Ira E. Mendenhall and little son Harold of Auburn, were from Friday evening until Sunday afternoon visitors in the John Miller home.

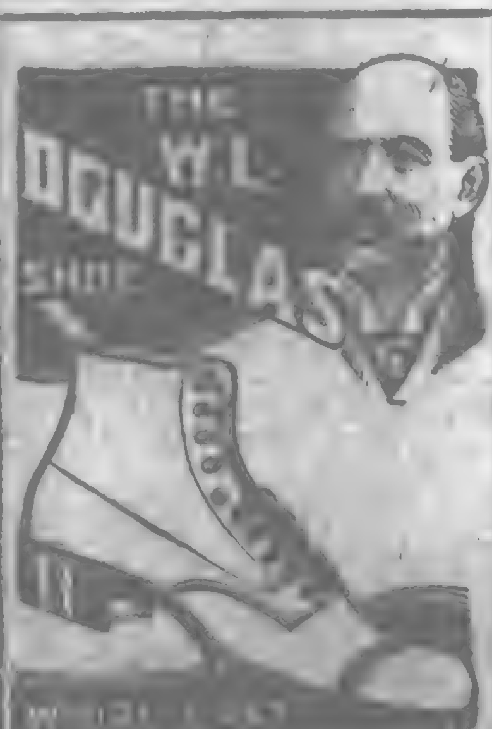
Lew Griest of Hicksville was the Saturday guest of D. Griest and wife. In the afternoon he motored to Fort Wayne to visit his two sons who live there.

Charley Harter's house got on fire one day last week and burned a large hole in the roof but was put out before further damage was done.

Stanley Tryon of Sedan, was the guest of Orland Hatch and wife the latter part of last week, and the Saturday dinner guest of the John Miller family.

Charley Lepper and wife of Hicksville, who have been assisting Dr. Belle Crom with her work took the latter to Butler, Saturday where she took the train to Chicago on a visit.

Livingstone Worked in Factory.
Livingstone, the great missionary and explorer, worked as a factory hand until he was twenty-five.



THE W. L. DOUGLAS SHOE

For Sale Only At
Chaneys'
Auburn, - - - - Ind.

Make Your Trip More Enjoyable by a Refreshing Night on Lake Erie
(Your rail ticket is good on the boats)

Thousands of east and north bound travelers say they wouldn't have missed that cool, comfortable night on one of our fine steamers. A good bed in a clean stateroom, a long sound sleep and an appetizing breakfast in the morning!

Steamers "SEEANDBEE"—"CITY OF ERIE"—"CITY OF BUFFALO"

Daily, May 1st to November 15th

Leave Cleveland - 9:00 P.M. / Arrive Buffalo - 7:30 A.M. } Eastern Standard Time { Leave Buffalo - 9:00 P.M. / Arrive Cleveland - 7:30 A.M.

Connections for Niagara Falls, Eastern and Canadian points. Ask your ticket agent or tourist agency for tickets via C & B Line. New Tourist Automobile Rate—$10.00.

Send for free sectional puzzle chart of the Great Ship "Seeandbee" and 32-page booklet.

The Cleveland and Buffalo Transit Co.
Cleveland, Ohio

The Great Ship "Seeandbee" — the largest steamer on inland waters of the world.

Fare $5.50

Farm for Sale

The undersigned administrator of the estate of Sarah Jane Wade, deceased, will offer for sale at public auction at the court house door at

Auburn DeKalb County Indiana

at 2 o'clock P. M. on

MAY 12, 1923

the Ninety Acre Farm

of said decedent situated three miles east and one half mile south of Spencerville, Indiana; six miles west of Hicksville, Ohio; and two and one half miles south and two miles east of St. Joe, Indiana.

This is a good general purpose farm with a good eight room frame house and a hip roof barn 36x60, built about five years.

ROY WADE, Administrator

CONCORD

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Bone spent Saturday in Auburn.

Mr. and Mrs. Ford Jackson and daughter, spent last Sunday in Auburn with Less Sebring and wife.

Miss Louettie Funk has the foundation layed for a new house and all the lumber is on the ground.

Mrs. Lancaster Morr took sick while at Sunday School last Sunday and had to be taken home.

The Ladies Aid of Concord is to hold a bake sale in Auburn Saturday morning, May 19, All do your part in making this a grand success.

Mrs. Nan Laysher of St. Joe spent from Monday night until Friday with her mother and sister, Mrs. C. Jackson, and family.

Don't forget to attend Mothers Day next Sunday at Concord church. A potluck dinner will be served. All come and have a good time. A program for the afternoon is arranged.

Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson entertained Mr. and Mrs. Hull and daughter from Sturgis, Michigan, on Saturday night and Sunday, also Miss Mildred Murphy spent Sunday in the same home.

Dr. and Mrs. Showalter and family of Waterloo, Mr. and Mrs Earnest Farver and family of Auburn, spent Sunday in the home of Charley Morr and wife. In the afternoon Perry Provines and family spent a while in the same home, also Clifton Draggoo.

INDIGESTION
causes bloating—gassy pains that crowd the heart—constipation.
Always find relief and comfort in
CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS
No griping—no nausea—only 25 cents

H. R. Minnick, M. D.
St. Joe, Indiana
Office at Residence
PHONE NO. 16X

Sunday School Report.

The following is a true and correct report of the various Sunday Schools in this neighborhood for last Sunday.

Christian	87	$ 4 48
M. P.	70	5 19
Lutheran	96	5.66
M. E. Spencer	76	5 15
Lutheran	117	6 40
Newville U. B.	82	4.17
Christian	82	2 83
Coburntown	74	3 49
Concord	65	3 58
Mt. Pleasant	92	3 39
Rehoboth	86	7 35

H. O. WILLIAMS
THE Abstracter

is able to furnish you with a complete Abstract of Title to any description of Real Estate in DeKalb County.

OFFICE
West Seventh Street
AUBURN

FIRE INSURANCE — NOTARY PUBLIC

Lehman's CLOTHING HOUSE

[illegible]

MEN'S AND BOYS' OUTFITTERS

[illegible] Street
Fort Wayne, Ind.

MAY

SATISFACTION!

We Endeavor to Satisfy With Service

It is the aim of the officers of the Farmers & Merchants State Bank never to lose sight of the fact that a bank is a semi-public institution deriving its right to a profit from the service which it gives.

A bank does a large amount of work for its customers that is practically nothing but the exchange of one dollar for another. This work is of course done at a loss and is done on the theory that when the customer has a profitable business the bank will receive it, and thus a business will be built up, which in the aggregate, will be profitable.

We will appreciate your business
and will aim to serve you that you will appreciate our services.

This Bank Will Help You Save.

Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank

Capital Stock, - $25,000

Spencerville, Ind.

The Bank of Personal Services

SPENCERVILLE

Miss Margaret Koch is quite ill at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. William Reed and family were guests on Sunday of Clarence Sponhour and family.

For good glasses see Griest at American Building Hicksville, Ohio.

Mrs. Anna Headley and family of Hicksville, visited friends at this place Sunday.

Mrs. Sophia Miller returned home Sunday evening from a visit with her brother, Roy Walker and wife at Fort Wayne.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Roth and Mrs. Roth of Grabill were Sunday afternoon guests of J. S. Hollabaugh and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Strubing spent Sunday the guests of their parents Mr. and Mrs. Milo Gorrell of Hicksville.

Mrs. Mary Zimmerman and daughter Marcella, are spending the week with relatives at Fort Wayne.

The Misses Helen Lake and Clarice Hahn, Earl Hodges and Russell Wade spent Sunday at Pleasant Lake with Miss Lake's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Nelson Lake.

Mrs. E. E. Provines, who spent the winter in the southern states, returned home last week.

B. F. Markle and family were Friday evening guests in the Moses Oberholtzer home near Harlan.

Mary Provines of Fort Wayne was an over Sunday guest of Minnie Kimes.

Stanton Osborne and family of Fort Wayne, visited John Moody and wife, Sunday.

Rev. and Mrs. Ingran Carnes of Hamilton, were guests one day last week of Mr. and Mrs. Charles High.

James Vailieu, wife and sons visited Mrs. Mellie Wise at Waterloo recently, who is very ill with peritonitis.

Isadora Badica and family of near Fort Wayne, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Emila Gloyd and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Baltzi and son of Fort Wayne, spent Sunday the guests of the lady's parents, John Bachman and wife.

Beatrice Wasson of Fort Wayne and James Reed of Hopewell were Sunday dinner guests in the R. U. Bowser home. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Eckele of Ft. Wayne and Theodore Garstka were supper guests in the same home.

After 8 Weeks You Must Change the Feed

[illegible]

Growing Chicks Must Have a Different Feed

[illegible]

Conkey's

[illegible]

FORD WEEKLY PURCHASE PLAN

$5 Enrolls You

Have you investigated the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan by which thousands of families all over the country are finding it easy to buy the Ford Car they have always wanted?

If not, go to the nearest Ford dealer, F. W. Silberg, at once and ask him for full details of this plan, which provides a simple and easy way of becoming a Ford owner.

You owe it to yourself to get the facts —they will interest you.

FORD MOTOR COMPANY
Detroit, Michigan

Come In and Let Us Give you Full Particulars

F. W. SILBERG, Dealer
Spencerville, Ind.

Depository for
Ford Weekly Purchase Plan Payments

Farmer's & Merchants State Bank

SPENCERVILLE, IND.

[illegible]

[illegible] Lake was a Sunday guest [illegible]

[illegible] and son of Wayne, [illegible] relatives here [illegible]

[illegible]

Will Hazel says a kiss may be heard, but should never be seen.

C. R. [illegible], D V M

Veterinarians

[illegible]

[illegible]

MAY

The Joy of Living

By

Sidney Gowing

Illustrations by

Ellsworth Young

Copyright 1922 by Sidney Gowing

LADY DIANA

SYNOPSIS.—Disliking the prospect of a month's visit to her austere aunt, Lady Erythea Lambe, at Jervaulx abbey, and her cousin, Alexander Lambe, Aimee, vivacious daughter of the Very Reverend Viscount Scroope, meets a young man who laughingly introduces himself as "Billy," American. The two ride on his motorcycle, the "Flying Sphinx," and part. With Georgina Berners, her cousin, Aimee sets out for Jervaulx. She forces Georgina to impersonate her at Jervaulx, and she goes on a holiday. Aimee again meets Billy. He tells her his name is Spencer, and she gives hers as Amy Snookes, at present "out of a job." Billy offers to take her into partnership in selling the Sphinx. In a spirit of madcap adventure, she accepts. The two proceed to the town of Stanhoe, taking separate lodgings in Ivy cottage. While Aimee is secretly visiting Georgina at Jervaulx, the place is burglarized, and the famous Lambe emeralds are stolen. Aimee escapes. Police decide the thieves are "Jack the Climber" and "Calamity Kate," who travel on a motorcycle. Billy, who has shadowed Aimee to Jervaulx, follows the thieves. He is knocked out, but emerges from the fight with the Lambe emeralds. He meets Aimee, with the police in pursuit. In a secure hiding place, a cave among the crag pits, Aimee tells him the whole story. He urges her that she make a frank confession to her father, but on reflection both realize Aimee's good name has been compromised. Assuring Aimee he has a plan to save her, Billy leaves her in the cave and, proceeding to Jervaulx, restores the emeralds to the astounded Lady Erythea. Billy tells a story that satisfies the police, refuses a reward and accepts a chauffeur's job from Lady Erythea. Aimee gets the place of parlor maid at Jervaulx. Alexander thinks he recognizes Aimee as "Calamity Kate." Georgina divulges Aimee's identity. Hearing her story, Alexander consents to keep the secret. Alexander finds himself very much in love with Georgina.

CHAPTER XVI—Continued.

—8—

"What was that? A dog?" he said confusedly.

Georgina, pink to the ears, had risen to her feet; her eyes shone somewhat viciously.

"It sounded to me more like a cat!" she said in acid tones, and walked away down the path.

Mr. Lambe followed her.

When they were out of sight, the parlor maid emerged from the little arbor, her face crimson, her shoulders shaking, a handkerchief pressed to her streaming eyes.

"Poor old Georgie!" she gasped. "I couldn't help it. I should have burst in another minute."

She squeezed the handkerchief and controlled her emotion.

"They'll have a jolly old tangle to unpick, too, when Aunt knows!" she said thoughtfully.

"No use stopping here. I suppose I'd better finish my dusting."

Aimee made a circuitous journey to the deserted drawing room, and dusted with the energy of a high-power machine. The room was not much the better for it. She was only just in time, for the housekeeper appeared, and after some sour comments, stood by her while she did a good deal of the work over again. Then Aimee was marshaled into the library, to dust that.

The library overlooked the path leading to the garage. It was some forty minutes later that Aimee caught sight of the chauffeur approaching. She flung down her duster and ran to the window, giving a cautious whistle, as a poacher who calls his dog.

Billy made sure that the coast was clear, and came to her window. He looked at her and laughed joyously.

"The clouds have rolled by, partner!" he said.

"What has happened? Have you seen Alexander?"

"Sure. Just had a pow-wow with him in the garage."

"What did he say to you?" asked Aimee quickly.

Billy eyed her thoughtfully.

"Never you mind. The game's square. The padre's all wool and a yard wide. You're all right now. Unless—"

"But the police! Suppose they trace us and come back here?"

"They may not. I b'lieve I see a way through it. And I've all the time off, this evening. You sit tight."

"But if they come here!"

"Then they'll get me," said Billy, "but they won't get you; you're safe from the cops, anyhow. I promise you that."

Aimee leaned out of the window, with [illegible] cheeks, and caught his hands in hers.

"Billy," she said breathlessly, "how good you've been to me. How good you've been! I—[illegible]"

[illegible]

CHAPTER XVII.

Complications.

"Either you are working too hard, Alexander," said Lady Erythea, inspecting her nephew through her lorgnette, as they rose from the luncheon table, "or the burglary has been a greater shock to your nerves than I should have suspected. I do not like to see you wearing that pallid and constrained expression. Your sister will be quite concerned about you. She arrives, you remember, by the evening train."

"Diana!" said Mr. Lambe. "I had quite forgotten that she was due here."

Georgina started slightly, and looked perturbed.

"She is coming," said Lady Erythea, "to investigate the Jervaulx ghost. Certainly, she might have done it before. But I believe she has only recently become a member of the Psychical Research society. She is quite enthusiastic about it—so far as Diana can be enthusiastic about anything. Indeed, her letter is so technical as to be unintelligible to me."

"I did not know there was a ghost here," said Georgina, wide-eyed.

"I should not like to say that there is. But it is a tradition in the family, and has been well vouched for. I have never seen it. Diana seems to imply," added Lady Erythea a little acidly, "that only those who are advanced, and in tune with the infinite, see such things. If she thinks she is more spiritual than I, she is welcome to try. She will discover nothing whatever." Lady Erythea turned to her nephew. "Bertrand de Jussac is coming also."

"De Jussac?" cried Alexander, staring at her.

"Yes. You know him, I think."

"I have met him, of course," said Mr. Lambe dryly. "I should have thought this was the last house that so frivolous a person would wish to visit. Why is he coming? Surely he is not interested in the ghost?"

"In the ghost—no," said Lady Erythea, with a faint yet serene smile, "but possibly his interest may arise. I approve him. A young man of excellent standing and irreproachable descent."

"Descent is the word," said Mr. Lambe rather curtly, and left the room.

"How long is—Diana going to stay here?" Georgina asked anxiously.

"Two days—but it is possible she may be persuaded to prolong her visit," said her ladyship placidly.

"What is the Vicomte de Jussac like?"

"D'Artagnan—in the flesh. With a touch, perhaps, of Porthos. The type which it is a good woman's mission to reform. But this is outside your province, Aimee," she said abruptly, and laid a hand on the girl's shoulder. "Go, my dear child, and get your cousin away from his books. Take him for a drive and some fresh air."

Georgina left the room obediently. But instead of seeking Alexander, she hunted, with an agitated face, for Aimee.

"Hullo! What's the trouble now?" exclaimed Aimee. "I say, Georgie, dear, I'm beastly sorry about being in the arbor. I couldn't help—"

"Oh, never mind that now!" broke in Georgina distractedly. "A much worse thing's happened. I knew how it would be. Lady Diana Lambe is coming; she'll be here in an hour or two."

Rapidly she repeated the news concerning the two expected guests. Aimee received it with consternation.

"Cold Lambe!" she exclaimed. "Coming here? As if I hadn't enough to bear without that! It's the worst news yet."

"Wh-what did you call her?"

"It's what everybody calls her in London—Cold Lambe. It fits her like a glove. A beautiful, frigid beast!"

"Aimee! She knows you, doesn't she?"

"Of course. She lives in town. She's the only one of the Lambes I do know. And Diana hates me, and—well, I've never pretended to like her, either. She's perfectly pitiless; she'll give me away like a shot, and flatten me out. She'll be all over it!"

"Let us hope," said Georgina breathlessly, "that Monsieur de Jussac will—er—distract her attention; keep her occupied. Lady Erythea says—"

Aimee sat on the bed and exploded with laughter.

"That aunt of mine is incorrigible!" she gasped. "I tell you it's perfect rot. You might as well try to melt an iceberg fresh from the Pole. The French vicomte won't stand the slightest chance."

"Do you know him, too?"

"I've heard of him. They say he's [illegible]

[illegible]

sorry, Georgie. It'll be beastly dull for you in bed, dear."

"I shall like a little dullness," said Georgina pathetically, as she left the room, "it will be restful. Goodby, dear. You will have to keep out of Diana's way as best you can."

"I'll take jolly good care I do," murmured Aimee fervently, as she put her cap straight. "Even Billy can't help this time!"

CHAPTER XVIII

"Cold Lambe!"

Lady Diana might have been the original of that tedious young woman who was described by the poet as "divinely tall and most divinely fair." She was without doubt strikingly beautiful, a type of the large and very pale blonde. But an atmosphere of frigidity surrounded her, which many people found repellent.

"My dear aunt," she said calmly, entering the drawing room and kissing Lady Erythea, "so good of you to have me for this flying visit. Alexander, how are you?" She touched her brother's cheek with her lips.

"You will have a clear field for your investigations, my dear," said Lady Erythea, "and I hope the advances you have made in psychic science will—ah—bring you to terms with the ghost. But I doubt it. By the way, your cousin Aimee is here, as I told you. But she is unwell and is keeping her room. I am rather anxious about her. Incidentally, we shall have another guest; I expect Monsieur de Jussac today."

Alexander left the room.

"Monsieur de Jussac!" exclaimed Diana. She paused. Lady Erythea watched her somewhat keenly. "What brings him here?" said Diana.

"He is very anxious," said Lady Erythea glibly, "to examine the Lambe collection of armor. We have a suit of mail which is believed to have been captured at Crecy; there is a tradition that it belonged to one of the De Jussac family."

Lady Diana looked incredulous.

"And I understand he is interested in psychic matters, and anxious to improve his knowledge."

"That is something in his favor," said Diana with suspicion.

"I expect that is his car," said Lady Erythea.

A rakish automobile of semi-racing type was observed sweeping along the park drive. The Vicomte de Jussac had motored direct from town.

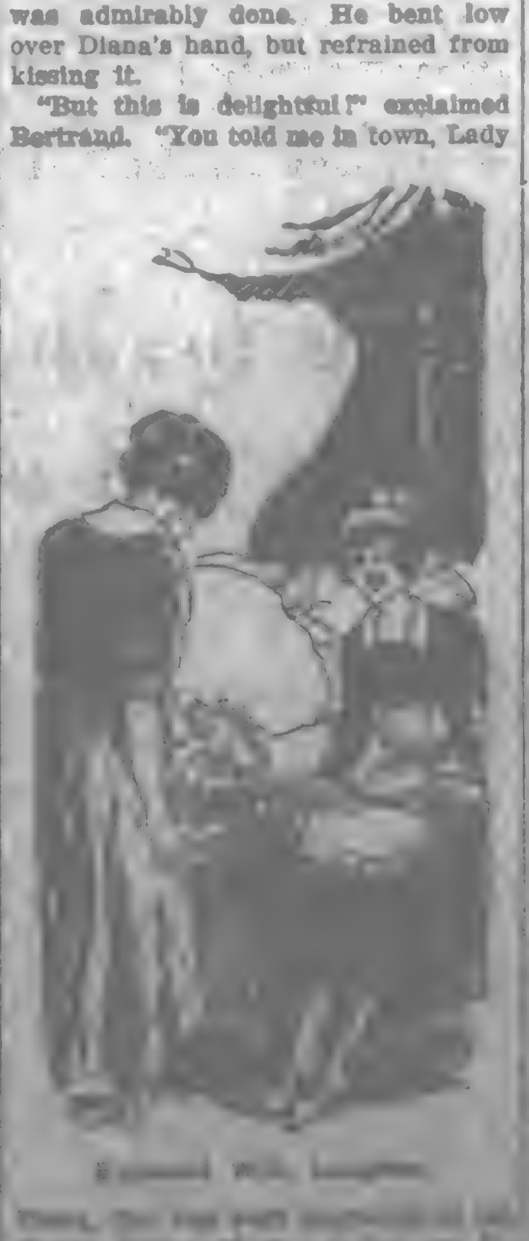
A minute later he presented himself. Bertrand de Jussac was tall, and for his age, rather full-bodied. His complexion was healthily ruddy, he had a little black mustache and a jolly, roving dark eye. In spite of his very material appearance, he had undoubtedly the bel air. He raised Lady Erythea's skinny fingers to his lips.

"Enchanted, dear lady, to pay homage to you sur vos terres. How very amiable of you to invite me!"

Lady Erythea bestowed on him the smile she reserved for elder sons. "Charmed to have you. You know my niece, surely?"

Bertrand's little start of surprise was admirably done. He bent low over Diana's hand, but refrained from kissing it.

"But this is delightful!" exclaimed Bertrand. "You told me in town, Lady [illegible]



Exploded With Laughter.

[illegible]

armor than I do. Why not show it to Monsieur de Jussac, so that he may commence his studies. You will find most of it in the hall."

"I think Monsieur de Jussac had better pursue his own investigations, for I shall be fully occupied with mine," said Diana, "and for the present I will retire to my room, if you will excuse me, Aunt."

She glided majestically through the doorway.

The Vicomte's eyes followed Diana's departure.

"Adorable blonde!" he mused. "The invincible phlegme brittanique. But it is the icy, inaccessible peak that spurs the courage of the mountaineer!"

He sat down and made himself particularly pleasant to Lady Erythea.

* * * * * * *

When the party of four assembled for dinner, Lady Erythea was amiable and resplendent in purple, Diana frigid and ethereal in pale yellow, while Alexander at first wore the air of the Jackdaw of Rheims molting under the abbot's curse. But Bertrand de Jussac, looking like a revived D'Artagnan in evening dress, contrived to chase heaviness away.

His merry, infectious laugh and quick sallies uplifted the spirits of the others. He made a deeper impression than ever on Diana Lambe, and with the usual perversity that seized her when in mixed company, she felt it due to herself to become the more openly hostile.

"I do not understand how you can defend the spirit of the age," she said coldly, in answer to a sally that made even Alexander smile. "The days of chivalry are dead. What romance can one attach to the modern young man? But in the days of heraldry, when men were splendid in helm and gorget and camail—ah, then," she exclaimed, with a rare touch of enthusiasm, "romance flourished indeed—"

"Talking of mail," said Lady Erythea blandly, "the ghost always appears in a complete suit of it, though his coming is noiseless as a breath of mist. I regret to tell you, Vicomte, that he came to a bad end through a romantic passion."

"Why regret?" protested Bertrand. "I will wager 'twas worth it."

"Because he was reputed—or disreputed—to be an ancestor of yours; a De Jussac taken as hostage by Sir Piers Lambe—after a most gallant resistance," said Lady Erythea smiling. "While here he engaged the affections of a daughter of the house, and being discovered, was permitted to don his armor and debate the matter with Sir Piers. His end was—tragic."

"No end can be wholly tragic, if reached by the path of a great passion. To every rose its thorn. I applaud him!" Bertrand raised his glass. "To you, nameless ancestor!" He replaced the glass appreciatively, and Mr. Tarbeaux refilled it. "Touching this ancestor, Lady Diana—"

But his hostess had given the signal, the ladies rose, and the two men were left alone—a custom that still lingered at Jervaulx. De Jussac did not find Mr. Lambe a very exhilarating companion, but Alexander, though drinking only water, kept him at the table an unconscionable time. When eventually they reached the drawing room Alexander departed at once to his library, and Bertrand found that Diana had retired.

"I must apologize for my niece, Vicomte, but she has gone to her room; to achieve the proper psychic attitude, or whatever she calls it, for her inquiries as to this absurd ghost," said Lady Erythea. "She can, of course, do nothing tonight. And as it is late, and you will not wish to sit up talking to an old woman—"

"Most spirituelle of hostesses," protested the Vicomte, "I should like to sit and talk to you all night, if you will allow me—"

Diana put her head inside the door.

"I told you, Aunt," she said, "that my stupid maid lost herself at the terminus, and I cannot retire unattended. May I have yours?"

"My own incumbrance has been away for two days," said her aunt, "but we have a parlor maid who really attends to one's hair very soothingly; she did mine last night." Lady Erythea pressed the bell.

The butler appeared. "Tarbeaux, you will tell Snooks to attend Lady Diana in her room."

"Very good, m' lady."

Mr. Tarbeaux found Aimee on her way upstairs to bed, and gave her the order. Aimee was astonished, and scarcely [illegible]

[illegible]

in the mirror, opened in a stare of amazement.

"Who did they say you were?" she said in a grating voice.

"S-Snooks, m' lady," said Aimee, dropping a curtsey.

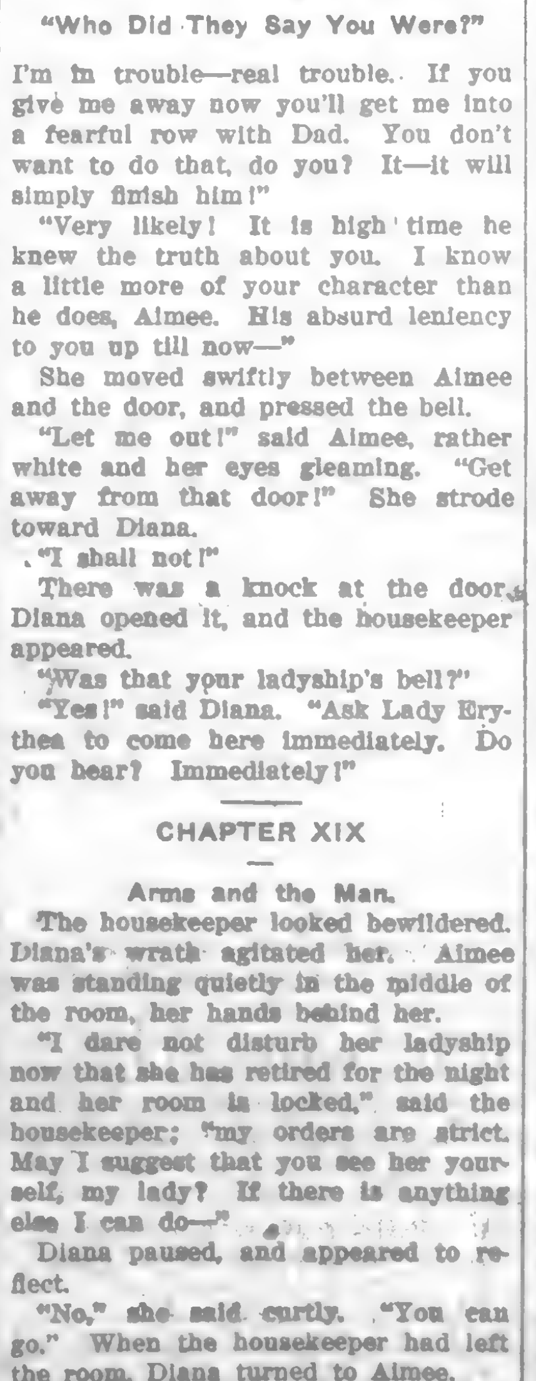
"Snooks! You are Aimee Scroope! Don't deny it!" said Diana fiercely. "Don't attempt to deceive me. I should know you in a thousand. What is the meaning of this—masquerade?"

Aimee surrendered.

"Yes, Di—it's me! For goodness' sake don't shout." For once Aimee lost her head. "Aunt doesn't know I'm here, you see. Don't give me away. I'll try and explain—"

"I don't want your explanation. You will explain to Aunt!" rasped Diana. "I can see by your manner there is something more in this than mere folly! I've had my suspicions, from what Aunt has said—"

"Di," exclaimed Aimee imploringly, "there's no use trying to hide it now—I'm in trouble—real trouble. If you give me away now you'll get me into a fearful row with Dad. You don't want to do that, do you? It—it will simply finish him!"



"Who Did They Say You Were?"

"Very likely! It is high time he knew the truth about you. I know a little more of your character than he does, Aimee. His absurd leniency to you up till now—"

She moved swiftly between Aimee and the door, and pressed the bell.

"Let me out!" said Aimee, rather white and her eyes gleaming. "Get away from that door!" She strode toward Diana.

"I shall not!"

There was a knock at the door. Diana opened it, and the housekeeper appeared.

"Was that your ladyship's bell?"

"Yes!" said Diana. "Ask Lady Erythea to come here immediately. Do you hear? Immediately!"

CHAPTER XIX

Arms and the Man.

The housekeeper looked bewildered. Diana's wrath agitated her. Aimee was standing quietly in the middle of the room, her hands behind her.

"I dare not disturb her ladyship now that she has retired for the night and her room is locked," said the housekeeper; "my orders are strict. May I suggest that you see her yourself, my lady? If there is anything else I can do—"

Diana paused, and appeared to reflect.

"No," she said curtly. "You can go." When the housekeeper had left the room, Diana turned to Aimee.

"You will come with me now—to Aunt!"

"I'll do nothing of the sort," retorted Aimee defiantly. "Go and speak to her yourself, if you want to. Rouse her out of bed now, and tell her all you know. I shall get it hot; I'm used to that—but there's one consolation, she'll jolly well flatten you out, too!"

Again Diana hesitated. She saw herself roaring accusations into the ear-trumpet of an infuriated aunt newly aroused from slumber.

"I am tired, and I do not wish for a scene at this time of night," she said, fixing Aimee with a malignant eye. "On consideration, I shall leave this affair till the morning. And now—you may go."

She stood away from the door.

"Won't you be decent about it, Di?" said Aimee imploringly. "I don't care for myself, but it's going to be awful for Dad. I—I—if you'd only let me tell you—"

"I have no desire to listen to a disreputable story, at which no doubt [illegible]

[illegible]

retired. Aimee made her way to Georgina's bedroom door, and rapped stealthily for some time, for the door was locked. It seemed impossible to arouse Georgina, and after a lengthy effort Aimee desisted. Lady Erythea's room was next door, and even the deaf hear when they are not wanted to.

Finally, Aimee crept down into the hall, where the suits of armor loomed grimly in the half-light, a silent, threatening host. It was impossible to get out of the house. All conceivable outlets were secured, since the burglary. Aimee passed through the paneled dining hall. The darkness got on her nerves. She switched on a single electric light, and looked round her hopelessly.

"Two or three more days, and I believe Billy would have pulled me through," she said dully. "I know he would. Now, it's all up. I'm done. And I can't get to Billy."

Aimee dropped into an armchair, buried her face in her hands, and began to cry. She cried like a child that has hurt itself.

A large figure stole into the room with a remarkably noiseless step. It was the Vicomte de Jussac. He started as he caught sight of the forlorn figure in the chair, and stared in surprise. The spectacle of a damsel in distress at once roused generous sentiments in the beau sabreur.

He crossed the room and seated himself on the arm of the chair.

"Away, dull care," murmured Bertrand. "Such eyes as those—I cannot see them but I am sure they are adorable—were never made for weeping. Tell me your sorrow, ma petite," he said gently; "it shall be swept away!"

"I'm in awful trouble!" sobbed Aimee.

"Alas! But let me help you. Here am I, a big, gross fellow, but very capable, sent by the gods to aid you. It is what I am for!"

Aimee dropped her hands and stared at him, startled.

"Are you Monsieur de Jussac?" she stammered.

"Infinitely at your service, mademoiselle."

Aimee's eyes searched his face. It was rather closer to hers than appeared necessary, but it was undoubtedly sympathetic.

"Tell me!" he murmured.

Aimee hesitated.

"Well, I will tell you. I've got to tell somebody, or I shall go mad!" said Aimee with a rush. "Anyway they'll know it tomorrow. I'm not the parlor maid. I'm Aimee Scroope—Lady Erythea's niece."

"Hein!" exclaimed the Vicomte. He rose to his feet, staring at her, and twisted his mustache—a habit in moments of bewilderment.

Aimee plunged into her tale breathlessly. She made it brief; it was also very jumbled. But the thread managed to unravel itself. Before she finished, Bertrand turned away. His shoulders quivered and shook, the back of his neck was crimson.

"You're laughing!" cried Aimee accusingly.

"But no!" gasped the Vicomte, choking. "It is grief. Grief and sympathy—for you—mademoiselle."

"You are laughing!" said Aimee stepping in front of him. "Go on then—laugh! If you can laugh at that, you're—you're all right! Billy says—" She checked herself, and suddenly began to laugh, too; a very rainbow of laughter and tears. "But what's to be done? It's the finish!"

Bertrand turned and caught her by the hands.

"We shall find a way!" he cried. "Courage! Bah! but that is an imbecile remark. If you had not courage you would not be here. Who should betray you?"

"Diana." Aimee told him of the encounter in the bedroom.

"It cannot be! She has a heart. Under that icily exquisite exterior, a warm heart beats. It must be softened."

"A heart? Di? She's a—" Aimee stopped just in time. "I'm afraid it's quite hopeless. I only told you because I was in despair."

"A De Jussac never despairs! Especially when there is a charming little lady to be rescued from the Philistines. The difficulty must be overcome at any cost. Ah!" he exclaimed, coming near to her. "I believe I have it! Listen—"

"Oh!" said Aimee with a gasp. She had become conscious that they were not alone.

Alexander stood before them, in a black dressing gown, a candle in his hand. He only needed bell and book to be the very image of an abbot in the act of pronouncing excommunication. De Jussac started violently, and frowned. Alexander took no notice of him; his eyes were fixed on Aimee.

"Yes," gasped Diana. Don't—speak so loud, Aime—"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

An Ideal Revenge.

It was the morning after the heavy snow, and he drove into a downtown garage to have chains put on the rear wheels of his car. A negro was doing the work. [illegible]

MAY

Why That Bad Back?

Does spring find you miserable with an aching back? Do you feel lame, stiff, tired, nervous and depressed? Likely your kidneys have weakened. Winter is hard on the kidneys. Colds and chills and a heavier diet with less exercise tax them heavily. It's little wonder spring finds you with backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and bladder irregularities. But don't be discouraged. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

An Indiana Case

Mrs. M. L. Holmes, S. 8th St., Middletown, Ind., says: "I was taken with terrific pains in my back and couldn't do my housework. Heavy pains settled across my back and when I stooped the pains became worse. Spots came before my eyes and I became nervous. My kidneys didn't act right. Doan's Kidney Pills rid me of the complaint."

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Get Doan's at Any Store, 60c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

NR TO-NIGHT Tomorrow Alright

KEEPING WELL—An NR Tablet (a vegetable aperient) taken at night will help keep you well, by toning and strengthening your digestion and elimination.

Used for over 30 Years

Get a 25¢ Box

NR Jrs

Chips off the Old Block

NR JUNIORS—Little NRs

One-third the regular dose. Made of the same ingredients, then candy coated. For children and adults.

SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST

VICTIMS RESCUED

Kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles are most dangerous because of their insidious attacks. Heed the first warning they give that they need attention by taking

LATHROP'S GOLD MEDAL HAARLEM OIL

The world's standard remedy for these disorders, will often ward off these diseases and strengthen the body against further attacks. Three sizes, all druggists. Look for the name Gold Medal on every box and accept no imitation

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

Removes Dandruff · Stops Hair Falling
Restores Color and Beauty to Gray and Faded Hair
60c and $1.00 at Druggists.
Hiscox Chem. Wks. Patchogue, N. Y.

HINDERCORNS Removes Corns, Callouses, etc., stops all pain, ensures comfort to the feet, makes walking easy. 15c by mail or at Druggists. Hiscox Chemical Works, Patchogue, N. Y.

Kill All Flies! THEY SPREAD DISEASE

Placed anywhere, DAISY FLY KILLER attracts and kills all flies. [illegible] Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed.

DAISY FLY KILLER at your dealer or

5 by EXPRESS, prepaid, $1.25.

HAROLD SOMERS, 150 De Kalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With Othine—Double Strength

This preparation for the treatment of freckles is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of Othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double-strength Othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

His Forte.

She—"I'd rather dance than eat, wouldn't you?" He—"Well, I think I eat best."—From Life.

HOW'S THIS?

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE will do what we claim for it—rid your system of Catarrh or Deafness caused by Catarrh.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an Ointment which Quickly Relieves the catarrhal inflammation, and the Internal Medicine, a Tonic, which acts through the blood on the Mucous Surfaces, thus assisting to restore normal conditions.

Sold by druggists for over 40 Years.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

Misery loves company—but it's tough on the company.

Sure Relief

FOR INDIGESTION

[illegible]

BELL-ANS

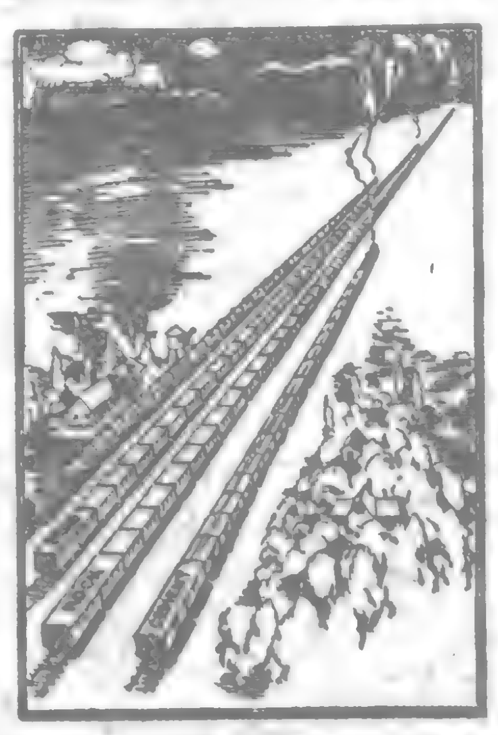
BETTER ROADS

MILE OF CONCRETE PAVING

According to Department of Agriculture 3,913 Barrels of Cement Will Be Needed.

What goes into a mile of concrete paving? The answer makes an interesting story and the data are available from Bulletin 1077, issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. According to the bulletin, a mile of concrete pavement 7 inches thick at the edges and 8 inches thick at the center will require 3,913 barrels of portland cement. With it must be mixed 1,102 cubic yards of sand, 1,664 cubic yards of crushed rock; 30 gallons of water are needed to mix and cure a square yard of concrete pavement, or more than 300,000 gallons of water must be furnished for a mile of road. Approximately 4,500 tons of concrete goes into the construction.

In making the cement required for a mile of pavement over 390 tons of coal are burned at the cement mill, and approximately 19 tons of gypsum are required to regulate the setting time of the material. To ship the cement to the scene of the paving requires some 15,000 cloth sacks, 15 bales of cotton are woven into cloth to supply this item. In a year about 30,000,000 sacks are lost and destroyed.



Materials in Mile of Concrete Paving—42 Cars of Sand, 20 Cars of Cement, 30 Cars of Water, Are Among Essentials.

Back in the cement quarries 450 tons of dynamite are shot off for blasting rock for the cement required in this one mile of concrete pavement. A good idea of what highway construction means to the railroads can be obtained from these figures: Forty-two cars of fine sand, 65 cars of crushed rock, 20 cars of cement. When reinforcing is specified, further transportation is called for.

While the water supply is governed by local conditions, in addition to these requirements, the drainage pipe, bridge and culvert construction must be provided for.

As the peak of the demand comes during the late summer, there is difficulty in getting materials on the job at the exact time desired. Earlier shipment of construction materials and loading of cars to capacity would go a long way toward helping the congested condition.

SURPLUS ARMY SUPPLIES AID

Bureau of Public Roads Has Allotted $190,000,000 Worth of Road-Building Material.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Approximately $190,000,000 worth of road-building machinery, and other supplies from the surplus war material of the army, including 30,000 motor vehicles, have been allotted by the bureau of public roads, United States Department of Agriculture. This material, of which approximately $150,000,000 worth has been delivered says the bureau in its annual report, has enabled many of the states to organize and equip maintenance divisions to patrol the entire state road system.

The largest item of materials delivered consisted of shop machinery and shop tools and equipment. This enabled the state highway departments to equip shops for reconditioning and repairing motor vehicles and other motor-driven machinery received from the government. The shop machinery consisted mainly of lathes, tool grinders, milling machines, cutting machines, planers, drill presses, and electric motors.

Approximately 8,000,000 pounds of picric acid have been distributed for road-building and land-clearing purposes. In addition to the material distributed from the excess stores at [illegible] and arsenals in the United States, there are now being [illegible] from Germany and France [illegible] trucks [illegible]

[illegible]

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

Copyright, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.

LESSON FOR MAY 13

DAVID, THE POET-KING

LESSON TEXT—I Sam. 16:1-3.

GOLDEN TEXT—Surely, goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life.—Ps. 23:6.

REFERENCE MATERIAL—Ps. 51; Isa. 9:7; Jer. 23:15-26; Luke 1:32; Acts 22:20-34.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Shepherd Boy Chosen King.

JUNIOR TOPIC—God Calls a Boy to Be King.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—David, as a Friend.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lessons From the Life of David.

I. Samuel Mourns for Saul (v. 1).

1. Why He Mourned. The death of Saul was no doubt a personal loss to Samuel, for Saul was a commanding and lovable personality. Then, too, the ruin of so promising a career would deeply affect a soul like Samuel. Finally the humiliation to God and God's people grieved his heart.

2. Excessive Mourning Rebuked. The fact that God had rejected Saul should have lifted Samuel out of his grief. Excessive grief over that which God does is a reflection upon Him and should be rebuked. In all God's acts we should submit although it may change our plans. When sorrow becomes a hindrance to the discharge of duty, it merits rebuke.

II. Samuel Sent to Anoint David (vv. 1-3).

1. Samuel's Fear (v. 2). Perhaps by this time Saul was becoming a desperate character. Samuel knew that if Saul should hear that he was taking steps to anoint a successor to his throne, his own life would be in danger. Samuel was wise in submitting this difficult situation to the Lord. God's servants are to be brave. But even when going on errands for God we should not court danger. We should exercise the greatest caution so that unnecessary dangers be avoided.

2. The Lord's Direction (vv. 2, 3). The Lord smoothed the way for Samuel. He showed him how to perform his duty and escape the danger. Samuel was to take a heifer and announce that he was going to offer a sacrifice unto the Lord and to call Jesse to the sacrifice. The prophet was not told all that would happen. This is usually God's way with us. He gives us our work piece by piece and guides us step by step. Samuel's purpose was known only to him. It was to be kept a secret so that the news would not reach Saul. This was a shrewd device but entirely legitimate. There is not necessity for us to reveal all our purposes.

III. Samuel's Obedience (vv. 4-13).

1. The Trembling Elders of Bethlehem (vv. 4, 5). It seems that the whole nation was shot through with fear because of Saul's sin. To the elders' alarming inquiry Samuel responded with the assurance of peace, inviting them to join him in worshiping the Lord.

2. Examination of Jesse's Sons (vv. 6-12). The Lord had revealed to Samuel that one of Jesse's sons was to be the new king, but not the particular one. The selection of the right one was a most important matter as destinies hung upon it. (1) Eliab rejected (vv. 6, 7). Eliab was the eldest son and therefore he was the first presented as having first right to the place of honor. Further, he was a splendid specimen of a man, tall and majestic in appearance so that even Samuel was captivated by him as he had been by Saul. (10:24). Outward appearance was favorable but the realities seen by God were against him. God knows whom He can trust with great responsibilities. We frequently estimate men by their dress, culture, wealth and position. These are only surface manifestations and frequently lead us astray, but God looks into the heart. (2) David chosen (vv. 8-12). All but one of Jesse's sons had been looked upon but still the Lord's choice had not appeared. Jesse's reply to Samuel's question as to whether all his children had appeared seems to imply that David was not of much importance. He was considered good enough to watch the sheep but not important enough to be called to the feast. Because David was faithful as a shepherd boy, he was in line for promotion when God's proper time arrived.

3. David Anointed (v. 13). When the shepherd lad appeared, the Lord directed Samuel to anoint him. When the oil was applied the Spirit of the Lord came upon him. [illegible] and were.

[illegible]

QUITE A "PROMINENT FELLER"

Fact That "A. Louer" Was Very Much in Evidence in Paris Impressed Jay Gould.

Mrs. Barton French, who had taken a villa on the sea near Monte Carlo for the winter, said at a dinner party:

"We Americans are poor linguists as a rule. I remember a story that Lord Dunraven once told me about Jay Gould.

"Jay Gould was visiting Paris, and Lord Dunraven devoted a day to driving him over the city. There happened to be a good many apartments to let at the time, and to-let signs—A Louer—were stuck up everywhere. Jay Gould didn't seem to notice the Arc de Triomphe, or Notre Dame, or anything. A queer, silent little chap, Lord Dunraven said.

"But at the end of the day's sightseeing Mr. Gould displayed a little interest at last.

"'Who's this here A. Louer, Mr. Dunraven?' he said. 'Seems a pretty prominent feller.'"

The housewife smiles with satisfaction as she looks at the basket of clear, white clothes and thanks Red Cross Ball Blue. At all grocers.—Advertisement.

Save Doctor's Bills.

Young Wife—I'm going to make the dessert myself tonight, dear. I saw a recipe in the cookbook for economical pudding."

Hub—Suppose we have no pudding—that will be even more economical.—Boston Evening Transcript.

A man likes to feel that he is loved and a woman likes to be told.

98 OUT OF EVERY 100 WOMEN BENEFITED

An Absolutely Reliable Statement Important to Every Woman

Remarkable Results Shown by a Nation Wide Canvass of Women Purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. 50,000 Women Answer

For some time a circular has been enclosed with each bottle of our medicine bearing this question: "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

Replies, to date, have been received from over 50,000 women answering that question.

98 per cent of which say YES. That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take the medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This is a most remarkable record of efficiency. We doubt if any other medicine in the world equals it.

Think of it—only two women out of 100 received no benefit—98 successes out of a possible 100.

Did you ever hear anything like it? We must admit that we, ourselves, are astonished.

Of course we know that our medicine does benefit the large majority of women who take it. But that only two out of 100 received no benefit is most astonishing.

It only goes to prove, however, that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure all—one that is made by the most scientific process; not from drugs, but from a combination of nature's roots and herbs, can and does do more good than hastily prepared prescriptions.

You see, we have been making, improving and refining this medicine for over 50 years until it is so perfect and so well adapted to women's needs that it actually has the virtue to benefit 98 out of every 100 women who take it.

Its reliability and recognized efficiency has gained for it a sale in almost every country in the world—leading all others.

Such evidence should induce every woman suffering from any ailment peculiar to her sex to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and see if she can't be one of the 98. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

10 Cents BRIGHTENS, REFRESHES, ADDS NEW DELIGHT TO OLD DRAPERIES

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES—dyes or tints as you wish

HOUNDS SPOILED HER SOLO

Impression Made by Young Songstress Quite Different From the One Intended.

I was spending the week-end with a friend of my mother's, who lived with her eligible son on a large country estate. I was taking vocal lessons and took myself quite seriously.

The morning after my arrival, seeing my host out in the vicinity of the stables, I decked myself in my best bib and tucker and sauntered to the garden, accompanied by two big hounds. From the corner of a watchful eye I saw my audience approaching, and I burst forth in my most wonderful soprano. Simultaneously the hounds lifted their faces to heaven, even as I, and joined me in a most hideous cry.

My sense of humor came to my rescue, and I joined the master in his laughter, but I could have cried much more easily.—Chicago Tribune.

An Appeal Suggested.

The eminent lawyer came back from court in something of a huff. There had been some words with the judge.

Upon entering his office the attorney took up his brief, rushed to the big dictionary and began a search. Finally he turned to his partner.

The latter awaited developments.

"The dictionary," stated the eminent lawyer solemnly, "disagrees with my spelling of this word."

"In that case," suggested the equally eminent colleague, "take an appeal to the encyclopaedia."—From the Green Bag.

And the Wife, Too.

"A man usually makes more or less than he says he does," remarks Tom Sims. Sh-h! Tom, or you'll arouse the income-tax collector's suspicions.—Boston Evening Transcript.

A Woman's Reason.

Alice—Why did you postpone your marriage to Dick?

Virginia—He married Gladys!

Radium's Energy.

An atom of radium in full activity is shown on a slide available to amateur microscopists in England. The mineral pitchblende is the source of radium, and under a strong lens a piece of this is seen to maintain a ceaseless and brilliant bombardment of particles which strike a screen. The sight gives an excellent and realistic example of terrific energy.

Shave With Cuticura Soap

And double your razor efficiency as well as promote skin purity, skin comfort and skin health. No mug, no slimy soap, no germs, no waste, no irritation even when shaved twice daily. One soap for all uses—shaving, bathing and shampooing.—Advertisement.

Protecting Alaskan Game.

New regulations for the protection of game in certain localities in Alaska have been approved by the secretary of agriculture, effective April 1, 1923. The only important change made was that eliminating certain islands in southeastern Alaska on which the killing of deer was prohibited in the past. Krusof island, however, is still retained as a deer preserve. The killing of mountain sheep and mountain goats in the eastern part of the Kenai peninsula is prohibited until April 1, 1925. There still remains a closed season on deer west of longitude 141 degrees.

"Darling!" He Exclaimed.

I was the last to enroll in the English class and the young instructor had copied my name—Dowling—hurriedly as the class bell sounded.

He called the roll with much gusto until he came to the badly scribbled last name. A pause.

Then in an uncertain voice he said: "Darling?" Silence. "Darling!" he exclaimed.

"Do you mean me?" I murmured.

The ensuing shouts of laughter filled me with greater embarrassment than I ever experienced.—Exchange.

If a girl can make a man jealous it's a sign she has him going.

Harsh Criticism.

Senator Ashurst of New Mexico tells this story:

"The best story I know of is on myself. It happened several years ago, when I was making a speech in a little town in New Mexico and the crowd, of course, was made up of women as well as men. Up in the front row was an old lady, and I noticed her following intently every word I said.

"I launched into a defense of my policies, and, naturally, made the pledges I might be expected to make in the political campaign. Along toward the end of the speech the old lady in front got up and started to leave.

"'Sweetened wind,' was all she said as she stalked out. The crowd roared."—New York Herald.

Chinese Take to Frozen Meat.

Argentina is giving Australia a run for her money in supplying China and the Far East with frozen meat. While the Chinese have in the past preferred the taste and smell of fresh-killed meat, they are gradually being educated to eat the frozen variety, says Consul General Thomas Sammons, Melbourne, in a report just received by the Department of Commerce, and there is a general belief that they will ultimately become accustomed to using frozen meat freely. On the other hand, Australian butter is selling well in China and Japan, while canned fruits and jams from the island continent are being taken in increasing quantities.

Two Cheerful Liars.

"When I was in India," said the club bore, "I saw a tiger come down to the water where some women were washing clothes. It was a very fierce tiger, but one woman, with great presence of mind, splashed some water in its face—and it slunk away."

"Gentlemen," said the man in an armchair, "I can vouch for the truth of this story. Some minutes after the incident occurred I was coming down to the water. I met this tiger and, as is my habit, stroked its whiskers. Gentlemen, those whiskers were wet."

Why divide the family at breakfast?

WHY take coffee for yourself, while saying "No" to the children? It is true, as most parents are careful to explain, that little folks should not endanger health and growth through the drug element in coffee and tea, but—

Your health is valuable, too—and your desire for a hot drink with breakfast may be as great as theirs.

There's complete satisfaction in Postum, and safety alike for young and old. Postum is a pure cereal beverage. It is coffee-like in color and flavor, but free from any element that can harm. Thousands who are now saying "No" to themselves as well as to the children, as a safeguard against coffee-ills, have found better comfort and better health, in Postum.

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either is about one-half cent a cup.

Postum for Health

MAY

The Chicago Tribune

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

Has Appointed

Chas H. Rice Pharmacy, St. Joe, Phone 47

Ralph Beams, Spencerville,

Its Dealers in This Locality for the Chicago Sunday Tribune

The Chicago Sunday Tribune is the only newspaper in the world with a COLO*Roto* Magazine. This big feature alone is worth the price of the paper.

The COLO*Roto* Magazine—FREE every Sunday with the Chicago Tribune — contains stories by the world's greatest authors, fashions in beautiful colors, photographs of world events, rare humor.

A big Colot Comic Section every Sunday. The Gumps, Gasoline Alley, Harold Teen and Winnie Winkle.

McCutcheon's Cartoons, Dr. Evans' Health Araicles, Antoinette Donnelly's Beauty Hints and numerous features.

Get next Sunday's Chicago Tribune. Reserve your copy at once. 10c.

Get Your

Daily Bread - - Welcome Flours

at the J. C. Bailey Store St. Joe

Made by G. A. WARD of the

ALBION ROLLER MILLS, Albion Indiana

NEWS OF THE TOWN

Mrs. Vina Fish is improving from her recent illness.

Mrs. Tom White is still very ill at her home north of town.

Miss Katheryn Curie spent over Sunday with her cousin, Thelma Sechler at Butler.

Dorothy Knight was an over Sunday guest of her cousin, Basil Shaffer.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Shapeland of Fort Wayne, spent Friday guests of the latter's aunt and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jenkins.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Showers of Auburn, visited Friday and Saturday with their daughter, Mrs. Ed Miser and and family.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Monroe and Mr. and Mrs. Fred B Leighty visited D. C. McCann and Henry Reinoehl Sunday afternoon in the Garrett Sacred Heart hospital, both of whom are in a critical condition.

A Good Thing - DON'T MISS IT.

Send your name and address plainly written together with 5 cents (and this slip) to Chamberlain Medicine Co., Des Moines, Iowa, and receive in return a trial package containing Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for coughs, colds, croup, bronchial, "flu" and whooping coughs, and tickling throat; Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets for stomach troubles, indigestion, gassy pains that crowd the heart, biliousness and constipation; Chamberlain's Salve, needed in every family for burns, scalds, wounds, piles, and skin affections; these valued family medicines for only 5 cents. Don't miss it.

Try a want ad in the News.

Mrs. Maude Jenkins spent Monday in Fort Wayne.

Mrs. Rose Meese and Mrs. Lena Meek spent Monday in Auburn.

Mr. and Mrs Ed Miser, daughter Martha, and son Charles, spent Sunday at Orland.

Mrs. Elizabeth Astry of near Grabill, visited from Sunday until Tuesday morning in the Sam Kees and George Kees homes.

Roy Koch and family and Will Koch and wife were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clay Coburn.

Fred Johnson of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, spent Friday night and Saturday with his mother and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Meese.

Herbert Curie, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Monroe and Mrs. Belle Ridgway were Audurn visitors Saturday evening.

The Cal Hutton family formerly living near here but now of near Auburn, have been quarantined for the past four weeks for smallpox.

Mr. and Mrs D. I. Gillingham and mother, Mrs Clara Gillingham of Garrett and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Kees and children were Sunday guests of Sam Kees and wife.

Mrs. James Mohr and Mrs. I. A. Coon of Fostoria, Ohio, left Wednesday evening for Auburn to visit relatives after having visited the first of the week with W. F. Henley and family.

David Dill, of Pierceton, is here a guest of his daughter, Mrs. C. R. Price and husband.

Mrs. H. C. Hathaway and son of Auburn, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Bishop.

Will Hamm and wife visited his mother at Garrett, Sunday, who is ill.

Mrs. Myrtle Brinker has moved her household goods to their farm near Leo.

George Grosjean was a Sunday dinner guest of F. R. Bowman and wife.

Miss Dorothy George of Auburn spent over Sunday with friends in St. Joe.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hatch and George Berry, of Fort Wayne, spent Sunday with Mrs. Ada Berry.

Mr. and Mrs. Alder Crawford of near Sherwood, Ohio, spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Terman.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Randall visited Sunday afternoon with Rufus Boots and sister Vina, west of Spencerville.

Sam Keesler and family and Walter Keesler and family visited Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Hart, Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jackson and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thayer, of Hicksville and Dr. B. S. Sheffer and wife, were Sunday afternoon guests of Craig Sheffer and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hull entertained to Sunday dinner, Mrs. Sarah Walters and J. O. Quance and family of Fort Wayne, Mrs. Ida Walker of South Bend, F. B. Leighty and wife, and ye editor and wife. Mrs. Walker remained to visit a few days in St. Joe.

Earl Smith has introduced an entirely new and novel style of wearing men's shirts. He appeared first Sunday morning at an early hour on the streets of St. Joe with this new style but soon got cold feet and returned to the usual way. Ask Earl [illegible] about it.

PROGRAM FOR M. P. CONVENTION

State Convention of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Union

TUESDAY EVENING, MAY 8th

7:30—Song Service
Rev. W. L. Heitz, Chorister
8:00—Welcome Address
Mr. H. M. Widney
8:15—Response - Rev. A. L. Wooton
8:25—Special Music - - St. Joe Choir
8:30—Sermon - Rev. H. L. Feeman, D. D.
Announcements.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, MAY 9th

8:30—Devotional Service
Rev. Fred Clark
9:00—"Program of the Young People's Work in Indiana"
Rev. C. J. Kerlin
9:30—"Future of the Rural Church"
Rev. O. W. Wyant
9:50—"Collections That Count"
Rev. G. L. Farrow
10:20—Special Music - Kuhn Sisters
10:30—Convention Sermon
Rev. F. W. Lineberry
11:00—Communion Service
Rev. D. W. Hetrick
11:30—Suspension.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON

1:00—Committee Work.
1:30—Song Service.
2:00—Address - Rev. E. A. Sexsmith
Secretary of Young People's Work
2:30—"Childhood's Rights"
Miss Esther Whitney
3:00—Music.
3:10—"First Methodist Protestant Christian Endeavor Sociey in Indiana"
Mrs. Florence Buchanan
3:30—Children's Drill
Mrs. A. M. Urschel
4:00—Suspension.

PROGRAM COMMITTEE:—A. L. Wooton, E. T. Howe, J. M. Baker, C. H, Havens, W. L. Heitz, and A. J. Walton.

WEDNESDAY EVENING

7:30—Song Service.
8:00—Sermon - - Rev. E. A. Sexsmith
(Evangelistic Service

THURSDAY MORNING, MAY 10th

8:30—Devotional Service
Rev. Fred Clark
9:00—Business, Reports, Presentation of Banners and Pennant. Installation of Officers by Rev. E. A. Sexsmith.
10:30—"Our China Out-station Work"
Miss Rhoda Sexton
10:50—Address "Who's Who"
Rev. H. L. Feeman, D. D.
11:30—Suspension.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON

1:30—Song Service.
2:00—"Qualifications of Sunday School Teachers" - Rev. J. Ray Stanton
2:20—"Evangelism in the C. E. Society"
Rev. F. W. Stephenson
2:40—"Christian Citizenship"
Rev. J. S. Clawson
3:00—"Christian Stewardship"
Rev. H. L. Alley
3:20—"Adult Work"
Rev. J. C. McCaslin
3:40—"School of Methods"
Rev. W. S. Harper
4:00—"Conservation of Methodist Protestantism in Indiana"
Rev. A. W. Conn
4:30—Suspension.

THURSDAY EVENING

7:30—Song Service.
8:00—Sermon - - Rev. Hillis L. Avery
(Consecration Service)
Closing words by the President of the Union.

Miss Rosella Mendalshon spent Monday at Fort Wayne.

Charles Koch was a business visitor at Reading, Mich., last Friday.

The latest issues of all magazines at the News Office.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Koch were Hicksville visitors Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Kinsey and sons visited relatives in Auburn Sunday.

Joseph Koch of Fort Wayne, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Koch Sunday.

Leslie Meek's Barber shop is all dressed up in a new coat of brown paint.

F. M. Monroe is sporting a new Chevrolet Sedan which he purchased last week.

When you want to send a post card to a friend get the appropriate one at the News Office, birth announcements, congratulations, scenery, birthday, greetings, etc.

Mr. and Mrs. David Furnish of Detroit, returned home Sunday morning after a brief visit with relatives here. They were accompanied by his father, of Spencerville, who will visit them indefinitely.

Patronize the advertisers.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ulm and children of Butler, were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Scholes.

Mrs. Anna Dilley returned home Wednesday night after visiting a week with relatives at Fort Wayne and Albany.

Mr. and Mrs. B. V. Widney and Mrs. Alice Copp visited Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Copp and family at New Haven Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Curie and family visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George James at Harlan, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl B. Smith entertained Sunday, Miss Gladys Ashley, Mr. and Mrs. John Hand and son, Merril, of South Bend, and also two grandchildren of Chicago.

Miss Ruth Cassidy of Bloomington, Ind., will return home Thursday after having spent the past two weeks with Mrs. Virginia Lawson. Miss Martha George will take her place as companion to Mrs. Lawson.

Mr. and Mrs. Merril Wolf of Sherwood; Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hickman and daughter, Frankie, of Hicksville, and Mrs. Mel Snyder of Defiance, were entertained at dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hickman.

GLASSES—$2.50 up, Benj. F. Griest, Eyesight specialist, American Bldg., Hicksville, Ohio.

After young folks git married, they want to be careful to have their tail-light lit, so's not to be over-run by relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. John Benninghoff and little son of Fort Wayne, spent over Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Bowman.

Meals To The Public

The ladies of the M. P. Church will serve meals to the public in the Lutheran Church basement Wednesday and Thursday of this week. Dinners 35 cents and suppers 30 cents.

CONSTIPATION

A cause of many ills. Harmful to elderly people. Always relief in taking

CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS

Easy—pleasant—effective—only 25c

We Don't Want to Sell

You a Florence Oil Stove and have you dissatisfied. But we do want to sell you a Florence Oil Stove because you will be satisfied—we guarantee that. The prices have not been raised despite the recent advances. Ask your neighbor, maybe he has one.

CORN PLANTERS

A good supply of corn planters and corn plows. We are holding the prices down.

WM. CURIE

HARDWARE IMPLEMENTS

CHICK FEEDERS

Chick feeders of all kinds. Chicken coops. Troughs. Etc. A most complete line.

WE ARE READY TO SERVE YOU WITH QUALITY, QUANTITY AND PRICE. A TRIAL TELLS THE STORY.

L 912

SUPPLEMENT ST. JOE NEWS

THURSDAY, MAY 10, 1923

MOTHERS DAY

Sunday, May 13

If your mother is dead wear a white flower in her honor
If she is alive wear a pink or red one in her honor.

Gasoline for Tractors Will Escape New Tax

Farmers who own and operate tractors "for agricultural purposes" will not have to pay the gasoline tax imposed on the motoring public of Indiana by the Seventy-third general assembly. The gasoline tax act, which provides for the collection of 2 cents a gallon for gasoline sold and ultimately used in the propelling of vehicles on the public highways of the state, exempts gasoline used for the purpose of operating and propelling stationary gas engines, tractors used for agricultural purposes, motor boats, airplanes or aircraft, or for cleaning and dyeing or other commercial use except for propelling motor vehicles.

Although consumers of gasoline, who fall under the tax exemption provision, will have to pay the tax when they buy gasoline, they will be reimbursed for the amount of the tax by submitting a statement, accompanied by the original invoices showing purchases, to the auditor of the state.

The exemption of tractors from the gasoline tax was hotly contested on the floor of the house of representatives when the administration measure was discussed on second reading. Several representatives asserted the farmers were shirking their part of the tax, which is made to increase the funds of the state highway commission for the construction and maintenance of state roads.

It was contended that the tractors cause more damage to the roads than any other motor propelled vehicle. Instances where deep holes had been impressed in new roads by the heavy spikes and treads on wheels of tractors were cited by the representatives in opposition to exempting the farmers from paying the gasoline tax for gasoline used in their tractors. Farmers defended he provision by saying that tractors consume large amounts of gasoline and that the expense of supplying fuel for tractors is one of the heaviest of operating the machines.

The gasolne tax bill has been signed by Gov. McCray. The bill provides for the distribution of $500,000 of the tax collected the first year to the counties—one half to be divided equally among the ninety-two counties and one-half to be divided among the counties in the proportion which the number of miles of free gravel and county unit roads in the county bears to the whole number of miles of such roads in the state.

After the first year $1,000,000 is to be returned to the counties. It is estimated the tax will raise more than $3,000,000.

Send Us Your Name and address on a post card or in a letter and we will mail free and postpaid, a sample copy of the most wonderful magazine published. 166 pages and [illegible] every month, that will entertain every member of the family.

Popular Mechanics
MAGAZINE

It contains interesting and instructive articles [illegible]

Popular Mechanics Company [illegible]

OFFICE CAT

TRADE MARK

BY JUNIUS

COPYRIGHT 1921, BY EDGAR ALLAN MOSS.

The man who lives up to his contract collects interest on his investment as long as he lives, in the opinion of J. H. Lower.

—oo—

A man should rejoice that he is married to a woman who can make him miserable. No other kind can make a man happy.

—oo—

Strange the tax raisers haven't thought of putting an air meter on everybody's nose and charge for the air breathed, says Alfred Booth.

—oo—

A MODERN PROPOSAL

When rents come down, we'll hand in hand,
Accept the bond.
I love you dear, you understand
I will respond.
Without a fear, I say we'll wed,
I'll tell the town—
For we'll both be a long time dead,
When rents come down.

—oo—

The king of Siam is about the only little king whose crown is not in danger. But Si's turn will come.

—oo—

You'll find it hard your health to keep, if you dance all night and lose your sleep.

—oo—

It isn't so much what we need as what we want that keeps most of us poor.

—oo—

WHADDAYA MEAN, ATTACHMENTS

(From Shannon, Ill., Reporter.)

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ford are the proud parents of a 9 pound Ford, which arrived a few days ago. It arrived in fine condition and was accepted at once. It has all the attachments that the other Fords have.

Oh, yes, the tonneau is all upholstered in bare skin, and guaranteed strictly waterproof.

—oo—

In the gloaming, oh, my darling,
I go down the cellar stair;
But long ago 'twas emptied,
And there's no use going there.

—oo—

Some men are born great, others become reformers. But they also grate.

—oo—

THE AGE OF CHARMS

Too many people have more faith in "lucky" pieces than in their own ability.

—oo—

The national waist line is getting larger here and there. Sometimes it's here and sometimes it's there. The latter place is where it is now.

—oo—

STARTLING DISCOVERY

It was the final examination and a budding philosopher concluded his essay on Mother Earth with this startling statement:

"The earth revovles on its own axis 365 times in twenty-four hours. This rapid motion through space causes its sides to perspire and this is called dew."

—oo—

CHRONICALLY

In this old world there are few men
Who want to sell a gland;
But day by day, in every weigh,
The butcher sells his hand.

—oo—

"What is your son?"
"He's an artist."
"What kind of an artist?"
"He [illegible]"
[illegible]
[illegible]

[illegible]

Weather Report

As kept by G. C. Lucas

Jan.	1, partly cloudy, 28 above.
"	2, rain and snow, 28 above.
"	3, cloudy, 32 above.
"	4, snow, 28 above.
"	5, snow, 28 above.
"	6, snow, cloudy, 24 above.
"	7, snow, 22 above.
"	8, snow, 26 above.
"	9, snow, 30 above.
"	10, snow, 22 above.
"	11, snow, 18 above.
"	12, snow, 22 above.
"	13, clear, with snow, 16 above.
"	14, rain. fog, snow, 40 above.
"	15, cloudy snow, 40 above.
"	16, cloudy, snow, 26 above.
"	17, cloudy, snow, 12 above.
"	18, cloudy, snow, 40 above.
"	19, part cloudy, 24 above.
"	20, cloudy, 34 above.
"	21, clear, 28 above.
"	22, clear, 24 above.
"	23, part cloudy, 18 above.
"	24, cloudy, snow, 32 above.
"	25, part cloudy, snow, 30.
"	26, cloudy, with snow, 32.
"	27, cloudy, snow, rain, 30.
"	28, cloudy, snow, 32 above.
"	29, port cloudy, snow, 18.
"	30, part cloudy, snow, 24.
"	31, cloudy, fog, 32 above.

Paint Names On Mail Boxes

In the article appearing in the Postal Bulletin of March 24, 1923, under the caption, "Rural mail boxes to be painted by the patrons," mention was made of the desirability that the name of the head of the family receiving mail through each box be painted on each side of the box.

We wish to emphasize that it is not only desirable but highly necessary that the names of the box owners should appear upon them in neat legible letters. The placing of the names on the boxes greatly helps the regular carriers, and is of advantage especially when other than the regular carrier is serving a route.

Postmasters are urged to stress this matter when the subject of the painting of boxes is taken up by the patrons of the respective offices.

Attention is called in this connection to the fact that the numbers assigned to the rural boxes are not to appear upon them.

Bible Thoughts for the Week

Sunday.

WHEN FOOLS CRY.—Fools, because of their transgression, and because of their iniquities are afflicted.

Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble, and he saveth them out of their distresses.—Psalm 107: 17, 19.

Monday.

GOD'S GOOD GIFTS.—The Lord will give grace and glory: no good thing will be withheld from them that walk uprightly.—Psalm 84:11.

Tuesday.

GOSPEL OF CHRIST.—I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek.—Romans 1:16.

Wednesday.

GOD IS [illegible].—Thou art a God [illegible] and [illegible] of great [illegible]

[illegible]

Your Choice
Of Our Entire Stock of Men's and Young Men's Fancy

TOPCOATS
and GABERDINES

at the ONE Price

$25.00

Hart Schaffner & Marx Topcoats that are selling in other cities at $35, $40, $50 and even $60. They all go in this sale during the NEXT FIVE DAYS at the ONE price, only

$25.00

The selling season for Topcoats is almost over—however, the wearing season has just begun. You'll need a Topcoat practically all season, especially for evening driving—here's your chance to buy the finest garments made at

$25.00

These garments are made from the finest of domestic and imported woolens and waterproofed gaberdines; are quarter silk lined and silk trimmed; the most of these coats are tailored by

HART SCHAFFNER & MARX

THAT'S A GUARANTEE OF THEIR HIGH QUALITY AND EXCELLENT STYLE.

THE PRICE

$25.00

Is Away BELOW Their Real Value

We should sell every fancy Topcoat and Gaberdine in our store before the end of this week.

WE ADVISE THAT YOU COME EARLY

WE WILL HAVE EXTRA HELP IN OUR TOPCOAT SECTION.

"The Store That Does Things"

Patterson-Fletcher Co.

Important Points Neglected.

They who provide much wealth for their children, but neglect to improve them in virtue, do like those who feed their horses high, but never train them to be manageable.—Socrates.

MICKIE SAYS

IF I WUZ RUNNIN' A GARAGE,

THIRTEEN NOT UNLUCKY

Look at a silver quarter. You'll find there's 13 letters in the word Quarter Dollar. The eagle has thirteen feathers in his tail and 13 long feathers in each wing. He has 13 arrows in his left claw and there's 13 leaves in the branch on his right. The ribbon in his beak has 13 letters on it and the shield has 13 vertical bars. There's 13 stars over his head and 13 stars on the other side. Thirteen original states. Thirteen stripes in Old Glory. Thirteen letters in Geo. Washington. Thirteen letters in Warren Harding. Thirteen letters if you couple the historic nickname of "Old Abe" with Lincoln. And his other name of Father Abraham has 13 letters. Thirteen letters in Massachusetts. Thirteen letters in John Paul Jones. President Jefferson born on April 13; and 13 letters in signature of Thos. Jefferson. Winfield Scott was born on June 13, had 13 letters in his name, and was hero of the Mexican war which began on May 13. Manila surrendered to Americans on August 13. Thirteen letters in Ulysses S. Grant. Thirteen letters in signature, Theo. Roosevelt. Thirteen letters in Andrew Jackson. Thirteen letters in the name of the editor, William Quance.

BIG SUBSCRIPTION OFFER

MAGAZINES and OUR NEWSPAPER

$2.05 Order Now

L 912

598

MAY

O. E. Ginther

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXXVII ST. JOE DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, MAY 17, 1923 No. [illegible]

R. H. C. News

The Rural Housewives Club have enjoyed the hospitality of two different hostesses since the last report. A majority of the members were present at each meeting.

The afternoons were spent in needlework, a social time and a business session. The first, Mrs. O E. Cannon, assisted by Mrs. H. O. Walts, served angel food cake, ice cream, oranges and coffee. The second, Mrs. Claud Laub assisted by Mrs. Clyde Hart, served sandwiches, coffee, peaches with whipped cream and cocoanut cake. The Misses Bernice Hart and Portia Radsell were guests at Mrs. Laub's.

Next meeting to be at Mrs. Mark Murphy's, Thursday, May 24, at 1:30 P. M. All members are urged to be present as there is special business to be transacted at this time which is of general interest.

All Day Meeting

The Home Economics Club of Spencer township met on Wednesday, May 9, with Dale Hart in an all day meeting. Seventeen members and fifteen visitors were present After a potluck dinner Berniece Hart gave helpful and interesting hints on table setting and manners, after which Dora Wilder gave a demonstration on cleaning silver. Several new members were added to the club. The next meeting will be held on June 13th at the home of Mart Henderson.

Rember the Convention

Don't forget that next Tuesday and Wednesday the St Joe churches are to entertain the 58th annual Sunday School convention of DeKalb County. The convention begins with the morning session at 9 o'clock, Tuesday, and closes with the evening session Wednesday.

Unusual talent has been obtained to be on the program as you have judged from the program printed in last week's issue of this paper. Everyone is invited and there is something good in store for you.

1923 Enumeration 21 Less Than 1922

According to the report from Trustee F. L. Millman, on the enumeration of Concord Township there are 119 males and 110 females within the limits of school age, a total of 229. This total is less than the enumeration of 1922 by 21.

Mrs. John Miller, our Newville correspondent, was seriously injured last Thursday morning when she fell from a chair on which she was standing. One rib was broken, one was cracked, her right arm sprained and she was bruised badly all over. That is the reason for the absence of Newville items.

COAL

Fill up and keep filled up. Don't forget that the place to store your coal is in your bins, not in your dealer's yard, not at the mines.

Prices are now lowest of the season with all prospects of them going up, as coal is being mined below the cost of production at the present time.

We are trying to give you good advice. It is up to you to take it.

Place your orders now for the following coals:

Hocking Valley, Egg and Lump
Buffalo White Ash, none better
Hard Coal Chestnut and Egg

Please settle your last season's accounts now and make your credit good.

FEED

Hominy, Bran, Middlings, Tankage and other feeds.

The St. JOE ELEVATOR

Samuel Keesler, Mgr. Grain Dept. Bert Jackson, Mgr. Coal Dept.

Call on us—glad to see you. Come in whether you want anything or not.

Who Will Succeed?

Who wants to become well-to-do, financially? Practically all of us. We would all like to have money enough to secure the comforts of life and occasionally some of the luxuries.

Who will succeed in attaining this enviable condition? Only the prudent, hard-working person who saves his money and puts it to work for him. Saving alone will rarely make you wealthy, but the EARNINGS combined with yours will put you on easy street in time, especially if your savings are deposited in a safe bank like ours.

St. Joe Valley Bank---A State Bank

395,962 Fords Delivered in U. S.

Sales of Ford Cars and Trucks in the United States alone for the first quarter of 1923 reached the enormous total of 395,962, the greatest sales record in the history of the Ford Motor Company for a similar period of months. This is an increase of 135 per cent over the same months last year when Ford retail deliveries totaled 168,500.

Even these stupendous figures do not indicate the number of sales which could have been made had production facilities been greater. Every month dealer requirements have been far in excess of the company's manufacturing ability. For May dealers' orders reached the enormous figures of 300,000 Ford Cars and Trucks.

Following the expenditure of millions of dollars for new machinery, expansion of manufacturing units and enlargement of assembly plants, necessary to maintain the exacting high standards of Ford manufacture, production has been gradually increased since the first of the year until at present the company is operating on a schedule in excess of 6,500 completed Cars and Trucks a day.

While reservations now are being put on early predictions that this year would see 3,000,000 cars and trucks produced in the United States, increasing demand for Ford Products will, all indications are, keep production at capacity rate for the remainder of the year, bringing it well over the million and a half mark January 1 next, maintaining the established Ford percentage of producing as many cars and trucks as all other manufacturers combined.

Many Come to Convention

One of the best conventions ever held by the Suuday School and Christian Endeavor Union of the Methodist Protestant Church in Indiana was entertained by the local church last Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. This was the seventeenth annual meeting. Every one of the seven sessions were well attended especially the evening sessions. Nearly every pastor in the Indiana Conference was present, also many Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor societies from all over the state sent from one to twelve delegates. The total registration was about ninety. There were a few who failed to register.

The program was very good and inspiring. Some of the sermons were exceptionally good and much good could be gotten from them by the listeners. In the consecration service on Wednesday evening four young ladies gave themselves to the Lord's work, and on Thursday evening three more came to give their life to the good cause.

Allen Chapel of the Kendallville circuit was awarded the Sunday School banner and Logansport the Christian Endeavor banner.

The entertainment committee is grateful for the willingness of those who opened their homes for entertainment of the guests. We especially thank those from the other churches who helped.

Notice to Citizens

A meeting is called of all those interested in Memoral Day organisation for Friday night at 8 o'clock at the M. P. church. The meeting is in conjunction with the Farmers' Federation at the same place and date.

Alumni Banquet at Church of Christ

The Alumni of the St. Joe High School will hold itstwentieth annual banquet at the church of Christ Saturday evening, May 19th, at 8 o'clock. According to the committee about 150 are expected to be present.

In accordance of a new ruling of the Society this year only paid-up members are entitled to attend. Those members, which number 65, priviledged to invite two guests. The high school teachers, the township trustee and wife the parents of the graduates and the graduates have also been invited.

The Martha Society of the church of Christ has been obtained to serve the banquet.

Two Failures in Eighth Grade Exams.

Of the sixteen eighth grade pupils of Concord township school who took the county examination eight were successful in passing, six were conditioned, and two failed. Nearly all the failures occurred in arithmetic and grammar. The next examination will be Saturday, May 19.

Lutheran Notes

The second sermon on American Citizenship will be preached next Sunday evening at 7:30 p. m. at the Lutheran church, subject; "Tramps and Millionaries." Where do you belong? Do we know who will rule in ten years from now? Come and let us think about it and try to find a solution for the problem.

The Sunday School is at 9:30 a. m. and is very interesting. Better go next Sunday. Everybody is at work here.

Rev. S. D. Steffey, Pastor.

Christian Church Notes

Mother's Day was observed with an appropriate program. Charles Lawson, assistant superintendent, had charge of the Sunday School.

Next Sunday morning Daughter's Day will be observed. The committee in charge have a program prepared.

Thursday afternoon the church basement will be cleaned and decorated so a good attendance of both men and women are urged to be present.

The Martha Society will serve the Alumni banquet Saturday evening in the church basement. The ladies of the church will also serve meals during the county convention to be held here next Tuesday and Wednesday.

M. P. Church Notes

Life is a great thing. It is filled with great possibilities. When we fail to get a vision of our part in this life: what we ought to do so as to make a better society, trouble begins and disintergration in society, in all organised bodys of society. Come to the M. P. church Sunday at 11:00 and hear how Jesus dealt with this among his disciples.

9:30 Sunday School.
11:00 Preaching Services.
9:30 Sunday School at Concord.
7:30 Preaching Services.

C. B. HAVENS, PASTOR

Forerunners.

Already the yellow aconite lifts a smiling face to welcome me. . . . The snowdrop, sweet forerunner of the blooms of spring, is even now abroad announcing its silent faith of a coming flowered company.—J. E. Ward.

Change in B. & O. Time

The B. & O. has made some radical changes in the schedule of mail and passenger trains, effective last Sunday. The change may be of some benefit to St. Joe, but causes many inconveniences also.

East Bound No. 6, which was a flg stop here for passengers at 10:38 p m.is now scheduled at 5:45 p. m as a through train. No. 8, the fast train which went through here in the afternoon is now scheduled at about 11 o'clock p. m. and is a flag stop.

The mail train No.34,east bound is now due at 8:02 a. m, and No. 37, west bouud, is due at 11:42 a. m.

Sudden Weather Changes

Fruit May Not be Hurt

The sudden change in the weather last Tuesday night brought the farm work to a sudden halt. The rain came as a gift for the ground was getting very dry and the grain planted was on a standstill. The snow which fell Wednesday and soon melted added much more moisture to the soil and its damage to growing things was not great.

The frost on Thursday morning did considerable damage to tomato plants and a few others, but the fruit was not injured at all according to statements from our orchard men. The heavy rains of Friday night of last week and Monday night of this week are more hazardous to the fruit because it is feared that the pollen would be drounded.

While it may seem that not such a great amount of rain has fallen the weather bureau reports that more rain fell Friday and Monday nights than has fallen at one time in the record of several months past. The ground was so dry that the water was readily absorbed.

Senior Play Draws Crowd

Baccalaureate Service at M. P. Church

Commencement [illegible] Thursday Night

The Senior Class in presenting its play, "Civil Service," drew large crowds both Friday and Saturday nights of last week. Friday night the auditorium was full despite the fact that the weather was unpleasant, but on Saturday night it was crowded to its capacity. The proceeds netted over eighty dollars.

"Civil Service" is a play [illegible] usual type and met the approval of all entertained

The baccalaureate service was held at the M. P. church Sunday evening, conducted by Rev. C. H. Havens.

The commencement exercises will be held Thursday night of this week in the Church of Christ. J. M. Hatch of South Bend, will deliver the address and the St. Joe M. P. Orchestra will furnish the music

The graduates consist of twelve in number, six boys: Russell Wade, Carl Johnson, Millard Smith, Charles Miser, Wilbur Yeiser and Delvin Armstrong; six girls, Bessie Rupp' Jaunita Kinsey, Mildred Murphy, Cleota Morr, Doris Keesler and Dorthea Scholes

Republican Chairman Resigns

H. C, Hathaway, chairman of the DeKalb county republican central committee, has tendered his resignation to Clyde Walb, 12th district chairman. Mr. Hathaway has accepted a federal appointment his duties taking him from the county. It is expected a meeting will be called soon to elect a successor to Mr. Hathaway as well as a treasurer to succeed Mr. McClure who died at his home in Auburn a short time ago.

Sanitary Vitreous Enamel
Quartz Rock Surface

"CESCO"

White Enamel Ware

Steel Base
Standard Quality

Very Special

99c

E. R. KINSEY

Hardware Furniture Undertaking

MAY

L 912

American Farm Bureau

Leaders of Ohio's Live Stock Marketing.

As directors of the Ohio Live Stock Shippers' association, these men lead the co-operative live stock marketing work of the farmers of Ohio. The organization is affiliated with the Ohio Farm Bureau federation in carrying forward the co-operative marketing of live stock.

From left to right—Clark Murray, Madison county; Edward Taylor, president, Champaign county; F. C. Evans, Jackson county; F. G. Ketner, secretary, Columbus; Irwin Porteus, Coshocton county; F. E. Perry, Putnam county; G. S. Cameron, Ross county; Harry G. Beale, treasurer, Madison county; Depew Head, vice president, Marion county.

RAILWAY GROUP LIKE BUREAU RELIEF PLAN

Judgment of Director Hutchings That Constructive Steps Were Needed Is Vindicated.

"The American Farm Bureau federation's program on car shortage has been adopted by the American Railway association. The farm bureau is the only shippers' organization in the United States which sensed the danger and urged the carriers to take action.

The completeness with which the program submitted by C. B. Hutchings, director of transportation, has been adopted vindicates his judgment that constructive steps were imperatively needed.

In his letter to the American Railway association, Mr. Hutchings said: "The real question is: What are we going to do about it? Has the American association developed any constructive program for the rapid repairing of defective equipment, for the purchase of additional equipment, and for any necessary extension in yard track and passing track facilities? Further, has the American Railway association developed any consistent policy of prodding the railroads and the equipment manufacturers for speedy delivery of cars and locomotives ordered, but not yet turned over to the carriers?

"It seems to us that there should be a well-rounded and definite policy worked out along these lines. For instance, you have set 7 per cent as a normal standard of bad-order cars. We have not yet reached this, although we are working in that direction. We seem to be stalled between 9 and 10 per cent. The locomotive situation is, of course, particularly serious, especially on roads which have not been able to make real headway in building up their shop forces. I do not want to do anything to prejudice this situation, but the more pressure we can bring to bear the more rapidly will this situation be taken care of.

"So far as the equipment manufacturers are concerned, I have an idea, although not a shred of proof, that they ought to do just about twice the work they are now doing. I believe the Railway Business association maintains that its members have a capacity of 300,000 cars yearly. Apparently they are not delivering the goods at a rate much in excess of half that figure. Are they worrying about finances or are they spreading out work over slack seasons?

"We are also wondering if any constructive steps have been taken to enlarge the refrigerator car supply. Even in the midst of February and March complaints come in to us about shortage of refrigerator cars. We ought to be able to settle this very soon.

"What we need is less drifting and more definite rowing."

The association has now announced a constructive relief program following closely the suggestions made by Mr. Hutchings.

PRODUCERS SELLING FOR LIVE STOCK MEN

Stockers and Feeders Are Bought Free for Members With Exception of Kansas City.

The membership in the National Live Stock Producers' association has reached 100,000. Membership includes membership in a terminal agency and also membership in the Stocker and Feeder company operated in connection with the terminal agency. At all the terminal markets where a Stocker and Feeder company has been established stockers and feeders are bought free for members, except at Kansas City, where a charge is made.

Orderly distribution of stockers and feeders is included in the plans of the National Live Stock Producers' association. A system has just been developed to regulate the flow of stockers and feeders to market, to the end that farmers may receive their feeders in better condition and with less transportation and handling expense. Under present conditions stockers and feeders often travel hundreds of miles needlessly. This is an economic waste and it can be reduced by a strong national organization such as the National Live Stock Producers' association.

The stocker and feeder distribution plans include an investigation of number and kind wanted at each market, the securing of such stockers in proper number and quality on the western ranges, bringing them to the terminal market nearest to the feeding and finishing grounds, and giving buyers as much notice and information as possible in advance of arrival of the stockers and feeders in half-train and train-load lots, so that they can come in and make their selection or place their orders for filling.

The identity of the stockers or feeders is not to be lost, and in this way there will be put a proper premium on quality. The buyer will know what brand to buy in the future when he gets the one that gives him the most uniform and profitable results.

AARON SAPIRO JOINS FARM BUREAU STAFF

Foremost Co-operative Attorney Accepts Post of Legal Adviser on Marketing.

The farm bureau and co-operative marketing go forward together.

Assurances that the united movement which farmers have so long and ardently desired will be immediately forthcoming are furnished by the executive committee of the American Farm Bureau federation. At its regular quarterly meeting the governing board voted unanimously its full confidence in Walton Peteet, director of the department of co-operative marketing, and at the same time made arrangements for the employment of Aaron Sapiro as co-operative counsel.

The executive committee voted to instruct President O. E. Bradfute, Marketing Director Walton Peteet, and the marketing committee, consisting of Howard Leonard of Illinois, John T. Orr of Texas and George Putnam of New Hampshire, to confer with Aaron Sapiro and offer him the post of legal adviser to the department of co-operative marketing. In conference with Mr. Sapiro negotiations were speedily completed and America's foremost co-operative attorney joined the farm bureau marketing staff.

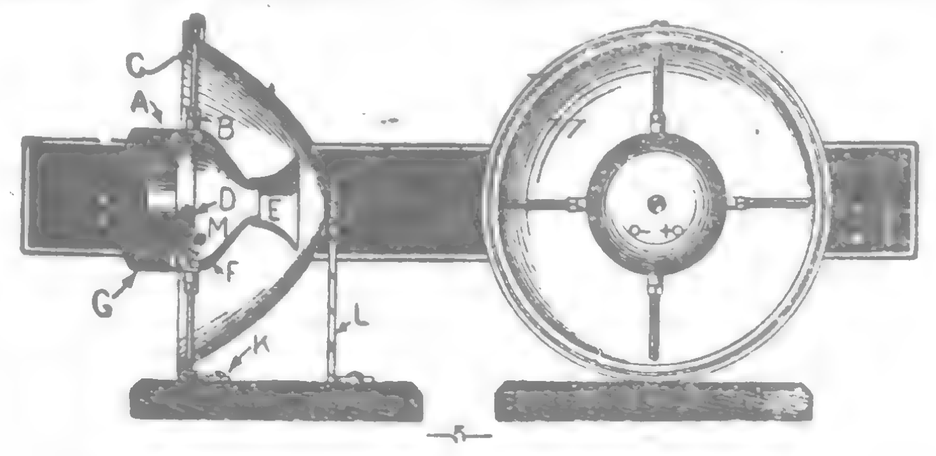
Aaron Sapiro, Co-operative Counsel.

A committee, consisting of Frank M. Smith of New York, W. H. Walker of California and J. F. Reed of Minnesota was appointed to study the entire departmental organization of the American Farm Bureau federation and to outline the duties and powers of the various subcommittees.

Phillips Heads Michigan.

W. E. Phillips of Decatur is the new president of the Michigan state farm bureau. Clark L. Brody continues as secretary-manager, with headquarters at East Lansing.

HOW TO MAKE A SOUND INTENSIFIER



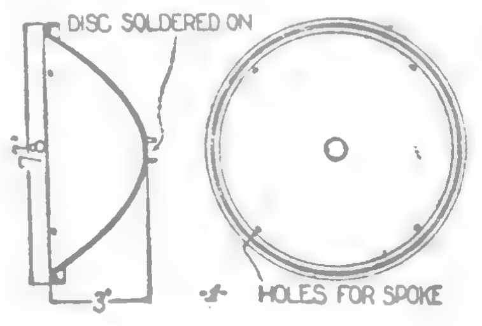
The Assembled Intensifier, Showing Parts; Can Be Made From Discarded Reflector of Automobile Light.

The pork packer is said to make use of every part of a hog except the squeal and the curl in his tail. Some of the radio experimenters make use of the squeal.

The following describes a useful piece of apparatus for the radio amateur, constructed at a low cost. All the material can be readily procured for practically nothing at some motor garage.

At a friend's garage and in the junk box was discovered a discarded front light reflector from an automobile, an old aluminum commutator from it, a broken rubber bulb from a motor horn and some motorcycle spokes with nipples attached. These were obtained free of cost and brought home.

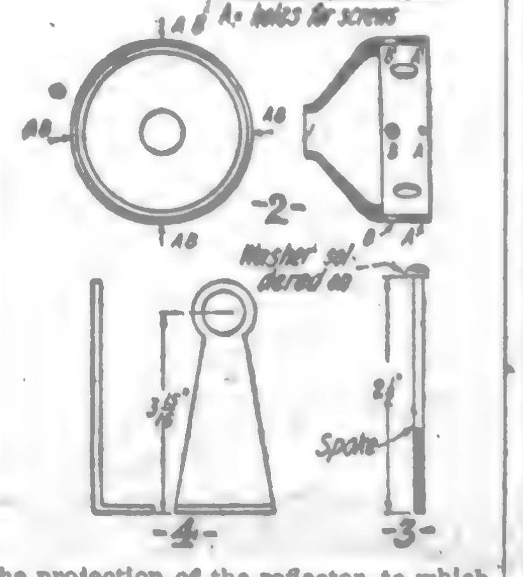
The first procedure was to clean off all grease from the reflector. The flat flange at the broad end of the reflector was next cut off and the surface made smooth. This left the two beads on the edge as the finish. The hole in the center of the reflector, through which the socket of the lamp passed, had a small flat disk of copper soldered in. The reflector was next polished inside and silver plated, and the outside was enameled black. Four holes were drilled equidistant through the reflector edge, into which holes the spokes fitted. This finished the reflector (see Diagram No. 1). The commutator was taken apart and the aluminum shell cleaned, and then the lug was cut off. The oiler was next removed and the hole from which it was taken was countersunk inside and outside, and in this hole a plug of soft aluminum was fitted and riveted over so as to fill up the hole. All roughness, both outside and inside, was removed with a file and scraper. A block of wood was then turned on the lathe to fit into the broad end of commutator casing. The outside of the commutator was turned smooth and a hole bored in the end of the cone; this was turned out, leaving a thin tube projecting. Four equidistant holes were bored near the broad end of the cone on the flat surface of the commutator, into which the spoke nipples fitted and were countersunk on the inside to suit the heads of the spoke nipples and these were filed flat, so that when in place the surface inside the commutator shell would be smooth. Four equidistant holes were bored one-quarter of an inch from the flat edge of the shell (to take four small screws) and countersunk on the outside.



Transforming the Reflector.

The nipples were removed from the old spokes and were cleaned and polished. The spokes were cut off exactly 2½ inches long from the threaded end; a small washer was fitted on the other end and the end of spoke riveted over and the two sweated together neatly. They were then copper-plated and silvered, like the reflector; four spokes were required (see Dagram No. 3).

Next a strip of stout sheet brass was cut, as shown, and holes were bored for screws. A large hole was made to take the projection of the reflector, to which it was soldered when assembled (see Diagram No. 4).



The old horn bulb was cleaned well with gasoline and was left ready to cut to the proper length when the complete apparatus was ready to assemble.

See Diagram No. 5 for sketch of apparatus when assembled; the letters indicate the various parts.

A.—Screws holding wooden block and commutator shell together.

B.—Nipples of spokes holding commutator shell central with reflector.

C.—Spokes passing through reflector and commutator shell.

D.—Earpiece of telephone receiver.

E.—Piece of rubber bulb as sound deflector conveyor to reflector.

F.—Commutator shell.

G.—Wooden block fitted into commutator shell, in which telephone is fitted.

H.—Adjusting screw to press receiver against rubber washer M.

J.—Holes for waves from telephone receiver.

K.—Holding down clip for front of reflector.

L.—Brass standard screwed to base and soldered to reflector.

M.—Rubber ring made from inner tube of motor tire.

The arrangement for using the old aluminum commutator shell for holding the telephone receiver can also be applied in a different manner. If the wooden block is turned flat it could be screwed to the top of the radio cabinet and a large horn fitted on the small end of the commutator shell as amplifier. If a number of holes were drilled in the side of the cone and the holes tapped to take ⅜-inch brass pipe, it could then be fitted with rubber tubes, which could be fitted with earpieces of glass tubing and used by a number of persons.

Part of the brass knob taken from a bed or a door could be used instead of rubber.

Procure a telephone receiver, the diameter of the cover of which is less than that of the inside of a commutator shell which is two and thirteen-sixteenths inches. The depth from the face of the earpiece to the back of the telephone does not matter much, as a wooden case must now be made to fit inside of the commutator shell; in this wooden case, part is turned out to hold the rest of the receiver. A rubber ring is put inside the commutator shell and the earpiece rests against it. The wooden case is then put in place and with the commutator shell it is held firmly by four screws. An adjusting screw at the end of the wooden case presses the earpiece tightly against the rubber ring and makes an airtight joint. The connections can be brought out through the wooden case of flexible cable, or otherwise, to suit the maker. Diagrams of each part are shown, as well as of the assembled instrument. When all parts are ready, proceed to assemble as follows: Take commutator shell reflector and four spokes; pass a spoke from the outside of the reflector into a hole in the commutator shell and screw on the nipple; do the same with the other spokes. The shell is then held in the center of the reflector with the narrow end pointing towards the polished face of the reflector. Tighten up the nipples evenly until the shell is rigid; with no wabble or shake. The piece of rubber horn bulb is cut so that there is a space between it and the face of the reflector when slipped over the end of the commutator shell opening. The brass strip is slipped on the outside and fastened to a neat wooden base. The edge of the reflector rests on the wooden base and is held down tight by a screw and clip. When the reflector is fixed on the base, the brass strip can be soldered to the back of the reflector. When the telephones are inserted, the block placed in position, screwed tight and the back adjusting screw tightened up, all is then complete to connect up to the set.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)

THE NUISANCE

THE other night, not feeling bright, I thought at home I'd stay; I'd rest a bit and get more fit to meet a busy day. "I'll take a look at some good book, and smoke a pipe," I said; "an easy chair, some solitaire, at ten I'll be in bed."

The chaps who miss a night like this, I thought, need sympathy; the old "white way" is nice and gay, but not tonight for me. I like to go to some good show, then have a little spree; they're fun all right, but for tonight that's not the life for me.

Alas for plans! It is not man's to have things as he will; my eve of rest was far from blessed; 'twas but a bitter pill. Planned for delight, my restful night was destined for a blow; for through the air came blank despair from someone's radio.

It had a horn a kid should scorn, reception amplified; it sang and talked and screeched and squawked, 'twis midnight ere it died. Some chap was fain to entertain the whole community; for four straight hours 'twas "April showers" or some rag melody.

My friend, go slow with radio; outside your home may be some tired-out chap who'd like a nap, to from all jazz be free. Don't try to drown the whole darned town; the things that are your joys, to someone's ear perhaps appear as just UNWELCOME NOISE.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)

Boosts Highway by Radio.

Judge Pool of El Paso gave a radio talk on the need of a highway. The judge only awaited his cue to get busy.

Highway Improvement

HIGHWAYS AID TO PROGRESS

Conditions of Living Improved in City and Country by Better Transportation.

A few years ago the sight of a man in overalls and a straw hat hard at work with the hoe was convincing evidence that he was a farmer. Store clothes bespoke the city dweller.

Times and the road have changed. Highway transport is sending the city man out to the country at the close of his day's work and bringing the farmer and his family into town. The old distinctions are passing and the cartoonist of the future will have to look to a new type for his characters.

Public recognition of the social influence of highway transport has been perhaps the outstanding development of the last year. The second national conference held by the highway education board served to crystallize opinion which has been growing steadily, and many are studying the influence of the motor vehicle on the sociological as well as the economic problems of the day.

It is no longer necessary to talk in general terms. We are beginning to obtain specific evidence of the influence of highway transport upon life in this country, writes Roy D. Chapin, vice president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in the Milwaukee Sentinel. Definite traffic studies now under way under the direction of the bureau of public roads indicate clearly the flow of commodities from farm to market and from market to market.

Economic studies by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce disclose a growing use of the vehicle by the laboring class and a consequent decrease in their overhead costs of living through homes taken farther out in the country.

Intimations of unprecedented suburban developments are seen in the inclination of the man who lives in the city to get out far enough to have a home of his own and a plot of grass for his children.

The task which remains is one of developing the vast network of highways necessary to complete communication. Broad financial policies must be laid down to insure an expedited but efficient program of expenditure. Centralized control is essential in order that there may be a proper relation between the possible earning power of the road and the cost of the construction and maintenance.

The construction of highways is of benefit not alone to those of us who are paying the taxes today, but to those who will follow. If we are to have the roads in our lifetime we must predicate our initial outlay in many instances upon serial bond issues which will give us and our children the road at a reasonable rental for its use.

Property values, whether in the city or country, are definitely affected by highway improvement and if we are to proceed soundly from a financial standpoint the full property power of the state should be thrown behind state bond issues.

The road user should be willing to pay all of the costs of maintaining the highway, not so much as a matter of principle as because his operating costs will be directly influenced by the quality of the highway on which he is driving, and when all is said and done the motor vehicle fee offers the most direct protection to the state's investment in the highway, because it is an annual revenue and can be directed against an annual charge.

Any use of motor fees which deflects funds from this fundamental use is vicious and should not be countenanced.

It is also important that county systems bear some relation to state improvement, as otherwise the less important highway might be improved at the expense of the more important—as stated in terms of traffic, the only fair measure.

GOOD ROADS ARE ESSENTIAL

Without Improved Highways Government Could Not Carry Out Duties Imposed Upon It.

Garland W. Powell, assistant national director of the American Legion, points out that without good roads, and the proper use of the motor vehicle, the federal government could not successfully carry out some of the duties imposed upon it by statute. Mr. Powell suggests that, as a result of improved highways, the people are brought in closer touch with business, social, educational and governmental affairs, that the rural free delivery service is made possible and those on farms and in far-away places are no longer compelled to live a life of isolation.

Stimulate Food Production.

The establishment of motor truck express lines in every farming community will stimulate the production of more food, reduce the cost of living and probably will make the public markets successful in American cities.

Disgrace and Burden.

There is unquestionably a great latent demand for better roads, for most of our highways are not only a disgrace to us but a great economic burden, because of their disgraceful condition.

After Every Meal
WRIGLEY'S
The Great American Sweetmeat
provides pleasant action for your teeth, also penetrating the crevices and cleansing them.
Then, too, it aids digestion.
Use WRIGLEY'S after every meal—see how much better you will feel.
PK
The Flavor Lasts

Another thing the world needs is more worship and less warship.

The nearest some wives ever come to loafing is while filling a bobbin.

A good man is one who still seems that way after you know him better.

The annoying thing about the man who knows it all is his persistence in telling it.

Be patient. Think of how trying this weather must be on the waiting picnic ant.

Some children have a good time, and some have experts to teach them how to play.

Brotherly love can't hope to become universal while its style is cramped by patriotism.

Same Thing.

A Detroit clergyman relates that one day he was called upon to marry a couple. His catechism of the prospective bridegroom was satisfactory, and he turned his attention to the lady.

"Have you ever been married?"

"Yes, sir!"

"Husband dead?"

"No, sir!"

"Are you divorced?"

"N—no, not exactly, but I'm just as good as divorced. My husband left me, and we never paid the minister for marrying us."—From Judge.

Height of Something or Other.

To give your wife cash as a birthday present and have her go and pay the first installment on something with it.—Life.

Sure Relief
FOR INDIGESTION
BELL-ANS FOR INDIGESTION 25 CENTS
6 BELL-ANS
Hot water
Sure Relief
BELL-ANS
25¢ AND 75¢ PACKAGES EVERYWHERE

THICK, SWOLLEN GLANDS that make a horse Wheeze, Roar, have Thick Wind or Choke-down can be reduced with also other Bunches or Swellings. No blister, no hair gone, and horse kept at work. Economical—only a few drops required at an application. $2.50 per bottle delivered. Book 3 A free.
ABSORBINE
W. F. Young, Inc., 310 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

Gray Hair is out of fashion; is unnecessary—for you can have abundant hair of the original shade by using Q-Ban Hair Color Restorer.—Safe as water—try it. At all good druggists, 75 cents, or direct from HESSIG-ELLIS, Chemists, Memphis, Tenn.

Vaseline
Reg U S Pat Off
CARBOLATED
PETROLEUM JELLY
No skin break too small for notice.
Be very wary of cuts, scratches and skin abrasions, no matter how slight. "Vaseline" Carbolated Petroleum Jelly—applied at once—lessens the possibility of infection.
It comes in bottles—at all druggists and general stores.
CHESEBROUGH MFG. COMPANY
(Consolidated)
State St. New York
Every "Vaseline" product is recommended everywhere because of its absolute purity and effectiveness.

Cuticura Talcum
Fascinatingly Fragrant
Always Healthful
Soap 25c, Ointment 25 and 50c, Talcum 25c.

MAY

L 912

0600

Los Angeles Woman Tells of Wonderful Experience.

MRS. GUSSIE E. HANSEN.

Mrs. Gussie E. Hansen, of 916 West 52nd Street, is now numbered with the multitude of Los Angeles men and women who have realized the wonderful merits of Tanlac. In relating her experiences, Mrs. Hansen said:

"It is wonderful what Tanlac will do for one suffering from stomach trouble, nervousness and run-down condition. I have tried it.

"Before taking the treatment everything I ate disagreed with me so that I actually dreaded to sit down to the table. I suffered from constipation, had awful pains across my back, and was so nervous and run down I was in misery all the time.

"Tanlac was helping so many others I thought it might help me, too, and it certainly has. Why, my appetite is just splendid, and my stomach is in such good order I eat to my heart's content. My back doesn't bother me any more, and I sleep like a child at night. I can't say too much for Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists—take no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

Tribute to Civil Engineer.

From the standpoint of the artist, the civil engineer type represents the highest type of masculine perfection. He has the imagination to conceive and the practicality and intellect to execute his conceptions.—Emily Nichols Hatch.

WHY TAKE LAXATIVES?

Discovery by Science Has Replaced Them.

Pills and salts give temporary relief from constipation only at the expense of permanent injury, says an eminent medical authority.

Science has found a newer, better way—a means as simple as Nature itself.

In perfect health a natural lubricant keeps the food waste soft and moving. But when constipation exists this natural lubricant is not sufficient. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

As Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, it cannot gripe and, like pure water, it is harmless and pleasant.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals. Get a bottle from your druggist today.—Advertisement.

Answered by Another Question.

Teacher—If one man can build a house in twelve days, six men can do it in two days.

Bright Pupil—Then if one ship crosses the ocean in six days, can six ships cross in one day?—London Answers.

SWAMP-ROOT FOR KIDNEY AILMENTS

There is only one medicine that really stands out pre-eminent as a medicine for curable ailments of the kidneys, liver and bladder.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root stands the highest for the reason that it has proven to be just the remedy needed in thousands upon thousands of distressing cases. Swamp-Root makes friends quickly because its mild and immediate effect is soon realized in most cases. It is a gentle, healing vegetable compound.

Start treatment at once. Sold at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

The Man.

No man who hath eyes open spiritually will make more of structural alteration and addition to the church building than he does to the invisible superstructure of the church's life.—William Porkess.

My business is not to remake myself, but to make the absolute best of what God made.—Browning.

Matrimonial Adventures

Mrs. Redmond's Shame

BY

Maximilian Foster

Author of "The Whistling Man," "Keeping Up Appearances," "Shoestrings," "The Whirlpool," "Rich Man, Poor Man," and "The Trap."

Copyright by United Feature Syndicate

MAXIMILIAN FOSTER

Maximilian Foster says of himself that he writes only when there is no fishing! And fishing is more than a hobby with him, for he has invented a fly that is not only a winner in snaring trout, but has equal merit in catching salmon. He will talk to you at length about the piscatorial sport, but he is most reluctant to tell you how and when he started his career as an author.

I met him first some years ago in Maine, and it took all day before I elicited the following facts:

Due to a desire to support himself by writing, he joined the newspaper world for the reason that he believed that the newspapers supplied the best experience. "The young writer," he says, "has little experience of life, but on a newspaper he not only widens his own, but gains a knowledge of other people's."

Mr. Foster's first story, 10,000 words in length and sold to the Atlantic Monthly, was written entirely at night in a newspaper office. He was doing rewrite work at the time, and would write down a page of that and then turn to a page of his own story. It was a long and laborious job, but after that first success he sold many stories to the Atlantic Monthly. He has written much fiction which appeared in the leading magazines.

Mr. Foster attributes his success to his eight years of work in the newspaper world, but he has another record. During the time we were in the great war he was United States government correspondent abroad.

"Mrs. Redmond's Shame," written expressly for the Star Author Series of Matrimonial Adventures, carries its own particular message to the married.

MARY STEWART CUTTING, JR.

It was a quarter to eight that morning—a full fifteen minutes past the usual hour—when the door of Redmond's bedrooom opened and Redmond hastily emerged. In the same haste he hurried toward the stairs. He was late, that was all there was to it—late at breakfast; and, as he reached the stairs, his eyes on the hall clock as he brisked along, his absorbed, somewhat boyish face wore on it a look of concern not unmixed with guilt.

"Dear, dear!" he clucked.

To be late at one's own breakfast table is, of course, not so heinous an offense; but, as Redmond's haste denoted, the case here was different. Time—and with it promptness—naturally concerned a woman as active and influential as Redmond's wife. At any rate, in the life, the career she had made for herself, Mrs. Redmond long had found it necessary to regulate her day to a schedule, every minute of which was actively employed. She was, in fact, that Myrta Redmond whose prominence as president of the Women's State Civic Federation was statewide, if not national; and with the demands this and her other activities made upon her, it was only reasonable that Redmond should do nothing to conflict with her appointed plans. He was, it seems, the minor official of an insurance company in the city.

An absorbed and reticent, self-effacing person, Redmond seldom if ever came in contact with his wife's official life. Even if he had, however, it's unlikely that he would have made much of an impression on her wide circle of acquaintances, her social and political associates. Among people of affairs, the selected, active set that surrounded Myrta Redmond, he would have been adjudged obscure, perhaps ineffectual—in a word, one they termed "domestic."

That, indeed, was the word. True, once in his wife's career, though it was only once, Redmond had appeared as honorary secretary of a meeting Mrs. Redmond had convened, the original appointee having succumbed at the final moment to a distressing attack of migraine. His shy embarrassment, however—his ignorance, too, of the mere fundamentals of parliamentary law—at once had betrayed his unfitness; and, propelled from one embarrassing blunder into another, the ladies, his wife's associates and herself included, had diplomatically relieved him of the place.

The hall downstairs was long and spacious. It was, in fact, in character with all the house spacious not only, but even vast. However, though there were only these two to occupy it—they, John Redmond and his wife—this, too, had its explanation. Space, or as Myrta termed it, "scope," Myrta in her active life needed naturally; and it was for this the house had been selected, a habitation suitably roomable for committee meetings, for caucuses and the like. But then, this air of largeness, of "scope," was due not entirely to the size of the structure itself; the furnishings—that, or, rather, the lack of them, accented this; and, as Redmond hastened along the hall, the sight of its present bare emptiness pricked him with another thrust of conscience, a stab. Tonight a meeting, a committee caucus, was to be held. Myrta's candidacy and her campaign for a state office were to be discussed; and already the man-of-all-work, prompt at the task, had begun to move out the chairs, the tables and other furnishings. Later, they would be replaced by rows of folding stools chartered from the local undertaker.

Redmond's concern grew more evident. He was still hurrying; but as he reached the breakfast room and stepped inside he stopped abruptly.

"Hello!" he exclaimed.

The breakfast room was vacant. Mrs. Redmond was neither there, nor, as it appeared, had she already breakfasted and gone; and, staring at her empty place, Redmond's astonishment grew.

The day was one of vital importance to his wife. At 8 p. m. the caucus would be called; and from now till then every moment of her time would be taken, planning, arranging, seeing fellow members, marshaling all her forces for the night. The office she sought was that of state supervisor, the peak, the apex of all her present activities and ambitions; and, as Redmond knew too, her candidacy for the place was to be no easy victory. Already opposition had reared its head; and, his air of questioning, his astonishment growing on him, Redmond hurriedly drew out his watch.

He had made no mistake, however. It was a quarter to eight—fifteen minutes past the hour; and again Redmond shot a glance at his wife's vacant place.

He was still standing there, watch in hand and wondering, when the pantry door opened, and a gaunt, angular figure in cap and apron appeared. It was a maid, the Redmond's waitress.

"You're late," she greeted abruptly, bluntly.

Redmond knew he was. That, however, did not concern him now. Neither was he the more concerned in the maid's brusque abruptness. Of his own choice, Redmond would have preferred a different, less thin-lipped, sere and flint-eyed Hebe to serve him his repasts; but Mrs. Redmond, naturally, had made the choice. The woman, Harriet Lipp, was a protege of hers, a fragment, in fact, of that human social-wreckage Myrta Redmond, in part with her career, made it a habit to snatch from troubled waters and relaunch again in life. The waitress, in fact, owed not only her present place to Mrs. Redmond, she owed also her liberty to her, Mrs. Redmond's influence with the state pardon board having obtained Harriet Lipp's release from a three-years' sentence in the penitentiary. As Mrs. Redmond, however, had pointed out, it was for a crime of violence, not one of ignoble meanness or stealth, for which Harriet had been committed; but of this distinction, a difference in Mrs. Redmond's view, Redmond was not thinking now.

"Where's your mistress?" he inquired.

"Upstairs," the woman answered, briefly.

The reply, too, was as blunt, as brusque as it was brief; and, his distaste of her growing, Redmond stared at the woman.

"When is Mrs. Redmond coming down?" he asked.

Harriet Lipp's air did not alter.

"She ain't," she answered, and Redmond started.

"What?"

"She's breakfasting abed," said Harriet Lipp.

"In bed?" Redmond echoed.

"Uh huh!" repeated Harriet Lipp.

Wondering, vaguely perturbed now, Redmond wandered to the table. In the same wonder he drew out a chair and seated himself, the maid watching him with hard, aggressive eyes. It was nothing new, though, that Redmond should breakfast alone. Often, in her full, active life, Mrs. Redmond was up and away even before he had come downstairs. There were days, too, often weeks, when her official duties, public affairs, called her entirely from her home. No, to be alone was nothing new. But now . . . Mrs. Redmond breakfasting in bed. That was new, yes.

A woman's trick—that breakfast in bed. It was a trick, too, a woman's trick, of a sort that Myrta heretofore would have scorned. The soft, the indulgent, the femininely feminine things popularly presumed of womankind, Mrs. Redmond instinctively and contemptuously disdained. To her they meant but one thing, a confession of sex, of the weakness a confession of sex involved. The parity of the sexes, the abolition, rather, of all sex, that was Mrs. Redmond's watchword.

"Here!" Redmond said sharply to the maid, "bring me my eggs and coffee."

He sat there, staring at his hands. Something had happened, he saw that; something visibly out of the way. Redmond, in fact, in the twelve years of his married life, had grown, if only subconsciously, too familiar with his wife's ways, her habitude, not to sense that something unusual had occurred to her. Its indications, however, were not merely the otherwise trivial circumstances of her breakfasting in bed; of late he had noted in his wife's usual calm, her somewhat complacent self-restraint, a hint of nerves, of temperament—a reaction as if she labored under some secret weight, a burden. Uneasy, now, a frown puckered on his brow. What had troubled her? he wondered, his uneasiness gaining ground.

It was rarely, if ever, now, in these later years that Mrs. Redmond confided in the man she'd married. Between the two it was as if the usual marital situation had become reversed—he, not she, the dependent; she the master hand. The change, however, if such had happened, was not just equitable; for Redmond, if he were the inferior, bent under what virtually was a double responsibility, that of the provider, the one who brought in the living; with that, he, to all intents and purposes, ran the household as well. Of that never mind, however. With all the other calls on Mrs. Redmond there might have been no household, save that John Redmond had stepped into the breach. He had not complained. Overshadowed by his wife, submerged in her growing prominence, the added task John Redmond had shouldered as if a duty, his.

He was not thinking of it now. He was not thinking, either, of how he himself had become submerged, thrust inconspicuously into the background of their married life. Wonder still reigned among his thoughts; and, in their confusion, his mind leaped with a quick informality from one thought to another. It is the way with those who mull things over, solitaries. Something was wrong, wrong with Myrta Redmond; and his mind dwelt on that; something wrong with Myrta.

With Myrta, yes, not just Mrs. Redmond. You understand, no doubt. In other words, there were in Redmond's mind two figures, always two: Myrta, first; then—well, the other, Mrs. Redmond. The two were vividly distinct. Myrta, the one he'd married, had (to him) never changed; she still was the one, the same; but the other, the Mrs. Redmond who'd taken his name, still was using it—she and Redmond were far apart. It was only at odd intervals now, brief and far apart, that the Myrta he'd married came back to him. She was still there, though. She was there now. Trouble . . . .

A "mere" husband, an appendage. Well, the term fitted well enough. It was queer, though, the twist the moment gave to it. In trouble, if she were, Mrs. Redmond was not merely Mrs. Redmond. He was a husband—yes; and instinctively to him she became transformed. She was Myrta; and as Myrta, his wife, if Myrta needed help . . . .

Redmond, startling, had half risen from his chair when the pantry door opened, and the woman, Harriet Lipp, stalked forth.

"There's y'r eggs," she pronounced.

Redmond resumed his seat. To Myrta he could have flown, offering aid. To Mrs. Redmond—well, that was different.

He sat there, mooning. The Lipp woman had withdrawn; and his eggs grew cold within the cup. Mulling it over, his thoughts were now going at full tilt, galloping. In the way with those who moon, who mull, one thing ran into another, piling up in magnitude. If something really was wrong, what was it? A hundred thoughts raced into his mind . . . Politics . . . Schemes . . . Plots for place, for power. . . . With women, women didn't differ much from men. Politics, too, were Mrs. Redmond's daily pabulum. Had she done something? Had she compromised herself? Unwitting had she let herself into something ugly? Vague stories, sinister whispers of politics, public affairs, leaped into his remembrance. Her ambitions he knew. He knew, too, that she—that is, Mrs. Redmond—would make no distinction in methods. "In politics no sex" was the watchword of these women, Mrs. Redmond's associates, hers as well. They fought with the same tools as the men. But if Myrta . . . .

Myrta again—Myrta, not Mrs. Redmond. An exclamation, sharp, explosive, escaped him. Shoving back his chair he rose abruptly.

Harriet Lipp, as if her eye had been glued to the crack in the pantry door, at once shoved it open.

"Say, you ain't et y'r breakfus'!" she barked.

Redmond had flung down his napkin on the cloth. He looked at the figure in the doorway.

"What did your mistress say?" he demanded.

Harriet Lipp's eyes narrowed defensively.

"Say when?" she countered.

"This morning—just now!" rapped Redmond, his temper rising. "Is she ill?" he snapped again.

"No, she ain't!" the woman answered.

"Then why isn't she coming down?" asked Redmond.

With direct finality the woman answered him. "She's a-breakfustin' abed," said Harriet Lipp.

That ended it.

For a long moment afterwards the hard-featured maid stood there at the pantry door, one hand at her breast, her face strained as she gazed after him. A breath escaped her. The mystery of all this, though, was not revealed to Redmond. Already he was at the stairway hurrying upward.

Mrs. Redmond's room was at the front of the house, on the floor above. For years—four years now, nearly five—she and her husband had occupied separate rooms. As Redmond reached the door he paused. His hand uplifted, he made as if to knock, then desisted. Standing there, he put one ear to the panel and listened.

It was only for an instant, though. The next instant, without even the formality of a knock, he thrust open the door and stepped inside.

"Myrta!" he exclaimed.

She lay there among the coverings of the bed, her back to him; and as he entered, calling to her, she did not move. Along the pillows the masses of her thick, silky hair, like ropes of burnished copper, lay strewn; and above the counterpane a limp, slender arm, girlishly rounded and pink, revealed itself. She was still young, only a year or so over thirty; and now, as Redmond looked at her, her figure among the coverings seemed appealingly slight and youthful. More than that, though, in its supine pose at the moment there was a suggestion of laxity, of helpless dejection that he was quick to see.

"Myrta!" he cried again.

She answered him then. It was, however, Mrs. Redmond rather than the Myrta he called who spoke. Nor did she turn. From among the pillows her voice rose, formal and precise—the voice of Mrs. Redmond, the public woman's voice.

"What is it?" she inquired.

Redmond paused midway across the room. His air, his look, eager and anxious, altered, too.

"You all right?" he questioned.

A pause. She still did not turn, and in the pause he stirred uncomfortably. Then from the bed came her voice, its note, as before, still precise.

"All right? . . . Why do you ask, pray?"

Uncertainly, he took a step toward her.

"Why, you see, you didn't come to your breakfast," he faltered.

Again she replied, this time with a change, a note of petulance in her voice.

"I'm breakfasting here," she said.

"I know—but the meeting—tonight's—your time," he faltered again.

Another pause. Then, from the pillows the reply. It came slowly, as if, with the effort, ponderously.

"There is to be no meeting," said Mrs. Redmond.

"What?" interrogated Redmond.

A movement of restless impatience stirred among the pillows.

"I have called it off—canceled it."

Perplexed, he ruffled up his brows.

"You have postponed it?" he inquired.

There was again a movement among the pillows, sharp, vehement, visibly emphatic.

"I have told you once," Mrs. Redmond said, as sharply; "there is to be no meeting. That is enough, isn't it?" seh uttered crisply.

"Myrta!" exclaimed Redmond.

Swiftly he hastened to the bed. In the same haste, the alert alarm bred of his concern for her, he laid a hand upon her shoulder.

"Myrta! . . . My dear!"

"Let me alone, pray!" Mrs. Redmond directed annoyedly.

The hand on her shoulder she shook away. With the same movement she drew the coverings about her. This, too, she did with a cold, formal deliberation whose dignity was unmistakable. Now, however, wonder, trepidation, too, had the better of Redmond, and he missed the majestic rancor of the gesture.

"Myrta, what's wrong? What's happened? Tell me!" he cried.

She turned then, momentarily tense, her features vital with the emotion she still strove to repress. Her voice harsh, she spoke—Mrs. Redmond.

"You, of course, would not understand. It's ended—that's all," she said.

Redmond gaped.

"Ended! What's ended?"

"Everything—for the time, anyway," she replied. "I'm done for, that's enough, isn't it?"

"Done for?"

Her lip for an instant curved bitterly.

"You heard me!" she returned. "You don't suppose for a moment, do you, that I could run now for that office!" She laughed harshly. "This year?" She laughed again, the laugh more rasping; and, his jaw dropping, agape, Redmond stared at her.

"Myrta!"

Among the pillows she again gave her shoulders a shrug.

"Bah! . . . Fancy facing those women now!"

The women she meant he knew. They were those other women, her associates—public women like Mrs. Redmond herself. Why, however, she could not face them Redmond had yet to grasp. Startled, he caught swiftly at his breath. Then, as he stared down at her, the thought, the suspicion already that morning engendered in his mind, saw in her strained, embittered face the answering echo, an affirmative.

Shame! . . .

"Myrta," said Redmond, his voice thick, "what have you done?"

"I?"

She looked up at him sharply, tossing from her brow the thick, bronzed masses of her hair.

"What! You mean you don't—don't understand?"

"What's wrong, Myrta? Tell me," said Redmond, stoutly. "I'll help you, I'll stand by you, dear. If it's trouble—if even it's wrong—"

"Wrong?"

"Yes, if even shame—"

He got no further. A laugh, sharp and intolerantly bitter and disgusted, came from among the pillows. It caught Redmond midway in his words, and left him, like a stranded fish, gasping impotently.

"You dolt, you numbskull!" said Mrs. Redmond.

She told him then. It was to Redmond, too, the news was, as if she, Mrs. Redmond, had reached from the bed and felled him to the floor. He stood riveted. Then into his face, his eyes, leaped the light, transfiguring like a swift burst of sunshine through a cloud.

"Myrta!" he shrilled. Radiant, quivering to his feet, had he dared he would have reached down and gathered her to his arms.

He dared not, though. It was Mrs. Redmond, her face distorted with the bitterness of her defeated ambitions, that gazed up at him from among the pillows.

"Pshaw!" she said, her lip curled anew—"you're like all men, all you husbands. That's all you think about!" She gave her shoulders another disgusted, embittered shrug. "Go away—leave me; I want to sleep," she said.

Redmond went. It was as if he went, too, treading the mountaintops.

WOMAN'S HEALTH RESTORED

She Claims Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did It After Everything Else Failed

Milwaukee, Wisconsin.—"I feel that I ought to let you know about my case. I was ailing and could barely do my housework and washing I was so run-down, just from having one child. I took a lot of medicines and had doctors. Then I gave them all up and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I feel wonderfully good now. I do everything that comes along, and we all take your medicine as a tonic when we don't feel just so. I am thankful for what the Vegetable Compound has done for my health and for my family."—Mrs. MARY SAIECHECK, 944 28th Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Letters like these testify to the value of the Vegetable Compound. These women speak from the fullness of their hearts. They describe as correctly as they can their conditions: First, those symptoms that affected them most conspicuously; and later the disappearance of those symptoms. They are sincere expressions of gratitude. For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been so praised by women.

Odd Incident.

We have some timber on our farm. A neighbor, having bought some, came to do some chopping and parked his car in our yard. Same ladies were calling on me, and we were suddenly astonished when the horn began to honk loud and strong. We ran out and in a short time my husband, who was working in the timber near, came galloping up the hill much frightened, thinking the house was on fire. He found the lever on the horn had slipped for some unknown reason and started the honking.—Chicago Journal.

True Enough.

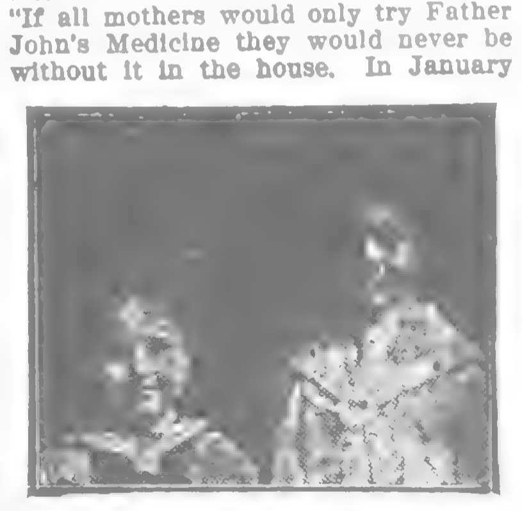
English Teacher—Name a collective noun.

Student—Garbage can.

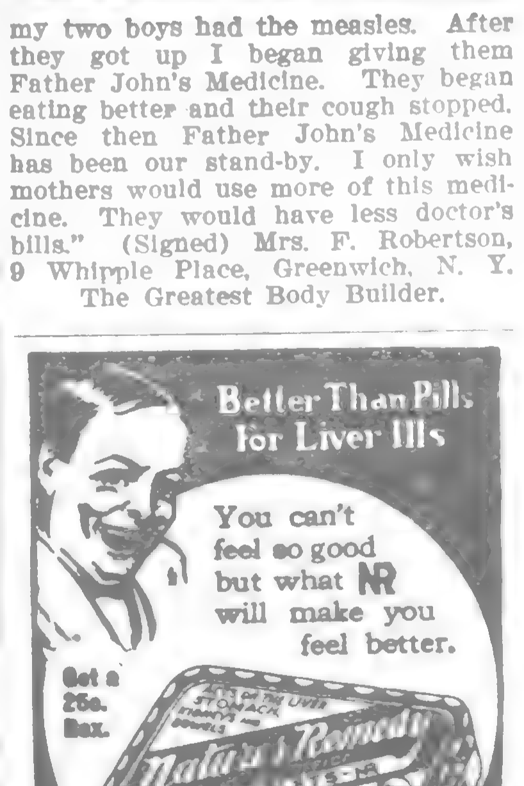
WOULD NEVER BE WITHOUT IT

"I Only Wish Mothers Would Use More of Father John's Medicine."

Mothers will be interested in this letter from Mrs. Robertson. She says: "If all mothers would only try Father John's Medicine they would never be without it in the house. In January my two boys had the measles. After they got up I began giving them Father John's Medicine. They began eating better and their cough stopped. Since then Father John's Medicine has been our stand-by. I only wish mothers would use more of this medicine. They would have less doctor's bills." (Signed) Mrs. F. Robertson, 9 Whipple Place, Greenwich, N. Y.



The Greatest Body Builder.



Better Than Pills for Liver Ills
You can't feel so good but what NR will make you feel better.
Get a 25c. Box.
Nature's Remedy
NR TABLETS-NR
A. H. LEWIS MEDICINE CO
Your Druggist

A sure, safe way to end CORNS

In one minute you can end the pain of corns with Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads. They remove the cause—friction—pressure. You risk no infection from cutting, no danger from corrosive acids.

Zino-pads protect while they heal. Thin; antiseptic; waterproof. Sizes for corns, callouses, bunions. Get a box today at your druggist's or shoe dealer's.

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

Made in the laboratories of The Scholl Mfg. Co., makers of Dr. Scholl's Foot Comfort Appliances, Arch Supports, etc.

Put one on—the pain is gone!

MAY

L 912

601

Beautify Your Premises

It is time to make your porch baskets or boxes or get out the old ones and paint and fix them up.

We have the plants to make them beautiful.

Vinca, Snow in the Mountain, Jacop,s Coat, Salvia, German Ivy, Vining Geranium, Geraniums, Colus, Wandering Jew, etc.

NEWS OFFICE

The St. Joe News

William S. Quance,
Editor and Publisher.

One Year,	$1.50
Six Months,	.75
Three Months,	.40
One Month,	.15
Single Copy,	.05

(Advertising Rates on Application)

Entered at the postoffice at St. Joe, Indiana, as second class matter.

Foreign Advertising Representative
THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

OFFICE CAT

TRADE MARK

BY JUNIUS

COPYRIGHT 1921, BY EDGAR ALLAN MOSS.

How dear to our heart i$ the old $ilver dollar, when $ome kind member pre$ent$ it to view, the Liberty head without necktie or collar, and all the $trange thing$ which to u$ $eem $o new. The wide-$preading eagle, the arrow$ below it, the tar and the word$ with the $trange thing$ they tell; the coin of our father$, we're glad we knew it, for $ometime or other 'twill come in right well; the $pread eagle dollar, the $tar $pangled dollar, the old $ilver dollar we all love $o well.

—oo—

"It's always darkest just before the dun," remarked the man with too many creditors.

—oo—

Many a man is judged by the cigars that are named after him.

—oo—

There are now three women in congress and the Congressional record will soon adopt a style department.

—oo—

Oh, Bill's the kind of hard boiled egg
Who gets and pulls the grocer's leg,
And asks for credit day by day
When he has not a cent to pay;
And he is first to criticise
At each commodity he buys.
And when you ask him for the "jack,"
He starts to knock behind your back.

Send Us Your Name and address on a post card or in a letter and we will mail free and postpaid, a sample copy of the most wonderful magazine published. 160 pages and 400 pictures every month, that will entertain every member of the family.

Popular Mechanics
MAGAZINE

It contains interesting and instructive articles on the Home, Farm, Shop and Office—the newest developments in Radio, Aviation, Automobile and Garage. Each issue contains something to interest everybody.

We do not employ subscription solicitors so you will not be urged to subscribe and you are not obligating yourself in the least in asking for a free sample copy. We gladly send it to prospective readers. If you like it you can buy a copy every month from any newsdealer or send us your subscription—$3.00 for one year.

Popular Mechanics Company
200-214 E. Ontario Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

Popular Mechanics building is devoted exclusively to the production of this great magazine.

Bad, bold burglar got the surprise of his life when after entering a country editor's home one night recently, he was compelled to subscribe for the paper before the enterprising newspaper man let him off.

—oo—

EVERYDAY HEROES

A man who can get into the bathtub without knocking off the wire soap holder.

The man who, when the lower drawer of the bureau gets stuck, does not give it a kick.

The man who doesn't think that he "stands in" with the garage mechanic.

—oo—

SPEEDING

I sent him a special delivery letter,
Telling him I hoped he'd soon get better.
He lingered and died, e're the letter he got,
For speed, indeed, the missive had not.
And the postman wrote 'cross the old address:
"You'll have to forward this, I guess."

—oo—

The man who can see a frosty pane, while waiting for a train, and not scratch his initials on it.

The wife who, when there are fresh peaches for dinner, does not remind her husband that peach stains won't come out.

The man who does not tell how far he can hear over his home made radio set.

The wife who does not remind her husband how attentive he was before they were married.

The husband who took down the awnings the first time his wife asked him to.

—oo—

Little Mrs. Newife — What would you think of a man who let his wife get up on a bitterly cold morning to light the fire?

Mrs. Wise—That's something I've never told anyone but my husband—and I'll only tell him once.

—oo—

Aren't Men Funny!

They wear clothes that cover them from ankle bone to Adam's Apple! They smoke—because they LIKE it! They tie knots that will untie! They know what's trumps and why they played the Joker! They wear B. V. D.'s and don't roll their socks! Aren't men funny! They're so different from women.

—oo—

REPORTERS, MAKE IT SNAPPY

Springfield, Ill.—Two Wabash railroad "car knockers" lowered a lantern into a tank car to see if all the gasoline had been drained out. It wasn't quite empty. They will recover.—St. Louis Times.

—oo—

In this great land of opportunity the young man who is down and stays down usually has no one but himself to blame. Effort works wonders. The world knows no overproduction of initiative. Hard work leaps over obstacles—or breaks them down.

—oo—

ON HIS SHOULDER

Lives there a man
With tongue so tied
Who hasn't to
His wifie lied?
To shield himself
He tried this stall;
"That's whitewash, dear,
From off the wall!"

GOSH

A woman stepped into his life.
In fact, this vampire stepped with zeal;
She stepped with such a cruel stride
She ground his soul beneath her heel.

—oo—

Rolling stones soon reach the bottom.

—oo—

KER FLOP!

A lass came tripping down the street,
She looked, I'll say, oh, very neat,
But evidently not discreet.
The street was steep, her pace too fleet?
She tripped, I say—oh, what a treat!

—oo—

It has always been our suspicion that the household that supports one of those little, all-wooly dogs, is short on other kinds of towels.

Dr. Bonnell M. Souder
HOSPITAL
Established in 1914
206 West Seventh Street
AUBURN, INDIANA

A Washington man has paid $500 for 20 eggs that have not yet been laid. Wonder if this is likely to make the hen nervous.

—oo—

"First the world was flat," remarked a Hicksville man the other day. "Then someone discovered it is round, and now—it's crooked."

—oo—

The cleanly state.—Wash.
The most egotistical state.—Me.
The sickliest state—Ill.
The most maidenly state—Miss.
The most medical state—Md.
The most paternal state—Pa.
The mining state—Ore.
The bunco state—Conn.
The deep in debt state—O.
The coy state—La.
The oldest state—Ark.

—oo—

Lots of folks thought that 114 temperature was hot air, but it turned out to be hot water.

—oo—

INTELLIGENCE TEST

Dear Office Cat: If two locomotives are traveling toward each other on the same rails, one with a speed of fifty miles per hour and the other sixty miles, which will strike first and how much sooner?

Yours till Westinghouse brakes.
T. N. T.

—oo—

Long hair and whiskers, it now appears, were not the only distinguishing marks of the House of David.

—oo—

A man in New Orleans was injured when a barrel of wines slipped off a truck onto him, which emphasizes the arguments of the advocates of light wines.

—oo—

THE BEST RECIPE

We live to learn, and learn to live,
But not until we've learned to give.
Unless we give, a selfish mist
Clothes us, and we just exist.

—oo—

Iowa chicken thieves are operating in automobiles. Using "coupes" we suppose.

—oo—

No man is ever satisfied with himself if he is doing a poor job.

—oo—

—oo—

M. Coue says the Americans are more susceptible to suggestions than Europeans. In other words, Coue means, we are already ready to swallow anything and pay dear for it.

—oo—

A writer in the University of Kansas claims the discovery of the super-ignorant co-ed. She thinks Alma mater means "Sweet Mamma."

—oo—

"Some day the Gideons, who see to it that there is a Bible in each hotel guest room," remarks Dick Serrill, "are going to fix it so that the man who makes the hotel rates has one too."

—oo—

He is a wise man who ignores unasked for advice.

—oo—

The cave man had some advantages. He never had to pay excess baggage charges when he took his wife on a trip that was to last a week.

—oo—

All men are created equal and entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of dollars.

—oo—

We have yet to find a man who is good at football and grammar at the same time.

—oo—

"They say a cat has nine lives, but a frog croaks every night," curtly remarks Ollie Stierwalt.

—oo—

In vain to comfort I'm inclined
In vain I seek to grin.
A load of coal is on my mind,
Instead of in the bin.

—oo—

PROBER—BABBLY

Lipsticks and marcelles,
Powder and paint.
She looks like a beauty, but
Maybe she ain't.

—oo—

A citizen says there has always been a doubt as to whether clothes really make the man, and this has been strengthened by the present certainty that overalls do not make the workman.

—oo—

"Never judge a man by the silk umbrella he carries," says R. T. Cruikshank. "He may have left an old cotton one in its place."

—oo—

HISTORICAL FACTS

It was quite a re-lief for Eve to change her clothes.

—oo—

Besides selecting the kind of car he would like to have, a poor man derives some satisfaction from an automobile show by seeing so many machines that he needn't dodge.

—oo—

St. Louis man is accused of non-support. He took his wife's wash boiler to play in a jazz orchestra and now she can't make a living.

—oo—

A man may "leave foot-prints in the sands of Time," but they are pretty sure to be mussed up beyond recognition by those of the gang that trails along behind him.

HOW'S THIS?

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE will do what we claim for it—rid your system of Catarrh or Deafness caused by Catarrh.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an [illegible] which Quickly Relieves the [illegible] inflammation, and the [illegible] Medicine, a Tonic, which acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces, thus assisting to restore normal conditions.

Sold by druggists for over 40 Years.
F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

Chiropractor Optician

Calls made at your home by APPOINTMENT.

EARL E. FRISBIE,
Butler, Indiana.

BROKE

Myself when young did eagerly frequent
The dansant where blissful hours were spent.
I learned to dance, perhaps, but everyone
Came out by that same door, without a cent.

—oo—

When one girl says of another: "You will have to admit that she is pretty," she does it as a justification of her sex.

—oo—

SAVED

Mother—Sam, you've been fighting again! You've lost four front teeth!

Sam, (taking a package from his pocket)—No, I ain't, mother. Here they are!

—oo—

Needed inventions—a telephone book with wrong numbers to call when you want the right ones.

—oo—

A citizen says every argument has two sides, until we take one. Then the other side disappears.

—oo—

When a girl accepts a ride in an auto with a stranger he is justified in thinking just what you do.

—oo—

A restaurant keeper advertises, "Meals like You Used to Get in the Old Home Town," and wonders why he doesn't do any business.

—oo—

AIN'T IT THE TRUTH

A show fan must have attended the Ziegfield Follies, as he was heard to remark, "It is becoming increasingly difficult for a New York chorus girl to be vaccinated where it doesn't show."

—oo—

There is nothing new under the sun, except, perhaps, the queer things a legislative body thinks of.

—oo—

One of our lady citizens says in her opinion the crown of a woman's glory is not her hair, but her ability to get the last word.

—oo—

HOW ARE YOUR EARS?

Did you ever hear a light squeak?
Did you ever hear a close call?
Did you ever hear a mute appeal?
Did you ever hear muffled silence?
Did you ever hear a silent call?

—oo—

About the only way to secure safety on the highways is to keep off of them.

—oo—

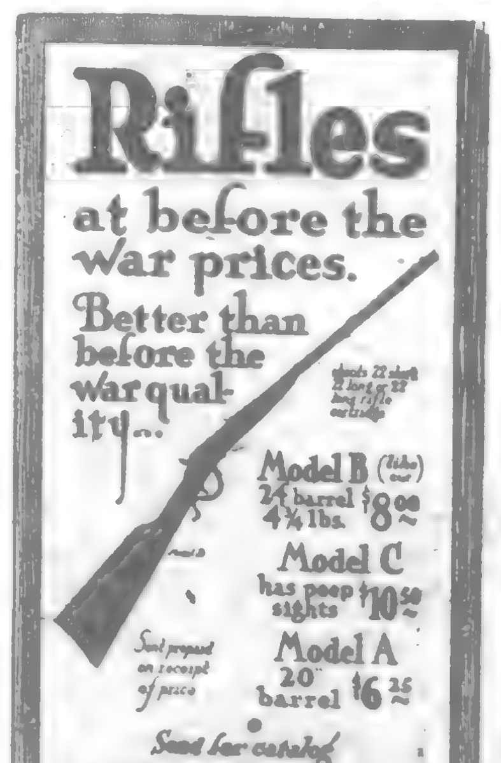
There's nothing in a name. Sam Sleeper was a somnambulist, and Joe Drowsey could sit up all night without batting an eye.

—oo—

Bunt Getrost declares that a man who will eat scrambled eggs in a cheap restaurant is a real hero.

—oo—

The pen may be mightier than the sword, but France doesn't believe it.



Rifles
at before the war prices.
Better than before the war quality...
shoots 22 short 22 long or 22 long rifle cartridges
Model B (take down) 24 barrel 4¾ lbs. $8.00
Model C has peep sights $10.50
Model A 20" barrel $6.25
Sent prepaid on receipt of price
Send for catalog
Page-Lewis Arms Company
Chicopee Falls, Mass.

Make Your Trip More Enjoyable by a Refreshing Night on Lake Erie
(Your rail ticket is good on the boats)

Thousands of east and north bound travelers say they wouldn't have missed that cool, comfortable night on one of our fine steamers. A good bed in a clean stateroom, a long sound sleep and an appetizing breakfast in the morning!

Steamers "SEEANDBEE"—"CITY OF ERIE"—"CITY OF BUFFALO"
Daily, May 1st to November 15th

Leave Cleveland - 9:00 P.M. Arrive Buffalo - 7:30 A.M.	Eastern Standard Time	Leave Buffalo - 9:00 P.M. Arrive Cleveland - 7:30 A.M.

Connections for Niagara Falls, Eastern and Canadian points. Ask your ticket agent or tourist agency for tickets via C & B Line. New Tourist Automobile Rate—$10.00.

Send for free sectional puzzle chart of the Great Ship "Seeandbee" and 32-page booklet.

The Cleveland and Buffalo Transit Co.
Cleveland, Ohio

The Great Ship "Seeandbee"—the largest steamer on inland waters of the world.

Fare $5.50

Facts About Widows

The American Bankers Association tells this about widows:

18% of American widows live on their income.

47% supplement income by working.

35% are dependent.

And a table for daughter's and sons who have been heirs would show about the same percentage.

Can THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY interest you?

J. C. Hull, Representative,
St. Joe, Ind.

It is unreasonable, however, to expect any motor to run as smoothly as the agent talks.

—oo—

A good day's work starts the night before with a good night's sleep. That is something fox-trotters should remember.

—oo—

AN INVITATION

A Danville, Virginia, dealer in tires and tubes advertises as follows: "Invite us to your next Blowout."

—oo—

The Prince of Wales has fallen off a horse again. He had better stick to the back seat of an automobile.

—oo—

Better to own a few friends than all the gold refined;
Better the love of one real heart than all the rubies ever mined;
Better the hurt of many wounds than fear to join the fray;
Better than years of nothingness to LIVE one surging day.

—oo—

Sometimes any decision is better than no decision.

—oo—

It may be more blessed to give than to receive, but the man who is playing put and take can't see it that way.

—oo—

HERE COMES THE ICE MAN!

Shot by Cupid's arrow, eh?

No, it was Tom's Pierce Arrow that did the trick.

But Love is blind, they say.

Yes, but Pierce Arrow will open one's eyes.

Then you don't think that Love is entirely blind?

Well, when I gave my girl a diamond, I found out that Love is not STONE blind, at any rate.

—oo—

There is many a man who may admit his wife is wrong or his political party is wrong, but did you ever run across one who would admit his watch is wrong?

—oo—

About the only time when we cannot sleep late in the morning is the time when we do not have to get up.

—oo—

A man who dressed in a bbl.
Was mournfully singing a crl.
He sighed and he moaned,
And at times even groaned,
'Cause, you see, he had lost his appl.

—oo—

About the only thing as worthless as a German mark is a button on a coat sleeve.

—oo—

The best results are obtained in discussing prohibition when you speak easy.

—oo—

Personally, we don't mind money when it talks out loud; it is when it begins to whisper we get suspicious.

H. R. Minnick, M. D.
St. Joe, Indiana
Office at Residence
PHONE NO. 16X

An optimist is a man who drops twenty-six floors in a thirty-story elevator, and remarks at the fourth floor, "Well, I'm still all [illegible]

—oo—

One cynic says about the only perfect neighborhoods are those found in real estate advertisements.

—oo—

Does a Russian girl take [illegible] compliment when her sweetheart [illegible] her she is worth her weight [illegible]

—oo—

A Buddy says it might be [illegible] hold one of those peace conferences in a trench half full of water [illegible] shrapnel bursting over head [illegible] they would get results.

—oo—

Live your life so that when you die there will be at least a few people who will miss you and feel sorry [illegible] you have gone.

—oo—

A lot of women are two-faced [illegible] is the one they wear at 8 o'clock [illegible] the evening and the one they wear [illegible] 8 o'clock in the morning.

LATEST and BEST!

An INCREASING, life-long Monthly Income if Totally and Permanently Disabled by accident or disease before the age of 60 years.

THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK

$10 a month during first 5 years, $15 during the next 5 years, $20 thereafter for life. No further premium deposits. And then $1000 at your death to your beneficiary, or $2000 if death, at any age, is accidental, payable in a single sum, or as income for a term of years or for life. Total disability lasting 3 months regarded, durirg further continuance, as permanent.

J. C. HULL, St. Joe, Ind.

Please give me further information about this Perfect Life Insurance Policy.

NAME ____________

ADDRESS ____________

____

Frank L. Milliman
TRUSTEE
Concord Township

Office Day Friday of Each Week at his residence 2 miles north and 1-2 mile West of St. Joe.

Lehman's
CLOTHING HOUSE
ESTABLISHED 1867
MENS AND BOYS OUTFITTERS
810 CALHOUN STREET
Fort Wayne, Ind.
BEN LEHMAN PROP.

Secure Your VALUABLES

Those valuable papers that could not be replaced; those heirlooms; those important records.

Don't keep them at home where they are subject to fire, theft or "spontaneous disappearance"

Keep them behind locked steel doors in the safety vaults of this bank. Act now for Safety First and Always.

This Bank Will Help You Save.

Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank

Capital Stock, - $25,000

Spencerville, Ind.

The Bank of Personal Services

SPENCERVILLE

Mrs. Sylvia Vansile spent Friday at the B. F. Markle home.

Mrs. Clara Brattian and daughters were afternoon guests of Thos. Farver and family.

Mr. and Mrs Frank Wertman were Sunday guests of Mrs. Alice Wertman of Leo.

Jay Chapman and wife and Charles Chapman and family were Sunday guests of Dayton Webb and wife.

GLASSES—$2.50 up, Benj. F. Griest, Eyesight specialist, American Bldg., Hicksville, Ohio.

J. C. Vallieu, wife and two sons, James and Wayne, Sundayed with the lady's sister, Mrs. Orla Woodring and family at Newville.

Mrs. R. U. Bowser and daughter visited the former's sister, Mrs. Catherine Elinger at the Lutheran hospital at Fort Wayne, on Saturday.

The C. C. Club was pleasantly entertained on Friday at the home of Mrs. Golden High. They will meet next Friday at the home of Mrs. Cora Steward and daughter, Arminta.

Vernon Kline of South Bend, is at home on account of sickness.

Walter Silberg of Toledo is visiting his mother, Mrs. M. J. Silberg and family and other relatives.

Mrs. Eda Hursh and family and Mrs. Charles Brattian and family were Saturday guests of Mrs. Sylvia Vansile.

The Misses Marjorie Hollabaugh and Florence Beams were Sunday guests of the Misses Anna and Venus Bearbower, south of town.

Dwight Coolidge, wife and danghter Mary, spent Sunday with James Cox and family and Miss Ila Hoover of Mishawaka, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs. Kelsey Fitch and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gladback of Fort Wayne, were Sunday evening guests of Mrs Emila Gloyd and family.

The Womens Home Missionary Society of the Methodist church will hold their convention at the First Methodist church at Fort Wayne on May 22 and 23.

The following ladies of the Red Cross nursing training class took the examination on Tuesday; Hasel Steward, LeAnna Steward, Mrs. Wilder, Audra Wade, Estella Goldsmith, Ethel Bowser, Princess Rectenwal, Elsie Fisher and Mable Erick.

After 8 Weeks You Must Change the Feed

For the first 8 weeks, Conkey's Buttermilk Starting Feed is the proper Feed, scientifically, for chicks, but

Growing Chicks Must Have a Different Feed

They must have more protein than the little chicks can stand. The same feed cannot serve for both purposes—for little chicks and for growing fowls—if you expect to get the best results. That's why Conkey makes

Conkey's

THE ORIGINAL

Buttermilk Growing Mash

This is the great developing feed that most successful poultrymen use to bring their fowls quickly to early maturity—that insures early broilers and layers. Just right in protein and low in fibre. It is a wonderful bone and flesh builder. Feed it for rapid and certain results.

Conkey's The Original Buttermilk Starting Feed

Should always be fed for the first 8 weeks. It is an appetizing combination of pure, sweet grain and concentrated sanitary Buttermilk combined by a special process. Conkey uses Semi-Solid Buttermilk only — never dried Buttermilk.

STEWARD LUMBER & GRAIN COMPANY, Spencerville, Indiana

E. LEIGHTY GROCERY, St. Joe, Indiana

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Vernie Kelley of west of town on on Sunday, May 13.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Oberholtzer of Three Rivers, Michigan, were Thursday evening guests in the B F. Markle home.

The 58th annual convention of the DeKalb County Sunday School Association will be held at St. Joe on May 22-23.

Fred High and wife spent Sunday as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt and Miss Boslling of Ft. Wayne.

B. F. Markle and family were Sunday guests in the Moses Oberholtzer home near Harlan. They were evening guests of Mrs. Matilda Oberholtzer.

The Loyal Woman's class had charge of the Mother's Day program on Sunday evening at the Lutheran Church. Prof. Fleming of the Methodist Church delivered the address to a large crowd.

The J. A. G. Club and their husbands surprised Fred High and wife recently, who will shortly leave for an extended tour of the eastern states. Games and music were enjoyed and a potluck supper was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Day Baker spent Sunday with Vol Hay, Mrs. Wm. Halmer and daughter of this place, Edward Hickman and wife and Mrs Fitchgerald and two daughters of Fort Wayne, were afternoon guests in the same home and Herby Webb wife and daughters were evening guests.

COLETOWN

J.W.Hart and wife enjoyed Sunday dinner with Roscoe Conine and wife.

Rev. Ered Brewster and family were recent dinner guests of Vere Nelson and wife

Herbert Ginther and wife of Akron, are visiting in the Dell Nelson and Emmett Ginther homes.

Mrs. Myrtle Mills and daughter, Delores of Manchester, Ohio, are visiting in the Emmet Ginther home.

John Fairfield and wife, Hanna Walden, John Hart, wife and son, Woodron, of Fort Wayne, and Jay Hart and wife called on Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hart Sunday evening.

CONCORD

This sure is a hard spring to raise young chickens. So many are losing their little chicks.

Mr. and Mrs Ford Jackson and baby, spent last Sunday with her sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Farver of South of Rehobeth.

Mrs. Mary Airgood and daughter, Mary, of Cedarville spent last Sunday in the home of Charles Jackson and family.

Mrs. Charley Widney arrived home May 9, from Louisiana where she spent the winter with her daughter, Mrs. Hale. She stood the trip very well for an old lady.

Concord observed Mothers Day last Sunday with an all day meeting and a potluck dinner. A good program in the afternoon was enjoyed by all. Mr. J. J. Eckright of Auburn, was one of the main speakers. Mrs. Ren Nelson read an appropriate piece, also Mrs. Burney Rhoades spoke and sang and others did their part, and so the afternoon was spent. Rev. Havens gave a splendid talk to the mothers. About 160 persons were present.

Coverings for Garden Truck

Coverings of rather heavy cloth laid directly over garden truck or other low-growing plants are effective in protecting against moderate frosts. The heat from the ground and the plants is thus conserved, and the losses of heat by radiation from the plant to the sky are cut off; moreover, the air movement is so slight near the ground that there is little tendency for the cold outside air to be forced under or through the covering.

Obituary

John W. Means was born in Jackson Township, DeKalb County, Indiana, October 23, 1850 and died May 1, 1923, at Fort Wayne Indiana, aged 72 years, 6 months and 7 days.

Mr. Means life was devoted to farming and spent his entire time on the old homestead in Jackson Township. He was united in marriage to Rebecca C. Farver, August 1, 1869, who preceded him to the spirit world May 3, 1922. He leaves to mourn his departure six children, eleven grand-children, one sister and a host of friends. His wife and three children are deceased.

The funeral services were held at the Spencerville M. E. Church, Rev. F. E. Brewster, officiated.

Sunday School Report.

The following is a true and correct report of the various Sunday Schools in this neighborhood for last Sunday.

Christian	104	$ 4 50
M. P.	75	6 43
Lutheran	113	7.49
M. E. Spencer	105	7.00
Lutheran	124	7.53
Newville U. B.	99	5.52
Christian	90	3 73
Coburntown	65	2 80
Concord	92	5.12
Mt. Pleasant	75	3 00
Rehoboth	98	5 53

THE FUTURE OF THE RACE

Considerable interest has been aroused throughout the country by recent announcement that Herbert Hoover has accepted the presidency of the American Child Health Association, and that the support of the great organization of mercy, the American Relief Administration, which for the past eight years has been ministering to the striken peoples of Europe, will be behind this new body.

The Association is a merger of the American Child Hygiene Association and the Child Health Organization of America, two agencies which have done splendid work among the children of America over a period of years, and their possibilities in this new grouping, with the added strength of men like Hoover and his associates, are unlimited.

The importance of this work can not be disputed. A nation has no more valuable asset than its children, and any movement designed to improve their health and thus make them into better men and women is a decided step forward.

The experiment will be watched with interest by all Americans, and particularly the fathers and mothers of the country, who will want to take a most active part in it.

A NEW USE FOR THE AUTO

Are you troubled with rats, especially around the chicken house, garage, barn or vegetable garden. Fasten a length of hose on the end of the exhaust from your gasoline engine—whether it be a "flivver" or a tractor—back the car up within reach of the rat burrow, and adjust the carburetor for a rich mixture. Pack damp earth around the hose at the entrance to the hole to seal it. Run the engine at a moderate speed for 10 minutes or more and the rats will be destroyed. This method is entirely practical, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, when there are only a small number of holes or the area to be fumigated is not too extensive. It may also be used successfully in destroying rats beneath floors or in other places where a concentration of the gas can be obtained.

Community effort is urged in getting rid of rats by the above means and also by cleaning up rubbish, spreading poison baits, setting traps, and rat proofing buildings. Individual properties from which rats are exterminated soon become reinfested if there are rats in the neighborhood. The Biological Survey, United States Department of Agriculture, is willing to assist in organizing and carrying out antirat campaigns wherever possible and will furnish upon application bulletins and detailed directions for poisoning with barium carbonate and setting traps.

Thoughtlessness of Men.

So many rich men's sons marry women who can't support them in the style in which they were raised.—Duluth Herald.

BILIOUSNESS sick headache, sour stomach, constipation, easily avoided.

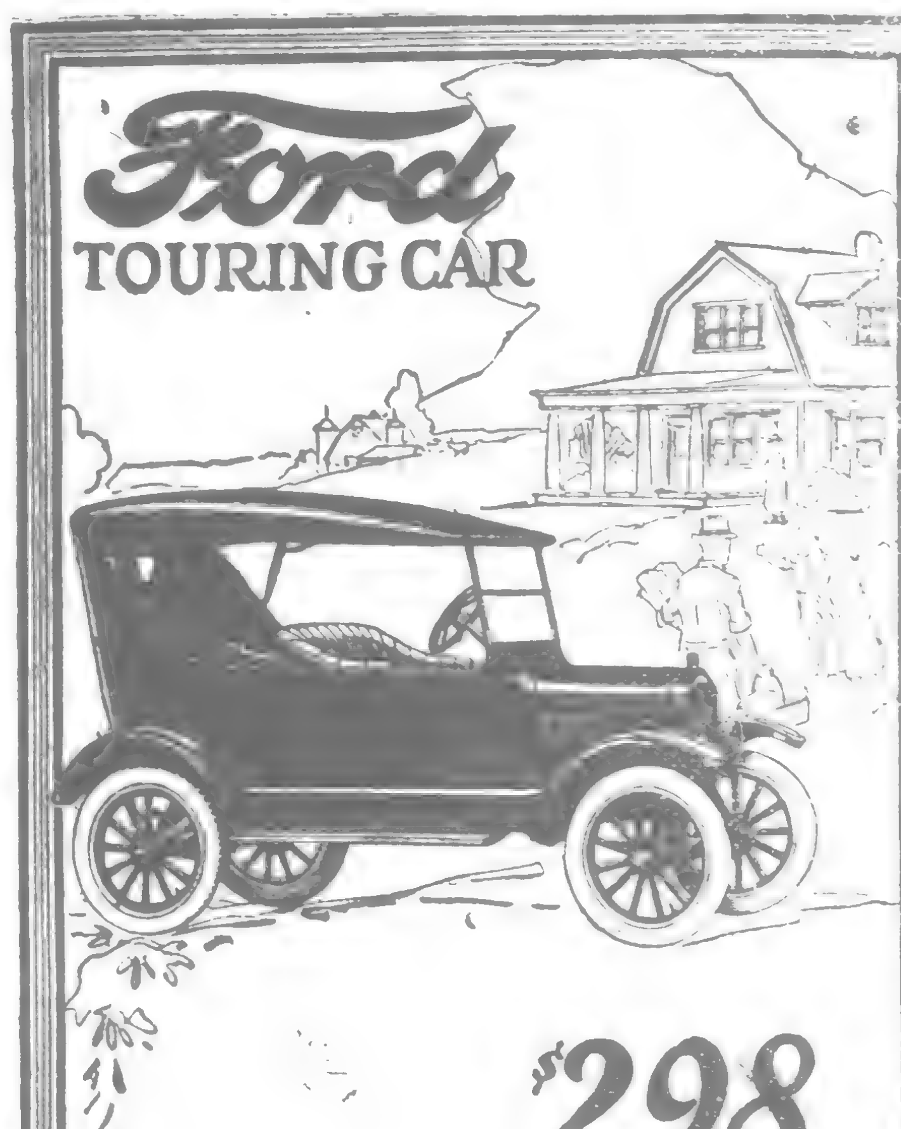
An active liver without calomel.

CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS

Never sicken or gripe—only 25c

Ford

TOURING CAR



$298

F. O. B. DETROIT

A Greater Touring Car Value

The present price of the Ford Touring Car is the lowest ever made.

And yet the car itself is a greater value. It is better looking with slanting windshield, a one-man top and improved seats. And there are many refinements in chassis construction.

The demand is so great that deliveries will soon be impossible. To protect yourself, order now. Make a small down payment, the balance on easy terms.

Ford prices have never been so low
Ford quality has never been so high

FRANK W. SILBERG, Agent,
Spencerville, Ind.

H. O. WILLIAMS

THE Abstracter

is able to furnish you with a complete Abstract of Title to any description of Real Estate in DeKalb County.

OFFICE
West Seventh Street
AUBURN

FIRE INSURANCE — NOTARY PUBLIC

Before selling your WOOL don't fail to see W. G. ERICK,

SPENCERVILLE, IND.

FENCE POSTS!

Just unloaded a carload of

Genuine Eastern Posts

Do not be misinformed—

The low prices of these posts will actually surprise you.

Spencerville Lumber Co.
ASHUR CULP, Manager
Lumber and Building Material of All Kinds
Spencreville, Ind.

MAY

L 912

THE JOY OF LIVING

By SIDNEY GOWING

Copyright 1922 by Sidney Gowing

Illustrations by ELLSWORTH YOUNG

DE JUSSAC

SYNOPSIS.—Disliking the prospect of a month's visit to her austere aunt, Lady Erythea Lambe, at Jervaulx abbey, and her cousin, Alexander Lambe, Aimee, vivacious daughter of the Very Reverend Viscount Scroope, meets a young man who laughingly introduces himself as "Billy," American. The two ride on his motorcycle, the "Flying Sphinx," and part. With Georgina Berners, her cousin, Aimee sets out for Jervaulx. She forces Georgina to impersonate her at Jervaulx, and she goes on a holiday. Aimee again meets Billy. He tells her his name is Spencer, and she gives hers as Amy Snookes, at present "out of a job." Billy offers to take her into partnership in selling the Sphinx. In a spirit of madcap adventure, she accepts. The two proceed to the town of Stanhoe, taking separate lodgings in Ivy cottage. While Aimee is secretly visiting Georgina at Jervaulx, the place is burglarized, and the famous Lambe emeralds are stolen. Aimee escapes. Police decide the thieves are "Jack the Climber" and "Calamity Kate," who travel on a motorcycle. Billy, who has shadowed Aimee to Jervaulx, follows the thieves. He is knocked out, but emerges from the fight with the Lambe emeralds. He meets Aimee, with the police in pursuit. In a secure hiding place, a cave among the crag pits, Aimee tells him the whole story. He urges her that she make a frank confession to her father, but on reflection both realize Aimee's good name has been compromised. Assuring Aimee he has a plan to save her, Billy leaves her in the cave and, proceeding to Jervaulx, restores the emeralds to the astounded Lady Erythea. Billy tells a story that satisfies the police, refuses a reward and accepts a chauffeur's job from Lady Erythea. Aimee gets the place of parlor maid at Jervaulx. Alexander thinks he recognizes Aimee as "Calamity Kate." Georgina divulges Aimee's identity. Hearing her story, Alexander consents to keep the secret. Alexander finds himself very much in love with Georgina. Alexander's sister, Lady Diana, arrives. Another visitor is the Vicomte de Jussac, her suitor. Diana recognizes Aimee and threatens to denounce her. Aimee confides in De Jussac.

CHAPTER XIX—Continued.

—9—

"What does this mean?" he said sternly.

"Diana's found me out, and she's going to tell Aunt, first thing in the morning," said Aimee, with the calm of despair. "And I've told Monsieur de Jussac. I simply had to tell somebody. And everybody will know tomorrow."

"Rather a delicate position, Monsieur le Cure—eh?" said Bertrand dryly, and not without satisfaction.

Alexander flushed to the ears and hung his head. He looked so ashamed and wretched that Aimee felt a pang of remorse.

"For myself," he said unsteadily, "I will take the exposure and the penalty—for I have deserved it. It is you, Aimee, that I should have wished to save. I would sacrifice myself to do it now, if there were any way, but I see none. You—and Georgina. That is all that matters."

"Tiens! The true ring!" cried de Jussac enthusiastically. He seized Alexander's hand and shook it with heartfelt warmth. "Never reproach yourself, mon ami. From first to last, you have acted en galant homme!"

"You've been a brick, Alexander. And you'd better go, and not hear any more—I'll keep you out of it if I can," said Aimee quickly.

Alexander looked at his cousin.

"I will go, then," he said, "on condition that you return to your room immediately, Aimee."

"All right, I will."

"Assuredly—she shall go at once! Till the morning then, Monsieur l' Abbe, and have no fear. The danger shall dissipate itself," said Bertrand, and almost forcibly he shepherded the bewildered Alexander out of the room. Bertrand darted back, and caught Aimee by the hands.

"He is bon enfant, the parson!" he cried, "all shall yet be well. But it is impossible to require deceit from him. Leave that to me! Mademoiselle, I am a magnificent liar!" He smote himself proudly on the breast. "You shall see how my talent—"

"But—!"

"Not a word! I shall consider it an honor—a privilege. It is the one situation in which prevarication becomes a virtue! Retire, then, mademoiselle, and sleep soundly. A way shall be found out of this impasse, I pledge myself to it—foi de chevalier! The morning shall bring, not disaster, but happiness!"

Aimee was whirled out of the room, hardly less bewildered than Alexander. When she had gone upstairs, Monsieur De Jussac returned to the dining room.

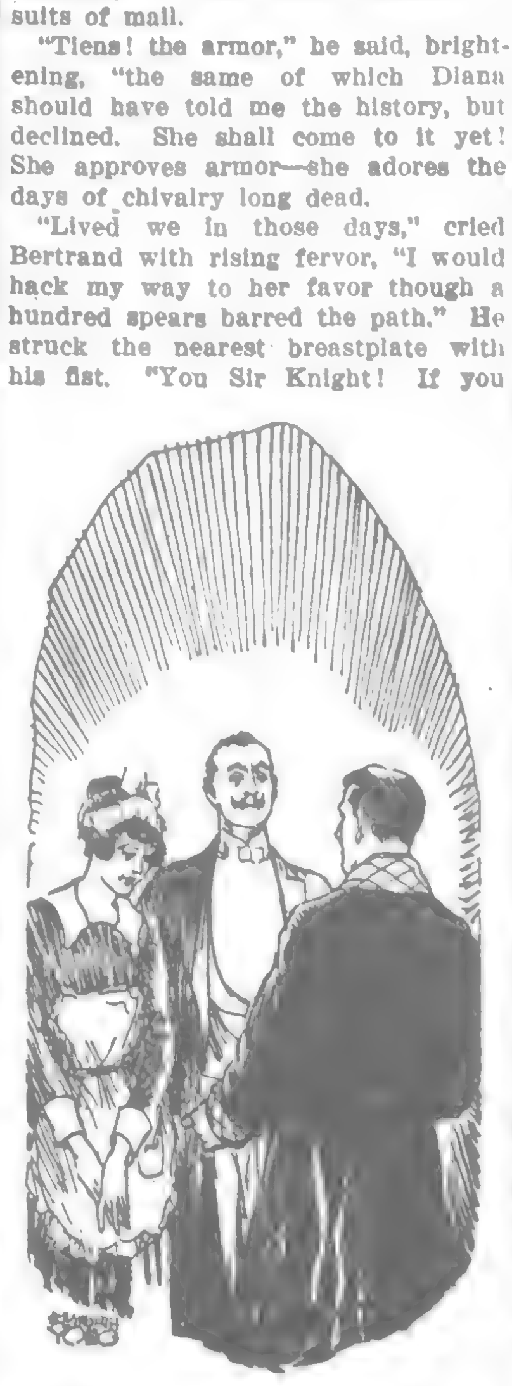
He paced the room with long strides, developing a series of plans that flashed through his brain. Some caused him to laugh aloud, others evoked a sigh.

"In this country of Puritans, schemes that elsewhere would glow like a golden mist, become impossible!" he mused regretfully.

Since the coldness of Lady Diana was the main difficulty, Bertrand's thoughts concentrated naturally upon her, and it is to be feared that Aimee's predicament faded into a secondary place. Allowances must be made for those swayed by the grand passion. Suddenly de Jussac halted among the suits of mail.

"Tiens! the armor," he said, brightening, "the same of which Diana should have told me the history, but declined. She shall come to it yet! She approves armor—she adores the days of chivalry long dead.

"Lived we in those days," cried Bertrand with rising fervor, "I would hack my way to her favor though a hundred spears barred the path." He struck the nearest breastplate with his fist. "You Sir Knight! If you did not pay swift homage to my lady," said Bertrand, grinding his teeth, "my lance should crash into your midrift! Scrognon-non-non-non-non!"



"What Does This Mean?" He Said Sternly.

He turned to inspect the pectoral of another suit, beautifully engraved and chased with gold.

"Of French workmanship, surely—never of this country. The English are a great nation, but severe—severe." He passed his hands over the breastplate. It detached quite easily from the stand. With a sudden impulse Bertrand fitted it to his broad chest, passing his arm through the thongs that had held it to the stand. He laughed as he caught sight of his reflection in a mirror.

"It becomes me a merveille! Name of a name! Let me envisage myself the conqueror of my Diana!"

He strapped on the greaves and cuisses over his dress trousers, donned the gorget and, lifting down the big helmet, placed it over his head, abrading his nose in the process. The suit —it was the same which had fallen during the night of the burglary—had certainly been made for a knight of great stature—it fitted de Jussac very well.

"Magnifique!" said Bertrand. "And, who knows—it may be the very suit of my ancestor! The—"

He turned slowly, aware of someone approaching. A tall, spectral figure, white and ethereal, stood in the doorway.

It was Lady Diana, in a long girdled wrap trimmed with white fur. In her hand was a rolled up paper that might have been a piece of music; it trembled visibly. Her face, as she gazed at the armored figure, was as white as her garments.

She controlled her nerves with a mighty effort. If it was a spirit, it was indeed a splendid one. To her, of all people, this manifestation of the infinite was vouchsafed.

For some moments she gazed, in a thrilled silence. Then she actually advanced a few steps, faltering.

"Speak!" she said, in a voice that quavered slightly. "Are you he? Speak to me. I am of the elect. I am n-n-n-not afraid."

De Jussac grasped the situation. He searched his mind swifty for the mot juste—the speech of the Fourteenth century.

"Moult puissante dame—" he began, dropping reverently on one knee.

Diana, the moment the unmistakable voice smote upon her ear, gave a piercing shriek, and clasped her hands to her head. She swayed as if about to fall.

Bertrand rushed forward, and caught her just in time.

"B-B-B-Bertrand!" she gasped faintly.

The name, wrung from her by stress, was such music in the Vicomte's ears that he tore off his helmet and kissed her rapturously.

"Angel!" he cried. "Adored Diana! Say it again!" He made it somewhat difficult for her to say anything. "Say it—whisper it—'Bertrand!' Ah, happiest of men!"

Diana struggled.

"How dare you!" she said wildly. "How dare you—pretend to be a ghost!"

"But I did not! I thought you were pretending to be one! Let me bear the blame. I love you—I was in despair—and put on this mail that for one moment I might imagine myself approved. Dear lady of Romance, I am no ghost—I own it!"

He proved it with a kiss that was by no means ghostly.

"Oh!" said Diana faintly.

The mailed arms encircled her tightly.

"Sweetest of all earth's treasures!" exclaimed Bertrand. "You love me? You tremble—your heart beats. Say it! You love me!"

Suddenly she hid her face against his breastplate.

"I-I-I do," she whispered, hardly audible, "and—I should never have dared to let you tell me so."

"Thrice blessed accident! To my unhappy ancestor I owe my happiness! Ah, day of days! Diana, you will marry me, beloved?"

"I suppose so. I can't help it, now. Oh—Bertrand!"

"I said that armor was of no avail. But it has conquered!"

She glanced up at him shyly.

"I shall wear it for evermore!" said De Jussac rapturously. "It shall never be doffed, save at your orders. Diana—"

"But my aunt!" exclaimed Diana suddenly, her blushes changing to pallor. "If—"

"She will give us her blessing. In the morning—"

'But if she found out how it happened!" said Diana in a panic. "And the time—you do not know how terrible Aunt can be—"

"She will not know! I will put myself in order—I will propose to you again in the morning. We will announce it with all formalities." Bertrand was alarmed to find her almost collapsing; he led her to the table and raised a goblet to her lips. "A little wine, my angel! It will revive you!"

"No, no!"

"But yes! You are agitated. Just one sip!"

It was impossible to deny anything to the conquering Bertrand. Lady Diana permitted herself to imbibe a little of the wine; it restored the color to her cheeks.

"And now," said the Vicomte tenderly, "light of my soul—"

A piercing shriek from Diana jarred painfully on his nerves. Bertrand started and spun around.

In the doorway stood the unspeakable parlor maid, capless, her bronze hair flowing over her shoulders. Wicked laughter convulsed her, her eyes shone with triumph.

"Bless you, my children!" said Aimee. "You've made enough row about it!"

De Jussac started hastily towards her. Aimee sprang back and closed the door in his face; the key turned with a click.

Lady Diana had sunk inert into a chair.

"Stop her—make her be quiet!" panted Diana trembling. "Bertrand—if my aunt—"

"Open!" hissed Bertrand, rattling the handle.

"Leave the door alone!" said Aimee's voice, muffled through the panel. "You can't get out—either of you. Can you hear me?"

"Yes, yes! Mademoiselle—"

"Listen! Within three feet of me is a burglar alarm," said the voice, diabolically. "I'm going to start it. Before you can turn yourselves round, the whole household will be down on you—from Aunt Erythea to the pageboy. Especially Aunt. I'm going to count three. When—"

"Misericorde!" gasped Bertrand. "Mademoiselle, I implore you! This is to return evil for good How have we deserved—"

"I have no quarrel with you, Vicomte. You're all right. But I've got you both. You'll accept my terms—"

"Anything!" panted Bertrand distractedly. "Anything—"

"Stand away from the door, then. Get right back."

"Yes, yes!"

Aimee applied her eye to the keyhole to insure that her orders were obeyed. She opened the door cautiously, and regarded the distressed pair with intense satisfaction.

"Let me be the first to congratulate you!" she said. "Vicomte, I don't grudge my cousin to you. You are welcome. Di!" continued Aimee, fixing Diana with a glittering eye, "I don't want your explanation—you can explain the masquerade to Aunt. But I shall hold my tongue about you—and you'll hold yours about me! I require your word of honor. For you daren't break it!"

"Yes!" gasped Diana feebly. "Don't—don't speak so loud, Aimee—"

Aimee looked at her, and exploded with laughter.

"Every happiness, dear people!" she said, and vanished.

"Bertrand!" panted Diana, rising unsteadily. "Did you know anything of this? Do you understand—? She is not the parlor maid—she is my cousin. I cannot explain; you must say nothing about it. Neither will she! Oh—let me go!"

He caught her in his arms before she could escape.

"My angel! In the morning, our love scene all over again. I have your promise!"

"Yes!" she said, wildly. "Oh, let me go!"

Lady Diana fled from the room and scuttled upstairs like an agitated rabbit. The Vicomte, following, blew her an impassioned kiss as she passed out of sight. Returning to the hall, he tore off his armor in a delirium of joy, and replaced it on the stand.

CHAPTER XX

Two Pair.

Lady Erythea beamed. It seems an impossible term to apply to that austere countenance. But it was so. When Georgina entered the drawing room at noon—after nearly twenty-four hours exile in her bedroom—she found her alleged aunt as near to beaming as her features permitted.

"I am glad you have recovered from your temporary indisposition, my dear Aimee," she said amiably. "During your absence an event has occurred, both romantic and desirable. How seldom the two things go together!"

"Indeed! What is it?"

"Your cousin Diana and Monsieur de Jussac are about to contract an alliance. They became engaged this morning."

"How perfectly delightful!" breathed Georgina, after a pause of dramatic astonishment. "I am sure you are pleased—Aunt?"

"Indeed I am. I have not concealed from you my desire that this very thing should come about. It is the more satisfactory, because only last night I quite despaired of it, and came to regard it as hopeless. But Monsieur de Jussac's suit has prospered amazingly; it appears that Diana, as I suspected, has for some time since been far from indifferent to him. I am delighted that I gave them the opportunity. Only two hours after breakfast the Vicomte, with his customary impetuousness, brought Diana to me and begged for my consent. I need not say that I gave it gladly."

Georgina escaped into the garden.

It is possible that Aimee was right when she said that all women are natural actresses in time of need. Georgina's assumption of astonishment at hearing Lady Erythea's news was wholly assumed, and not assumed badly. The announcement was, in fact, no news at all to her.

Having an excellent seuse of direction, Georgina soon discovered Mr. Alexander Lambe walking on the sheltered paths of the old yew garden beyond the chapel-at-ease. He looked quite as relieved as Georgina. And his eyes lit up wonderfully when he saw her. He hurried forward to meet her.

"Mr. Lambe—!" exclaimed Georgina.

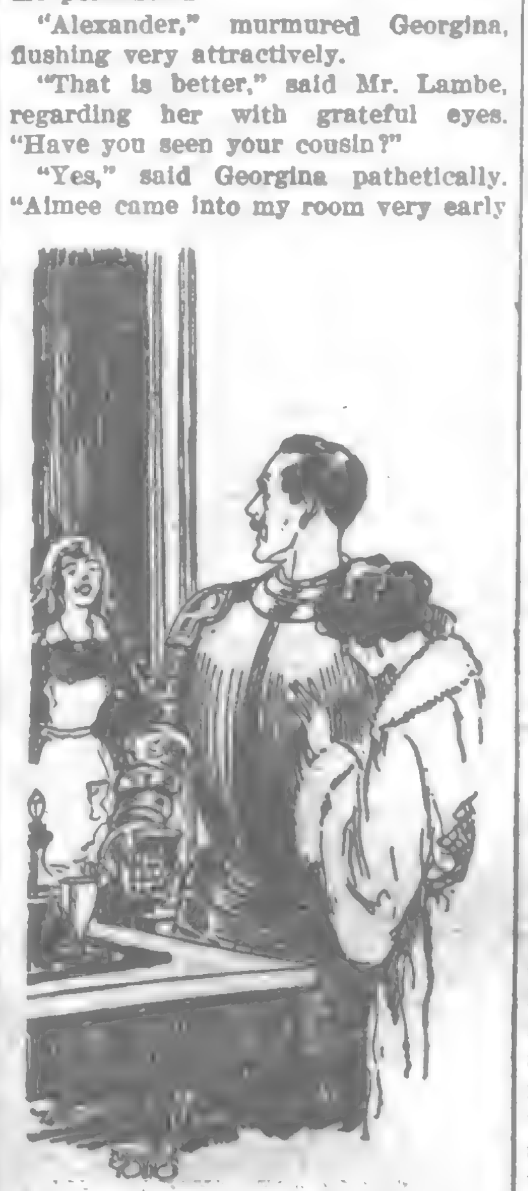
Mr. Lambe halted, and looked deeply pained.

"Have I offended you?" he said almost wistfully. "I thought you gave me permission—"

"Alexander," murmured Georgina, flushing very attractively.

"That is better," said Mr. Lambe, regarding her with grateful eyes. "Have you seen your cousin?"

"Yes," said Georgina pathetically. "Aimee came into my room very early this morning; she told me the dreadful thing that had happened—that your sister had discovered her and was going to tell Lady Erythea—and then, when I was nearly frantic with terror, Aimee explained that it was all right, and Lady Diana wouldn't say a word about it. Oh, what a relief it was!"



Wicked Laughter Convulsed Her.

"She told you that!" cried Alexander, amazed. "How could she have known? It was not till an hour or two ago Diana informed me that De Jussac had just proposed to her, and she was so happy—she felt she could not get Aimee into trouble!"

Georgina stammered in confusion. She had nearly made a serious blunder—Aimee had told no one but herself about the encounter with the ghost.

"She must have felt confident, I suppose, of Diana's g-g-goodness of heart!" faltered Georgina. "Are you pleased about the engagement? I do hope you are. I was afraid—"

Alexander paused.

"I am not displeased," he said. "De Jussac is a good fellow. I did not always think so. But—I have come to see that he is a very good fellow indeed. The love of a good woman is just what he needs."

"I hope they will be very happy," said Georgina softly.

Alexander was looking at her with an expression that made her heart beat.

"Isn't it splendid," she said quickly, "that Aimee won't be suddenly betrayed! She'll have a chance now. She—"

"Aimee!" Mr. Lambe almost exploded. "It is nothing but Aimee! It is you I am concerned about, Georgina—not Aimee! It wrings my heart, the position you are placed in—through no fault whatever of your own. It cannot go on—it is bound to be known very soon now. And when that happens—"

"Yes," said Georgina, forlornly. "It will be dreadful. I shall have to face it. They won't defend me."

Alexander took her hands quickly in his.

"Give me the right!" he said.

Georgina caught her breath. She looked up at him. There was a wonderful tenderness in his eyes; his face was the face of a man inspired.

"Georgina, you have known me only a little while. But I love you. You are the only woman in the world for me. I love you! Do you think you could care for me—just a little?"

Georgina tried to free herself. "It is impossible!" she said, turning her face away.

"Why? Do you not care for me?"

"Oh—it is cruel!" gasped Georgina, brokenly. "I am not Aimee. I am here under false pretenses. How can you? I am—"

"You are the woman I love!"

"Oh, let me go!" she said wildly. "You are not yourself—you have no right to say this to me," sobbed Georgina, "you believe that a priest in orders may not marry!"

"I never held any such belief! Of my order, there are some who hold the view. I am not with them. I am celibate, only because I have never loved till now. Look at me, Georgina!" he said almost sternly. "Do you believe that any human passion would cause me to do what was against my faith?"

Georgina looked at him through her tears.

"No," she whispered, "I know that you would not."

"Come to me, then, Georgina," he said, gently. "What good there is for us to do in the world, let us do it hand in hand. I will make the years wonderful for you. Just tell me that you care."

He took her masterfully in his arms.

"I do love you!" sobbed Georgina. "I love you."

Alexander raised her face and kissed her.

"I never hoped to hear you say it," he said. She felt his heart beating strongly. "You love me!"

"I have loved you," said Georgina, her voice stifled in his coat, "from the first day I saw you."

There was a long pause.

"It is greater happiness than I dreamed of," said Alexander, humbly. "I have not deserved it."

Suddenly he released her and held her at arm's length.

"One thing neither of us shall endure. No subterfuge—no secrecy about this. It is too sacred. We shall make it known at once. It is you I am thinking of. Our betrothal must be announced," said Alexander decisively, "and then—"

Before there was any time for reflection, Fate was upon him in the shape of Lady Erythea, walking majestically along the path with her little Highland terrier at her heels. Alexander halted.

"Aunt!" he exclaimed. "Georgina—I—we—"

He stopped short.

"What on earth is the matter with you?" said Lady Erythea, raising her ear-trumpet.

For once Alexander was at a loss. He had turned very pale. Georgina came nobly to his rescue.

"Alexander," she said faintly, yet articulately, "has asked me to be his wife." And, with desperate confusion, she added—"may I?"

The ear-trumpet clattered on the gravel. Lady Erythea gathered Georgina into a triumphant embrace.

"My dear child," she exclaimed, kissing Georgina warmly on both cheeks, "I am delighted!" Lady Erythea released her and kissed Alexander. "You have made me very, very happy. The match is in every way ideal. Alexander, you will have just such a wife as I should have chosen for you—and I never thought you would have the sense to choose one at all. My dear Aimee, your excellent father, I am sure, will be as pleased about this as I am."

Georgina felt her knees giving way. She stooped and recovered the ear-trumpet.

"W-would you mind not telling anybody for just a day or two?" she said desperately. "We have told you, but we—I—feel—"

Lady Erythea smiled.

'Foolish, romantic child!" she said, patting Georgina's cheek. "Well, well—we shall see."

She turned and disappeared towards the house. The betrothed couple looked at each other. Alexander squared his big shoulders.

"What on earth will happen now?" said Georgina faintly.

Alexander's reply was practical. He lifted her suddenly off her feet and kissed her.

"I don't care what happens!" announced Alexander. And he kissed her again.

CHAPTER XXI

A New Partnership.

"It rains all the time in this country," said Billy, discontentedly, "except when you want it to."

He addressed the remark to the dry and unresponsive soil. Billy's attitude at the moment was unusual. He was close to the footpath along which he had wheeled the Sphinx, after the encounter with the motorcycle thieves on the night of the burglary.

That event was now many days old, yet no rain had fallen in the meantime and here and there the track of the Sphinx's tires was faintly visible in the dried mud—to anyone who had unusually good eyes.

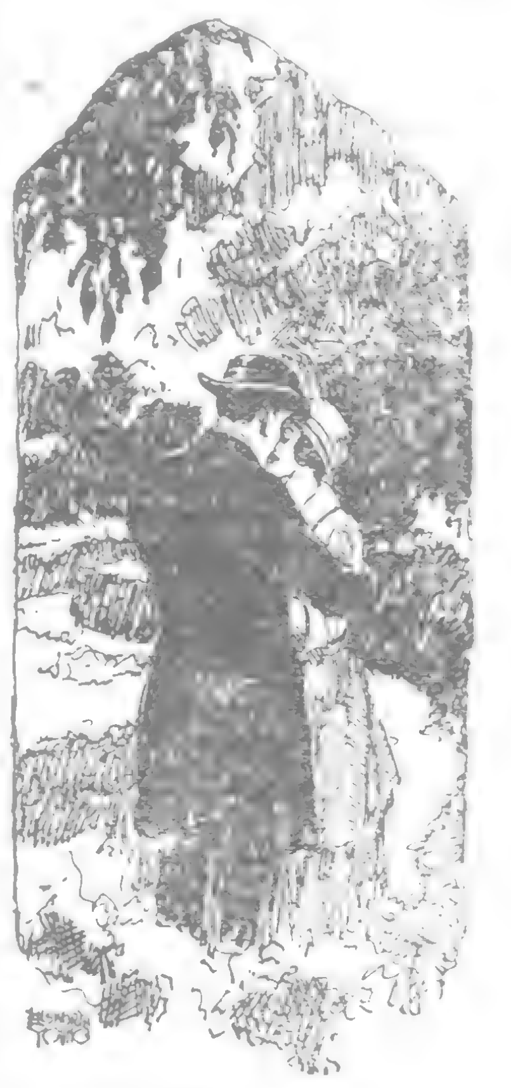
"If they've got a Scotland Yard sharp down here now," reflected Billy, "and he goes over the ground, it's just possible he might see what that fool inspector at Stanhoe never tumbled to. That there were two motorcy[illegible] not one, at the place where Ja[illegible] Climber got ditched. If t[illegible] track up the Sphinx now [illegible] be mighty awkward. They [illegible]nect her with Aimee an[illegible] I guess it's an outside cha[illegible]

The slight impression of [illegible] a little to the right of the pat[illegible] his eye. It had passed over [illegible] mole hill, and was clearly [illegible] Billy paused, and inspected it [illegible] new interest. The fast[illegible] countenance changed; he w[illegible] on hands and knees, and lo[illegible] closely indeed.

"Snakes!" exclaimed Billy [illegible] and quartered the ground car[illegible] a considerable distance in [illegible]rection. The ground was [illegible] show any continuous track [illegible] hills were plentiful, and [illegible]ther on he found another [illegible] showing the print of a tire.

"It's the same. And not the S[illegible] tire, by a mile!" said Billy, kn[illegible] brow. "This one was stee[illegible]

With growing perplexity [illegible] close examination of the soil, and [illegible]ently discovered other traces. There were a few footprints and, faint though they were, they bore some very marked characteristics.



He Kissed Her Again.

Billy stood up straight and gave a liquid whistle. The furrows in his brow deepened. He carried his investigations still farther afield, but toward the healthy common the soil was light, wind-blown sand that shifted with every fresh breeze. There were no tracks left. The seeker was at a loss.

Billy stopped and reflected rapidly.

"It came this way, whatever it was," he said. "But why on earth did it—and how? Let's start from the beginning."

He struck across country and, breaking through a hedge, came out into the blind lane where Jack the Climber's machine had crashed on the fateful night; the spot where he had recovered the emeralds, and made acquaintance with Calamity Kate's resourcefulness.

The muddy lane still showed slight traces, very much mixed up and trampled, of the place where the thieves' machine had fallen; the ruts were now dried and hard. Billy also recognized what were evidently the hoof marks of the Stanhoe police.

"A herd of steers wouldn't have made more mess," said Billy. "And Panke found nothing after all, or he'd have— Well, I can't blow much, either. I've been here twice since, but never got wise to it till now."

He turned back down the lane toward the highway, his eyes noting the smallest details of the ground.

"Here's my track; pretty near washed out. And here's the other's. That cycle was a big Indian, by what little I saw of it. And likely it was half crippled when it got away. And here it got on the high road, and headed straight on past Jervaulx again. That's mighty queer. I always reckoned they'd have gone the other way. Something must have turned them."

> "I can't let you go!" said Billy, wildly. "You're the darling of the world!"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Obedience is the price of spiritual knowledge.

MAY

L 912

0604

CHEVROLET

for Economical Transportation

OF

Farm Products

Modern, progressive farmers, being also business men, now depend on fast cheap motor transportation to save time, save products and get the money.

Chevrolet Superior Light Delivery, with four post body was built especially for farm needs. It has the space and power for a big load, which it moves fast at a very low cost per mile.

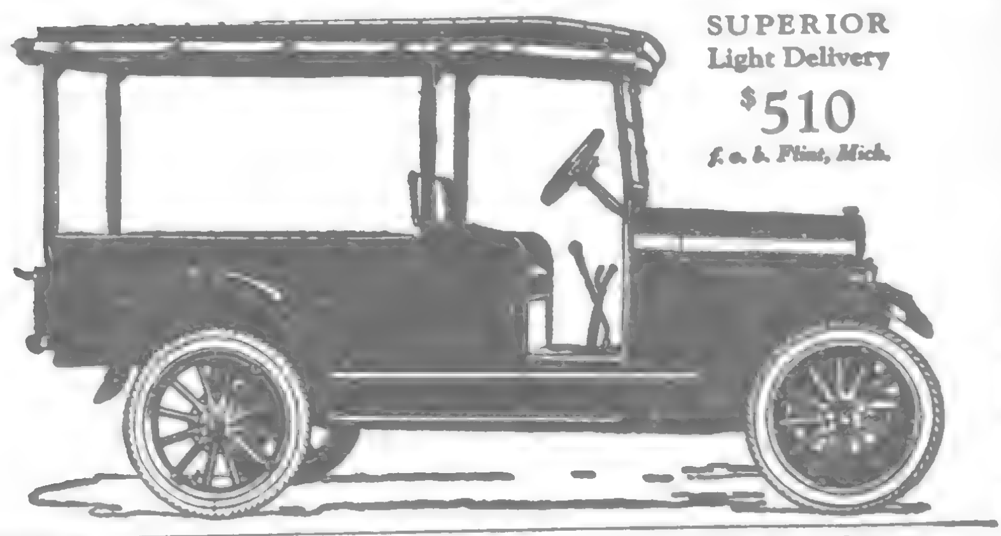
For heavy work, Chevrolet Utility Express Truck at only $575, chassis only, offers remarkable value. Fits any standard truck body.

Prices f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

Superior 2-Pass. Roadster	$510
Superior 5-Pass. Touring	525
Superior 2-Pass. Utility Coupe	680
Superior 4-Pass. Sedanette	850
Superior 5-Pass. Sedan	860
Superior Light Delivery	510
Superior Commercial Chassis	425
Utility Express Truck Chassis	575

Chevrolet Motor Company
Division of General Motors Corporation
Detroit, Michigan

Dealers and Service Stations Everywhere



SUPERIOR
Light Delivery
$510
f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

Long and Honorable Record.

Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, deputy chief of staff of the United States army, is retiring from active service. During his 34 years of army life he was promoted from a "buck private" to second in command. He has twice received the Distinguished Service medal from the government, and was decorated by Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy, Montenegro and Panama.

Cuticura for Sore Hands.

Soak hands on retiring in the hot suds of Cuticura Soap, dry and rub in Cuticura Ointment. Remove surplus Ointment with tissue paper. This is only one of the things Cuticura will do if Soap, Ointment and Talcum are used for all toilet purposes.—Advertisement.

Such assistance as one's friends may give is seldom satisfactory. The best way is not to require it.

There's always room at the top; people will not live in attics if they can help it.

Greater Demand for Grapes.

Shipments of grapes in 1922 from the three leading grape-growing states in the East—New York, Michigan and Pennsylvania—were double their average annual shipments, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture. New York shipped 7,484 cars, compared with an average of 3,584 for the years 1817-1921; Michigan shipped 5,833 cars, compared with an average of 2,012, and Pennsylvania, 1,514, compared with 737.

No ugly, grimy streaks on the clothes when Red Cross Ball Blue is used. Good bluing gets good results. All grocers carry it.—Advertisement.

Basket Fireless Cooker.

A fireless cooker in basket form has been invented for conveying food that has to be served hot in out-of-door public places.

No man is smart enough to tell his own son anything when he leaves college.

Canada Offers "Last Chance" for Virgin Farms

THINK of what you could produce on a farm of virgin fertility, without the burden of high-acreage cost. Think of what 20-to-40 bushel wheat would mean to you under these conditions, and of dairying and stock raising on cheap pasture land. Land pays for itself in a few crops—no artificial fertilizer—no heavy investment. You have envied the farmer who got his start when land was cheap. Here's your chance, perhaps your last chance, for the same brand of prosperity.

Western Canada—Your Opportunity!

Western Canada is the farmer's land of opportunity. Thousands of settlers who started not many years ago with little or nothing, are today the owners of fine farms, with comfortable homes and barns, thoro'bred stock, dairy herds—all the marks of prosperity. Yet land is not dear—only $15 to $20 an acre for rich, virgin, prairie convenient to railways. Land is not dear in Western Canada—yet—because there is so much of it. But many settlers are expected in 1923, and now is your opportunity, before the best farms are taken. Get started. Taxes are reduced, not raised, on land brought under cultivation. On farm buildings, improvements, machinery, personal effects, automobile, etc., there is no tax at all. Canada wants workers—it wants its land farmed—and the farmers, through their municipal councils, have practical control of all local taxation.

Special Renter's Plan—Buy Out of Profits

To aid and encourage the honest worker with perhaps little capital, the Canadian Government has a "Renter's Plan", whereby one may work a new or improved farm—"Try it out" for several years if desired—and buy a farm of his own out of profits.

Thirty-Two Years to Pay

For the benefit of those wishing to buy land, a national non-profit sharing organization—the Canada Colonization Association—has been established, with head office at Winnipeg, and United States office at St. Paul. This Association offers selected land convenient to railways—much of it at $15 to $20 per acre—on very small cash payment; no further payment until third year; balance extended over thirty years, but purchaser may pay up and obtain title at any time, if desired. Interest six per cent on deferred payments.

Special Excursion Rates to Western Canada

In order that you may inspect the land—see for yourself—judge of its value and fertility—special excursion trips of inspection will leave United States points on the first and third Tuesday of each month. Single fare plus $2 for the round trip, available from all principal centers. Take advantage of these low railroad rates to inspect for yourself the opportunities which Western Canada has to offer you. Seeing is believing. The nearest Canadian Government Agency will give you all information. The men in charge are Government officials, interested only in the service of the prospective settler. We help you find your opportunity. Let us know something of your position and receive free book with maps and information how special railroad rates can be arranged for a trip of inspection. Mail the coupon.

Free Homesteads are still available in some localities.

Canada welcomes tourists—come and see our country for yourself. No Passports required.

Address Nearest Agent: W. S. Nethery, Desk W, 83 E. Rich St., Columbus, Ohio; M. J. Johnstone, Desk W, 116 Monument Place, Indianapolis, Ind.

Please send me your free book on Canada, I am particularly interested in { } Western Canada { } Eastern Canada { } Renting

{ } [illegible] { } [illegible] { } Dairying
{ } Special Railway Rates { } Diversified Farming { } Buying

Name........................
R.F.D.No. or St. Address........................
P.O........................ State........................

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

Copyright, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.

LESSON FOR MAY 20

ELIJAH, THE BRAVE REFORMER

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 18:17-46

GOLDEN TEXT—Choose you this day whom ye will serve.—Joshua 24:15.

REFERENCE MATERIAL—Malachi 4:5, 6; Matthew 11:14; 16:14; Luke 1:17; John 1:21-25; James 5:17, 18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Elijah and the Poor Woman.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Elijah's Wonderful Victory.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Elijah Defied Wickedness.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Modern Reformers Can Learn from Elijah.

I. Elijah Meets Ahab. (vv. 17, 18). At the Lord's command Elijah showed himself to Ahab. When Elijah last was seen by Ahab he announced that rain would only be given by his word (17:1). In connection with the prophet's appearance before the king, rain was promised.

1. Ahab's Question. "Art thou he that troubleth Israel?" (v. 17). Ahab's aim was to intimidate Elijah, to awe him into submission.

2. Elijah's Answer. (v. 18). He denied the charge and boldly declared that the calamity which had befallen the nation was caused by the idolatry of Ahab and his family.

II. Elijah's Challenge. (vv. 19-24).

1. The People Assembled. (vv. 19, 20). The king convened the people at the urgent request of Elijah.

2. Elijah's Ringing Call to Decision (vv. 21-24). (1) The question asked, "Who is your God, Baal or the Lord?" (v. 21). Many of the people had not wholly forsaken God. They attempted to worship both God and Baal. Many today are halting between two opinions. They are halting between self and Savior, sin and holiness, mammon and God. (2) The silence of the people. (v. 21). This may have been because of fear of the king or of ignorance, for many were of the opinion that to be religious was the only thing necessary, irrespective of the being worshiped. There is all the difference between merely worshiping and really worshiping God that there is between hell and heaven. (3) The method of decision (vv. 22-24). Two sacrifices were to be provided—one to be offered to Baal, the other to God. The god who answered by fire was to be the God. The people consented that this was a fair test. Accepted sacrifice is the grand and supreme test by which God is calling upon men everywhere to make the decision between Christ and the heathen gods.

III. The Test Applied. (vv. 25-20).

1. The Offering by the Prophets of Baal (vv. 25-29). Elijah gave the prophets of Baal the first opportunity to prove to the people as to whether Baal was a real god. The real difference in the issue of prayer is the person to whom prayer is made.

2. The Offering by Elijah (vv. 30-39). (1) The people invited near (v. 30). His object was for them to see the entire proceedings in order to fully grasp the genuineness of the test. (2). The altar repairs (vv. 30-32). Elijah took twelve stones representing the united nation. (3). The offering on the altar (vv. 33-35). After the bullock was in place he had four barrels of water three times emptied upon the sacrifice and the wood so as to fill the trench about the altar. So sure was Elijah that God's power was sufficient that he heaped difficulty upon difficulty. (4). Elijah's prayer (vv. 36, 37). (a) It was based upon covenants (v. 36). The foundation upon which all real prayer rests is covenant relationship. (b) Its object was God's exaltation (v. 36). Elijah was jealous for God's glory. His supreme desire was to honor and magnify the Lord. (c) It was for the salvation of the people. (v. 37). His heart yearned after Israel. He was most desirous that they should come to God. (5) The result (vv. 38, 39). (a) The fire of the Lord fell and consumed not only the sacrifice but the wood, stones and dust, even licking up the water in the trench. (b) The people fell on their faces and confessed that the Lord was the God.

IV. The Execution of Baal's Prophets. (v. 40).

The reason for this drastic action was that Israel's government was a theocracy. God was their king. Idolatry was treason against the king. These false prophets were traitors to God and therefore should die.

V. God's Prophet Vindicated. (vv. 41-46).

The proof that Elijah was God's prophet was incomplete till rain came. Israel under his ministry had now turned back to God and God made known unto them His graciousness.

How Much Is Lost.

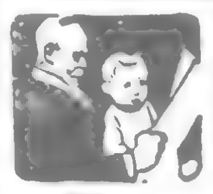
Would that we could at once paint with the eyes!—in the long way from the eye, through the arm, to the pencil, how much is lost!—Lessing.

Our Wants.

The stoical schemes of supplying our wants by lopping off our desires is like cutting off our feet when we want shoes.—Swift.

Deserving Trust.

He deserves small trust who is not privy counselor to himself.—Ford.



Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

MISS HAM'S VERSES

"Grunt, grunt, squeal, squeal," said Miss Ham. "There are such nice words that rhyme with pig that I do believe I shall think up some verses and then, when I have thought them up, I will recite them to you all."

"Grunt, grunt, squeal, squeal," laughed Porky Pig. "You say that as though it would be a treat for us to listen to them."

"And so it will be," said Miss Ham. "It will be a great treat, grunt grunt."

"You'd better make up your verses first," said Pinky Pig. "You can't tell how they might turn out. That is my advice to you."

"Of course I didn't ask your advice," said Miss Ham.

"But I'm giving it to you free," said Pinky Pig. "That shows my fine, generous nature."

"Oh, does it, indeed?" squealed Miss Ham. "Creatures who never give anything free except advice I haven't so much use for, and this is the first time I have ever known you to give anything free."

"Well, it is just as well to make a beginning," said Pinky Pig. "I begin by giving free advice—I can't tell what I may end up in giving."

"I can guess, though," said Porky Pig.

"I can guess, too," said Sammy Sausage.

"So can I, squeal, squeal," said Sir Percival Pork.

"And I can guess, grunt, grunt," said Sir Benjamin Bacon.

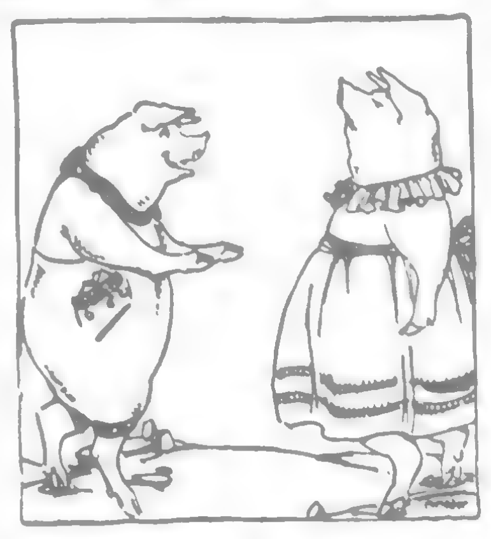
"I can guess and my guess will be right," said Brother Bacon.

"I am sure I can guess, if my child takes after me," said Pinky Pig's mother.

"So can I," said Mrs. Pink Pig.

"And so can I, squeal, squeal," said Mrs. Pinky Pig.

"Well, instead of all talking about being able to guess what I may end up in giving—guess, then!" squealed Pinky Pig.



"I Don't Ask Your Advice."

And all the pigs grunted and squealed, "You'll end up by not giving anything more than the advice you start off giving."

And Pinky Pig grunted and twisted his tail, but he had nothing to say for he knew that this was the truth.

"You're all talking so much and you're not giving me the chance to recite my verses," said Miss Ham.

"But you said you were going to think them up first," said Porky Pig.

"So I did, but it doesn't take me forever to think up verses," said Miss Ham.

"Gracious," said Porky, "do you mean to tell me you have thought up more than one already?"

"Most certainly," said Miss Bacon.

"Well, did I ever," said Porky Pig.

"You'd better recite them," said Pinky Pig, "and then, as I said, we'll be able to tell and you'll be able to tell how they've turned out. Just because there are a lot of words which rhyme with pig doesn't mean that your verses will be beautiful. There are words which rhyme with love and many a poet has used them, but it all depends upon the poet or the verse writer what sort of verses they become."

"Let her recite them," said Porky Pig.

So Miss Bacon twisted her tail and recited:

It's old, old news to hear that a pig.
In the good old mud just loves to dig.
But old news is good news, in this case
at least,
For there's nothing such fun as a mud-
digging feast.

"Fair," said Pinky Pig. "Only fair. And not particularly true, for there are lots of things more fun than mud-digging. Eating, for example."

"Give her a little poetic freedom," said Porky Pig. "In poetry she's not supposed to be too exact. Pray continue," Porky added.

I love to grunt and I love to squeal,
But most of all I love to feel
That the farmer soon will come to feed
Those who revel in their greed.

"Better," said Pinky Pig. "Slightly better."

And then Miss Ham recited her last one:

There are those who say that love is sweet,
There are those who say it is a treat
An old, old friend again to meet,
But I say it's sweet to eat!

And the pigs thought this was the best of all.

Collective, All Right.

Chief Gumper—A teacher asked a boy to give a collective noun, as sheep, reindeer, etc. After deep thought, the boy replied: "Hash.

Children Cry for

Fletcher's
CASTORIA

MOTHER! Fletcher's Castoria is a harmless Substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups, especially prepared to relieve Infants one month old to Children all ages of

Constipation
Flatulency
Diarrhoea
Wind Colic
To Sweeten Stomach
Regulate Bowels

Aids in the assimilation of Food, promoting Cheerfulness, Rest, and Natural Sleep without Opiates

To avoid imitations, always look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.
Proven directions on each package. Physicians everywhere recommend it.

Pension Figures.

According to a report from the United States treasury, payments for the relief of veterans of the World war so far this year have been nearly double the amount in the same period last year. The sum of $160,178,906 was paid to veterans in the four months from July 1 to October 31, 1922. In the corresponding four months of 1921 payments to veterans were $91,679,945.

CATARRH

Catarrh is a Local disease greatly influenced by Constitutional conditions.
HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an Ointment which gives Quick Relief by local application, and the Internal Medicine, a Tonic, which acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces and assists in ridding your System of Catarrh.
Sold by druggists for over 40 Years.
F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

His Mistake.

He—Do you know I'm afraid I passed you the other day, Miss Green? Immediately afterwards I realized to my horror that I knew you.—London Punch.

To insure glistening-white table linens, use Red Cross Ball Blue in your laundry. It never disappoints. At all good grocers.—Advertisement.

Origin of "Bungalow."

"Bungalow" comes from "bonglaw," meaning Bengalese, or built in the style of the Bengals, an East Indian tribe.

No, my dear, a buttress is not a female buttermaker.

TOO LATE

Death only a matter of short time Don't wait until pains and aches become incurable diseases. Avoid painful consequences by taking

LATHROP'S
GOLD MEDAL
HAARLEM OIL
CAPSULES

The world's standard remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles—the National Remedy of Holland since 1696. Guaranteed. Three sizes, all druggists.
Look for the name Gold Medal on every box and accept no imitation

IMPORTED German Male Canaries
Guaranteed singers, $3.50 each. Write for special offer. E. C. VAHLE, Importer, 315 Madison Street, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Fox Caught in Trap.

Caught in a trap in Lincolnshire, England, a fox dragged the trap for two miles and sheltered for the night in a disused dog's kennel on a farm. It was discovered in the morning, and showed no fear but only gratitude when the trap was taken off and the wounded foot dressed. The animal had almost to be driven away.

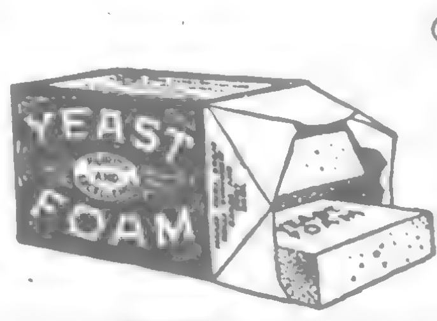
No Talent.

John—"You say Bert doesn't have much of a line." Don—"No, he can't even string a banjo."

Yeast Foam Home bread-makers everywhere prefer it

The best way to learn to cook—begin making bread.

Send for free booklet "The Art of Baking Bread"



Northwestern Yeast Co.
1730 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago

Make your Town Spotless Town
MORGAN'S SAPOLIO
Use SAPOLIO

Clean Up!
and keep it up—
Make all house-cleaning easy with Sapolio.
Large Cake—No Waste
Enoch Morgan's Sons Co. New York

SHINOLA
AMERICA'S HOME SHOE POLISH
Black - Tan - White - Ox-Blood - Brown

SHINOLA and the Shinola Home Set should be in every home. Every member of the family can use it for it gives the quick easy shine. The shine that preserves leather and resists weather. SHINOLA in the handy quick opening box with the key.

It's easy to shine with the Home Set. "The Shine for Mine"

L 912

MAY

Get Your
Daily Bread - - Welcome Flours
at the J. C. Bailey Store St. Joe
Made by G. A. WARD of the
ALBION ROLLER MILLS. Albion Indiana

HERE AND THERE

Patronize The Advertisers.

Miss Mary Smith of Spencerville is working in the Brown restaurant.

Found: 1923 Indiana auto license plate. Call at News office.

Mrs. Paul Carpenter is entertaining a small neice from Butler for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Davis and baby of Auburn were Sunday guests of H. M. Widney and wife.

Mrs. Catherine Curie was a Sunday guest of her son, Grover Curie and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm Staman, jr. had as Sunday guests Mr. and Mrs. Ashton Staman of Auburn and Merritt Sechler.

Merritt Milliman and Miss Finney of Fort Wayne, spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Willis Beaber.

Miss Iris Gamble of Lima, Ohio, is here for a week's visit. She was a Saturday night guest of Miss Mary Armstrong.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Fetter and daughter of Edon, Ohio, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Smith.

Dr. and Mrs. B. S. Sheffer spent from Friday until Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Hadsell at Hicksville.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Woodcox and two children and Mrs. Ella Gill spent Sunday with Hicksville friends.

Miss Martha George and Miss Evelyn Knight were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Craig Sheffer.

Miss Rosella Mendalshon is improving from her recent illness. Miss Gladys Layman is taking Miss Mendalshon's place as clerk at Tope's store.

Mr. and Mrs. Claud Mason and daughter were Sunday dinner guests of Ella Wilmot and wife, and Mr. and Mrs. George Wilmot and children were afternoon guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Terman had as Saturday night and Sunday guests Miss Mabel Crawford and Elwood Bunts of Williams County, Ohio.

Harold Curtis and wife and James Edwards and wife of Albion were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. V. Widney. They remained and attended the baccalaureate sermon at the M.P. church in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Arden Imhoff and two daughters, Lois Jean and Louise of Pleasant Lake, and Mrs. Frank Curie and daughters, Grace and Ruth, were Sunday guests of Jacob Jechler and wife.

Mrs. Alice Warner and daughter, Mrs. H. E. Langley entertained Mr. and Mrs. Lee O. Tustison and Mrs. Katherine Mahoney of Defiance, and Mrs. H. C. Hathaway and son Clayton of Auburn, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Borthwick and three children arrived home Monday from Seabreeze, Florida, where they spent the past winter. They came through by auto and were eleven days on the way.

C. R Baumgartner, D V M
Veterinarians
OFFICE and HOSPITAL
SPENCERVILLE. - IND.
Phones —Office No. 7
F W Silberg, D V M

Mrs. F. M. Thornton and children visited friends in Garrett and Hicksville last Thursday and Friday.

Decoration Day services will be held at the Coburn's Corners Church Wednesday morning, May 30th.

Mrs. Catherine Sandree, 81 years old, fell at the home of her neice, Mrs. E. P. Brown, Friday evening, badly fracturing her right wrist.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Buckingham and Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Folts, were Sunday afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Ulm.

F. A. Jenkins and wife spent Sunday afternoon at Butler with Mrs. Jenkins brother, Henry Maxwell, who is very ill.

Mrs. Nan Lysher began working at the Roy Wade home Monday, where she will help in the care of Mrs. Wade who is an invalid.

Paul Krabill has been releaving the operators at Republic, Ohio, the past few days for their vacations.

Charles Collins has returned from Wabash hospital at Peru, where he underwent an opeaation recently. He is getting along fine.

Elijah Inhofe and Mr. and Mrs. Ora Inhofe of Butler, were Friday evening guests of Sam Armstrong and wife. They also attended the Senior play.

The B. & O. No. 6 "Capitol Limited" passes through St. Joe at 5:45 p m. daily, also No. 5 at 4:58 a. m. daily. These are two of the finest fastest trains in the world.

George Swineford, Fred Hull, Fred Thornton and Floyd Ridgway attended the boxing exhibition held at the New Washington A. C. Gym at Fort Wayne, Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Reasoner and two children and Russell Bishop, wife and baby all of Elkhart, were over Sunday guests of Alfred Reasoner and wife and Mrs. Anna Dilley. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker and children of Jackson Township were also Sunday guests in the Dilley home.

Mrs. Flora Wilmot returned home Sunday from a week's visit with relatives at Hillsdale, Mich. She was accompanied home by Mrs. Rose Geaugue and baby, who will remain for a week's visit, and by Miss Elva Wilmot and Melvin Miller, who returned to Hillsdale the same day.

Marvin Cole and family of Hicksville, Mrs. James Edwards, and Mrs. Harold Curtis of Albion, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Balts of Spencerville, Mrs. R. F. Moffett and daughter Jessie, Mrs. B. V. Widney, Miss Josephine Johnson and Merritt Sechler, were all afternoon callers in the Byron Widney home, Sunday.

Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Minnick drove to Grant County Saturday, the occasion being a surprise on the former's brother Henry Minnick's birthday anniversary. A number of relatives were present. They also visited his sister, Mrs. Oscar Haynes. They returned home Sunday.

George Seevers and family of near Logan, Ohio, spent Sunday with Tom Brunson and wife. Their daughter, Bonita, who had been in the Brunson home the past week returned home with them. Mrs. Clara Brunson of Newville, who had been caring for Mrs. Tom Brunson and baby, also returned to her home Thursday.

MOTHERS—
Don't you know you can turn a distressed, feverish, coughing child into a comfortable and happily smiling one simply by giving
CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY
No Narcotics

Patronize the advertisers.

Try a want ad in the News.

Repair work has been started on the Paul Curie residence.

E. R Kinsey is rapidly making ready to have his new storage shed moved on his business lot.

Ed Leighty has had the business name painted across the front of his store.

The ladies of the M. P. Church cleared $86 02 from their meals served during the convention last week. The money is to go for church improvements.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hart had as Sunday guests Roscoe Hart and family, W. Z. Hathaway and family, of South Bend and F. M. Daub and family of Hicksville.

Mrs. Rose Widney entertained the Leaders class of the M. P Sunday School, Monday. Mrs. Violet Johnson is the teacher. Seventeen members were present to enjoy the excellent pot luck dinner that was served.

Charles Koch and wife entertained at Sunday dinner their sons, Stanley of Huntington and Joseph of Fort Wayne, also Miss LaVerne Rhoads of Spencerville and Frank Yants of near Harlan. While as supper guests they had Mr. and Mrs. Frank Beams.

Get Acquainted Tour

Blazing a trial of good-will over approximately 275 miles of Indiana, northern Ohio and southern Michigan, the annual "Get Acquainted" tour of the Wholesalers & Jobbers Bureau of the Fort Wayne Chamber of Commerce will include St. Joe in its itinerary, which will occupy three days, June 5-6-7, 1923. The visitors will arrive here Tuesday morning, June 5.

Had Arm Amputated

Very unfavorable reports have reached us of the condition of D. C. McCann and Henry Reihnol, who are suffering in the Garrett hospital. Mr. McCann was forced to have his arm amputated Tuesday to prevent the further spread of poison. Henry, who is suffering from bullet wounds, remains in a very weak state.

Baby Clinics

In the baby clinics held last week under the auspices of the State Board of Health, there were forty children at Spencerville examined on Monday and thirty examined at St. Joe on Tuesday. Over two hundred people attended the illustrated lecture and program at Spencerville Monday evening

Dr. Bonnell Souder of Auburn, the county chairman, was present at both clinics. Dr. May Allen of the State Board of Health, had charge and two professional nurses accompanied him who are sent out by the State Board. The Spencerville local and township committees assisted there and the St. Joe local committee assisted here.

THE W. L. DOUGLAS

For Sale Only At
Chaneys'
Auburn, - - - - Ind.

Legal Publications

Notice Of Administration

ESTATE No 2724

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the undersigned has been appointed by the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, of the State of Indiana, Administrator of the Estate of Dallas M. Kelley, deceased, late of said County.

Said Estate is supposed to be solvent.

Clyde G. Rectenwall
Administrator.
April 27, 1923.
Atkinson & Husselman
Attorneys

Notice of Final Settlement of Estate

Cause No. 2532.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to all persons interested in the estate of Elmer Moody deceased, to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held at Auburn, Indiana, on the 7th day of June 1923, and show cause, if any, why my Final Settlement Accounts with the estate of said decedent should not be approved; and said heirs, and all others interested, are notified to then and there make proof of heirship or claim and receive their distributive shares.

Witness, my name, this 10th day of May, 1923.

WM. G. ERICK, Executor,
Atkinson & Husselman
Attorneys.

Notice of Final Settlement of Estate

Estate No. 2570.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to all persons interested in the Estate of William J. Orr, deceased, to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held in Auburn, Indiana, on the 9th day of June, 1923, and show cause if any, why my Final Settlement Accounts with the estate of said decedent should not be approved; and said heirs and all others interested, are notified to then and there make proof of heirship or claim and receive their distributive shares.

Witness, My Name, this 9th day of May, 1923.

Clyde E. Hart, Administrator,
Link & McClintock,
Attorneys.

For good glasses see Griest at American Building Hicksville, Ohio.

Greeks Worthy of High Honor.

We must keep hold of two facts: First, that the Greeks of the Fifth century produced some of the noblest poetry and art, the finest political thinking, the most vital philosophy known to the world; second, that the people who heard and saw, perhaps even the people who produced these wonders, were separated by a thin and precarious interval from the savage.—Sir Gilbert Murray.

Bible Thoughts for the Week

Sunday.

RULER OVER ALL.—Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty; for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all.—I Chronicles 29:11.

Monday.

ABOUT THROWING STONES.—Master, this woman was taken in adultery. Moses commanded us that such should be stoned: but what sayest thou? . . . He said unto them, He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her.—John 8:4, 5, 7.

Tuesday.

GOD'S WORD STANDS.—The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: but the word of our God shall stand forever.—Isaiah 40:8.

Wednesday.

THE KINGDOM WITHIN.—The Kingdom of God cometh not with observation: Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you. Luke 17:20, 21.

Thursday.

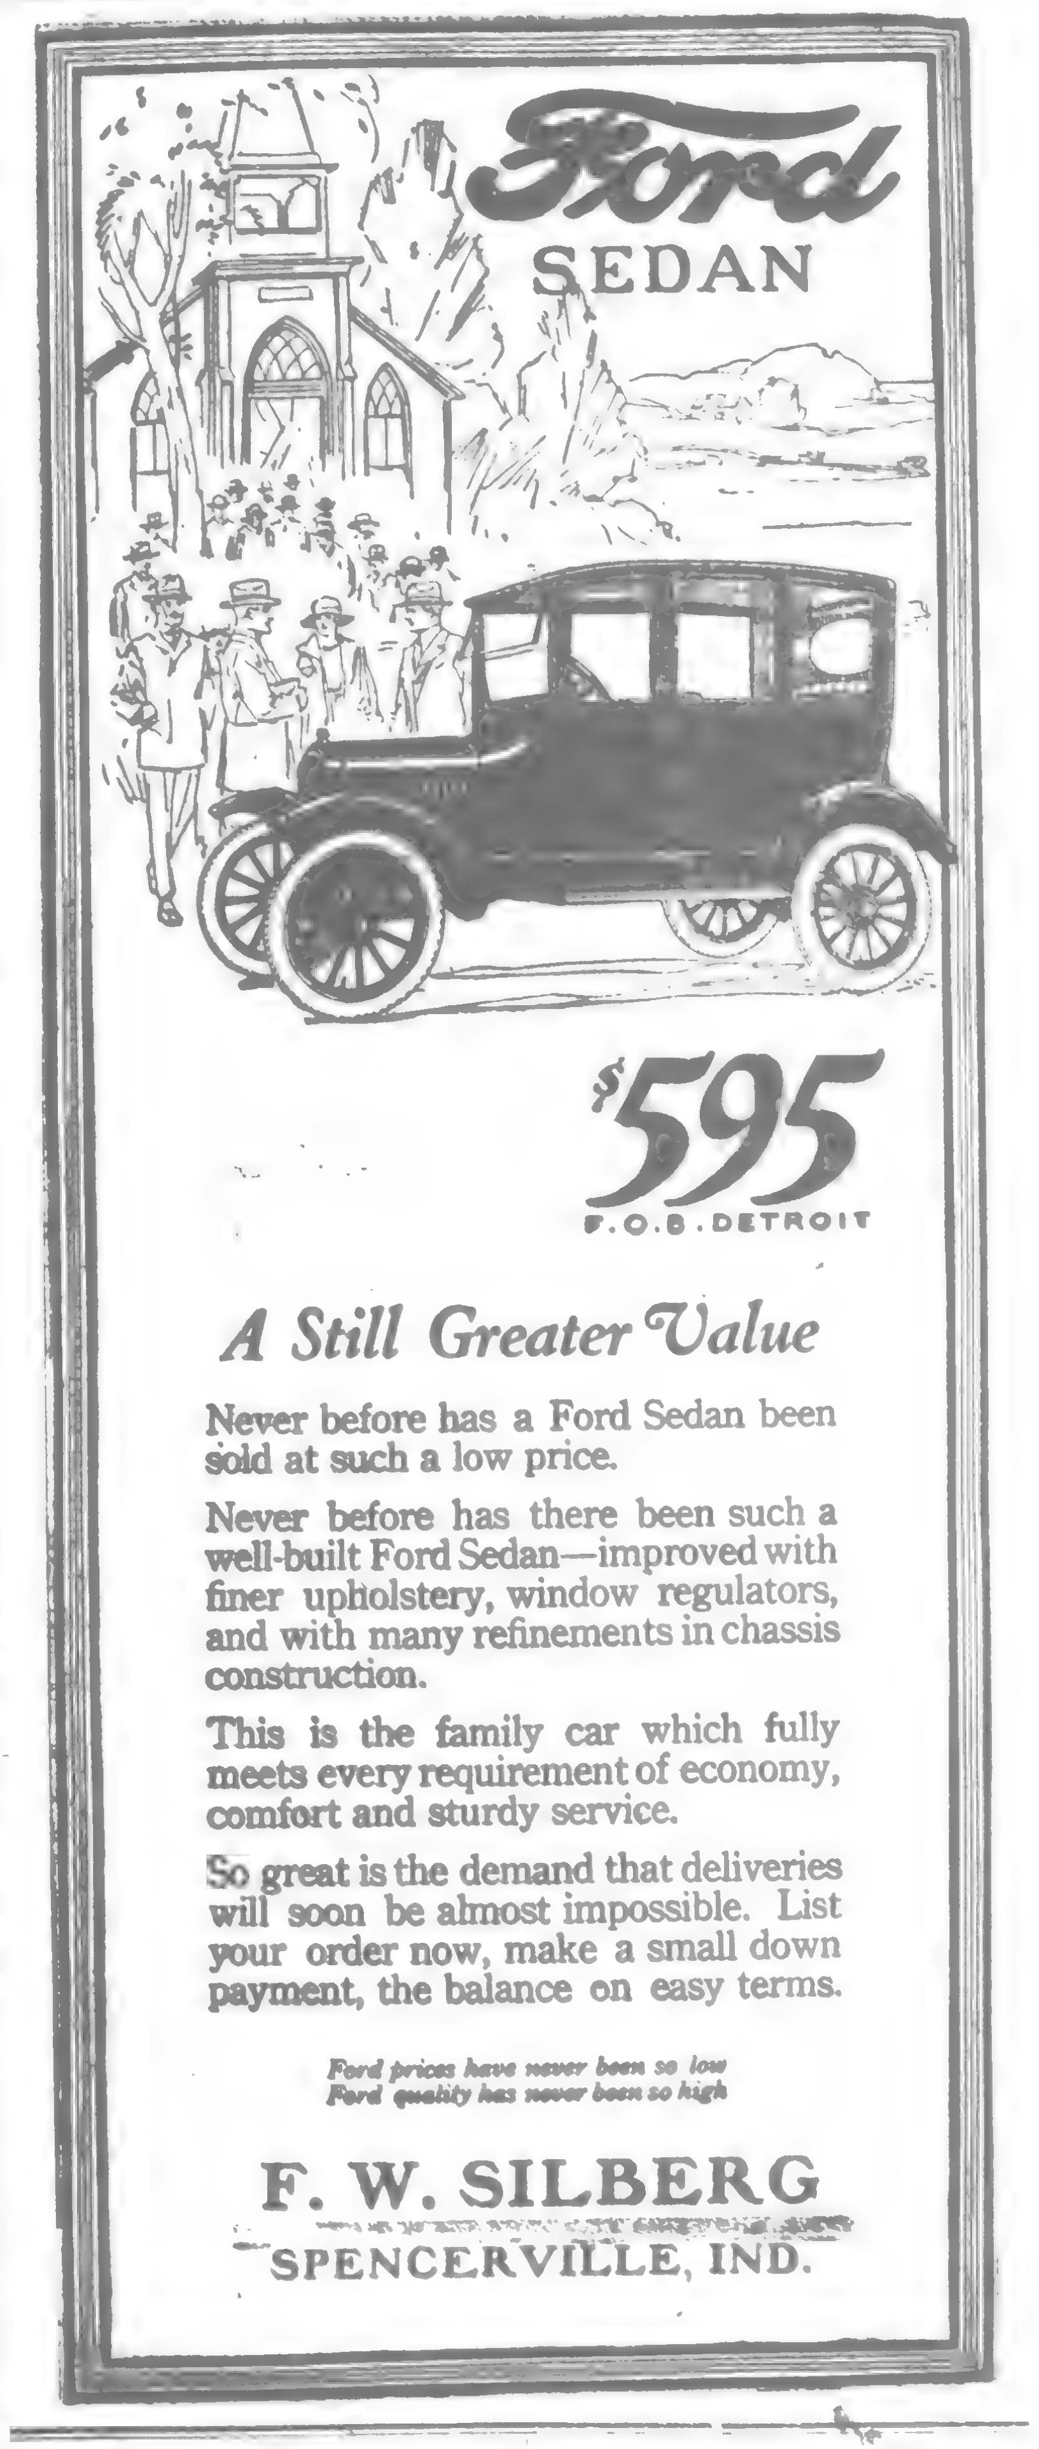
SAFEGUARDED.—He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways.—Psalm 91:11.

Friday.

TEACH ME.—Teach me to do thy will; for thou art my God; thy spirit is good; lead me into the land of uprightness.—Psalm 143:10.

Saturday.

TRUST HIM ALWAYS.—Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass.—Psalm 37:5.



$595
F.O.B. DETROIT

A Still Greater Value

Never before has a Ford Sedan been sold at such a low price.

Never before has there been such a well-built Ford Sedan—improved with finer upholstery, window regulators, and with many refinements in chassis construction.

This is the family car which fully meets every requirement of economy, comfort and sturdy service.

So great is the demand that deliveries will soon be almost impossible. List your order now, make a small down payment, the balance on easy terms.

Ford prices have never been so low
Ford quality has never been so high

F. W. SILBERG
SPENCERVILLE, IND.

FUEL AND OIL REQUIREMENTS OF PLOW TRACTORS STUDIED

Fuel and oil requirements for two-plow and three-plow tractors on Corn Belt farms, when figured on the basis of acres covered or other work done per day, are practically the same for both sizes, according to the investigations of the United States Department of Agriculture in costs of operating tractors. While the three-plow outfit with its more powerful motor requires a correspondingly greater amount of fuel and oil than the two-plow outfit when performing the same kind of work under identical conditions, the larger amount of fuel and oil is offset in the greater amount of work done per day.

For the heavy operations, such as plowing and disking, the two-plow outfits require an average of about 18 gallons of fuel per day and four quarts of oil and the three-plow outfits about 23 gallons of fuel and five gallons of oil. By careful operation the amounts used on works where the tractor is not loaded to capacity can be reduced somewhat. There are instances, however, where an operator of the smaller outfit has used as much as 25 gallons of fuel and three gallons of oil per day, which is as much or more than operators of most three-plow tractors use. When an instance of this kind occurs it is usually the fault of the operator in not having the carburetor and oiling systems properly adjusted.

The New Question.

The question used to be: Can a man love more than one woman at one time? The modern question is: "How can he help it?—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

38 Years Ago

From Our Files

Dr. Sheffer will have a fine office when completed.

Prof. Holmes of Spencerville is conducting a writing school at this place.

After the first of July the St. Joe Post Offiice will be a money order office.

Dr. Bowman went to Philadelphia this week to attend a course of medical lectures.

Howard Northrup and B. F. Hoyt went to Kansas this week.

William Hollabaugh has purchased an interest in the saw mill at Spencerville.

William Leighty is having a new fence built around the hotel.

August Kinsey has finished plastering his house and will move his family here in a few days.

While Quince Fusselman's horse was hitched in front of the store one day last week someone tied a arge placard to it which read, "Oats wanted, inquire within."

John Widney will move to town in a couple of weeks.

Ves Wise of Spencerville is working for William Leighty.

Formation of Habit.

The more irksome any habit is in its formation, the more pleasantly and satisfactorily it sticks to you when formed.—Thomas Hughes.

CLEAN UP & PAINT UP

MAY

L 912

606

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXXVII ST. JOE DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, MAY 24, 1923 No. 21

The Streets to be Oiled

The business men are making plans to oil the streets on which the stores front. Each one will be solicited so much per lot as was done last year, and if the expense is less than the fund raised a refund will be made.

Probably citizens residing on Main street will make arrangements to have the oil extended its full length, which would be the proper thing to do. And it would be mighty fine for the citizens living on other streets to get busy. The cost is not great and the comfort you would enjoy in summer days would more than offset the expense.

Married at Auburn

Howard Williams, 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wid Williams, and Miss Carrie Davidson, 16 daughter of Mrs. William Henley, all of St. Joe, were married at Auburn by Rev. S. E. Slater, pastor of the Lutheran church there, last Thursday noon. The young couple will make their home in St. Joe. The groom is employed by D. P. Hindman, in road and bridge construction work, and the bride is a telephone operator. The brides's mother gave her consent to the marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lake celebrated their golden wedding anniversary recently at the home of their son, Byron, of near Harlan.

Kinsey Adds to Equipment

E. R. Kinsey is now able to give the best ambulance service available for his new Dodge Ambulance was delivered just Monday night. The vehicle not only has a fine appearance, but is built for good comfortable service. It is on the order of a large Sedan with double doors on each side. The seat beside the driver's is removable, as are the two folding seats in the center of the body, to accommodate the patient's cot.

The windows are arranged for good ventilation and it has an electric fan appliance, and corner and dome light attachments.

In case of emergency this type of car can be converted into a hearse, and easier into a passenger sedan.

Without a doubt there is the finest vehicle in this community and will be a credit to Mr. Kinsey's business and to the community at large.

Notice to Citizens

Having made two different calls for reorganization of Decoration Organization, the latter call being for Friday evening, May 18, at the M. P. Church, St. Joe, not one person of our town responded, therefore, we take it for granted the interest in St. Joe is dead and shall abandon any further effort.

H. M. Widney.

COAL

Fill up and keep filled up. Don't forget that the place to store your coal is in your bins, not in your dealer's yard, not at the mines.

Prices are now lowest of the season with all prospects of them going up, as coal is being mined below the cost of production at the present time.

We are trying to give you good advice. It is up to you to take it.

Place your orders now for the following coals:

Hocking Valley, Egg and Lump
Buffalo White Ash, none better
Hard Coal Chestnut and Egg

Please settle your last season's accounts now and make your credit good.

FEED

Hominy, Bran, Middlings, Tankage and other feeds.

The St. JOE ELEVATOR

Samuel Keesler, Mgr. Grain Dept.
Bert Jackson, Mgr. Coal Dept.

Call on us—glad to see you. Come in whether you want anything or not.

Not What He Meant

An American tourist, looking into the carter of Vesuvius, said: "Gee, it reminds one of hades." An English lady in the party replied: "My, you Americans HAVE traveled."

The tourist evidently didn't say exactly what he meant. We all make mistakes that way sometimes, but when we tell you of the reliability of our bank as a safe place for your funds, we mean exactly what we say. We have fire-proof vaults, carry burglar insurance, are conservative with our loans, and our officers and and directors are leading men of this community. With us, it's safety first—last, and all the time.

St. Joe Valley Bank---A State Bank

Convention Well Attended

The first session of the 58th annual convention of the DeKalb County Sunday School Association opened with a full house at the Christian Church Tuesday morning at 9:00 o'clock, and chairman, George E. Bcugnot, of Auburn, felt highly elated over the fact that so much interest is being taken over the county.

At 10:00 o'clock Miss Nellie C. Young, superintendent of the childrens division, Indiana Council of Religious Edncation, gave a splendid talk on "The Teacher of Children" At 11:05 Harry G. Rowe, the great state inspirationalist, delivered an address on "Training the worker."

The afternoon session was also held in the Christian church. M. A. Honline, Educational Superendent of the International Sunday Association, one of the biggest men of today in the Sunday School world, addressed the audience on the subject, "Place of the Child in Religious Education." In this first talk everyone was convinced that the reputation given the man was not overstated. Miss Young spoke on "An Opportunity," at 2;35 o'clock. After a song Mr. Rowe again talked on the subject, "Learning to Teach from the Master Teacher."

The evening session was divided between the Christian and Lutheran churches. Mr Rowe addressed a large auditorium at the former place on, "Assets, Liabilities, Investments." At the Lutheran Mr. Honline gave a fine address on "Child Nature and Child Nurture."

For the first day over 400 had registered and about 9 visiting delegates were entertained in St. Joe for the night. Most delegates came by auto and were able to return home.

A session was held at each of the three churches. The Children's Division Conference, with Mrs. Mary Knauer presiding, was held at the M. P. church Miss Young was the speaker. The Young Peoples Division Conference was held at the Christian church with Miss Dora Carnahan presiding. Mr. Honline spoke on "Some Adolescent Characteristics."

The Adult Division Conference was held at the Lutheran church with J. N. George presiding. "A Program of Service in Adnlt Classes' was the subject of Mr Rowe's address. Discussions on questions relating to each particular division was led by the speaker at their respective places.

By going to press at the usual time the News will not be able to give any details of the Wednesday afternoon and evening sessions, but we assure you that they rank with the former ones.

Mr. Rowe, Mr. Honline and Miss Young proved here that their ability to teach and lead in Sunday School work is excellent anywhere.

Lutheran Notes

Next Sunday morning at the Lutheran Church the service will be spiritual. A gospel sermon will be preached and the service will be in the interest of Christian people.

Come and worship wit hus. We are expecting a good attendance at the Sunday School at 9:30. Some special features of interest to all will be on the program. Come.

Rev. S. D. Steffey, Pastor.

Blue and Bluing Monday.

Among the answers to the question, "Why is Monday wash day?" was this one: "Because Monday is the most miserable day of the week and washing is the most miserable thing in the world. By combining these inflictions into one, the rest of the week is left clear for any other misery that may turn up."—Boston Transcript.

St. Joe Commencement

The high school commencement of the class of '23 of St. Joe was held Thursday evening at 8:00 o'clock in the Christian church. The auditorium was festooned attractively in green and white, the senior class colors, and the motto, "Education comes in cans and not in can'ts," hung in green and white letters over the platform on which the seniors, the teachers and school executives took their places during the commencement program.

The archestra of the Methodist Protestant church furnished four splendid musical selections, including the processional number in which each member of the class entered carrying a white lily, the class flower.

J. M. Hatch of South Bend, gave an inspiring commencement address in which he pointed out that success in life is not determined by our work, job or vocation, but by the way the duty is performed. "A man is as big as his job," the speaker said, and "a person is recognized by the work he does and the work itself by the way it is done."

County Superintendent Green presented diplomas to the twelve graduates.

Dr. Crates S. Johnson pronounced the benediction.

114 Persons Attend Banquet

114 persons attended the program and banquet of the St. Joe Alumni Society last Saturday evening at the Christian church. The program consisted of the following numbers, and was held in the church auditorium at eight o'clock:

Ladies Trio, Flossie Widney, Edith Widney, Josephine Johnson.
Welcome, president.
Response, Delvin Armstrong.
Vocal Solo, Melba Andress.
Reading, Garnet Wyatt.
Piano Solo, Leotta Milliman.

The elaborate three course banquet was served in the church basement at 9:00, by the ladies of the church. The menu was as follows: Fruit punch, wafers, hot buttered rolls, mashed potatoes, pressed chicken, chicken gravy, combination salad, olives, pickles, pineapple cream sherbet, cake ond coffee.

Clark Scholes acted as toast master and the following toasts were most splendidly given: "Our Teachers," Russell Wade, a member of the graduating class; "Class of 1923," by Elgin Curie; "Progress" by Esther Bowman; and "The Future Alumni" by Dale Widney.

Only nine members of the twelve graduates were present to be welcomed into the organization as members of the same.

At the close of the banquet a short business meeting was called and all matters were closed for the year.

This was the first formal banquet held by the society since 1917.

Maybe No Memoral Service

It looks very unfavorable for a Memorial Day celebration in St. Joe this year, and if we miss it will be shameful. It will be the first year missed in many.

There seems to be very little interest exercised among our citizens, especially when the time is set for reorganization meeting. When not a single person from St. Joe appeared last Friday evening at the called meeting, Mr. Widney, the chairman, felt much discouraged and was led to believe that no one cared about the thing.

I hope that everyone will read Mr. Widney's notice in another column in this paper and will wake up to the fact that if we want anything done, we will have to show some enthusiasm and help out.

38 Years Ago

From Our Files

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Barney are visiting friends in Ohio.

Dr. Ferrell has rented the room formerly occupied by Brooks as a shoe shop, and will use it for an office.

Sam White says that a drove of mosquitoes wrecked a freight train down near Mark Center one evening this week.

Decoration Day will be observed this year by the G. A. R. Post of this place. The order of exercises will be about the same as on former years. Rev. C. W. Church of Auburn, is expected to deliver the addresses.

Dr. Sheffer was hurriedly called out to Jay Tappan's one day last week, and Jay was immediately rushed off after some safety pins. Before the doctor got home Mart Engle sent for him and low and behold you, Mart had to trot around and hunt up some safety pins; and it wasn't a very good day for safety pins either.

Evans Dermott had no insurance on his house which was destroyed by fire a couple of weeks ago.

O. H. Widney and Hugh Maxwell were at Huntington last week attending the funeral of their brother-in-law.

P. Bishop went to Pennsylvania last week as a delegate to the Lutheran Synod. He will also visit a couple of weeks among old friends and acquaintances.

Spencerville Gets Oil Station

The Standard Oil Company is installing an oil and gasoline station at Spencerville and is placing Ernest Steward in charge. The station is located near the Wabash depot, west of town.

The equipment will be similar to the one at St. Joe, but will not be as large. One service truck will be used.

The increased demand for the products at Spencerville has afforded this station.

A St. Joe Camp Fire?

Among the national organizations of young people for the betterment of health, citizenship and character, we hear of the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and Camp Fire Girls. Within the past ten years the organization of boys and girls in that line of activity has been increased until it has gained a commended reputation all over the United States.

The primary purpose of Camp Fire organizations is pointed out in the name itself, that is to interest young girls in outdoor life nature study and athletic recreation for betterment of health.

Fearing that one side of girls' development should be emphasized, requirements are made to broaden the home instincts of every girl. Also the religious and political life has its place in the life of a Camp Fire girl, for often to attain the ranks of Woodgather or Torchbearer one must know something of state and national politics and must in some way be identified in church work. While there may be a great deal of pleasure connected with the Camp Fire, there is a more serious phase that cannot be overlooked.

Recently there has been some demand for a Camp Fire in St. Joe. Girls who would be interested in a Camp Fire organization, call Martha Miser before Friday in regard to a meeting.

W. C. T. U. NEWS

The W. C. T. U. will meet this week on Friday afternoon with Mrs. Emma Bishop. The following program will be carried out:

Song.
Devotional, Mrs. Bishop.
Song.
Reading, "Hoes and Mothers", Mrs. Northrup.
"The Cry of the Mothers," Mrs. Quance.
Round Table Discussion. "Tree Plantings and Play Ground Activities."
Business .

A MATTRESS ADDS TO COMFORT

Do away with that dusty, uncomfortable old straw tick when you can buy a sanitary, comfortable mattress for

$9.00 and UP

Our cheapest mattress is a fine piece. It is well made and durable. Our higher priced pieces are the very best. See our line.

E. R. KINSEY

Hardware Furniture Undertaking

MAY

L 912

U 6 0 7

Matrimonial Adventures

The Tenth Mrs. Tulkington

BY

Ellis Parker Butler

Author of "The Incubator Baby," "Confessions of a Daddy," "That Pup," "Cheerful Smugglers," "Red Head," "Dominie Dean," "Goat's Feathers," "Philo Gubb," "Pigs Is Pigs," "In Pawn," etc.

Copyright by United Feature Syndicate

ELLIS PARKER BUTLER—EDITORIALLY SPEAKING

I do not believe there are many people in this country who need an introduction to Ellis Parker Butler, whose first fame arrived with a little story called "Pigs Is Pigs." That fame has been growing steadily ever since with his many books, short stories and moving pictures.

He has lectured, too, in all parts of the United States and is, perhaps, best known as one of our most popular humorists, though he writes fiction of a serious and interesting nature, also. He says he is one of the few American writers who did not begin his literary training on a newspaper.

He was born in Muscatine, Ia., and went East about 25 years ago. He is very modest about himself. It is difficult to get him to tell you anything, but I finally did extract that he is married—and thus fully qualified to write for the Star Author Series of Matrimonial Adventures—has four children, two of whom are twins; and that when he is not writing he would like to be fishing; and that he is much interested in the cultivation of tulips.

You have an understanding when you are talking to him of the great popularity of his work, for he sees the little, kindly, human points of life in a humorous way that never hurts—and with such amazing insight, too. He is constructively entertaining.

"The Tenth Mrs. Tulkington" is a humorous story—yes, but hasn't it a serious side?

MARY STEWART CUTTING, JR.

I.

My only excuse for throwing George Tithers into the lily-pool at midnight is that I thought he was my wife Susan. As a president of a bank and a highly respected and weighty citizen I most seriously object to being called "Baldy," and I particularly object to being slapped gaily on the top of my head with an open hand. Or any other kind of hand. And I believed this Tithers person—my wife's brother, I'm ashamed to say—was in Europe. Naturally, then, when I had been dreaming that my wife was standing above me in a divorce court, denouncing me to the judge, and declaring that even the sight of my bald head had come to be nauseating to her, my first thought—when I felt the slap on the head and heard, "What ho, Baldy!"—was that Susan was attacking me. In an instant I had leaped from the marble bench and had grappled with my attacker. George Tithers cried out a moment too late, for I had already given a mighty heave and had thrown him full length into the lily-pond. As my mistake became apparent to me as I saw George Tithers coming out of the lily-pond on his hands and knees, I apologized frankly.

"I beg your pardon," I said; "I thought you were my wife."

"Rather! I should think so!" George said as he emerged and shook himself like a dog. "But it's not a nice way to treat a lady, Tulky; is it, now? Wife drowning isn't done in the best circles any more, you know. But, I say: Has it come to this, really? The little gray home in the West must be off its feed, what?"

Now, my home is not gray and it is not in the West; it is white marble and on Long Island; but I let that pass. George Tithers had—in his silly way—put his finger on the exact fact; our home was "off its feed," as he chose to say, and entirely off its feed. I made George remain where he was while I explained the matter fully and to its least detail. Toward the end of the first half hour, as the night grew chilly, his teeth began to chatter and a little later he sneezed many times, with gradually increasing violence, but he listened patiently. This deepened my thought that George and his precious wife must be dead broke again, but I was glad to have even a dead-broke brother-in-law hear the truth about Susan and myself. That truth was that after twenty years of married life we hated each other. As a matter of fact the reason I was on the marble bench by the lily-pool at midnight was because I had told Susan I would never again spend an hour under the same roof with her and that tomorrow we would begin seemly but immediate preparations for a separation and divorce. I had meant to spend the night on that marble bench.

"I say!" George exclaimed between sneezes, when I had concluded. "The little old trouble has become quite a snorter, what? Jolly full time the doctor was called, yes? Arrived in the nick of time, didn't I, Tulky? And, I say, do you mind if I ensconce myself in the pool a bit? The water seems a bit warmer than the air."

The idiot, I do believe, would have gone back into the pool, but that precious wife of his came out looking for him. She seemed to take his lily-pool bath as a matter of course, quite as if it was a habit of his to bathe in lily-pools at midnight, fully clad—as I have no doubt it is.

"Bathing, George?" she said, after she had greeted me—kissed me, mind you! "Be sure to have a brisk rub before you turn in. And you can come into the house now, Augustus; Susan has explained everything and the chauffeur is sleeping in the kitchen. Susan has taken his room in the garage; temporarily, I hope, but it is a very comfortable room. You do treat your servants well, Augustus. It is a lovely trait."

"Susan attends to the servants," I said reluctantly.

"Does she? She does everything so well, doesn't she?" said George Tithers' wife.

I might have said, in reply to that, "Too confounded well!" but I did not.

II.

"The trouble," said George, when he had poured himself a chill-preventer, "is that Susan is a wife in a million. I'll say in eight million. You told her she was a wife in a million, didn't you, old top, when you were a newly-wed?"

"None of your business!" I growled.

"Ah! He confesses!" said George Tithers. "And now, Gussie, me lad, because she is just that—a wife in a million wives exactly like her—you are sore. What? Bored! Biting the old fingernails with ennui! Dead sick of dear old Sue, and dear old Sue dead sick of nice old Gustus! The trouble with you and Sue, me lad, is that you need a couple of stage-managers. That's trouble Number One. And trouble Number Two hangs on it—you're both natural bigamists—"

"Stop right there!" I cried.

"Like all of us! Like all of us!" said George.

"Not another word!" I exclaimed, exceedingly angry.

"Whoa up!" George said then. "Stop here! The boss says stop. We're through, Amelia. I only meant to tell him of Lord Algy and Lady Mercedes, but he says 'stop!' and we stop!"

"Oh, Lord Algy and Lady Mercedes!" exclaimed George's wife. "The happiest two people! Such a happy pair!"

"Always marrying! Always marry and gay, what?"

The poor wretch laughed heartily at his miserable pun.

"So cheery and happy! Always divorcing each other and marrying somebody else, and marrying each other again so gayly!" exclaimed Amelia.

"Because a man gets tired of the dear old wife after twenty years, even if she is my sister," said George.

"And of the dear old reliable husband, even if he is the most respectable old baldy," said Amelia.

"Especially if he is the same dear old reliable husband," George corrected her. "It's the blessed routine that warps 'em, don't you think?"

"Rather!" said Amelia heartily.

"It's like being married to the bally old Westminster Abbey, what?" said George. "Act of parliament needed to permit even the riotous innovation of a new tombstone. Not a new hair on Old Bald-Top in thirteen years! Not a new-style hic-cough out of dear old Susie since the wedding bells!"

"Stop it!" I cried irritably, for he was patting the top of my head, the silly donkey. "Leave my head alone! What about this Lord Algy and this Lady Mercedes—if you must talk?"

"Oh, they're just off-again on-again gay little marriers, Augustus!" George said. "Tired of one wife, get another; tired of one husband, get another. It's done in their circle. A man does get tired of the same old wife. Routine stuff, if you get me. Deadly monotony, what? Sick of the sight of her; hate her—what?"

"It's in us," said Amelia placidly. "The bigamy thing, I mean. Any man who can afford it and is not restrained by convention or his ethics hops about a bit; has a variety. King Solomon, the sultan, Henry Eighth, Lord Byron. And Tithy, here."

"In a way of speaking," said Tithers modestly.

"And myself, Tithy," said Amelia. "In a way of speaking, as you remark, darling. And Cleopatra, and the queen of Sheba—by all accounts."

"Now, stop this nonsense!" I said. "You know, both of you, that you do not run about after other men and women—"

"Well, rather not!" cried George. "He don't get us, Amelia; he's a bit dense. Tell him."

"Marriage," said Amelia, "is almost never a failure; married life is. Marriage is the first joining of two people together, and jolly sport it is with the getting acquainted intimately, rubbing sharp points together, and all. Somethin' interestin' all the while, what? And then, in a few years—five, maybe, or ten, or twenty—comes married life; the routine stuff. Awful bore, sometimes; same old wife; same old husband; same old ways and everything! Nothing new! They get jolly well sick of each other, and no wonder."

"A man—a man with a business to attend to—can't be running around divorcing his wife every day or so," I said.

"Crickets, no!" exclaimed George Tithers. "He'd be doing nothing else; that's not the right card—the right card is to marry the whole lot at the first jump off, if you get me."

"I don't," I said dryly.

"You did it, though," said Amelia, with a laugh. "Susan did it, too. It's a poor stick of a woman that isn't a dozen women, and a poor stick of a man that isn't half a dozen men."

"What we mean," Tithers broke in, "is that you and Sue need to be stage-managed, what? You two have twenty roles in you, between the two of you, but you won't change. You, Augustus, keep in the middle of the stage forever and a day as the Heavy Father and Sue has been playing the Faithful Wife twenty long years. Twentieth year of the appearance of Hon. Augustus Tulkington and Mrs. Augustus Tulkington in their disgustingly familiar parts of Honorable Augustus Tulkington and Mrs. Augustus Tulkington,' what? It's not a wonder you want a divorce; it's a wonder you don't murder each other."

Amelia Tithers was looking at me thoughtfully.

"You can't grow new hair," she said, "but you might wear a wig occasionally."

"What ho, yes!" cried Tithers, jumping from his chair excitedly. "When he stages himself as the Conceited Elderly Ass, what? A toupee, what? And white spats! And a monocle? No, not a monocle. A monocle can't be done."

But it was done. It was not a complete success, it would not stick in my eye, but I dangled it from a string and learned to swing it around my forefinger quite well. Exceedingly well, I may say.

III

As anything seemed preferable to divorce, Susan and I, after thorough consideration of the matter in company with George Tithers and his wife, agreed to appoint George and Amelia stage managers of our married life and I allowed them a liberal compensation. After a long consultation George and Amelia decided that it would be best for George to be my personal manager while Amelia managed Susan. I agreed to everything in advance, but I was surprised when George presented me with a sheet of paper at the top of which he had written "Cast of Characters." On this sheet were written six varieties of husbands, all men of my acquaintance, and no two alike. At the head of the list was written "January—Self, prosperous banker." And following this was "February—H. P. Diggleton, clubman, heavy sport," and "March—Winston Bopple, flirt, lady-chaser," and so on down to "June—Carey S. Flick, conceited elderly fusser, etc." July I was again to be "Self, prosperous banker." And so on for the second six months. As the month was now August I was to be, not myself, but a person resembling as nearly as possible H. P. Diggleton. For the month of August Susan was to have as her husband not myself but, to all intents and purposes, some one equivalent to H. P. Diggleton. George Tithers saw that I was fully equipped with manners and habits; when he could not be sure what H. P. Diggleton would do he invented something new for me to do instead.

I admit that as the day approached when I was to become a practically new and unknown husband to Susan I became keenly excited. This was not because I was to be another man but because I knew I was to have in Susan an entirely new wife. I had never been so interested in anything in my life. When the thirteen trunks, containing the thirteen complete sets of costumes Susan was to wear in her thirteen impersonations came into the house and were carried to the storeroom I actually trembled with excitement as I saw them and noticed the huge white numerals painted on their sides. I say thirteen trunks because Amelia Tithers had decided that, month by month, Susan should be thirteen women. She felt that Susan, being a woman, was equal to the task, and by letting Susan be a different woman each month for thirteen months while I ran, so to speak, in a cycle of but six months, it would be many years before the same husband could have the same wife. If, for example, Susan should be Mary P. Miller in August to my H. P. Diggleton, there would be no danger that she would be Mary P. Miller to my H. P. Diggleton the next August, because if Mary P. Miller was wife No. 1, when August came again Susan would be wife No. 13, and the next August she would be wife No. 12. Thus a continuous novelty was assured.

On the glorious August morning when our experiment was to begin I opened my eyes and raised myself on my elbow to take a last look—for twelve months—at the old Susan Tulkington. She was not there. I leaped from bed, bathed and hurried into the clothes George Tithers had supplied for my Diggleton impersonation and hastened down stairs.

"Your wife?" Amelia Tithers said pleasantly. "Oh, you'll not see your wife this month at all! She is, this month, one of the gaddy ladies who fly from their husbands in the summer. Susan has gone to Newport, thence she goes to Alaska. You can expect her as the second Mrs. Tulkington on or about the first of September."

I can assert that Susan and I did not quarrel that August. In fact, I never loved and longed for Susan as truly as I did toward the end of that month. I wasted, so to speak, my H. P. Diggleton role on the desert air, but George Tithers kept me spurred to the role and I am sure I did well. I made use of all my clubs and I did enjoy them. I played more auction bridge than in all my previous life.

"Gus," one of my friends said, "I hardly know you! You're like a different man. Maybe you didn't know it, but you were getting stupid and stodgy—you were getting in the 'old family man' rut. Well, bid 'em up; bid 'em up!"

I met, toward the end of August, a banker from Nome. He had met Susan at Portland.

"Some wife!" he said enthusiastically. "Some lively lady, Mr. Tulkington! Just shows how folks can be mistaken—Henry Torker, who was down here last year, said your lady was one of these house-broke ladies, one of the nice old family persons. Oh, boy!"

It was with some trepidation that I awaited Susan's return in September. I was grateful to Amelia Tithers for taking Susan far away while she was impersonating such a lively lady as Mr. Hutchins of Nome had suggested she was impersonating, and I admit that I was glad I was to give her tit for tat, so to speak, since my September schedule called for me to be a Winston Bopple, lady killer and flirt. After a few evenings of coaching by George Tithers I was sure I would be able to carry my Bopple role in a manner that would not cause Susan the least monotony. Two or three of the ladies in our summer colony seemed quite willing to assist me in giving the part verisimilitude.

When Susan arrived she gave me one kiss and hurried to her room, but Amelia Tithers paused a moment.

"You'll be surprised!" she whispered. "Susan is doing it so wonderfully! And our little practice trip came off splendidly. You'll never again think of Susan as a stodgy, stupid married-old-thing sort of person. You just wait!"

When Susan came down to dinner I was indeed surprised. I turned from Amelia Tithers, with whom I had been doing my best to flirt, and gasped. Such—well, such lack of clothes; Such abundance of long earrings!

"The vampire-type!" breathed Amelia Tithers. "Doesn't she do it well?"

She did! For a few September days I did try to flirt with some of our female neighbors, but before a week was up I found I had enough to do in making love to Susan and in trying to crowd between her and the men who seemed to take her masquerading in earnest. We had one row, with Susan in slithy coils—so to speak—on the chaise longue, when I told her what I thought of her conduct and she called attention to mine, but we kissed and made up like young lovers. The next minute she was vamping old Horatio Peabody, the silly old fool! And I had to make eyes at his stuffy old wife in self-defense. It was, indeed, a hasty and hectic month, as George Tithers said.

"Thank Heaven," I said to George, on the last day of September, "this month is over. I hope Susan is to be something respectable in October."

"I say, you know!" George exclaimed. "You don't know that wife of mine. Up and doing, what? Always a little bit more, what? Spread a bit more sail—that's her motto, if you get me."

"You mean to tell me—" I gasped.

"Well, rather!" exclaimed George Tithers. "Upward and onward, so to speak."

He was right; Amelia must have told him. "Well educated show-girl who is not just sure she has married the right man," was what Amelia had cast Susan for in October. It was with the greatest difficulty that I was able to maintain my role of a man who regretted his past and was seeking his solace in good books. It was indeed hard for me to sit with the second volume of Henry Esmond and see Susan making merry with half a dozen brainless noodles while her clothes were practically an incitement to unseemly levity.

"It has been a lovely month," Susan said at its close. "I did feel so free. I hope you're to be something retiring in November. I'm to be—"

"What?" I snarled. I do believe I snarled.

"Wait and see!" she said.

The next evening when I returned from my bank and met Susan I fell into a chair and stared at her. She, who had never used rouge had used it too, too abandonedly. Her gown—I can only describe it by saying that even Mrs. Hinterberry, who goes what is practically the limit, would have hesitated to wear it.

"Like the countess of Duxminster! Amelia Tithers breathed in my ear. "Chic, yes?"

I shuddered. I had read of the countess of Duxminster; it was she who gave the notorious party at which she lost thirty thousand pounds sterling and then bet all her garments—and lost! And this was but November, and Amelia Tithers' motto was 'Spread a bit more sail,' and there were nine more impersonations on Susan's list!

I closed my eyes and groped for the stair bannisters. When I reached the upper floor I dodged for the stairs that led to the storeroom. There, in a row, were the twelve trunks. Number 4 was not there; was evidently in Susan's boudoir. For a moment I stood before trunk Number 5. It was unlocked; so were they all. I put my hand on the lid and hesitated. After all I could guess what might be in trunk Number 5. I might as well know the worst. I staggered to trunk Number 13.

Now, I trust I am not a coward, but I did not dare open the lid of that trunk. A dozen times I drew a deep breath and a dozen times I hesitated. I turned to trunk Number 12, to Number 11.

"Augustus," I said to myself, "be a man! Face this thing!"

I threw open the lid of the trunk containing what was to be, in effect, the tenth Mrs. Tulkington. At first the trunk seemed to hold nothing but a few red artificial flowers and some hay, lumped in one small corner. I lifted these. There was nothing else in the trunk! The red flowers, as I looked at them, assumed a meaning—they were a wreath for the head; the hay was sewed to a narrow band. There was extremely short hay. Pictures of Hawaii and the South Sea islands flashed on my brain. I saw my Susan on a sandy beach. In my imagination I could see nearly all of the beach—and nearly all of Susan! I felt sick; suddenly and extremely sick! So this was to be my wife! This was to be the tenth Mrs. Tulkington! I could feel the cold perspiration oozing out of my pores. My Susan in a hay lamp shade and a wreath of red petunias!

I hardly dared turn my eyes toward trunk Number 11. I dared not raise the lid; I could think of nothing but Eve—Eve in the Garden of Eden. I lifted the trunk by the handle and shook it. Nothing! There was absolutely nothing in that trunk! And beyond it stood trunk Number 12. And beyond that stood trunk Number 13!

I went down the stairs slowly. Five times I stopped and stood, trying to overcome the trembling of my limbs; trying to regain my usual composure. This unseemly business had gone far enough; trunk Number 10 might do for a Lady Mercedes, but for a respectable American wife—no! The tenth Mrs. Tulkington might please Lord Algy but as for pleasing Augustus Tulkington—no! I met Susan in the hall. I grasped her arm firmly.

"Susan," I said, "I have had enough of this! I have had plenty of Susans."

"Augustus!" she cried, and threw her arms around me. "Augustus, I have had more Augustuses than I could bear. I want just my old Augustus! I want my plain old Augustus!"

"And I," I said briskly, "want nothing but my same old Susan. This whole business has been nothing but idiocy. We can vary the monotony of our married existence without committing imitation bigamy by retail and wholesale."

I was tremendously relieved, for I admit now that I had been tremendously frightened. The tenth Mrs. Tulkington had upset me.

"Susan," I whispered firmly, for I was not going to let her come under the influence of Amelia Tithers another moment, "go up to your room and prepare for a journey—a journey with your own husband. You are going to Palm Beach with your Augustus, a respectable banker and married man. In five minutes the car will be at the door. Hurry—for we have no time to waste. But Susan!" I added as she turned to hurry up the stairs. "Susan! Will you tell me one thing? What was in the eleventh trunk?"

"Nothing, Augustus," she said, her hand on the rail.

"And in the twelfth trunk?" I asked with a deep breath.

"Less than nothing, Augustus," said Susan.

I shuddered to think of what a wife may be capable when driven to it by deadly routine.

"And in the thirteenth trunk, Susan?" I asked hoarsely.

"Why, you old silly, my own clothes," said Susan with a laugh; "the clothes I was wearing when Amelia and George came."

"Oh!" I said stupidly. "Oh! Well, you've no time to pack anything; you'll take the thirteenth trunk."

From Palm Beach I sent a large check to George Tithers, and he and Amelia were gone when we returned. That was several years ago, but I cannot persuade Susan to allow me to have those twelve trunks thrown out of the storeroom in the attic.

"No, Augustus dear," she always syas, "I know now that monotony is the one great curse of married life, and I love you so dearly, Augustus, that I want always to have a few of dear Amelia's trunks to windward."

SMALL FAMILIES THE RULE

Two Wives and Two Children Seem to Be the Limit of the Pygmy's Ambition.

A pygmy family rarely if ever comprises more than four to five persons. A husband usually has only one wife, and never more than two, while two children is the average number, three being considered too big a family to rear. The babies are interesting little creatures, but to me they seemed to compare very favorably with white babies, says a World Wide Magazine writer.

The pygmy makes a good husband and father, though he is not averse to giving his wife a sound beating when her behavior seems to him to merit drastic punishment. Particularly noticeable is the low opinion which most of the tribes outside the forest zone have of these queer little people whose thieving propensities have earned for them classification with pests like the hyena and the jackal. One native spoke of them in my hearing as "wood rats" and spat contemptuously as he did so.

Britain's Debt to "Scalawags."

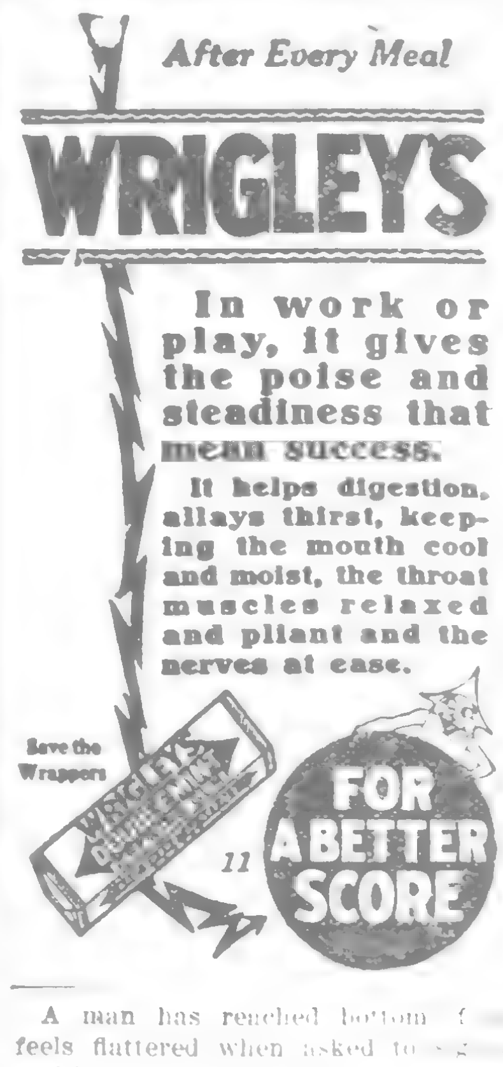
What chance of success in life had James Cook, who is honored throughout the English-speaking world as explorer navigator? If he were in his native village today we can imagine him being picked out by some earnest reformer as an example of the hopeless state to which boys "on the land" are condemned. Before he was in his teens he was employed in scaring crows, and when twelve years of age he was apprenticed to a shop-keeper in a little fishing village near Whitby. He was evidently rather a "scallywag"—the British empire owes much to its scallywags—and his master cancelled his indentures.—London Daily Telegraph.

Most Remarkable Bird.

The hoactzin of British Guiana is one of the most remarkable birds in the world. Almost as soon as it is hatched the young hoactzin crawls out of the nest by using its wings as forefeet. The "thumb" and "forefinger" of the wings have claws with which the young bird climbs about the branches. As soon as the wings grow strong enough to support the bird in the air the claws disappear. The New York Zoological park has just got the first specimens ever to be held in captivity.—Youth's Companion.

Just "Line Upon Line."

It is not the spurt at the start, but the continued, unresting, unhasting advance that wins the day.



After Every Meal

WRIGLEYS

In work or play, it gives the poise and steadiness that mean success.

It helps digestion, allays thirst, keeping the mouth cool and moist, the throat muscles relaxed and pliant and the nerves at ease.

Save the Wrappers

FOR A BETTER SCORE

A man has reached bottom if he feels flattered when asked to sign a petition.

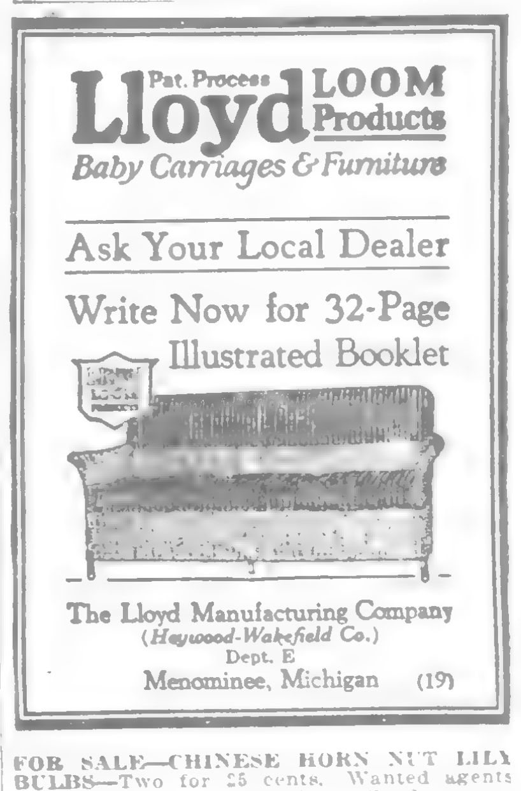
A young man who posed as a millionaire has been sent to prison, which has a pile of rocks.

Usually when a man deprecates himself he is merely looking for an argument on the point.

Apparently Russia can mete out death sentences with greater ease than she can mete out meat.

The European inventory this spring ought to show a record stock on hand of slightly used advice.

The worst cases of enlarged ego are found in towns that are too small to have a parking situation.



Pat. Process Lloyd LOOM Products

Baby Carriages & Furniture

Ask Your Local Dealer

Write Now for 32-Page Illustrated Booklet

The Lloyd Manufacturing Company
(Heywood-Wakefield Co.)
Dept. E
Menominee, Michigan (19)

FOR SALE—CHINESE HORN NUT LILY BULBS—Two for 25 cents. Wanted agents in each town. Easy seller. Good money. Also wholesale. Write CHINA IMPORTING SALES CO., SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.

LOOK·OLD? Gray, thin, straggly hair makes people look very old. It isn't necessary — a bottle of Q-Ban Hair Color Restorer will bring back original color quickly — stops dandruff. At all good druggists, 75c, or direct from Hessig-Ellis, Chemists, Memphis, Tenn.

W. N. U., FORT WAYNE, NO. 21--1923.

Singing that will put a baby to sleep is apt to make him sit up and howl in later years.

A FEELING OF SECURITY

You naturally feel secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit producing drugs.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

The same standard of purity, strength and excellence is maintained in every bottle of Swamp-Root.

It is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs.

It is not a stimulant and is taken in teaspoonful doses.

It is not recommended for everything.

It is nature's great helper in relieving and overcoming kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

A sworn statement of purity is with every bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

If you need a medicine, you should have the best. On sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to try this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

It is sometimes more difficult to prove that you are right than it is to prove the other fellow wrong.

The use of soft coal will make laundry work heavier this winter. Red Cross Ball Blue will help to remove that grimy look. At all grocers—Advertisement.

Table etiquette may be learned in the home, but you get all the new wrinkles by dining out.

Sure Relief FOR INDIGESTION

BELL-ANS FOR INDIGESTION 25 CENTS

6 BELL-ANS Hot water Sure Relief

BELL-ANS

25¢ AND 75¢ PACKAGES EVERYWHERE

MAY

L 912

Are Your Children Healthy?

Mothers, everywhere, have found that the safe way to insure the health and normal growth of their children is to give them a pure, easily digested food tonic such as Father John's Medicine.

This old-fashioned, food medicine is unequaled as a Spring Tonic. It is all pure nourishment, being guaranteed free from alcohol and narcotics. Start giving your children Father John's Medicine today and watch them improve.

GREAT VITAMIN STRENGTH

FATHER JOHNS MEDICINE

PURE NOURISHMENT

BETTER DEAD

Life is a burden when the body is racked with pain. Everything worries and the victim becomes despondent and downhearted. To bring back the sunshine take

LATHROP'S
GOLD MEDAL
HAARLEM OIL
CAPSULES

The national remedy of Holland for over 200 years; it is an enemy of all pains resulting from kidney, liver and uric acid troubles. All druggists, three sizes.

Look for the name Gold Medal on every box and accept no imitation

Peace flourishes when reason rules.

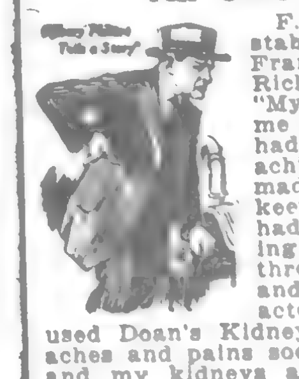
The prices of cotton and linen have been doubled by the war. Lengthen their service by using Red Cross Ball Blue in the laundry. All grocers—Advertisement.

After a self-made man finishes the job he closes the factory.

Back Given Out?

IT'S hard to do one's work when every day brings morning lameness, throbbing backache, and a dull, tired feeling. If you suffer thus, why not find out the cause? Likely it's your kidneys. Headaches, dizziness and bladder irregularities may give further proof that your kidneys need help. Don't risk neglect! Use Doan's Kidney Pills. Thousands have been helped by Doan's. They should help you. Ask your neighbor!

An Ohio Case



F. O. Penney, constable, 379 North Franklin Street, Richwood, O., says: "My kidneys caused me to suffer and I had a lame and aching back that made it hard to keep going. I often had sharp, shooting pains dart through my back and my kidneys acted irregularly. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and the aches and pains soon left my back and my kidneys acted regularly."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 60c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

NR

TO-NIGHT
Tomorrow Alright

NR a mild, vegetable laxative to relieve Constipation and Biliousness and keep the digestive and eliminative functions normal.

Get a 25c. Box

Used for over 30 years

Chips off the Old Block

NR JUNIORS—Little NRs

One-third the regular dose. Made of same ingredients, then candy coated.

For children and adults.

SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST

Skin Eruptions

Are Usually Due to Constipation

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

Nujol

Hoosier News Briefly Told

Culver.—The total amount of compensation received by former service men of Indiana, through the efforts of the service division of the Indiana department of the American Legion, from January 1 to date, was $23,560. Thomas O'Reilly, acting state service officer, reported at the closing session of the fourth annual conference of past commanders and adjutants held at the Military academy.

Anderson.—Police here are seeking Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Maiden, who recently arrived in the city, but who have not been seen since several worthless checks on banks have been reported. The checks were said to have been passed by a young woman who represented that she was Mrs. Maiden, and gave as her street address the number of an entrance to a Muncie hotel dining room.

Shelbyville.—The annual meeting of the Diapason singing class, successors to the Missouri Harmony singers, will be held at Morristown in the Margaret Dodd Memorial hall, May 27. The meeting of the class is also observed by Morristown residents as a homecoming celebration. The Missouri Harmony singers were organized about 1830. The Diapason class is composed of descendants of the originl class.

Indianapolis.—Indianapolis assessors and the state board of tax commissioners have appraised the Citizens Gas company at $14,521,880 for taxation purposes next year. The figure is $2,844,220 higher than last year's appraisement on which the company is paying taxes this year.

Versailles.—Leo Browne, aged twenty-four, was sentenced to from two to fourteen years in the Indiana reformatory at Jeffersonville by Judge R. Carney in the circuit court here after he pleaded guilty to a charge of shooting with intent to kill. He also was fined for carrying concealed weapons.

Goshen.—Charles Swart, age fifty-five, prominent Elkhart county farmer and former representative in the Indiana general assembly, fell dead of heart disease while presiding over a directors' meeting of the Elkhart County Farmers' Co-operative company, of which he was president.

Fort Wayne.—A serious shortage of labor still exists in Fort Wayne and surrounding cities and in the rural district, according to the state free employment office. Calls for men are more than a third more than the number of applications for positions.

Evansville.—Ralph Baker and William Dunlaw, small boys playing in the cemetery at Stewartsville, Posey county, found a still in a hollow metal monument painted to resemble stone. The Posey county officials were notified and took charge of the still.

Greenfield.—At a special meeting of the city council Marshall Winslow was elected mayor to succeed Frank S. Larrabee, who resigned because of illness. Winslow, who was engaged in the newspaper business for a number of years, is a Democrat.

Muncie.—The will of Hardin Roads, president of the Merchants National bank, who died ten days ago, distributes approximately $250,000 among charities, schools, friends and relatives.

Terre Haute.—Dr. Thomas A. Drake, age sixty, for many years a practicing physician of Prairieton, south of Terre Haute, was drowned in Honey creek, a short distance southwest of Prairieton.

Terre Haute.—Dr. Royal Hart Gerard, age forty-eight, of Crawfordsville, supreme chief of the Tribe of Ben Hur, who was injured in an elevator accident in a hotel here, died at St. Anthony's hospital.

South Bend.—A daily newspaper will be published by the journalistic students at Notre Dame, beginning May 20. To broaden the circulation a department will be devoted to St. Mary's college and academy.

Greensburg.—A meeting of the Decatur County Sunday School council was held here Sunday afternoon. The council was held to arrange a schedule of work and programs for each Sunday school of the county for the year.

Franklin.—Thousands of Knights Templar of Indiana gathered in Franklin for the dedication and consecration of the Knights Templar building for boys at the Indiana Masonic home.

Wabash.—The Wabash river rose seven feet in four hours, causing suspension of interurban service west of here on the Indiana Service Corporation line.

Winamac.—Arrangements are being made for the formal dedication of the new Christian church at Lawton Sunday, May 20. Rev. J. C. Canole of Indianapolis is to conduct the services.

Wabash.—While playing in a backyard, Viola Greathouse three years old, fell through a cistern cover and drowned.

Sidney.—A son, born to Mr. and Mrs. Fan Maloy, is the sixteenth child born to the couple, who are Kosciusko county farmers.

Carthage.—Industrial conditions have created a demand for 20 new dwellings, a number of houses being occupied by two and three families. Seven houses are now being constructed in the two new additions to the town. Another bank is to be established soon.

Fort Wayne.—Pleading guilty to charges of highway robbery, Ernest Leininger, twenty-three, and Vernon Nelson, eighteen, both of Fort Wayne, were sentenced to ten to twenty-one years in prison for robbing Sherman Titsworth.

Shelbyville.—H. G. Montgomery manufacturer and business man, is the sole beneficiary of the estate of the late Mrs. Emily Martin, which was opened for probate in the Shelby Circuit court. The estate is valued at approximately $15,000, and the distribution in the will is made in the single sentence that all the property owned by Mrs. Martin at her death is left to her friend, Mr. Montgomery. He also is named as executor of the estate.

Liberty.—Mrs. Eleanor Coughlin, age twenty-six, wife of George A. Coughlin died at her home. She had been sick four weeks with typhoid fever. A week ago Mrs. Coughlin developed an abscess on the brain and had been unconscious for several days. Mrs. Coughlin was one of the widely known clubwomen of Union county.

Portland.—An oil gusher has been brought in on the Mock farm in Jay county near here. While drillers were at work on a well oil shot ten feet above the top of a 90-foot derrick. Before the flow could be controlled several hundred barrels of the fluid were wasted.

Greensburg.—The jury which heard the case of the Shelbyville Citizens Gas company vs. Louis Friedman in Circuit court here returned a verdict giving the plaintiff a judgment for $8,505. The defendant, a contractor of Muncie, was charged with breach of contract.

Portland.—The body of Thurl Wayne Girton, age twelve, who was drowned in swollen water of Little Salamonie river near the Portland Country club was found lodged against some flood gates a quarter of a mile west of Thorn Tree bend, where the boy sank.

Culver.—Two hundred veterans of the Spanish-American war, with their families, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of their regiment as they held their annual reunion at Culver Military academy.

South Bend.—Gustave Martin, thirty-five years old, was crushed to death at Mishawaka when a sewer caved in and buried him up to his neck. He watched his companions in their efforts to extricate him but before the work could be completed he was dead.

Marion.—Alleging discrimination in division of school funds among Marion banks, suit has been brought by Prosecutor George M. Coon against Willard Elkins, treasurer and member of the board of finance of Marion. The removal from office of Elkins is asked.

Indianapolis.—Contracts for thirty-five miles of bituminous paving and tar surfacing, to cost approximately $328,000, have been awarded by the state highway commission. The department has plans for a fifty-mile program of the kind for this year.

Hartford City.—Brothers were married at a double ceremony. Henry Harpst married Miss Mabel Cox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cox; Frank Harpst and Miss Mary Lamount daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lamount, were married.

Logansport.—The United Brethren tabernacle, which is being built here, was dedicated Sunday. The Rev. A. C. Siddall of Dayton, O., church erection secretary of the national organization, made the principal address.

Terre Haute.—Harry Murphy was shot dead in a fight between bootleggers. William Evans was arrested on a charge of murder, but witnesses said he fired in self-defense. Murphy, forty, was a former patrolman.

Vincennes.—Automobile rides, motion pictures and political addresses will be the features of the two-day outing of the Indiana Democratic Editorial association at Vincennes Friday and Saturday, June 8 and 9.

Frankfort.—The eighty-fourth annual convention of the Disciples of Christ approved without opposition the movement to change the location of Butler college from Irvington to the Fairview park site.

Laporte.—Fruits and crops were not damaged by the blizzard which held Laporte in its throes Tuesday. Fruit growers and farmers declared the snow saved the fruit and crops from injury.

Valparaiso.—Vanentin Engel, forty-eight years old, foreman of the Grand Trunk signal gang, was instantly killed when he alighted from a moving train His clothing caught and dragged him under the wheels.

Elkhart.—Clarence Richwine of Elkhart is under a bond of $1,500 to insure his appearance for trial on a charge of embezzling $446.78 from the Elkhart court, Independent Order of Foresters.

Winona Lake.—Rev. M. H. Lyon has presented to the East Wayne consolidated public school, in Kosciusko county, a library of 200 books on education, religious and historical subjects.

Lafayette.—Mrs. Rhoda Menthorne wife of H. Robert Menthorne, committed suicide by shooting. Her body was found by her husband in an attic room.

Terre Haute.—Memorial services were held at the Rose Polytechnic institute for Chauncey Rose, founder of the school.

Crown Point.—Joseph Fraas, sixty-four years old, a prominent Lake county banker, died of paralysis at his home here.

Shelbyville.—J. Hope McDougall, member of the city council from the Fifth ward for 14 years, presented his resignation at the meeting held by the council. Mr. McDougall is now living in Indianapolis. James D. Price, a stone cutter, was elected to fill the vacancy.

Rockport.—After five hours' deliberation a jury in the Spencer Circuit court awarded $4,500 to Raymond Wahl, whose right arm was cut off when he attempted to cross the tracks of the Southern railroad in front of a moving train.

MONEY EXPENDED WITHOUT RESULT

Birkholz Declares Wife Found No Relief Until Tanlac Ended Stomach Trouble.

"For two years past my wife was weak, run down and sick, but the Tanlac treatment has put her in the best of health again," says George Birkholz, 709 Fort Wayne, Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.

"She scarcely ate enough to keep soul and body together, and always suffered for hours after eating, from indigestion and bloating. She also had bilious attacks and splitting headaches, fell off in weight, and couldn't get any restful sleep. Although we paid out considerable money, she kept getting worse until we finally got hold of Tanlac.

"This remarkable medicine sure did its work well, for now she eats hearty, sleeps fine, has gained weight, and enjoys perfect health. We both recommend Tanlac highly."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

Why break up housekeeping by smashing the furniture?

Aspirin

Say "Bayer" and Insist!

Genuine BAYER

Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer product prescribed by physicians over twenty-two years and proved safe by millions for

Colds — Headache
Toothache — Lumbago
Earache — Rheumatism
Neuralgia — Pain, Pain

Accept "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" only. Each unbroken package contains proper directions. Handy boxes of twelve tablets cost few cents. Druggists also sell bottles of 24 and 100. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.—Advertisement.

Matter of Names.

"What's in a name?" Many of the world's great have pondered over this question.

Farmer Hoptoad considered it on his part and finally declared: "Very little."

He was asked to explain and did so in this wise: "Now we named our eldest daughter Isabel."

"Well?"

"But she isn't."

The Real Thing.

Customer—You say this hair tonic is good, do you?

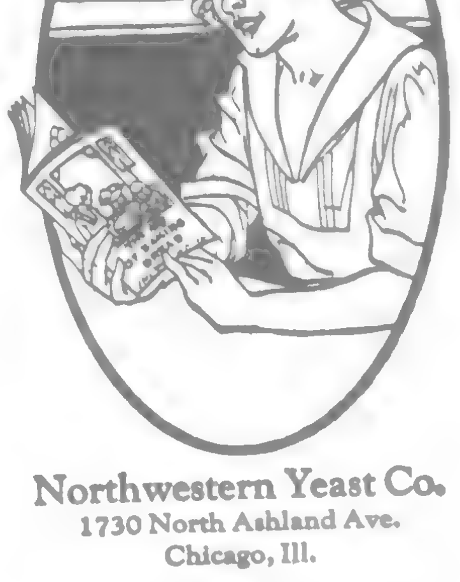
Clerk—Yes, sir. A friend of mine took the cork out of a bottle of this stuff with his teeth and next morning he had a mustache.—Boston Transcript.

The wise father husbands his resources in order that he may husband his daughters.

Yeast Foam Millions prefer it

Begin today to learn the most useful of home arts—bread-making.

Send for free booklet "The Art of Baking Bread"



Northwestern Yeast Co.
1730 North Ashland Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

Wall HARMONIES

The Cross and Circle is printed in Red on every genuine package

HAVE your interior walls tinted the exact color. Exercise your own good taste in just the color tones to bring out the best features of every room. There is only one sure way.

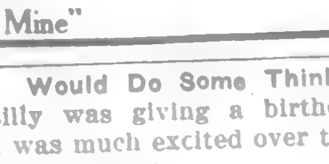
Alabastine

Instead of Kalsomine or Wall Paper

SHINOLA

AMERICA'S HOME SHOE POLISH

Black - Tan - White - Ox-Blood - Brown



SHINOLA is made of the finest wax and oils. It softens and preserves leather. Makes shoes wear longer and look better.

SHINOLA is quickly and easily applied - shines in a jiffy. Keeps shoes trim and tidy.

SHINOLA Home Set makes the home care of shoes easy

"The Shine for Mine"

Simple Explanation.

The senator was somewhat peeved, yet the matter was one of no great consequence, as his friend pointed out. It seems that a constituent from the back districts had written the statesman a letter in which said writer alluded to said statesman as a "lawnmaker."

The senator averred that if a joke was intended it was a poor one. But his friend maintained that no joke was intended.

"Your constituent probably wants some free seed; that's all."

The Later the Better.

"Call on Mrs. Canberra Villa? My dear! Why, her husband goes to town by the 7:55!"

"That's where you're mistaken. He goes by the 8:30 now, and next year he'll be going by the 9:15, my husband says—and then we'll simply have to call on her."—Sydney Bulletin.

A word to the wise—A mule can't kick while he is pulling.

Would Do Some Thinking.

Billy was giving a birthday party and was much excited over the idea of possible presents.

"You mustn't expect the children to bring them, dear," said mother. "Remember to thank the ones who do—and don't notice it if some of the children come without gifts."

"I won't say anything," Billy replied, gloomily, "but I can't help thinking my thinks."

Sign of Greatness.

"What makes you think your boy Josh is going to be a good politician?"

"Because," replied Farmer Corntossel, "he kin talk for hours tellin' us how to run the agricultural business without havin' had any personal experience whatever."

Our idea of a flirt is a girl who makes a fool of herself while trying to make a fool of some man.

If you would dodge your creditors don't become famous.

No "kick-back" in this mealtime cup

POSTUM CEREAL BEVERAGE

WHEN you find that coffee makes you nervous, keeps you awake at night, or causes frequent headaches, it's time to change to Postum.

This delicious, healthful cereal beverage gives you all the comfort and satisfaction of your usual morning cup. It has charm without harm to nerves or digestion—cheer without fear of a dangerous "kick-back."

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either is about one-half cent a cup.

Postum FOR HEALTH

"There's a Reason"

Made by Postum Cereal Company, Inc., Battle Creek, Mich.

MAY

L 912

Beautify Your Premises

It is time to make your porch baskets or boxes or get out the old ones and paint and fix them up.

We have the plants to make them beautiful.

Vinca, Snow in the Mountain, Jacop,s Coat, Salvia, German Ivy, Vining Geranium, Geraniums, Colus, Wandering Jew, etc.

NEWS OFFICE

The St. Joe News

William S. Quance,
Editor and Publisher.

One Year,	$1.50
Six Months,	.75
Three Months,	.40
One Month,	.15
Single Copy,	.05

(Advertising Rates on Application)

Entered at the postoffice at St. Joe, Indiana, as second class matter.

Foreign Advertising Representative
THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

The pickle business looks favorable for this year.

—‡—‡—‡—

The fence which was built on each side of the grade south of town last fall has received a new coat of white, making an attractive appearance.

—‡—‡—‡—

European diplomats are reminded that between an idea and ideal there is a "l" of a difference.—Manila Bulletin.

—‡—‡—‡—

The 4th of Judy comes on Wednesday this year. I am wondering if that day will pass with no stir in St. Joe.

—‡—‡—‡—

Judge Charles J. Ryan of the superior court at Fort Wayne, says that a woman is not entitled to a divorce merely because her husband smokes a pipe in the house.

—‡—‡—‡—

For once—just once, our lights stayed through last Saturday evening's rain. Usually a sprinkle puts the current out of commission somewhere up-stream.

—‡—‡—‡—

If the Main street in St. Joe should, by some reason, be closed all driving would be transferred to Jefferson street, the first street south of Main street and parallel with it. But in that case it would be necessary to bridge across a couple of young rivers (washouts) that cross it.

The effects of the visit of the postal official here a short time ago have not come into evidence very fast so far. Perhaps the preceedure is slow, and our service will eventually be improved greatly.

—‡—‡—‡—

Ed Miser has sold the International truck chassis which he has used for an oil truck to Lester Pugsley, who is using same for a gravel truck. Mr. Miser has purchased a new Ford truch chassis to replace the old International. Mr. Miser operates two trucks and his trade in the Standard Oil products seems to be increasing.

Teacher Exams Are Ruled Out

Examinations for the issuance of public school teachers' licenses will be discontinued in Indiana after December 1, 1923, according to the provisions of à ruling approved and passed by the state board of education in session at Indianapolis, Monday. Licenses will be issued after the ruling becomes effective only on the basis of training, the requirements of which have been raised considerably.

Beginning teachers will be required to have at least 36 weeks of training after a high school course before a license will be issued for the common grades. Teachers starting in high school work will be required to be college graduates. A three year license will be given persons with 36 weeks of training, with the provision that at the end of that time the teacher must have an additional year of training before a new license is issued.

Another important provision of the ruling concerns the licensing of all school teachers and officials. After December 1 it will be necessary for all school officials including teachers, supervisors and superintendents to hold licenses. The ruling will prove of more value to the rural schools, as in the past, eachers were required to have only 12 weeks of training to start in the profession.

OFFICE CAT
TRADE MARK

BY JUNIUS
COPYRIGHT 1921, BY EDGAR ALLAN MOSS.

The most completely lost of all days is that on which one has not laughed.

—oo—

THE BONEHEAD'S DICTIONARY

Dog—A four-footed mammal. Edible when the word "hot" is prefixed.

Kiss—An oscillatory short circuit; tasteless, colorless and painless; very pleasant but oftentimes equally expensive.

Wood Alcohol — The only existing word having the same meaning in every known tongue. Definition, Death.

—oo—

It is certainly remarkable what they can do in the movies. The other night we saw the heroine plunge into a stream to rescue her poor old father, and the next picture showed her on the bank in the same frock, all nice and dry. Her hair was not even mussed.

—oo—

PRO AND CON

"I've the dearest wife in all the world—
I say with feeling deepest."
"Well, I'd get married right off the reel,
If I could get the cheapest!"

—oo—

MAW CREEK SAYS:

"When I get to thinkin' I ain't much account it always cheers me up a heap to visit Sallie Young and see how nasty her kitchen is."

—oo—

The men who succeed best when they work for others are those who see that in doing so they are also working for themselves.

—oo—

HUNTING TROUBLE

"Howdy, gentlemen! Howdy!" saluted old Riley Rezzidiew, halting in front of a little group of guests assembled on the veranda of the Petunia tavern.

"Good morning," someone answered.

"Well, now, do any of you gentlemen want to argy about the tariff or the income tax, or cuss the legislature, or anything of that sort, this morning?"

—oo—

Puppy love may be a waste of time, but it furnishes pressing business for a lot of young couples.

—oo—

The sailor must have spent a night
Quite wild, to judge afar;
He looks a wreck and so no doubt,
He struck a hidden bar.

—oo—

A highbrow magazine says that Thomas Edison says "That he doesn't care what time it is." We wonder if he'd be interested in a second hand dollar watch. We've got one that orta suit him.

Chiropractor Optician

Calls made at your home by
APPOINTMENT.

EARL E. FRISBIE,
Butler, Indiana.

THOSE DAINTY DRESSES

"Pardon me. Did you drop your handkerchief during the dance?"

"Oh! I'm so embarrassed! That's my dress."

—oo—

Wouldn't it be pitiful if an efficiency expert were compelled to conduct a business of his own.

—oo—

Definition of a Giggle: That rattle of a lonesome thought in an empty brain.

—oo—

WE BELIEVE HIM

Man comes into this world with nothing on him, but, according to Bert Mapes, in a short time everybody has something on him.

—oo—

MIND VS. MATTER

I know a giddy girlie
Who dresses like a whizz.
And though her mind's not oft made up,
The rest of her sure is!

—oo—

THE OLD WAY IS BETTER

Now comes the news that in several states on the mainland marriage by radio has been declared illegal.

We can easily see that there would be confusion in the broadcasting of the marriage ritual. By listening in, we might hear something like this:

Minister—"Do you utu-dah-dah-ta-tatahadtadah Eloise Itch take this prunes closed firm to be your Texas Gulf Oil preferred 34 bid 36 lawfully wedded titmouse and woodchuck fable by Millicent Muddle?"

Answer—"Shake a little shimmie on the shores of Kakkakoo."

Minister—"Do you, Clarence, snap-snap-snap-buzz-click take this bedtime story by Kenneth Knee to be your lawfully wedded Sousa's band in a new and novel program?"

Answer — "Goodbye, Tootsie, goodbye."

Minister—"I pronounce you McKinley high school glee club in songs and instrumental music.

—oo—

WANT A JOB IN JAPAN, MABEL?

The Japanese typewriter has 3,126 characters.

—oo—

If there's a well-matched pair in married life, it's a horsey man and a nagging wife.

—oo—

Which for no reason at all reminds us of the absent minded man who threw his clothes on the bed and carefully laid himself over the back of a chair.

Send Us Your Name and address on a post card or in a letter and we will mail free and postpaid, a sample copy of the most wonderful magazine published. 160 pages and 400 pictures every month, that will entertain every member of the family.

Popular Mechanics
MAGAZINE

It contains interesting and instructive articles on the Home, Farm, Shop and Office —the newest developments in Radio, Aviation, Automobile and Garage. Each issue contains something to interest everybody.

We do not employ subscription solicitors so you will not be urged to subscribe and you are not obligating yourself in the least in asking for a free sample copy. We gladly send it to prospective readers. If you like it you can buy a copy every month from any newsdealer or send us your subscription—$3.00 for one year.

Popular Mechanics Company
200-214 E. Ontario Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

Popular Mechanics building is devoted exclusively to the production of this great magazine.

Make Your Trip More Enjoyable by a Refreshing Night on Lake Erie

(Your rail ticket is good on the boats)

Thousands of east and north bound travelers say they wouldn't have missed that cool, comfortable night on one of our fine steamers. A good bed in a clean stateroom, a long sound sleep and an appetizing breakfast in the morning!

Steamers "SEEANDBEE" — "CITY OF ERIE" — "CITY OF BUFFALO"

Daily, May 1st to November 15th

Leave Cleveland - 9:00 P.M. } Eastern { Leave Buffalo - 9:00 P.M.
Arrive Buffalo - 7:30 A.M. } Standard Time { Arrive Cleveland - 7:30 A.M.

Connections for Niagara Falls, Eastern and Canadian points. Ask your ticket agent or tourist agency for tickets via C & B Line. New Tourist Automobile Rate—$10.00.

Send for free sectional puzzle chart of the Great Ship "Seeandbee" and 32-page booklet.

The Cleveland and Buffalo Transit Co.
Cleveland, Ohio

The Great Ship "Seeandbee" — the largest steamer on inland waters of the world.

Fare $5.50

C & B LINE

Facts About Widows

The American Bankers Association tells this about widows:

18% of American widows live on their income.

47% supplement income by working.

35% are dependent.

And a table for daughter's and sons who have been heirs would show about the same percentage.

Can THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY interest you?

J. C. Hull, Representative,
St. Joe, Ind.

With regard to Mr Harding's ambition to break the solid South, Jake Mercer says he'd like to remind him that the boll weevil has been trying to do it for 15 years

—oo—

Well, when the girls get to wearing corsets again, it may make a little more room in the street cars.

—oo—

NOT AT ALL

Somehow I always disliked Debs,
You know, of course, I mean,
I like most of the women folks—
But cannot see Eugene!

—oo—

A bootlegger tells that when he was seized with the grippe it kept him in longer than when he was seized with a suitcase.

—oo—

In a city you are in danger of being run down by autos, and in a small town you are run down by gossips.

—oo—

Why is it that absent mindedness never makes us forget our troubles.

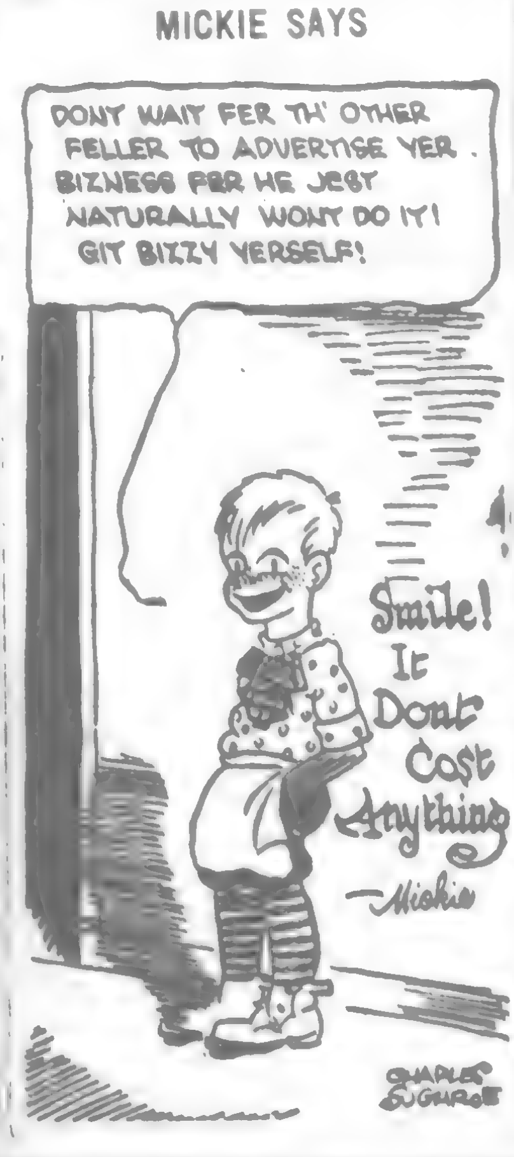
—oo—

Prosperity will come when men watch their work instead of watching the clock.

—oo—

"Another thing that is wrong with the movies," Lee Deardorf points out, "is that everyone squeezing past you in the seat seems to be fat."

MICKIE SAYS



DONT WAIT FER TH' OTHER FELLER TO ADVERTISE YER BIZNESS FER HE JEST NATURALLY WONT DO IT! GIT BIZZY YERSELF!
Smile! It Dont Cost Anything —Mickie
CHARLES SUGHROE

H. R. Minnick, M. D.

St. Joe, Indiana

Office at Residence

PHONE NO. 16X

UNCLE SAM OFFERS FREE BOOKLET

A Government booklet called "How Other People Get Ahead" has been issued by the U. S. Treasury Department. This booklet, designed particularly for persons with modest incomes, shows the necessity of exercising care in the management of resources, the beneficial effects of saving, how to differentiate between good and bad investments, the danger signs of fraudulent schemes, and the essentials of sound investment. "Why am I not as prosperous as my neighbor, whose income is less than mine?" is one question answered by the booklet. Copies may be obtained upon request to Wm. B. Bosworth, Government Savings Director, 230 So La Salle St., Chicago, Illinois

LATEST and BEST!

An INCREASING, life-long Monthly Income if Totally and Permanently Disabled by accident or disease before the age of 60 years.

THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK

$10 a month during first 5 years, $15 during the next 5 years, $20 thereafter for life. No further premium deposits. And then $1000 at your death to your beneficiary, or $2000 if death, at any age, is accidental, payable in a single sum, or as income for a term of years or for life. Total disability lasting 3 months regarded, during further continuance, as permanent.

J. C. HULL, St. Joe, Ind.

Please give me further information about this Perfect Life Insurance Policy

NAME ______________________

ADDRESS ______________________

Frank L. Milliman

TRUSTEE
Concord Township

Office Day Friday of Each Week at his residence 2 miles north and 1-2 mile West of St. Joe.

800 PAIRS TROUSERS

SPECIAL PRICES

$5.00

$6.50 and $8.00

Made from Suitings, fine Serges, all-wool Tweeds, Cassimeres and Worsteds.

Bring in that COAT, buy a pair of these TROUSERS and you will have an extra SUIT.

All sizes, 28 to 50 waist.

Patterson-Fletcher Co.
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA

The Store That Does Things Wayne & Harrison Sts.

Lehman's CLOTHING HOUSE

ESTABLISHED 1867

MENS AND BOYS OUTFITTERS

810 CALHOUN STREET

BEN LEHMAN PROP

Fort Wayne, Ind.

L 912

MAY

Secure Your VALUABLES

Those valuable papers that could not be replaced; those heirlooms; those important records.

Don't keep them at home where they are subject to fire, theft or "spontaneous disappearance"

Keep them behind locked steel doors in the safety vaults of this bank. Act now for Safety First and Always.

This Bank Will Help You Save.

Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank

Capital Stock, - $25,000

Spencerville, Ind.

The Bank of Personal Services

SPENCERVILLE

Mrs. Pohn Haifley is quite ill at this writing.

J. D. Markle of Fort Wayne, visited friends here Sunday.

Mrs. Francis Hursh spent the week-end with her aunt, Mrs. Sylvia Vanzile.

Mrs. Frank Wertman visited her sister-in-law, Mrs. Venson Gongrover, who is a patient at the St. Joseph hospital at Fort Wayne.

Miss Violette Reasoner of Auburn, and Ivan Reasoner of St. Joe, are visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Reasoner.

Carol Elaine is the name of the small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernie Reed of South Bend. Mrs. Reed is at the Souders hospital at Auburn and she will be remembered as Miss Mary Tyndall.

Mrs. Cora Steward and daughter, Arminta, very pleasantly entertained the C. C. Club on Friday afternoon. Games and contests were enjoyed. Besides the members the following guests were present: Mrs. Kraff, Mrs. Hahn, Mrs. Flemming, Mrs. Hazel Steward and daughter, Miss Doris Rhodes, and Miss Ada Bowser.

Dwight Coolidge and family spent Sunday with Mrs. A. Hoover of Oakwood.

Naomi Hensel of Auburn, visited friends at this place Sunday.

Alverta Steward of Garrett, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. M. J. Silberg.

Mrs. Sophia Miller entertained at Sunday dinner Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Silberg and daughter.

Mrs. Asher Cupp and children are visiting Edward Royrer and daughter of Foreaker, Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman and children were Sunday evening supper guests of Dayton Webb and family.

Miss Leo Bowser has accepted a position at the Wolf & Dessauer store at Fort Wayne.

Miss Bina Zimmerman of Tri State College, was an over Sunday guest of her parens, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Zimmerman.

Mr. and Mrs. R. U. Bowser of this place, Theo Bowser of Huntertown, were Sunday guests of the former's brother, Ivan C. Bowser and family of near New Haven.

Sidney Steffey and wife of Indianapolis are visiting the former's parents, Rev. and Mrs. S. D. Steffey and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles High entertained at dinner on Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Fred High.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Markle and Samuel Markle were Sunday dinner guests of Frank Wertman and wife

GLASSES—$2.50 up, Benj. F. Griest, Eyesight specialist, American Bldg., Hicksville, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wedd and granddaughters, Virginia and Maxine Webb, and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Markle, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Webb of Montgomery, Michigan.

Mt. Plearant

Dorothy Knight had as a Sunday guest Miss Gertrude Ginder.

Miss Fanny Varner visited Miss Doris McCollough Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Praul and little son were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Shank Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Keller spent Sunday as guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Keller.

Mrs. Mary Praul of Butler, is staying with her son, Eugene Praul and family.

Mrs. Winecoop of Florida, was a week-end guest of her granddaughter, Mrs. Harry Ginder.

Ross Hullinger and family of near Butler, were Sunday dinner guests of her father, Mr. Henry Krontz.

Miss Dorothy Snyder of near Auburn, spent the fore part of last week with her aunt, Mrs. Eugene Praul.

Mrs. John Weicht was called to Michigan Sunday by the death of her mother, Mrs. Charlie Workman. The remains were brought to Butler.

The Christian Endeavor is giving a big entertainment at the church Friday evening, May 25. A good time is assured.

The young folks who have been staying in town for the past nine months, attending High School, are back on the farm, enjoying life.

COLETOWN

Ra/n and Brown spent Saturday night and Sunday with Lester Walker.

Robert Fairchild of Madison, Ohio, spent Sunday with Freeman Johnson.

Opal Walker spent Sunday with Marie Ginther.

Clinton Anderson and family spent Friday with Alvin Walker and family.

Clyde Hart and wife visited Sunday evening with Claud Lamb and family.

Mrs. Ada Mann, Jay Hart and family called on John Varner and family Sunday afternoon.

LeRoy Mann, LeOral, Henry and Jessie Hart called on Milford Herrick Sunday afternoon.

Myron Johnson and family attended the funeral of Alice Anyder at Hicksville Sunday afternoon.

Nettie Conley was a Sunday guest of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Walker. Henry Kling and family were afternoon callers.

J. W. Hart and wife enjoyed Sunday dinner with Kell Hart and wife. Mrs. Will Hart of Fort Wayne was a guest, also.

Clair Miller of Auburn called at the Will Sauers home Sunday morning. Mrs. Miller and baby returned home with him after a few days visit.

Woodstone Is Not Inflammable.

Woodstone is the name of a material made of sawdust mixed with magnesia cement and compressed under enormous pressure. This woodstone is very like ordinary wood, save that it has no grain. It is made in planks which can be cut with a saw and planed, and has the advantage of not being inflammable.

Unpopular Invention.

A New York man has invented a machine which he says will tell any woman's age. He's going to be about as popular as a snake at a lawn social.

Sunday School Report.

The following is a true and correct report of the various Sunday Schools in this neighborhood for last Sunday.

Christian	109	$ 4 53
M. P	63	5 57
Lutheran	102	7.92
M. E. Spencer	81	4 36
Lutheran	101	6.07
Newville U. B.	81	3 73
Christian	81	3.71
Coburntown	61	2 91
Concord	49	2.63
Mt. Pleasant	92	3.82
Rehoboth	85	4 81

CONCORD

Carpenter work is quite booming on Miss Louetta Funk's house.

Mrs. Dan Morr had the misfortune of breaking her arm in a fall she had last Friday.

There was a good attendance at the community Club last week at Mrs. Fred Elsons.

Mr and Mrs. Hollis Jackson and Bert Jackson were Sunday visitors in the home of Charles Jackson and wife. In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Ford Jackson, Mrs. Pearl Jackson and Mrs. Charles Jackson were callers on Mrs. Less Sebring in Auburn, who has been quite sick.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Bone entertained on Sunday the following people: Mrs. Bertha Bone and three children, Pauline, Waneta and Deloris, and Mr. Sommers of Auburn, Lewis Howey and mother, Mrs. Lebb Wasson. In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. James Wyatt, Mrs. Anna Baker and others were callers at the same home.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Get a June Pictorial Review.

Get a June Mc Call's.

Get a June Ladies Home Journal.

Patronize the advertisers.

Try a want ad in the News.

Cabbage and tomatoe plants at the News office

Mr. and Mrs. Grover Ward of Albion, was overnight guests in the Foster Gee home Tuesday night.

Dr. and Mrs. R. H. Mimmick spent Sunday at Eden, Ohio, guests of her son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Stovestreet.

Rev. C. H. Havens returned to school last week for the first after his sickness, but was forced to come home on Thursday, having taken cold again.

GOOD PROPOSITION — To right man in this locality to handle Oxo-Gas Appliances for cooking and heating. Oxo-Gas Appliance Store, 208 E. Columbia St., Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Mrs. George Rock and Miss Mada Rock of Waynesboro, Pa., are here visiting their cousin, Minnie Thompson, in the home of Harvey Kimes. This is the first meeting of the cousins for forty years.

It will be of interest to readers to know that D C. McCann, who is at the Sacred Heart hospital at Garrett, suffering with plood poison is slightly improving. Tuesday his right sholder was operated on to remove puss that had gathered. Doctors gave the time of the crisis as Thursday.

Astrakhan Caviar.

Astrakhan caviar, produced from the eggs of the myriad of fish that abound the Caspian sea, is known throughout the world. The most famous hotels in America are proud when Astrakhan caviar appears on the bill of fare. Its production is one of the important industries of the city of Astrakhan, at the mouth of the mighty Volga river.

$5.00 ENROLLS YOU

Ford Weekly Purchase Plan

Why waste any more time longing for the pleasures you can get out of a Ford Car? Start now to make the Touring Car or any other type you may select, your own.

Soon you will have it to drive anywhere you want to go—camping—visiting—picnicking—or to your work.

Under the terms of the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan you can enroll for as little as $5.

We will deposit your payments in a local bank at interest. You can add a little every week. Soon the payments plus the interest, will make the car yours.

You will be surprised how little time it really takes to get a Ford after you make the start. Don't put it off—Enroll today. Come in and let us give you full particulars.

FRANK W. SILBERG, Agent,
Spencerville, Ind.

Office Cat

A citizen says that whenever a schoolma'am turns up her nose and draws down the corners of her mouth at the suggestion of going to a hot dog stand after the show, it's a safe bet that she's been out of college at least ten years.

—oo—

ATTA BOY!

I kissed her in the moonlight,
My head was in a whirl,
My mouth and eyes were full of hair,
My arms were full of girl.

—oo—

How does my invisible hair net look, dearie?

Can't a woman sing contralto without baring one shoulder?

—oo—

A fellow says a woman is never too old to make a fool out of some boob.

—oo—

ATTENTION HUSBANDS!

We lamped this sign inside a restaurant: "If wifie can't cook, don't divorce her. Eat here and keep her for a pet."

—oo—

A father blames pool rooms for his son's downfall when he should blame himself and his own neglect to hold woodshed father and son meetings with the boy.

—oo—

He who laughs last is usually last to get the joke.

Before selling your WOOL don't fail to see W. G. ERICK,

SPENCERVILLE, IND.

"A Stitch in Time Saves Nine!"

That fellow "Ole Proverb" certainly seemed to cover the map of human affairs with labels, and as in the case of many medicines, you've just got to read the labels and follow directions.

Now, tucked away in most people's memory are such items as leaky roofs, falling plaster, buildings far from weather and wind proof, which help to make the fuel bill run high, besides countless other memories of ills that came from letting things "go to rack and ruin."

Well, if you won't or can't build a new home or out buildings, at least repair the old one. Every "two-bits" invested that way is more than apt to save a dollar.

Think of us when youthink of this, as we have a full and complete stock of everything needed in building and repairing—and prices are right.

Spencerville Lumber Co.

ASHUR CULP, Manager

Lumber and Building Material of All Kinds

Spencreville, Ind.

After 8 Weeks You Must Change the Feed

For the first 8 weeks, Conkey's Buttermilk Starting Feed is the proper Feed, scientifically, for chicks, but

Growing Chicks Must Have a Different Feed

They must have more protein than the little chicks can stand. The same feed cannot serve for both purposes—for little chicks and for growing fowls—if you expect to get the best results. That's why Conkey makes

Conkey's

THE ORIGINAL

Buttermilk Growing Mash

(185)

This is the great developing feed that most successful poultrymen use to bring their fowls quickly to early maturity—that insures early broilers and layers. Just right in protein and low in fibre. It is a wonderful bone and flesh builder. Feed it for rapid and certain results.

Conkey's The Original Buttermilk Starting Feed

Should always be fed for the first 8 weeks. It is an appetizing combination of pure, sweet grain and concentrated sanitary Buttermilk compounded by a special process. Conkey uses Semi-Solid Buttermilk only — never dried Buttermilk.

STEWARD LUMBER & GRAIN COMPANY, Spencerville, Indiana
E. LEIGHTY GROCERY, St. Joe, Indiana

HOW'S THIS?

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE will do what we claim for it—rid your system of Catarrh or Deafness caused by Catarrh.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an [illegible] Relieves the [illegible] the [illegible] to restore [illegible]

[illegible] Years.

STOUT PERSONS

[illegible]

Relieved and digestion improved by

CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS

Cleansing and comforting - only 25c

MAY

L 912

American Farm Bureau

Governor Donahey signing Farnsworth-Green co-operative marketing bill. From left to right—Henry S. Ballard, Columbus, counsel for Ohio Farm Bureau federation; Murray D. Lincoln, executive secretary of Ohio Farm Bureau federation; C. A. Dyer, Coalton, Ohio, legislative agent, Ohio State grange; L. B. Palmer, Pataskala, president, Ohio Farm Bureau federation.

FARM BUREAU MAKES GOOD IN LOUISIANA

Brought Order Out of Chaotic Produce Market by Forming Marketing Association.

The Farm Bureau federation is making good on its promise, made when it entered Louisiana one year ago, to bring order out of the chaotic farm produce market.

During its first year of existence the Louisiana Farm Bureau federation has set up five marketing associations, with 9,000 members, capable of stabilizing the prices of the various commodities for which they were organized, while two others are in process of formation.

It has organized and put into operation a purchasing department which has demonstrated the effectiveness of collective buying of farm necessities toward restoring the value of the farmer's dollar.

It has worked out a comprehensive plan for the co-ordination of work among the agricultural forces of the state which promises great results in farm development. This plan takes into consideration complete and effective co-operation between the farm bureau, the state extension division, and the farmers themselves through their various selling associations and community organizations.

When Harry F. Kapp, organizer for the American Farm Bureau federation, first came to Louisiana in February, 1922, he brought the doctrine of orderly marketing as the basic principle for the organization of the farm bureau in this state. To that time the national federation had not definitely committed itself to fostering the development of commodity marketing associations, although it had gone on record as approving the movement. It has since established a division of marketing, headed by Walton Peteet of Texas, with the object of standardizing the entire marketing system of the country.

The commodity associations already established are as follows: The Louisiana Lespedeza Seed Growers' association, doing a business of $40,000 yearly; the Louisiana Farm Bureau Rice Growers' association, which is handling a business of $1,500,000 this season, and is preparing to take over the greater part of the rice crop of the state during the next year; the Louisiana Farm Bureau Cotton association, organized to do a business of $10,000,000 in 1923; the Louisiana Farm Bureau Strawberry Growers' exchange, and the Farm Bureau Perique Tobacco Growers' association, both ready to do business this season.

The Louisiana Farm Bureau Potato Growers' exchange, Truck Growers' exchange and Farm Bureau Wool Producers' association are now in process of formation, and plans are complete to launch a selling organization for the growers of sugar cane as soon as present organization work is completed. Total membership in the farm bureau and the various associations is approximately 9,000, with prospects of reaching double that figure before the end of the year.

Under the plan, as it is now in operation, the farm bureau maintains supervision over the field forces of all commodity associations, and will co-operate with the extension division in the endeavor to secure delivery of all produce under contract to the selling agencies. The associations will set up their own administrative offices, but will be relieved of the expense of soliciting new members and securing delivery of the commodities under the contract.

Paul Hoffman Secretary.

Paul Hoffman of Gettysburg, Pa., county agent of Adams county, has been appointed secretary of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Federation.

PATRONAGE DIVIDEND OF $8,000 DECLARED

Members Also Enjoy Advantages of Combined Strength in Marketing.

The Michigan Elevator Exchange has declared a patronage dividend of $8,000 on the business from April 1, 1921, to April 1, 1923. Payment of the dividend to the members will be made immediately after the proration is figured out. Every member elevator of the elevator exchange will participate. Elevators not members of the exchange cannot participate in the dividend, according to the rule of the exchange.

In 1922 the Michigan Elevator Exchange sold about $4,500,000 worth of grain, hay and beans for its membership. It has been in business about three years, and no co-operative elevator has ever lost a cent through failure of a Michigan Elevator Exchange sale. Elevator exchange members enjoy the advantage of their combined strength and volume in the markets, in doing business with the railroads and other interests. Organized, they are big enough to afford the lines of direct wire and telephone communication which puts the markets of the world at every co-operative elevator association member's elbow every day. This information is the life blood of successful marketing.

The patronage dividend of $8,000 and the net worth of $33,000 and the splendid sales organization of the Michigan Elevator Exchange are not all that the organization has done for grain-growing farmers. The elevator exchange has provided farmer competition which has improved prices to the farmer in many communities. The elevator exchange assures the farmer the market price every time.

The Michigan Elevator Exchange was started as a marketing department of the Michigan state farm bureau and is one of the farmer-owned and controlled marketing organizations that the state farm bureau has helped build.

CO-OPERATIVE LAW IN FORCE

Farmers Authorized to Incorporate and Contract for Sale of Members' Products.

Twenty-three states now have on their statute books the co-operative marketing law fostered by the American Farm Bureau federation. The first project of the department of co-operative marketing is a success.

When Walton Peteet became director of co-operative marketing for the farm bureau he announced that a proper preliminary to a unification of farmer marketing activities was the securing of a uniform co-operative marketing act in all the states. Much of his time during the first months with the American Farm Bureau federation he spent on this project. The law is now in force in 23 states.

The law authorizes the incorporation of farmers into a nonprofit association, either with or without capital. It permits this association to contract for the sale of a member's products for a specified period of years. It authorizes the proper financing of orderly marketing. It legalizes the co-ordination of co-operative handling similar products into state and national groups.

With the law now adopted in 23 states the way is clear for the co-operative marketing department to rapidly push its plans for the national unification of co-operative marketing projects.

The states which now have passed the law are: Texas, Mississippi, South Carolina, Virginia, South Dakota, Arkansas, Alabama, North Carolina, Kansas, Idaho, Tennessee, Louisiana, Georgia, Kentucky, North Dakota, Washington, Montana, Ohio, Minnesota, Missouri, Maine and Colorado.

RADIO

Tools That Can Be Made by the Amateur

Neatness in the construction of radio equipment depends greatly upon the facilities for handling the metal parts, panels and wiring, and correctly shaping each instrument or wire. By making and using the tools shown in the accompanying sketches the amateur will be greatly aided in his work.

Eight types of tools are shown, the material for which can be readily obtained or found among the contents of the tool box. Each tool will prove indispensable after its use has been learned and mastered.

No. 1. The small tweezer tongs, as shown, are made up of saw blades and a screw terminal. Obtain two lengths of hack saw blades, bend them to shape, drill for the screw terminal and rivets, then assemble. Small machine screws and nuts can be used instead of rivets if desired. The tongs will prove very useful when soldering or assembling light apparatus. A wing nut can be used for faster and easier action.

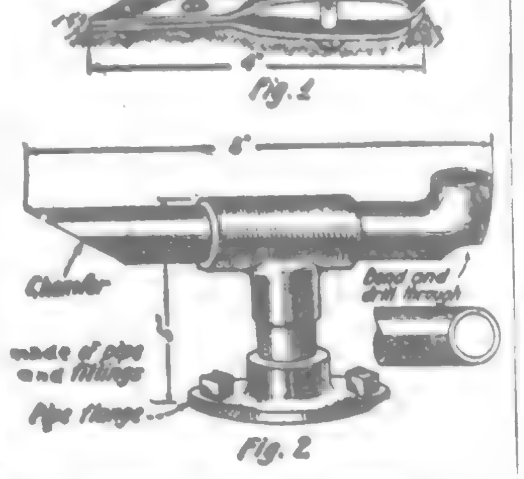

Fig. 1 Shows a Pair of Tweezers Made From Saw Blades. Fig. 2 a Small Anvil Useful for Light Work.

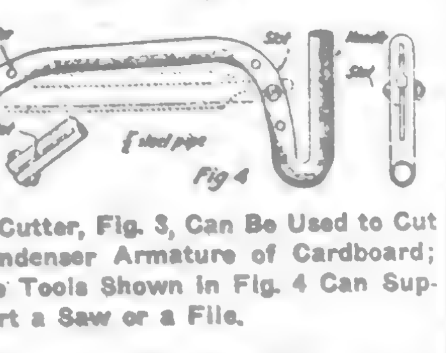
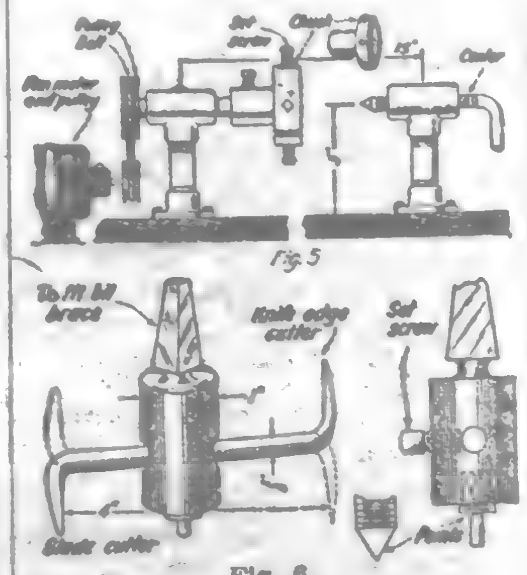
No. 2 is a small stake anvil of light construction. All parts are made from pipe or pipe fittings. As is clearly indicated, the base is made from a pipe flange, into which is screwed a small pipe upright, to the top of which is fitted a T joint. The cross pipes are cut and drilled, screwed into the T joint and the instrument is finished. A height of 5 inches and a length of 8 inches is to be preferred. In building up rheostats, coils, placing rivets and soldering, this tool finds a useful place.



The Cutter, Fig. 3, Can Be Used to Cut Condenser Armature of Cardboard; the Tools Shown in Fig. 4 Can Support a Saw or a File.

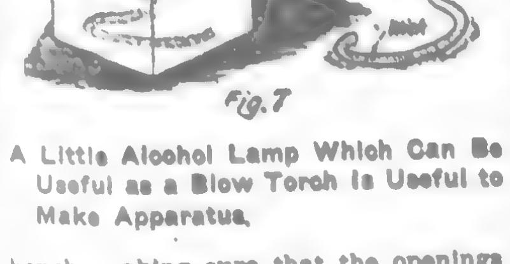
No. 3. The cutter and trimmer is made from two steel blades and a handle, suitably fastened to a wooden base. A graduated scale should be marked upon the base, one blade screwed to the side, the other blade bolted in place with a handle to operate it, and the whole instrument finished up neatly. This tool will prove handy in cutting condenser plates, shearing iron core stock and other light material.



Above Is a Coil Winder Which Can Be Built With Pipe Fittings. Below Is a Disc Cutter for Making Dials, Condenser Plates, Etc.

No. 4. This is a combination saw and file holder. A piece of ½-inch steel pipe is cut and bent to the proper size and slotted for the blade ends as shown. This holder will enable a firm hold to be had on saw blades or any type of file, either flat or circular.

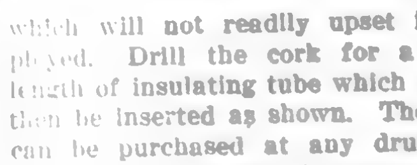
No. 5. A very simple and easily constructed coil winder can be made as follows: Two end supports should be made first. They consist of a pipe flange, a short length of pipe and a T joint. The supports are separated 15 inches and securely fastened to the bench, making sure that the openings are in line. One support is equipped with an axle, on one end of which is fastened a pulley. The chuck is fastened to the other end with a set-screw. The other support is equipped with a center. The axle can be turned with an electric motor, or the fan can employ the ever-present sewing machine for power. This instrument will aid greatly in winding all forms of coils and can also be used for drilling if desired.



A Little Alcohol Lamp Which Can Be Useful as a Blow Torch Is Useful to Make Apparatus.

No. 6. The disc cutter shown enables one to cut dials, condenser end plates, etc., from sheets. Bar stock is used throughout, the arrangement being very simple. This tool will fit the bit brace, and, if the size shown is adhered to, will give satisfactory service.

No. 7. This alcohol torch is a necessity in every station and its construction is so simple that every amateur should make one and derive the benefits therefrom. An ink or other bottle which will not readily upset is employed. Drill the cork for a short length of insulating tube which should then be inserted as shown. The wick can be purchased at any drugstore. Wood or real alcohol, if you can get it, can be used. For every purpose where heat is desired this will prove of value.



To Cut Grooves and Knurl Knobs Such a Mounting Is Convenient.

No. 8. The hand knurl and tube cutting tool shown consists of a handle with an adjustable elbow. When using the knurling disc it is possible to tighten up the numerous thumb screws and adjusting pieces. The cutting disc will allow easy grooving or cutting off of metal tubing or solid insulating rod. This device will be found very handy in a large assembling room, and the amateur will never regret the time spent in making this or any of the other tools described.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)

Trees of the Forests Absorb Radio Energy

Signals in transit across forests have lost much of their power especially in the spring and early summer when the sap and foliage make the trees better conductors of electricity. Radio waves passing over and through the trees give up energy just as in striking a steel building. If a short length of wire serving as an antenna can absorb sufficient energy from a passing wave to create a sound which can be heard several hundred feet away from the phones, one can realize how much energy may be intercepted by a large steel building with its electric wiring and pipes connected to the ground. Such absorption is particularly noticeable when short wave lengths are used.

When a wave length is eight to fourteen miles long "dead spots" seem to cause little interference. Such a wave is comparatively long compared to steel structures, and for this reason it is thought they do not obstruct the wave's path to such a great extent.

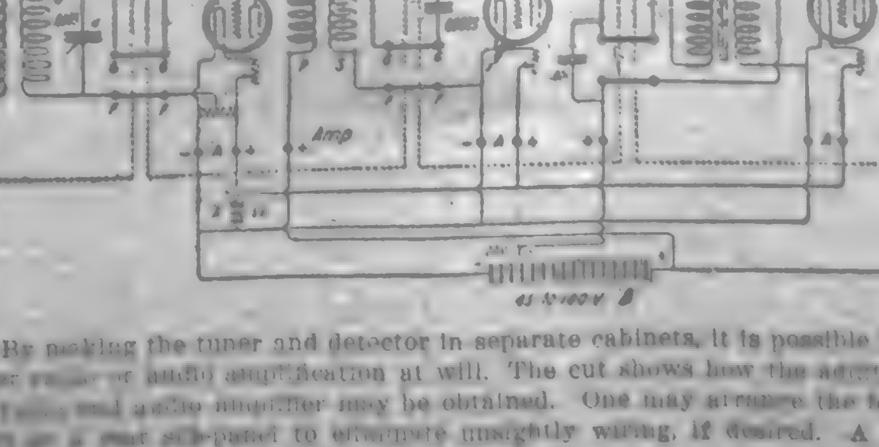
Baseball Reports Cheerful.

The radio reports of the baseball games are cheerful to even the friends of the defeated teams. The radio fans heard the cheers of the multitudes at the games.

Sweeps the Nation.

The almost daily new application of radio as a utility is illustrated by the headline "Radio sweeps the nation."

RECEIVING SET FOR ALLAROUND WORK



By making the tuner and detector in separate cabinets, it is possible to add other stages of audio amplification at will. The cut shows how the addition of the tuner and audio amplifier may be obtained. One may arrange the binding posts on a sub-panel to eliminate unsightly wiring, if desired. A height of 9 inches for each panel will be found suitable.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News

IMPROVED ROADS

IMPROVEMENT OF DIRT ROADS

Time to Find Out in Aiding Construction by Giving Attention to Neglected Highways.

Improvement of the present network of common or dirt roads, aggregating many hundred thousand miles, is urged by M. C. Krarup, a consulting engineer, as the next step in the better roads movement.

"According to authoritative information," says Mr. Krarup in Forbes Magazine, "a national program for completing in all 180,000 miles of fine road within 20 years is practically certain of being carried out. Phenomenal growth of motortruck and omnibus service has thereby at the same time been assured, if the business organization required for the best utilization of these vehicles keeps pace with the yearly increase in road facilities. This much assured, and guaranteeing a favorable development, it must now be time to find out how much more may be done if the possibilities of the neglected dirt roads are also looked into systematically by the business mind and the engineer.

"Common roads, if not all sand, will support and afford traction for any load, if surface and subgrade are both perfectly dry. The wheels need not be wider than for similar loads on highly improved roads. If the road is drained and high enough above the ground water, the required height depending on the drainage conditions of the surrounding country, the subgrade will always remain dry, and the surface, while it will be wet and perhaps soft or slippery after rain, will dry quickly and will not suffer from washouts. Thus, thorough draining is the first need of a common road. If such draining has been effected, all upkeep cost is reduced and all subsequent improvement of the road surface can be made effective and lasting without resurvey and regrading, whenever such improvement is wanted."

ROAD DRAGGING RULES

1. Use a light drag, hauled at an angle to the road so that a small amount of earth may be hauled to the center of the road.
2. Drive at a walk and watch the condition of the road ahead of the drag so that you may correct the faults.
3. Always ride the drag, do not walk.
4. Begin on the outside and return on the opposite unless the road is peaked and needs flattening.
5. Don't sleep on the drag; the result will prove your worth.
6. Fill all the perceptible ruts before they are deepened.
7. Cut the humps to a level section.
8. If the drag cuts too deep, shorten the hitch and vice versa.
9. The amount of earth carried along by the drag and the nicety in cutting and filling are controlled by the driver.
10. To make a drag cut deeper the driver should throw his weight upon the one foot near the cutting or forward corner of the drag.
11. The drag will cut less deeply as the driver's weight is shifted toward the rear and opposite corner of the drag.
12. If the front rail becomes clogged with weeds or if it is desired to deposit the load in a hole, the driver should quickly shift his weight to the farther corner of the drag.
13. The earth dug up by the forward cutting corner of the drag should be gradually worked toward the center of the road and shifted under the forward rail.
14. The rear rail should be set slightly leaning so as to trowel the surface smoothly.
15. The angle of the drag with the road and the length of the hitch are dependent upon local conditions and materials, but are quickly noticed by an intelligent driver.

MILLIONS FOR BETTER ROADS

At Beginning of Next Year There Will Be $63,375,000 Available for Building.

There will be $63,375,000 available for building better roads in the United States at the beginning of next year, according to an announcement of the American Farm Bureau federation. The amounts allotted to the following states are Illinois, $2,797,00; Indiana, $1,602,000; Iowa, $1,813,000; Wisconsin, $1,688,000, and Michigan, $1,942,000.

Of Big Interest to Farmer.

Motor transport is of particular interest to the farmer, since 153,400,000 tons of farm products are transported over the highways to the railways annually and additional thousands of tons are carried on the highways directly to the markets.

Driving Over Dragged Roads.

When the roads are first dragged after a very muddy spell the wagon should drive, if possible, to one side until the roadway has a chance to freeze or partially to dry out.

BACK ACHED TERRIBLY

Mrs. Robinson Tells How She Found Relief by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Amarillo, Texas.—"My back was my greatest trouble. It would ache so that it would almost kill me and I would have cramps. I suffered in this way about three years; then a lady friend suggested that I try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have had better health since, keep house and am able to do my work. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends as it has certainly given me great relief."—Mrs. C. B. ROBINSON, 608 N. Lincoln St., Amarillo, Tex.

The Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for women. It relieves the troubles which cause such symptoms as backache, painful times, irregularity, tired and worn-out feelings and nervousness. This is shown again and again by such letters as Mrs. Robinson writes as well as by one woman telling another. These women know what it did for them. It is surely worth your trial.

Housewives make a great mistake in allowing themselves to become so ill that it is well-nigh impossible for them to attend to their necessary household duties.

Probably a miser saves money because he doesn't know what else to do with it.

Cuticura Soothes Baby Rashes

That itch and burn, by hot baths of Cuticura Soap followed by gentle anointings of Cuticura Ointment. Nothing better, purer, sweeter, especially if a little of the fragrant Cuticura Talcum is dusted on at the finish. 25c each.—Advertisement.

Literature.

"What has become of the dialect story?"

"Nowadays they tell it in slang."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

FOR OVER 40 YEARS

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE has been used successfully in the treatment of Catarrh.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an Ointment which Quickly Relieves by local application, and the Internal Medicine, a Tonic, which acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces, thus reducing the inflammation.

Sold by all druggists.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

A Woman's Way.

"Why did you go without a winter coat, dearie?"

"To buy some summer furs."

You Don't Have to Walk a Mile to Buy

"Dodd's Kidney Pills"

Patronize Your Neighborhood Druggist —He Sells Them

Used and Recommended During a Period of Over 40 Years

For Diseased, Deranged and Disordered Kidneys

Prompt Relief or Your Money Back

Large Box 60c

At All Drug Stores

DODDS KIDNEY PILLS

Dodds Medicine Co., 700 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

A Mild Laxative — DIAMOND DINNER PILLS — Never Gripe

Salesmen—Side Line. Nothing to carry. Work while waiting on trains. Every business man a prospect. Possibilities for real money. U. S. Feder. Serv. Co., 1105 Mallers Bldg., Chicago.

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO RECEIVE 100 letters daily, each containing dime? Three formulas and plans, 10c. Strictly legitimate. PETER BECKX, Askeaton, Wis.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

Removes Dandruff-Stops Hair Falling

Restores Color and Beauty to Gray and Faded Hair

60c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

Hiscox Chem. Wks. Patchogue, N. Y.

HINDERCORNS Removes Corns, Callouses, etc., stops all pain, ensures comfort to the feet, makes walking easy. 15c. by mail or at Druggists. Hiscox Chemical Works, Patchogue, N. Y.

DAISY FLY KILLER PLACED ANYWHERE ATTRACTS AND KILLS ALL FLIES. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Sold by dealers, or 5 by EXPRESS, prepaid, $1.25.

HAROLD SOMERS, 150 De Kalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine from any druggist and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful, clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double-strength Othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Cuticura Soap Imparts The Velvet Touch

Soap 25c, Ointment 25 and 50c., Talcum 25c.

THE JOY of LIVING

By SIDNEY GOWING

Illustrations by Ellsworth Young
Copyright 1922 by Sidney Gowing

JACK THE CLIMBER

SYNOPSIS.—Disliking the prospect of a month's visit to her austere aunt, Lady Erythea Lambe, at Jervaulx abbey, and her cousin, Alexander Lambe, Aimee, vivacious daughter of the Very Reverend Viscount Scroope, meets a young man who laughingly introduces himself as "Billy," American. The two ride on his motorcycle, the "Flying Sphinx," and part. With Georgina Berners, her cousin, Aimee sets out for Jervaulx. She forces Georgina to impersonate her at Jervaulx, and she goes on a holiday. Aimee again meets Billy. He tells her his name is Spencer, and she gives hers as Amy Snookes, at present "out of a job." Billy offers to take her into partnership in selling the Sphinx. In a spirit of madcap adventure, she accepts. The two proceed to the town of Stanhoe, taking separate lodgings in Ivy cottage. While Aimee is secretly visiting Georgina at Jervaulx, the place is burglarized, and the famous Lambe emeralds are stolen. Aimee escapes. Police decide the thieves are "Jack the Climber" and "Calamity Kate," who travel on a motorcycle. Billy, who has shadowed Aimee to Jervaulx, follows the thieves. He is knocked out, but emerges from the fight with the Lambe emeralds. He meets Aimee, with the police in pursuit. In a secure hiding place, a cave among the crag pits, Aimee tells him the whole story. He urges her that she make a frank confession to her father, but on reflection both realize Aimee's good name has been compromised. Assuring Aimee he has a plan to save her, Billy leaves her in the cave and, proceeding to Jervaulx, restores the emeralds to the astounded Lady Erythea. Billy tells a story that satisfies the police, refuses a reward and accepts a chauffeur's job from Lady Erythea. Aimee gets the place of parlor maid at Jervaulx. Alexander thinks he recognizes Aimee as "Calamity Kate." Georgina divulges Aimee's identity. Hearing her story, Alexander consents to keep the secret. Alexander finds himself very much in love with Georgina. Alexander's sister, Lady Diana, arrives. Another visitor is the Vicomte de Jussac, her suitor. Diana recognizes Aimee and threatens to denounce her. Aimee confides in De Jussac. De Jussac is accepted by Diana and Aimee makes her promise to keep silence. Alexander is accepted by Georgina. Lady Erythea, still in the dark, is delighted.

CHAPTER XXI—Continued.

—10—

He passed along the wider lane in the direction of Jervaulx, his eyes scanning the ground and the ditch. A little distance short of the gate through which Billy had wheeled the Sphinx when dodging the police, he stooped quickly and picked up a scrap of metal. It was the broken end of an exhaust silencer.

"I was right!" ejaculated Billy. "Here they crashed again—or the engine gave out for good. And they came the very way I did myself. And one of the two was lame—dead lame. One sure thing—they couldn't have got far that night. And if they weren't able to ride the thing, what did they do with it?"

He hurried to the far end of the field, where the last of the tracks had failed. He hesitated, and glanced towards the distant crag-pits.

"What should I have done myself—if I hadn't known the ground?" he thought. "I'll try here first."

Less than a hundred yards to the right was a clump of brushwood, growing alone, a little oasis on the bare field.

The bushes masked a narrow clay pit, twenty feet deep, that had been delved in times past to bring up the heavy marl subsoil and spread it over the sandy field. It was now completely cloaked with brambles. Billy pulled them apart, and saw something gleaming dimly at the bottom of the pit.

It was the buckled frame of a big twin Indian motorcycle.

With a whoop of triumph Billy clambered down the steep side of the pit and disappeared through the brambles. He remained below some time.

When at last he emerged and stood on the brink, Billy's face was rather pale, and his eyes troubled.

"Great Caesar's ghost!" he said. "Who'd have expected this? Now—if I can pick up the other track, I'll have the game in my hands!"

He hurried in the direction of the distant crag-pits, then suddenly pulled up short and glanced at his wrist-watch.

"Aimee!" he exclaimed.

He had an appointment with Aimee at five, and an urgent one. It was already past the hour. Billy set off at a run, and in ten minutes reached the rendezvous. Aimee was there already, in a rough serge walking-cloak and a Snooks hat trimmed with calico violets. In spite of the costume she looked vividly lovely.

"Mr. Chauffeur," said Aimee, severely, "I don't know if you think I want to waste my afternoon off like this. You're late."

"I'm sorry," panted Billy. "Came as quick as I could."

"What are you looking excited about?" she said, eyeing him suspiciously.

"Oh—just seeing you," blurted Billy.

"That isn't true. I've never seen you look excited before. You've found out something. What is it?"

Billy paused.

"It's true. I have found out something," he said quietly, "but there's more to do, and I haven't quite all the cards in my hands. It's the most amazing stunt yet. I'll tell you about it the moment I've got it set."

Aimee looked at him wistfully.

"I don't think you ought to have any secrets from your partner," she said. "I always tell you everything."

"Give me till tonight," pleaded Billy. "I hate to talk about it now. It's ugly. By tonight we shall have either won or lost—but we'll win! Will you trust me?"

Aimee seated herself on the turf beneath the sweetbriars.

"All right then," she said happily. "Let's forget our troubles for a bit. Sit down—you look so tall, towering up there, that I can hardly see you—and I'll tell my news. It's much more interesting than yours. Do you know that Alexander has got himself engaged to my dear fat Georgie, and they're idiotically happy?"

"Has he?" cried Billy, dropping beside her. "Good for him! She's a real trump of a girl, that. And the parson's as white as they make them—he's a fine fellow."

"Yes. Georgie will exactly suit him. I shouldn't have, a bit."

"You!" exclaimed Billy.

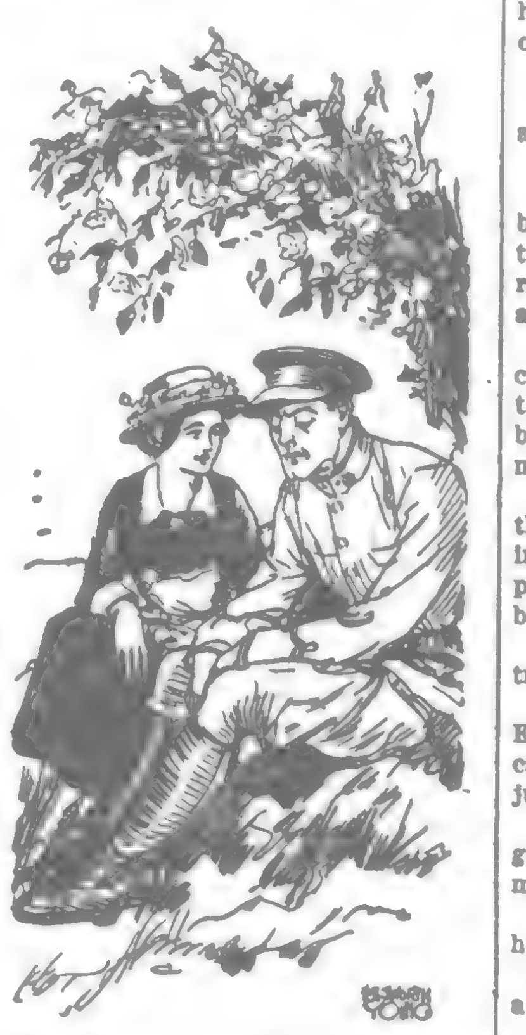
"Exactly. Aunt Erythea's idea is that Alexander's marrying me. You're not very bright today, Billy. They'll have a funny tangle to straighten out, when the crash comes."

"Gee! They will. We'll have to help them somehow."

"Of course we shall. But I wonder how we'll do it. And that's not all—the Vicomte has suddenly become betrothed, as he calls it, to Alexander's sister—Cold Lambe."

"She'll tone him down," said Billy.

"Not a bit. He'll tone her up," replied Aimee confidently, "and a jolly good thing, too. So there they all are.



Billy Stared Before Him Gloomily.

I oughtn't to have mentioned it to you, Billy—I know how it depresses you. It's horrible—all this sentiment."

Billy stared before him gloomily, and was silent.

"Isn't it!" insisted Aimee.

"Sickening!" said Billy, bitterly.

Aimee glanced at him and, looking away, stirred the grass with the point of his shoe. There was a long pause.

"What was it you were saying about things?" said Aimee.

"I told you," replied Billy, "that before tomorrow it will either be a complete crash—or all clear."

Aimee nodded.

"I see. That means, in the first case, that I'll be exploded—broken—done for—"

"No!" said Billy, sharply.

"It does, though. But in the second, if things go better—I shall just be back at Scroope, in a sort of mild disgrace—stood in the corner. That's nothing much. I'm used to it. And there you are! Well, the curtain's soon going to ring down. Our partnership—"

Billy turned to her quickly.

"Is finished," continued Aimee quietly, looking out across the park. "I shan't be able to ride the Sphinx for you, Billy. I'm sorry about that. It would have been fun."

Billy caught his breath.

"You mean," he said slowly, "that I shan't see you again?"

"I mean that. How can you? Our little holiday is over, Billy."

His fingers closed on the turf on either side of him, and dug deep.

"I understand. It's up to me. Tomorrow—we don't even know each other."

He let go the turf, and caught her hands.

"Aimee!"

"Billy!"

Before either of them knew how it happened, he had her in his arms.

"I can't let you go!" said Billy wildly. "You're the darling of the world. The loveliest, brightest thing that ever breathed. Aimee—do you think—you could try and love me?"

"Love you?" said Aimee, trembling. "Who could help loving you, Billy!"

He held her tight and kissed her.

"I was so frightened—" said Aimee, in a stifled voice.

"Frightened—!" He held her tighter. "That you'd be frightened—"

"Me!"

"—of being sentimental," panted Aimee.

Billy felt stunned.

"If you knew what I've been through," he said a little hoarsely, "this past week—trying not to let you see it!"

He kissed her again—more than once. Then he sat back, his head in a whirl. There was the longest pause yet; a silence that seemed interminable.

They were recalled to earth by a staccato noise.

"Yap! Yap! Yap! Yap! Yipe-yipe!"

Aimee and Billy started violently. A small white Highland terrier, with its four legs braced, was barking at them excitedly, but not wholly with disapproval.

Aimee felt stricken as though by a sudden paralysis. Behind the terrier stood Lady Erythea, erect and rigid. The glare in her eyes was the glare of a destroying Gorgon.

CHAPTER XXII

Not Guilty.

The guilty pair arose to their feet. Aimee, from rosy red, had turned extremely pale. There was every excuse for it. Lady Erythea's expression was enough to unnerve the stoutest heart.

"And this," in a voice like the clashing of a motor's gear-box, "in the face of my express warning! You are discharged." She took a step towards Aimee. "And as for you—"

Billy interposed his large figure between them.

"Madam," he said, "if you have any comments to make, please make them to me. Or, better still—do not make them at all."

His voice was quiet and respectful. But his chin was lifted remarkably high, and his lips compressed dangerously.

Lady Erythea struggled for breath.

"Are you presuming," she said, in a strangled voice, "to dictate to me!"

Mr. William Spencer bowed.

"I hope—my lady—that it will not be necessary. What I do presume is to defend Miss—Snooks—against any reproaches whatever. This is her afternoon off."

Aimee looked at them both—especially at Lady Erythea. And for once the "sand," on which she had so often been complimented, deserted her. Aimee turned suddenly and fled.

The terrier, under the impression that it was all an extremely interesting game got up for his amusement, pursued her out of sight round the bushes, giving tongue excitedly.

Billy kept his eyes fixed on the intruder.

"If you require an explanation, Lady Erythea," he said quietly, "I guess I can give you one very briefly. I have just asked Miss Snooks to marry me."

Lady Erythea was mentally staggered. "You have asked her—to marry you?" she said, staring at Billy.

"And she has done me the great honor to consent."

Billy's grim expression relaxed into a very charming smile.

"I feel sure your ladyship will not throw any obstacles in the way of this humble romance," he said gently. "We shall be very happy to have our employer's approval."

His employer gazed at him dumbly. The announcement came as a shock. And it was difficult even for Lady Erythea to resist Billy's smile. As well attempt to resist a sunbeam. She melted imperceptibly. Her faculties were bemused. Billy, despite the smile, looked so extraordinarily dignified that Lady Erythea almost felt an impulse to apologise to her chauffeur.

She made an effort to recover her austerity.

"You have asked this girl to marry you—after an acquaintance of four days?" she said acidly. "Is that—an American custom?"

Billy's smile intensified.

"I haven't much experience, my lady," he said, "but I think it's a British custom, too—sometimes."

With two such recent examples at hand, her ladyship felt unable to contradict him. She looked at him steadily, wondering why she felt no resentment. There was something so remarkably disarming about Billy.

"What you tell me, Spencer," she said at last, "places a new aspect on the case. It is, I suppose, within your discretion to engage yourself to a young woman if you wish to do so. The situation in which I found you led me to suspect mere irresponsible philandering—a thing most stringently forbidden within the precincts of Jervaulx. Admitting the seriousness of your intentions," she continued with returning indignation, "I am still unable to consider your behavior decorous."

"I was very careful to choose a place just outside the park boundary, my lady," said Billy gravely, "and I was obliged to make use of the small amount of free time at my disposal."

Lady Erythea drew a long breath.

"I am making unprecedented allowances for you, Spencer," she said, "since I cannot forget how far I am indebted to you for the recovery of my emeralds. If I was under a misapprehension as to your conduct just now, it was natural. I will say no more. But I gather from this event that you will be leaving my service in any case, so I will merely give you a week's notice—if you are willing to stay so long."

"Yes, I guess I shall be quitting rather soon," said Billy, "but I'll be very glad to serve your ladyship in the meantime, and I hope I'll give satisfaction. But, may I take it that you won't put it across—that you will not say anything to—Amy?"

"I have nothing more to say in the matter whatever," replied her ladyship abruptly. "But you must understand that the conduct of both of you will have to be rigidly circumspect and correct."

Billy twinkled.

"We shall be careful to give your ladyship no grounds for complaint," he said.

Lady Erythea had a vague impression that Billy was laughing at her. It was stranger still that she did not seem to feel any resentment.

"You may go!" she said, with a gesture of dismissal.

Billy saluted and walked away. She watched his tall figure till it had receded some little distance, and then recalled him.

"Spencer!"

Billy returned. Lady Erythea inspected him through her lorgnette.

"Are you sure that this is a wise thing you are doing?" she said slowly. "You seem to me a somewhat superior young man. I think you could do much better for yourself."

Billy twinkled yet more brightly.

"I should hate to disagree with your ladyship," he said, "but I am quite sure I couldn't."

Lady Erythea turned and walked away with a dazed air.

Billy passed through the gate into the lane, and made for the abbey at his best speed. He hoped that Aimee might be waiting for him somewhere within call, but there was no sign of her. Thinking it likely she would be in the neighborhood of the garage, he hurried in that direction. He was within sight from the park boundary, when Monsieur de Jussac, approaching the fence from the abbey, saw him and called him by name.

Billy was too far away to hear. The Vicomte whistled, without result. He saw Billy disappear in the direction of the crag-pits. De Jussac hesitated, uncertain whether to follow.

"Our amazing chauffeur appears to be in a hurry," murmured Bertrand. He took out a cigarette, and smoked it reflectively. Bertrand was looking a little puzzled and anxious. Finally he wandered slowly back towards the abbey.

As he neared the main entrance the quack of a motor horn was heard, and an automobile drove up rapidly. It contained the stolid Inspector Panke from Stanhoe. Beside him sat a slim and active-looking man in a gray tweed overcoat.

De Jussac, raising his eyebrows, drew near unobtrusively. The man in tweeds got out and stepped briskly up to Mr. Tarbeaux, who was standing on the steps.

"You have a chauffeur here," said the man in tweeds quietly, "who calls himself William Spencer."

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Tarbeaux.

Bertrand de Jussac moved away, with the air of one retreating from a situation with which he had no concern. He lit a cigarette as he went, but once on the far side of the rhododendrons, Monsieur de Jussac began to move with uncommon swiftness.

"Is he on the premises at the moment?" said the visitor.

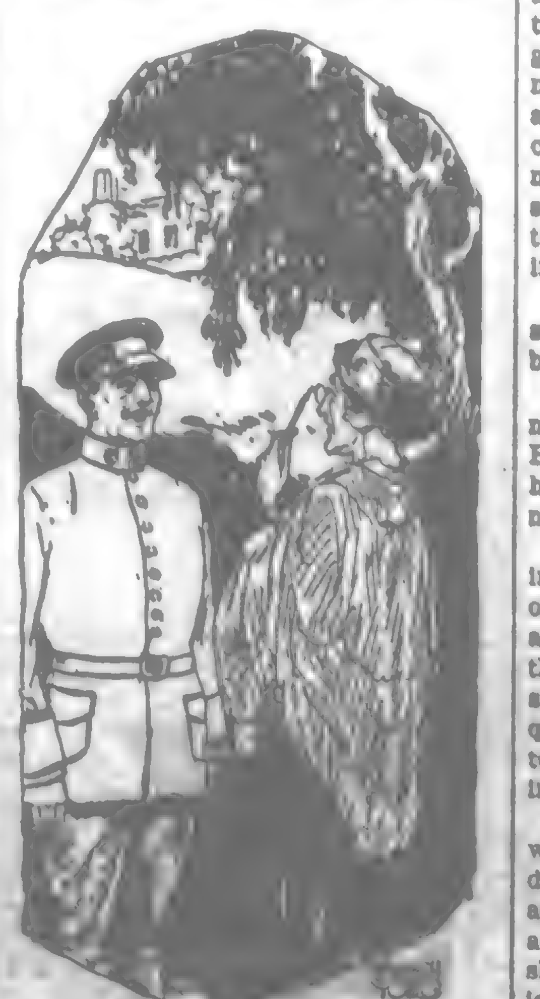
"I do not know, sir," replied Mr. Tarbeaux with cold reserve, eyeing the police car. "If you wish to see her ladyship—"

"I do. Inform her at once, if you please, that the police are here."

Mr. Tarbeaux went indoors, leaving the visitor on the step. It was some little time before Lady Erythea herself came to the entrance, grim and forbidding, ear-trumpet in hand.

"I am Detective-Inspector Arkwright, from Scotland Yard," said the visitor. "I wish to see your chauffeur, my lady—William Spencer."

"For what purpose?" said her ladyship, examining him icily through her lorgnette.



Lady Erythea Inspected Him.

"That will transpire as soon as I have seen him," said Arkwright a little sharply.

A face peered down cautiously from a second-floor window. It was the face of Aimee, very white and scared. She drew back quickly behind the window curtains, one hand clutching and kneading them tightly as she listened.

"Does this mean," said her ladyship with distinct hostility, "that you propose to arrest my chauffeur? If not, what do you mean? He is the man who restored the emeralds to me, when the police failed to achieve anything whatever, and I have complete confidence in him. If that really is your intention, it is my opinion you are about to make fools of yourselves."

Inspector Arkwright looked both surprised and irritated.

"I am here with full authority, my lady," he said abruptly, "and my task is to clear this matter up. Out of consideration for you, I have come here quite openly, and what my intentions are I must at the moment keep to myself."

"It is Spencer's afternoon off, I believe," said Lady Erythea coldly. "I do not think he is on the premises."

The inspector was plainly taken aback by his reception. His lips tightened to a thin line. Just then a policeman on a bicycle came riding rapidly along the drive. It was Constable Polson.

"Beg pardon, sir," he said, dismounting and saluting the inspector, "have you found the man you are looking for here?"

"Why?" said Arkwright abruptly.

"Well, sir, I know him by sight, of course," said Polson in a lower voice—"the chauffeur, I mean—and as I came off the Stanhoe road awhile ago, I saw somebody like him crossing the forty-acre field and going towards the crag-pits. I thought I'd better hurry on and tell you. I'm sure it was he."

"Excellent! You are a man that keeps his eyes open," exclaimed Inspector Arkwright. "Come, Panke—leave the car here. Polson, show us the way."

The three of them departed together hurriedly in the direction of the park boundary.

Lady Erythea stared after them with mingled anger and anxiety. She waited for some time on the steps, pondering, and then went slowly indoors. Her eyes were troubled.

The three police, crossing the park, left it by a wicket gate near the sweet-briar clump. After a short consultation with Polson, Inspector Arkwright gave an order. The three men spreading out in a wide semi-circle, stalked the crag-pits by way of the lower meadow.

CHAPTER XXIII

Jack the Climber.

Mr. William Spencer, after arriving in the fallow-field where stood the clump of bushes that hid the broken Indian motorcycle, made a rapid survey of the situation. He resumed his task of quartering the ground for tracks.

This, being unfruitful, occupied but a little time. He gave it up and went forward again, dipping down into the crag-pits beyond.

Billy had formed upon the factors already in his possession a theory which appealed to him strongly. He hoped to prove it. But the hope was very slender.

"If I'd only got wise to this two days ago," he said gloomily, "I might have done something. But there's no saying how old the tracks are. And there's so little time."

He looked about him thoughtfully. The area of the crag-pits covered some twenty acres; a wide bottom of red sand studded here and there with tangled bushes. The place was shut in by low red bluffs of coraline crag, with a few gaps in them through which winding paths sloped up to the higher ground.

"The soil tells me nothing," said Billy to himself; "too loose and windblown to hold a trail more than two days. But there's five—maybe six caves, most of them too plain and easy—anybody can see 'em. Still, I'll go over them. My own first. I guess there's nobody could have found that."

He wound his way through the bushes to the screen of brambles that masked the cave where Aimee had taken refuge on the night of the burglary, and after scanning the ground near its approaches, pushed the briars aside and entered cautiously. The cave was empty—save for that supermotorcycle, the Flying Sphinx, which stood waiting in patient dumbness at the far end, weeping slow tears of oil into a little pool beneath the silencer.

Billy laid a hand upon his Arab steed, and sighed. Then his face brightened amazingly.

"Your time'll come again—and mighty soon!" he said with affection. He turned, and left the cave. It was holy ground to him now; for one night it had been Aimee's refuge.

He passed farther along the pits, inspecting a second and much more obvious cave on his way. He was just about to emerge from it when something caught Billy's eye, on the far side of the pits. He shrank back quickly into the cave's mouth and flattened himself against the wall, watching.

The object which gave him pause was very small, and fully four hundred yards distant. But it showed against the sky-line and to the eye of a frontiersman anything that cuts the sky-line, and that moves ever so little, is at once apparent. What Billy saw was the upper part of a head, peering over the edge of the little cliff on the opposite side.

A pair of shoulders followed the head, and their owner was obviously watching the pit with a desire to discover whether the coast was clear. There was a curious furtiveness about the figure that presently appeared, and dropping down the cliff by a steep path reached the lower ground and crossed it at a run.

Billy crept from the gloom of the cave's mouth and, crouching behind the briar bushes, peered through them eagerly. The running figure was a woman—a small woman clad in a khaki-colored dust-cloak, carrying a little red bundle. She ran with a stooping gait, bending low as she threaded between the bushes. She reached a point against the cliff on Billy's side, three hundred yards farther along, close by a tangle of undergrowth. There she halted, and, looking round her quickly, disappeared with extreme suddenness.

"Great Christopher!" said Billy.

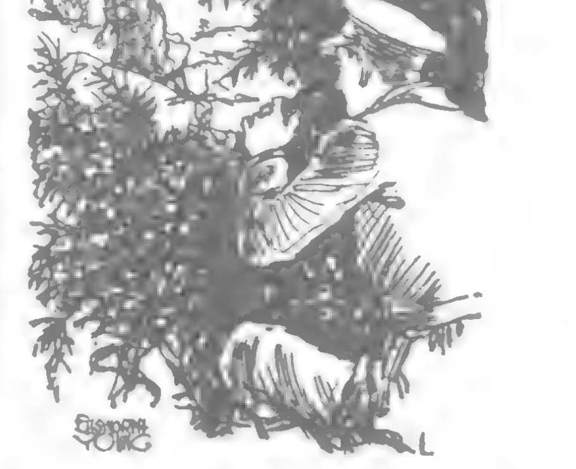
He rose to his knees, staring at the place where she had vanished. His eyes were bright, his face had lit up.

"I was right," he said in a hushed tone. "But, gee! I never thought of this."

He rose, as if to follow, but on second thoughts subsided again and waited. He remained there fully ten minutes, when the figure reappeared, and hurried along the pit bottom in his direction.

Billy wormed himself hurriedly under the tangled briars at some cost to his skin. The woman passed him within seventy yards, walking rapidly. She was no longer carrying the bundle.

When she had passed, Billy peeped after her. Though he could not see her face, he had not the slightest doubt who she was. She disappeared round the bend of the pits.



The Running Figure Was a Woman.

Billy extricated himself cautiously from the bush and waited for some time on his knees, staring in the direction she had taken. There was nothing more to be seen of her. Then, springing to his feet he sprinted to the spot where she had first vanished with the bundle.

The bushes partially cloaked the mouth of one of the many crag caves; the entrance was not difficult to find when one was close to it. Billy walked in without hesitation. He found precisely what he expected.

On the floor of the cave, stretched upon a couch of dry bracken, lay a man. He was not a spectacle which in any way gladdened the eye.

He was big and lusty of limb; what little could be seen of his face through a week's growth of brown stubble was haggard. His beak of a nose jutted between two fierce deep-sunk eyes. One of his legs was extended, and swathed from foot to knee in dripping-wet calico bandages that looked as if they had been ripped from a woman's garment.

Billy found himself looking down the muzzle of a small repeating pistol, held in a hairy but very steady fist.

"Stop right where you are," said the occupant of the cave, reclining on one elbow. "Don't move a step forward, nor yet a step back. Get me?"

Billy stopped obediently. He calculated the distance between them to be a dozen feet; there was no likelihood of capturing the pistol before the bullet struck him. The eyes of the man showed that he meant business. He was in fact, less like a man than a crippled wolf.

"Jack the Climber," said Billy blandly, "I am pleased to meet you. I've been looking for you quite a while."

"Don't give me that fool name!" snarled the caveman. "My name is Jake."

"Anything to oblige. Mr. Jake, there's the little matter of the Jervaulx burglary against you, among others."

"What are you givin' me!" retorted Jake.

"The bluff doesn't go," said Billy. "Your motorcycle's yonder in the clay pit. All the cards are out."

The man's face twitched.

"Are you the police?"

"No," said Billy.

Jake stared at the tall form in front of him, and emitted a startled oath.

"I b'lieve you're the guy that slugged me, last Saturday night," he said.

"Quite correct."

"You're on your own, eh?" Jake's head craned forward, his eyes on Billy's face. "And alone, I guess!"

"Do you take me for a fool?" said Billy calmly.

The man shivered. The expression in his eyes was dreadful.

"See here!" he said sullenly. "You've got me set. I can't move. I'm up against it. I know they'll pull me. Well, I'll take my dose. I'll throw my hand in!"

"Wise of you."

> "Let her go!" said Aimee, breathlessly. "Let her go!"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Honest.

"Can you pick out a good cantaloupe?" "[illegible] for myself," replied the truthful grocer.

L 912

Get Your
Daily Bread - - Welcome Flours
at the J. C. Bailey Store St. Joe
Made by G. A. WARD of the
ALBION ROLLER MILLS, Albion Indiana

HERE AND THERE

For Sale—11 Shoats
Harp Leighty.

Mrs. Tom White is very much improved from her recent illness.

Henry Engle, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Engle, is ill with rheumatism.

Mrs. Byron Widney visited Mrs. Sarah Widney at Concord Sunday afternoon.

Harry Cole of Five Corners, Ohio, spent Sunday with his brother, Glen Cole.

The Junior-Senior banquet was held last Friday evening in the school building.

Mr. and Mrs. Saxe Hadsell were at LaGrange visiting relatives over Sunday.

Willis Baker was a Sunday guest in the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Carpenter.

Edgar Lysher and Clair Coburn were home over Sunday from their work in Fort Wayne.

R. B. Daily and daughter, Louetta, have moved their household goods to Hamilton.

Dan Myer and family of Hicksville, spent Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. Sam Kees.

Mrs. Emma Moon of Logansport, Indiana, is making a two weeks' visit with her daughter, Mrs. William Quance, and husband.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Woodcox have gone to housekeeping in the Ella Smith property in the west end of town.

Roy Koch and family and Will Koch and wife visited their cousin, Eugene Cook and wife at Cedarville Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Milliman visited their daughter, Mrs. John Keester and husband near Rehobeth Sunday.

Elmer Hickman of Hicksville, was an over nigh guest of his brother, Francis Hickman and family Thursday.

Miss Portia Hadsell entertained Sunday Miss Katherine Shull of near here, Kenneth Meek of Coletown, and Allen Haller of South Bend.

Mrs. A. D. Goodwin and two little daughters, Carol Jean and Helen leave Wednesday for a ten day visit in the home of her brother, J. B. Goebel at Lima, Ohio.

Mesdames Hattie Widney, Flossie Widney and Alice Copp and Edith Widney, D. L. Carpenter and Carl Carpenter were Fort Wayne visitors Monday.

D. C. McCann has been reported as improving. Mrs. McCann is in Garrett where she can be near him. John Koch visited him Sunday at the Sacred Heart hospital.

Faye Reichelderfer and family of Fort Wayne, spent Saturday night here with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John Betz, and on Sunday morning, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Betz they motored to Defiance, Ohio, to attend a birthday dinner at the home of Oden Helf and wife in honor of Mrs. Fred Reichelderfer of Fort Wayne. Mrs. Helf, Mrs. Fred Reichelderfer, and Mr. Betz are brothers and sisters.

C. R Baumgartner, D V M
Veterinarians
OFFICE and HOSPITAL
SPENCERVILLE - IND.
Phones—Office No. 7
F W Silberg, D V M

Patronize The Advertisers.

Get a June Cosmopolitan.

Mrs. Anna Baker was a Sunday dinner guest of her brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Koch.

James Daum and wife of near Grabill, have moved into the Bleeks property north of the railroad.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Woodcox and children and Mrs. Ella Gill spent Sunday in the Otis Gall home near Auburn.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jordan and little son of Fort Wayne, spent over Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Barney.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton and daughter were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Abner Trostel.

The Pythian Sisters, together with some friends, gave the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Williams, an old fashioned belling Monday night.

Byron Widney and father, S. L. Widney, visited D. C. McCann at the Sacred Heart hospital Sunday afternoon.

Dr. and Mrs. C. R. Price and the latter's father, David Dill, went to Fort Wayne Sunday where they spent the day with relatives, Mr. Dill remaining.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Woodcox, daughter, Martha, and son, Malcolm, spent Sunday in Huntington, guests of Mrs. Woodcox' brother, Frank Filley and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Miser, daughter, Martha, and son, Frank, visited Auburn and Waterloo relatives Sunday. Miss Aline Showers of the former place, returned home with them to be a guest until Thursday.

A Ford car in which six freshmen of the Auburn high school were riding turned turtle over a grade near Lake Gage last Friday night. Five of the occupants were slightly injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Brooks of Angola, Mr. and Mrs. John Benninghoff Jr., and son of Fort Wayne, spent Saturday night and Sunday as guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Bowman.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Randall visited their son, H. E. Randall, and wife at Ottawa, Ohio, Saturday and Sunday. Because of the illness of their daughter-in-law, Harry Junior returned home with them for an indefinite stay.

C. D. Laub of Spencer township has been drawn to serve on the Grand Jury for the May term of the DeKalb Circuit court and Floyd Coburn of the same township has been drawn to serve on the petit jury.

Mrs. J. P. Buckingham visited from Thursday until Sunday with her sister, Mrs. John Roose and family at Wauseon, Ohio. The Roose family accompanied her home Sunday, spending the day here. While Mrs. Buckingham was gone she called on Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hart at Napoleon and found them all enjoying the best of health.

Hicksville, Ohio, has a regular human fly in the person of Gale Smith, a junior in the Hicksville high school, who Wednesday night scaled the walls of the belfry tower at the Hicksville school building and victoriously removed the senior flag, which had been placed there the night before. Smith did the stunt without assistance of a rope and in the presence of a number of spectators, who witnessed the perilous feat.

Coughing
Tires the old, lowers their vitality. The best standard family cough medicine for old and young
CHAMBERLAIN'S
COUGH REMEDY
Good for every member of the family

The heavy rain Saturday night put the farmers back again with their work.

Mr. and Mrs. B. V. Widney are moving into the tenent house on his father, H. M. Widney's farm.

A seven pound daughter was born early Saturday morning to Mr. and Mrs. Grover Curie.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hickman and little son spent Saturday night and Sunday at Ney, Ohio, guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Bayliss.

Mrs. Rose Glenque and little son, Joseph Hayden of Hillsdale, Mich., were over night guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Wilmot.

Miss Violet Wyatt has gone to Auburn to spend the summer with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Wyatt.

Mr. and Mrs. Abe Mason of Auburn, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Pence of Auburn, visited St. Joe friends Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. I. E. Sherrick and family and Mrs. Abe Sherrick of Auburn, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Vina Fish.

Mr. and Mrs. Wid Williams entertained at lunch Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Howard Williams and Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Copp and daughter, Vernell, of New Haven, were Sunday guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Monroe and Mrs. Alice Copp.

Everett Dill of Pierceton, was a recent two day guest of his aunt and husband, Dr. and Mrs. C. R. Price, who with Miss Mabelle Schmalzried, accompanied him as far as Fort Wayne on his way home.

The third quarterly conference of this circuit of the M. P. Church was held Sunday afternoon at Concord.

B. & O. train No. 6 is scheduled at 4:45 p. m. instead of 5:45 p. m. as we stated last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Sechler and children and Walter Bowen and wife of Fort Wayne, spent over Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sechler. Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Dilley and son, John, of the same place, were Sunday guests also.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Milliman had as Saturday evening supper guests Millard Gruber of Hicksville, A. D. Hercules of Fort Wayne, Miss Marguerite Milliman and Mrs. Mary Shuff.

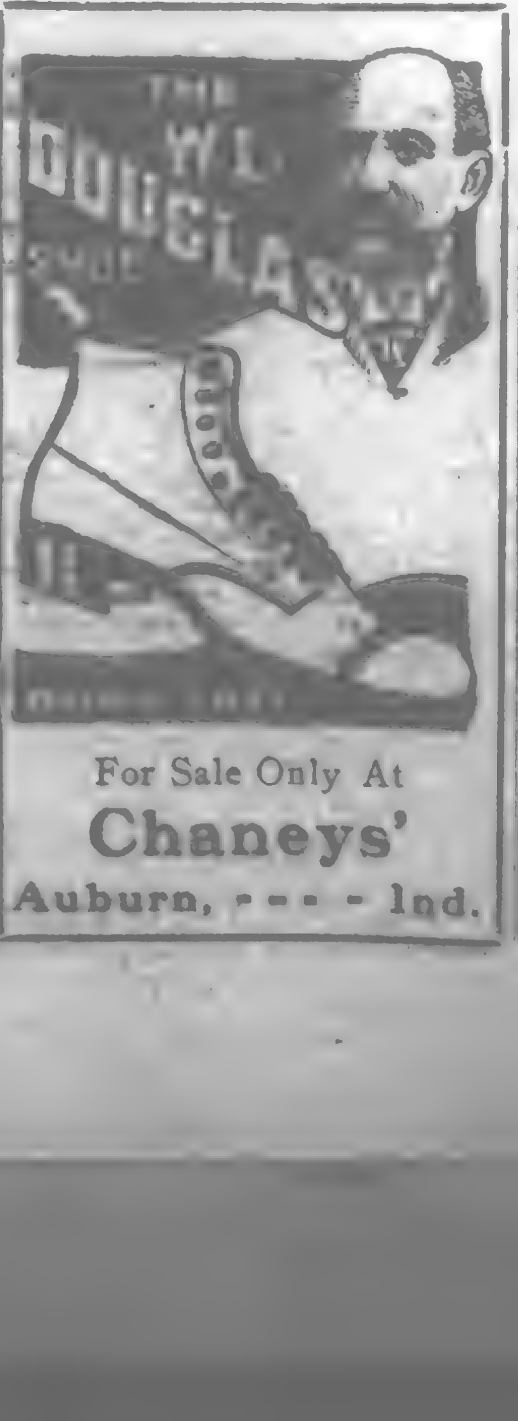
Mr. and Mrs. Everett Mavis and children of Auburn, came Saturday. The former returning home Sunday evening, while his family remained for the week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sechler.

Mrs. C. C. Bassett spent Friday night and Saturday with her mother, Mrs. A. D. Brunson. Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Brunson and children of Butler, spent Saturday night and Sunday in the same home.

Dr. and Mrs. B. S. Sheffer, Mr. and Mrs. Craig Sheffer, son Basil, and Miss Evelyn Knight spent Sunday afternoon at Hicksville where they called at the home of I. S. Hadsell, who was struck down Saturday morning by another man and who is in a critical condition as a result. They called on other relatives also.

Captive Beasts Fade.

To capture an elephant that is a "perfect 36" and a tiger with a natural complexion, the American Museum of Natural History has sent an expedition into India. Officials of that institution say that animals kept in captivity soon lose the coloration of skin and fur which they have in the wild state. Their figures, or, as the scientists put it, "their skeletal conformation," also become so changed that they represent their kind but poorly.



For Sale Only At
Chaneys'
Auburn, - - - - Ind.

Legal Publication

Notice of Final Settlement of Estate

Cause No. 2532.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to all persons interested in the estate of Elmer Moody deceased, to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held at Auburn, Indiana, on the 7th day of June 1923, and show cause, if any, why my Final Settlement Accounts with the estate of said decedent should not be approved; and said heirs, and all others interested, are notified to then and there make proof of heirship or claim and receive their distributive shares.

Witness, my name, this 10th day of May, 1923.

WM. G. ERICK, Executor,
Atkinson & Husselman
Attorneys.

Notice of Final Settlement of Estate

Estate No. 2570.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to all persons interested in the Estate of William J. Orr, deceased, to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held in Auburn, Indiana, on the 9th day of June, 1923, and show cause if any, why my Final Settlement Accounts with the estate of said decedent should not be approved; and said heirs and all others interested, are notified to then and there make proof of heirship or claim and receive their distributive shares.

Witness, My Name, this 9th day of May, 1923,

Clyde E. Hart, Administrator,
Link & McClintock,
Attorneys.

For good glasses see Griest at American Building Hicksville, Ohio.

M. P. Church Notes

How would you like to live in St. Joe if there were no churches? What have the three churches meant to you? Do you think these churches have enhanced the value of your property? I am sure you will answer all these questions in the affirmative. Now, some further questions: "What are you doing for these churches? Are you present one Sunday in two? One Sunday in three? Or one Sunday every six or seven? You do not mean much to the church with such spasmotic attendance. It is the regular attendant of the churches that means most to the welfare of Christ's Kingdom.

Sunday School 9:30.

Morning Worship at Concord at 11:00. Also communion service.

Evening preaching service 7:30 at St. Joe.

C. B. HAVENS, PASTOR

Christian Church Notes

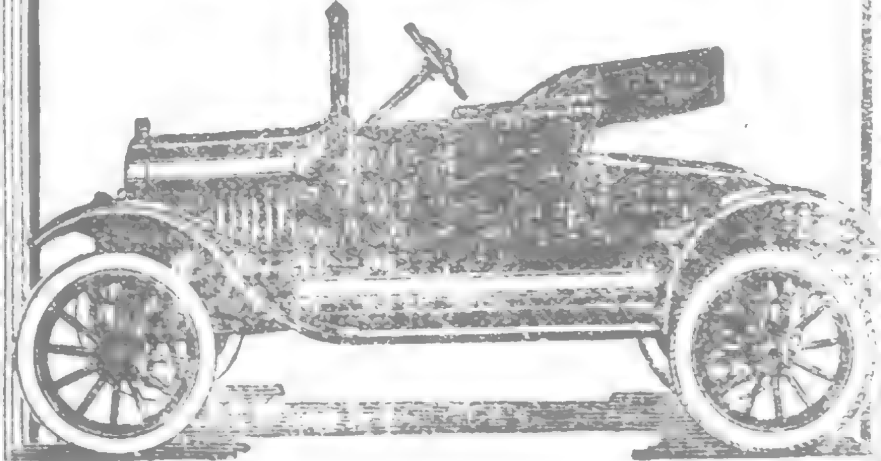
The Loyal Sons and Daughters Class met Sunday in an all day session with Mr. and Mrs. Claud Mason. After the pot luck dinner, which all enjoyed, a short program consisting of song, Scripture reading, prayer and making plans for the work of the class was held. At the business session Alice Gee was elected class secretary-treasurer. Thirty-six were present to enjoy the day. Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Maxwell will entertain the next meeting June seventeenth.

The Church now has a bell, as you very likely heard Sunday morning. The Martha society purchased the old court house bell at Auburn and men of the congregation put it in place Saturday.

Daughters Day was observed Sunday morning with a short program, Sunday being the close of Mothers-Daughters Week.

Dr. Bonnell M. Souder
HOSPITAL
Established in 1914
206 West Seventh Street
AUBURN, INDIANA

Ford
RUNABOUT
New Price
$269
F. O. B. DETROIT



Where can you find a greater value than the Ford Runabout at this new low price? We believe, without question, that it is the most economical means of transportation salesmen can employ. Time-saving—absolutely dependable travel at the minimum cost. Terms if desired.

F. W. SILBERG
SPENCERVILLE, IND.

First Known Machine.

The earliest known machine is an Egyptian crank drill, invented before 8000 B. C.

Bible Thoughts for the Week

Sunday.

GOD'S RESPONSE.—If my people, which are called by thy name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land.—II Chronicles 7:14.

Monday.

THE REAL TEST.—Is it not to deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house? when thou seest the naked, that thou cover him; and that thou hide not thyself from thine own flesh?—Isaiah 58:7.

Tuesday.

GRACE AND PEACE.—The Lord make his face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee: the Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace.—Numbers 6:25, 26.

Wednesday.

FREE FROM WANT.—The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.—Psalm 23:1.

Thursday.

GOD LOVES THE GOOD.—Truly God is good to Israel, even to such as are of a clean heart.—Psalm 73:1.

Friday.

A SAFE INVESTMENT.—He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will he pay him again.—Prov. 19:17.

Saturday.

PRIDE A PITFALL.—Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall.—Proverbs 16:18.

HOOSIER TON LITTERS

The men in the Hoosier Ton Litter Club will nominate their litters next Wednesday, May 23rd. Mr. J. R. Wiley, State Leader of Club will be present to go with nominations committee in nominating the litters. There are 24 men in DeKalb county enrolled in the work.

BIG ONION GROWERS MEETING AT KENDALLVILLE

Next Monday, May 21st, the men interested in the growing of onions in fourteen counties in northern Indiana will meet at the City Hall in Kendallville. All growers of onions should be at this meeting. It is their duty to themselves to be there. They should market their product in part, at least, as well as grow it.

H O. WILLIAMS
THE
Abstracter
is able to furnish you with a complete Abstract of Title to any description of Real Estate in DeKalb County.
OFFICE
West Seventh Street
AUBURN
FIRE INSURANCE
NOTARY PUBLIC

WANTED!

A NEWS REPORTER
to represent Coburns Corners

MAY

L 912

BE A BOOSTER!
When it comes to public improvements. The town needs your help.

ST. JOE NEWS.

BE A BOOSTER
Renew your subscription to the News. $1.50 cents a year.

VOL. XXXVII ST. JOE DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, MAY 31, 1923 No. 22

Band Concert Saturday Night

With the weather permitting the first band concert will be given Saturday evening, June 2nd., to begin at 8 o'clock.

The Community Welfare Band under the able direction of Mr. Wilcox has prepared itself to give even greater satisfaction than it did last season. It has held regular weekly rehearsals all winter in the hope of maintaining and improving the organization to be of better service to the public this year. It expects to finance itself far enough ahead this year to be able to obtain new uniforms and other things it is greatly in need of [illegible]. The band concert is not so much a benefit to the business men, as many people generally conceive, as it is a great entertainment to the public in general. St. Joe is fortunate in having this musical organization and has first chanceon its services for all occasions. The expense of the concerts is small and the business men have all done their part willingly. Now, as is considered the reasonable thing to do, every home in St. Joe is being canvased for a subscription for a St. Joe Band Fund. If you appreciate the band at all show it when the solicitors call at your home.

Lutheran Thread Day

The Lutheran Sunday School observed Thread Day of its missionary program Sunday and there were 38 spools of thread contributed and $10 in cash for use by the native Christian people in India.

These Indian women make lace which is sold by the Lutheran Missionary Societies and in this way support and educate their children.

Mrs. Fred Thornton has a consignment of Indian lace which is for sale. Those interested might call at her home.

To Honolulu

Wayne Trostel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abner Trostel of east of town, who joined the United States Army in March last, is to be stationed at Honolulu Hawaii, in the coast Artilery. He is making the trip from New York by boat, a distance of about 8,000 miles, and he was as far as San Diego, California, on May 18, when he sent the letter his folks received last.

COAL

Fill up and keep filled up. Don't forget that the place to store your coal is in your bins, not in your dealer's yard, not at the mines.

Prices are now lowest of the season with all prospects of them going up, as coal is being mined below the cost of production at the present time.

We are trying to give you good advice. It is up to you to take it.

Place your orders now for the following coals:

Hocking Valley, Egg and Lump
Buffalo White Ash, none better
Hard Coal Chestnut and Egg

Please settle your last season's accounts now and make your credit good.

FEED

Hominy, Bran, Middlings, Tankage and other feeds.

The St. JOE ELEVATOR

Samuel Keesler, Mgr. Grain Dept.
Bert Jackson, Mgr. Coal Dept.

Call on us—glad to see you. Come in whether you want anything or not.

For Check Users

I
Keep blank checks and vouchers under lock.

II
Write checks with safety ink or with a check writing machine that shreds the paper and impregnates it with the amount in ineradicable ink.

III
In writing checks leave as little space as possible between the figures of the amount and start the written amount as close to the left-hand margin as possible, drawing heavy parallel lines through the unfilled space.

IV
Use only an alteration-proof check paper.

V
Destroy all checks marred in drawing and never issue a check with eracers on it.

VI
Do not issue checks to unvouched for strangers, and never make them out to "Cash" or "Bearer".

VII
Do not sigh blank checks.

VIII
Scrutinize all certified checks as the stamps are not difficult to duplicate.

IX
Be careful how and where you sign your banking signature.

X
On checks you deposit endorse them to the order of the bank of deposit, making it impossible for them to be cashed by a thief without alteration.

St. Joe Valley Bank---A State Bank

Geo. Beugnot Re-Elected Pres.

The total number of delegates who registered at the DeKalb County Sunday School Convention held here last week was 613 and it is thought by the registration committee that about 100 more failed to register. The total attendance may be estimated at between 1600 and 1700.

The Wednesday afternoon meeting and the two in the evening were considered the best of the whole convention, entertaining the largest crowds.

George E. Beugnot of Auburn, was elected to head the county organization for the next year which will make his seventh consequtive year. Mr. Beugnot has proven his capability as a leader and the organization shows their confidence in him by re-electing him to the office.

Other officers elected were: Forrest Harding of Corunna, vice president; Sadie Coy of Auburn, secretary - treasurer; Mrs Mary Knauer of Corunna, superintendent of the children's division; Dora Carnahan, Auburn, R. F. D., superintendent of the young people's division; J. N. George of Auburn, superintendent of the adult division; Fred W. Knott of Auburn, superintendent of the educational department; Ward Jackman of Waterloo, superintendent of the administrative division. George Beugnot, Fred W. Knott and John George were elected delegates to the state convention which will be held at Indianapolis next month.

Before the close of the convention, a resolution was passed that DeKalb county send one hundred delegates to the state convention at Indianapolis in June, each school in the county to send one or more. One school pledged to send fifteen.

Resolutions

St. Joe, Indiana.
May 22, 1923.

Your committee on resolutions recommends that it be voiced as the sense of this convention that St. Joe has shown itself a royal host, and that the thanks of the convention be sincerely tendered the good people of the churches, their pastors and the citizens of the community who have made lastingly pleasant the memories of our stay in their midst.

Appreciation is also expressed for the fine service rendered by those on the program.

Especially does your committee feel that recognition is due the efficient and self-denying service of our county officials, and the co-operation given them by the faithful township officers and organizations making possible the enviable position held by DeKalb county as a one hundred per cent county, measured by the standards set up by the International Sunday School Association. In this connection you are reminded that DeKalb county aspires to an attendance of one hundred at the coming state convention, and the committee recommends that each school be asked to lend its utmost effort to the fulfillment of this creditable ambition.

In conclusion, your committee feels confident that all will unite in thanksgiving and praise to the Heavenly Father for the leadings of His Spirit and the unfoldings of His providence making possible any enduring results achieved by the Sunday Schools of DeKalb county during the past year.

Respectfully submitted.
W. M. Elliott,
H. M. Fretz.
Committee on Resolutions.

St. Joe Has Memorial

St. Joe and Concord township observed Memorial Day Wednesday in a very appropriate manner after all. In the forenoon a committee of old soldiers and others decorated the country cemeteries.

In the afternoon at two o'clock memorial services were held at the Christian church. The Community Welfare Band marched from the town hall to the church and played a selection at the front.

The program consisted of the following with William Curie as chairman:

Song, America, ... Congregation
Prayer .... Dr. Johnson
Address .... Rev. Steffey
Song .... Choral Society
War Talk .... Geo. Trostel
Song .... Choral Society

Following the program a parade was formed headed by banner bearer, N. Funk, Spanish American war veteran, and the band. The old soldiers, conveyed in one automobile and the soldiers wives and widows in another, followed the band. The children of the Sunday Schools, each carrying a flag given them by the committee, came next. The lodges and other organisations followed the children. The band played on the march to the cemetery and again as they halted there while the committees decorated the respective graves.

Dismissal services were held around the soldiers monument, closing with buglar's taps, and benediction by Dr. Johnson.

The crowd was the largest in years at memoral services here at St. Joe. The cemetery was a respected spot of beauty with the neat upkept graves and the pretty plants and flowers placed upon them. The weather was ideal for the occasion and everyone was pleased to have the observance. All the stores were closed from one o'clock until after the services at the cemetery.

At Coburn's Corners services were held in the forenoon with Rev. Bransford of Hicksville the principal speaker.

Big Meeting At Rehobeth

The Rehobeth M. P. church entertained the third quarterly conference of the Garrett circuit in an all day meeting last Sunday with a basket dinner at the noon hour.

The Sunday School session was probably the best attended with a report of 101 attendance and $6 40 collection.

Following the Sunday School service the St. Joe M. P. Orchestra rendered several fine selections and Dr. C. S. Johnson, also of St. Joe, gave a splendid sermon on, "Jesus and Our Doubts." The communion service was observed at the close of the forenoon session.

The St. Joe visitors were made welcome to partake of the bountiful basket dinner which was spread out of doors in the shade of the church. Such splendid fellowship as was shown there cannot be forgotten by anyone who was in attendance. In the afternoon the orchestra again favored with some beautiful selections. Dr. Johnson again talked on, "The Three Greatest Words in the English Language; My, Our and Thine." That part of the program rendered by Rehobeth people was exceptionally fine also.

A vote of thanks was extended to Dr. Johnson and the orchestra for their part in the program.

Definite Plans Made to Oil

At a meeting of the business men of St. Joe Monday night, at the bank building, definite plans for oiling the main street were made. The town board agreed to have enough gravel hauled to level the three blocks west of Widney Avenue if the leveling work would be donated. The agreement was met.

Since only 1,000 gallons of oil can be obtained at present, these three blocks on the main street west of Widney Avenue will receive oil first, each lot owner or occupant paying his share for same.

Probably more oil can be obtained later when other streets will be oiled.

Sunday School Report.

The following is a true and correct report of the various Sunday Schools in this neighborhood for last Sunday.

Christian	116	$ 5 57
M. P	61	5 03
Lutheran	112	7.12
M. E. Spencer	74	5.07
Lutheran	94	6.02
Newville U. B.	103	5.56
Christian	83	3.83
Coburntown	61	2.57
Concord	69	3.84
Mt. Pleasant	84	3.35
Rehobeth	101	6.35

M. P. Church Notes

9:30 Sunday School.
11:00 Preaching Service.

Dr. C. S. Johnson will preach in the absence of Rev. Havens.

* * *

The local K. of P. lodge will hold memorial services at their hall on Sunday, June 10, at two o'clock p. m. The principal speaker will be Judge Endicott. The public is invited.

Taken Back to Hospital

Rev. C. H. Havens was taken to the Hope-Methodist Hospital last Sunday suffering from a serious infection caused by a severe cold he contracted two weeks ago.

His condition Saturday, Saturday night and Sunday was serious but Sunday night he began to get better and the last report was that he is still resting easy but is still in a dangerous state. An operation may be necessary even yet.

Rev. Havens submitted to an operation at the same hospital on April 19th., for which he readily recovered. On May 15th he resumed his school work at Adrian college but by being caught in a heavy rain he took a cold that caused an infection in his left side with which he is now suffering.

Economics Club Meeting

The Concord Township Economics club met Friday, May 18, with Mrs. Fred Elson.

The subject for the day was, "Beautifying the Home Grounds," Mrs. John Sechler acting as leader, gave some very interesting and helpful ideas on the subject.

Mrs. W. J. Staman gave a report on the millinery demonstration held at Auburn Eighteen members responded at roll call with their favorite flower.

* * *

Mr and Mrs. Frank Baltz, Mr. and Mrs. John Maggert of Spencerville, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sechler, daughter Thelma and Harold Carpenter of Butler, Will Hamilton wife and daughter Margarer Elnor, were afternoon guests in the Byron Widney home.

OVER 4 MILLION NEW PERFECTION OIL STOVES IN DAILY USE

Smokeless
Odorless
Satisfaction
Service
Long Life
Fool Proof
Speedy
Clean

In evesy tongue women tell of never ending satisfaction that has made the Blue Chimney NEW PERFECTION the world's most popular oil stove. Known and sold, all over the world, because of the never ending service and satisfaction given.

We also have the New Superfex Burner.

E. R. KINSEY

Hardware Furniture Undertaking

MAY

L 912

Matrimonial Adventures

Driftwood

BY

Courtney Ryley Cooper

Author of "The Cross-Cut," "The White Desert," "Dead Folks at Home," "The Eagle's Eye," etc.

Copyright by United Feature Syndicate

COURTNEY RYLEY COOPER

Courtney Ryley Cooper, author, lecturer, circus man and expert on jungle animals, began life as a clown in a small circus. Mr. Cooper says that he ran away from home for the first time to join the Buffalo Bill Wild West show at the age of five, and that after that, regularly two or three times a year, the rest of the Cooper family spent most of its time dragging him home whenever a circus came to his town, Kansas City. When he was fifteen he made the final breakaway, becoming a clown at the magnificent salary of five dollars a week. After about five years of this he began to mix the circus business with that of the newspaper and left the "white tops" to become a reporter for the Kansas City Star. He then successively was a special writer for the Star, the Chicago Tribune, the New York World and the Denver Post, when he again went back to the circus to become press agent of the Sells-Floto circus, and personal representative for Col. William F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill." Later still he became general manager of the Sells-Floto circus.

Following this he turned his attention to telling the rest of the world what he had learned of the land of the sawdust ring and his stories and articles began to appear in all the large magazines of the United States.

MARY STEWART CUTTING, JR.

It was six-fifteen o'clock. In the kitchen the last touches had been given a meal which was a bit more extravagant than was customary in the household of Mr. and Mrs. John Carrington. The silver candlesticks were on the dining room table instead of the usual glass ones; the service had been polished with extra care that morning. At the side of each of the two plates was a sprig of orange blossoms, which had arrived, special delivery, from California, that morning. Just beyond the French doors leading to the living room was a large basket of roses. It was thus every year.

In the fireplace of the living room, the flames leaped in blue and green and violet colorings, the offgivings of driftwood, sending their colorations into the big, comfortable shadowy room and upon the woman who sat, just within the range of warmth, gazing into the flames. Mrs. John Carrington was waiting for her husband to come home to dinner in honor of their tenth anniversary.

Not that there was any doubt as to the time or manner of his arrival. Mr. and Mrs. John Carrington had a reputation—they were known as the happiest married couple of all their set—a set, incidentally, which included every worth-while name in the directory. In five minutes, Mrs. Carrington knew, there would sound the throbbing of a familiar engine from down the street and the squeaking of brakebands which always announced the homecoming of the best husband in town. John never failed, just as he never failed to telephone her precisely at eleven o'clock each morning, just as he never failed to remember her birthday, or to send the biggest basket of roses which he could afford, on their anniversary. Just as he never failed to take her to the theater on Thursday night, to the Country club for the Friday night dances, or—but the list is too long. John was the ideal husband. He never failed in anything.

Nor did she. For Medaine Carrington also had her place in the matrimonial sun. Even her enemies admitted that she was a perfect wife. The serenity of the Carrington home was something which could not be denied. Everyone knew of it, everyone spoke of it. John Carrington and his wife never had even quarreled!

Yet, as Mrs. Carrington watched the fire, it seemed that an expression, almost of utter fear, was in her eyes; the tapping of a shoe upon the soft rug gave evidence of nervousness, the quick knitting of her hands emphasized it. Now and then she turned her head toward the window—as though fearful of his coming, yet anxious that he be here. Then she would resume her former position, her eyes fraught with presentment, gazing into the big fireplace where the driftwood crackled and the flames leaped and scurried in vagrant colorings. The minutes passed.

A car stopped protestingly. A step sounded. The door opened. She turned with her usual smile.

"How are you, Dearest?"

"Same as usual, Sweetheart." He was hanging up his hat and overcoat. A moment more and he came behind her, to lay his hands on her shoulders for an instant. "How's my Sweetheart tonight?"

"Happy as always, John." She turned and kissed him lightly. "You were a dear to send me those roses. You never forget, John."

He straightened proudly.

"Why should I? Pretty fire."

"Yes- [illegible] [illegible] been sitting here watching it, while I waited for you."

For a moment he, too, looked into the blaze.

"Beautiful. Driftwood, eh? Rather hard to get isn't it?"

She smiled.

"Yes—but then, this is our anniversary."

"That's right. That's right. I suppose the dinner's waiting?"

It was a useless question—asked merely for the sound of it. John knew that dinner was ready. It always was ready. The home of Mr. and Mrs. John Carrington was one in which nothing ever was awry. He went on:

"Yes, of course, it's waiting. Just a moment, Sweetheart, until I tidy up a bit and I'll be with you. Only a moment—"

He hurried up the stairs, while again the gaze of Medaine Carrington sought the flames, the gaze of one whose mind is peopled with anguish. But in a moment more, it had vanished. John was beside her, bowing in mock overpoliteness, and offering his arm in an extravagant invitation to the table.

"Many congratulations today," he said as they seated themselves. "Four or five of the boys dropped in to tell me their troubles, and incidentally to say how much they envied us. Strange what a few little numbers will do, isn't it?"

"Marvelous." Her self-possession had returned; with him before her she was again the usual Medaine Carrington. "This is the tenth year, without a quarrel."

John laughed.

"And our idea may spread. Bentley's married you know—just last week. Came into the office today. Told him all about our system, and how it's worked out. 'All that you need for happiness, Bent,' I said, 'is to learn to count to a hundred.' Then, I went on and told how it had worked with us, how we simply schooled ourselves into the habit of counting to a hundred before we said an unkind word, how, if one of us was nervous or irritable, it became the duty of the other to hold in, and the wonderful result that we've attained. After all, dearest, it's all very simple, isn't it?"

"Extremely so." For just an instant her eyes clouded—only to brighten again. "I've never seen prettier roses than the ones you sent today, John."

"That's what you're always good enough to say. By the way, this roast is done to a turn. I never tasted better."

The meal progressed to a perfect conclusion—as it always did. Once more, they were before the driftwood flame. She took his hand in hers.

"After all, it's remarkable that two persons could go through ten years of married life without a quarrel, isn't it, John?"

He nodded. Then:

"Yes—in a way. Then again, all that is necessary is common sense."

"I suppose so. But haven't there been times when I have tried you terribly, when I've made you so angry that you couldn't hold your temper?"

"No, not once, dearest. One simply couldn't lose his temper with you."

"There—you mustn't say that. Besides, the main point, I suppose, is the fact that it's been accomplished. Ten years of married life, without even a quarrel!"

She rose then, and moved slowly into the shadows. Again her hands knitted unconsciously. An expression, as of acute pain came into her eyes. John did not see—he was gazing into the flames and watching the colorings as they came and went.

"Ten years without a quarrel! It's something to be proud of, something to boast about to your friends and—"

"Yes, I suppose so."

There was something in her tone which caused him to look up quickly, to glance toward her as though she had uttered a desecration. The flickering of the fireplace caught her features, to display them as singularly pale, singularly drawn and indicative of suffering. He half rose—but she motioned him back.

"Please sit there, John, I've—something to tell you."

"Why, dearest? You seem so—"

"Don't—please." She gripped the back of a chair as though for support. "I—want to say it as quickly as possible. I'm going away, John." The voice was faint.

He was silent for a moment. At last:

"Well, if you feel that you should—of course, it would be better from a financial point if you waited a while, but if you really want to—"

"I don't mean that way, John. I'm not coming back."

"Not—" He stared at her in nonplussed fashion for a long time before he rose. "Why Medaine—I don't—I"

"I didn't think you'd understand."

"Not coming back? Why—"

"Not coming back, John," she repeated, and this time the voice bore a certain note of harshness. "We're through!"

"Medaine!"

"Please!" She motioned him back. "I know what I'm doing. I'm perfectly clear and sane. I've simply put up with you as long as I can stand it, and now I'm going away. You've become unbearable to me, and when a thing like that happens, the best thing to do is to get away. So I'm going."

She said it with more coolness than ever, and with an incisiveness that cut deep. There was the slightest twitching of John's fingers—then he turned away, and for a long moment was silent. At last, as though settled in mind, he moved again to his chair.

"You're tired, sweetheart. Tired out—nervous. Don't worry. Everything'll be all right. If you'll just tell me what's wrong, we'll find a way to remedy it. Nothing in the world that can't be remedied, you know—"

"Except this. I'm tired of you, John. Sick of you."

"Sick? Tired?" He again faced her. "Sick of—" Then for a long time he was silent again. "There, sweetheart, don't mind me. Of course you're tired. Ill, too. We'll talk it over in the morning—"

"There isn't going to be any morning, John. At least, not with you." She laughed. "Ten years is enough. I want someone else now."

"You?" He was on his feet in an instant, his fingers stretching wide, his brow working convulsively, "you—Medaine?"

"Exactly what I said."

"A man?"

"You don't suppose it would be anyone else?

"But Medaine—"

"And I have your permission to go?" It seemed that there was a little sarcasm in her tone. "Of course, you know, I'd do nothing without your permission. I want to be frank with you, you know. You've supported me for ten years. You've given me everything in the world I could ask for, you've supplied me with all the money that anyone in my circumstances could wish for, and you've really made it possible for me to have the money to do what I wanted to do when the time came, and so I really should ask your permission. Especially when another man is involved."

"Do you mean—" coldness had come into his voice, "that you're going to take the money that you've saved as my wife to go to some other man?"

"I've said nothing like that, John. Merely frankness and fairness to let you know."

"Who is he?"

"A friend of yours. We needn't mention names."

"No?" There were no long pauses between John Carrington's words now. The whiteness of his cheeks, the lack of color in his lips, turning them ghastly blue in the light of the driftwood, the glazed yet flaming appearance of his eyes all gave evidence that temper had gone beyond control. "No? We needn't mention names. That's what you say, Mrs. John Carrington, but I've a different idea!"

"Your privilege! But the information won't come from me."

"I don't expect it. I can find out for myself, without the necessity of running down any lies which you might tell me. I'll find out—"

"I expect you to."

"I will!" John Carrington, the perfect husband, swung past his chair to face her, his hands gripped, the muscles of his jaws bulging as his teeth gritted. "Don't worry for an instant about that end of it! I'll find out."

"And then?" A peculiar glint had come into her eyes. "When you've found out? Murder, I suppose?"

"Murder?" he laughed at her. "Murder, over you? Over a woman who has no more sense of honor than to do the thing you've done? Murder? Hardly! Merely the satisfaction of knowing the kind of a person that would take up with a conscienceless woman. Nothing more."

"Very good excuses, John."

"For what?"

"The lack of backbone enough to even face a man who could steal your own wife from you. You wouldn't even have the strength to face him."

"No?" His hands worked as with a sudden spasm. "When I face somebody, it will be for stealing something—do you understand what I mean? When I face a man it will be because he's taken something from me that's worth while, and not ridded me of a blank featured incubus, a thing that's hung onto me like a leech, given into me at every twist and turn merely that she could rob me, someone so sweet and gushing that she's sickening, that herself hasn't any more strength than to take the word of the first man who flatters her and who is willing to run away with him simply because he tells her any mass of lies that happens to come into his head! That's when I'll face a thief, when he's stolen something—do you understand that?

"And as for you—" he nodded toward the doorway—"you can go when and where you choose, and the sooner the better. I thought you were a woman when I married you. I've found out in the ten years that we've been living together that you're merely a spineless, resistless, shapeless mass of human putty. I didn't expect a thing like this—but I should have known that it would come. It was the only end possible, the only thing possible—from a person like you. Resistance? You haven't any? Strength of character? It doesn't exist. Spineless? It's the only word I can think of for you—the only—"

Then he halted, gasping. A warm, impulsive little form was close to him, her arms tight about his neck, her lips seeking his, and kissing him again and again.

"Oh, John, you're wonderful!" came all in a breath, "just simply wonderful! I—"

He strove to push her away, and failing, merely gasped the more. For she was talking again, her words streaming excitedly, delightedly.

"That's just what I've thought about you, John—what you've said about me—that you were spineless, resistless. But you're not, are you, John? You're—"

"Please—" He strove to break from her, but she held him tight, and a sudden pleading happiness in her tone.

"I don't have to go away now, John. My 'other man' has come to me. Don't you understand, dearest—don't you understand?"

"Huh?" It was the only word he could utter, as he stood there staring at her, his arms flat at his sides, his lips open, his expression one of combined anger, dismay and wonderment. The soft arms tightened still more about his neck.

"Kiss me, John—please!"

"Hardly."

"But don't you understand? I was just trying to make you say the things you did say—it was the only way I could think to do it. Don't you see? I didn't know any other way in the world to make you quarrel with me, to forget that eternal counting to a hundred before you'd ever answer, to—to—John, please—won't you kiss me? I don't love anyone in the world but you. I swear it—nobody in the world, John. Don't you see? I—I—" Then the tears came—"I just couldn't stand it any—any more."

"Stand it—stand what?"

"Why—why, everything, John. You just can't endure things forever without salt and pepper. It isn't natural. It—it just got on my nerves until I thought I'd go crazy. I—"

"What's the—" Frank amazement was his now. "I don't understand you—can't make you out, Medaine. Salt and pepper—"

"Just what I mean, John. Put your arms around me, won't you please? Please, John?" She caught a hand and raised it to her shoulder, where it hung a moment, then dropped limply. But he did not resist her now, as he had done a moment before. "Tell me, John—is this the first time you've ever thought me spineless?"

He shook his head, saying silently what he would not say in words. It seemed to please her. She kissed him.

"And haven't you wondered often how on earth you ever married me? Haven't you wondered if I really had enough spirit to even have a quarrel with a tradesman? Haven't you, John? I've thought that about you—wondered how on earth you managed to transact your business, how you ever got the backbone even to discharge an employee. You've never shown it at home. I've tried to nettle you, anger you—and all you did was count to a hundred."

"That was our bargain." He said it somewhat grudgingly.

"Just the trouble—just what hurt me, that you'd stay by a silly bargain like that. John," she looked at him quickly, "during the time we've been married, have you really been happy?"

"I?" he paused. His lips pressed tight for an instant. Then: "If you want the frank truth—I haven't."

"Why?"

Again a pause. Then:

"Oh, never mind."

"But I want to know, is it for the same reason that I haven't been happy—because everything has been just the same, just the regular monotony of sugar, sugar, sugar all the time and never a bit of bitter-sweet? Is that the reason, John? And I have been unhappy, John. I've known every minute what you were going to do. I knew the minute you were going to leave home, the minute you would telephone me, the minute you'd get here at night, and what you'd talk about at the dinner table. I knew to a dot what you'd do and say and how you'd act. And, John—a woman may say she wants that, but she doesn't. She wants a husband who'll be good to her most of the time, but who now and then—well, who won't. We can't be superhuman, John. It isn't in us. You've been on time to dinner for ten years. I haven't even had the excitement of scolding you for being late. I—" Then, as if with an inspiration, she looked at him—"John, did you ever notice how an electrical storm clears the air? And how sultry it has been beforehand? We've never even had the chance to know how beautiful things can be after the clouds have gone. We've had nothing but sunshine—until it's blinded us and we haven't been able to see anything!"

Then she halted—suddenly beaming. A light of understanding had come into the eyes of John Carrington. The tired expression faded, to give way to one which Medaine had not seen in years. Slowly his arms raised and clasped about the form of his wife. He kissed her—slowly, as one who tastes long at a sweet he is loath to leave.

Ten years seemed to have rolled away, ten drab uneventful years which now bore no more importance in retrospect than the flatness of monotonous plains. A soft hand touched his temple and lingered there.

"We've just been driftwood, John."

He nodded and kissed her again. Then, like a streak, he turned from her and bounded up the stairs. Wondering, she heard him fumbling about in an upper room, banging at drawers and uttering strange things under his breath. A grunt. Another. Louder. Then:

"Medaine," came in bellowing tones, yet ones which seemed strangely fraught with happiness, "where in thunder are my pongee shirts?"

In the room below, Medaine smiled—the smile of a woman who has fought and won. She whirled toward the stairs and called snappily, yet with a glint of merriment in her eyes.

"Right where they've always been," came her explosive announcement, "right in the third drawer of the chiffrobe, if you'll only take the time to look for them!"

Five minutes later a caller stepped on the veranda of the Carrington home. It was inevitable that he should glance through the window, to see within the living room two persons sitting before a driftwood blaze, hands together, arms about each others' shoulders, two radiant sweethearts watching the flickering of the flames. The caller sighed in envy.

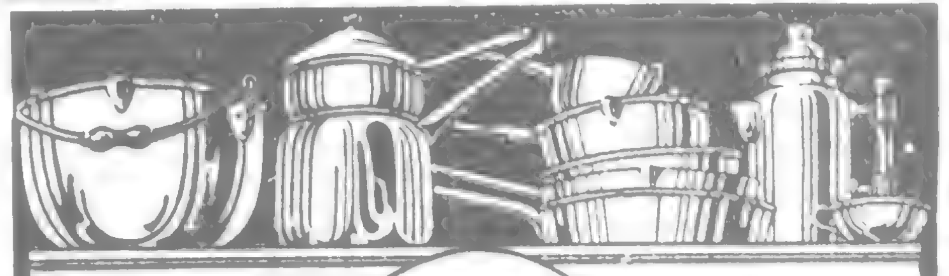
"They've got the system," he announced to himself as he rang the bell. "Happiest darned couple in town."

Yeast Foam The favorite of home bread makers for fifty years

The knowledge of how to make good bread gives a girl confidence in mastering other baking and cooking.

Send for free booklet "The Art of Baking Bread"

Northwestern Yeast Co.
1730 North Ashland Ave.
Chicago, Ill.



Aluminum is easily and quickly cleaned and looks like new when you use SAPOLIO. The name SAPOLIO is on the package. Blue Band—Silver Wrapper.

CLEAN SCOUR POLISH with

Pots and Pans of aluminum, tin, copper, brass, agateware, are all easily kept sweet and clean by SAPOLIO. Large Cake—No Waste.

ENOCH MORGAN'S SONS CO. NEW YORK U.S.A.

SAPOLIO

Slightly Misquoted.

"Mother!" Bessie rushed breathlessly into the parlor, where mother was entertaining. "Mother! I learned such a pretty poem in school today."

"What is it, dear?" asked her mother, in spite of her embarrassment.

"Well, it goes like this: 'The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want; He maketh me to lie down in green plaster—'"

The rest was lost in the burst of laughter that followed.

As Queens Do.

Hugh—Gladys is a queen!

Harry—I'll say! She sure takes the jack!

Has Other Uses.

Rub—Watson has quit golf.

Dub—Well, I saw him changing a tire yesterday and he still speaks the language.—New York Sun.

Children's handkerchiefs often look hopeless when they come to the laundry. Wash with good soap, rinse in water blued with Red Cross Ball Blue.—Advertisement.

Too many men are unable to recognize their obligations when they meet them.

The law may limit a man's acts, but it can't limit his thoughts.

5 Pass. Sedan $860 f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

The All-Year Car for Every Family

for Economical Transportation

CHEVROLET

Chevrolet is leading in the great shift of public demand to closed cars because this company has the world's largest facilities for manufacturing high-grade closed bodies and is therefore able to offer sedans, coupés and sedanettes at prices within easy reach of the average American family.

Six large body plants adjoining Chevrolet assembly plants enable us to make prompt deliveries of the much wanted closed cars.

As soon as you realize that your transportation requirements demand the year 'round, all-weather closed car, see Chevrolet first and learn how fully we can meet your requirements at the lowest cost obtainable in a modern, high-grade closed automobile.

Prices f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

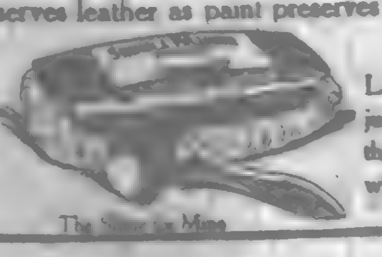
Two-Pass. Roadster	$510	Five-Pass. Sedan	$860
Five-Pass. Touring	525	Light Delivery	510
Two-Pass. Utility Coupe	680	Commercial Chassis	425
Four-Pass. Sedanette	850	Utility Express Truck Chassis	575

Dealers and Service Stations Everywhere

Chevrolet Motor Company
Division of General Motors Corporation
Detroit, Mich.

SHINOLA
AMERICA'S HOME SHOE POLISH
Black - Tan - White - Ox-Blood - Brown
SHINOLA preserves leather as paint preserves buildings.

Quick and easy to use.
SHINOLA HOME SET
Makes Shining Easy
Genuine Bristle Dauber cleans around the sole and applies the polish thoroughly.



Shines in a hurry.

Lamb's Wool Polisher just fits the hand. Brings the brilliant Shinola shine with a few strokes.

L 912

MAY

Some People Are Always Tired

They allow themselves to get run down in health and go on from day to day without realizing the seriousness of their condition. And they wonder why they are so weak and listless.

If you are run down, start to take a food medicine immediately. Father John's Medicine will help you to build new strength and energy.

For over 68 years Father John's Medicine has been building new health for those who are run down. All pure food. Start taking it today.

GREAT VITAMIN STRENGTH
FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE
ALL PURE FOOD

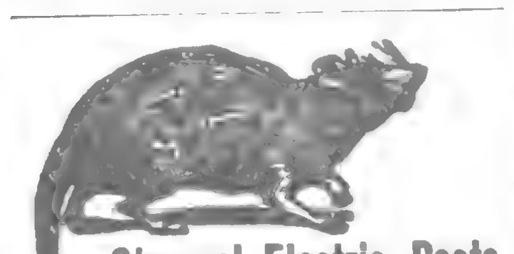
MAN'S BEST AGE

A man is as old as his organs; he can be as vigorous and healthy at 70 as at 35 if he aids his organs in performing their functions. Keep your vital organs healthy with

LATHROP'S
GOLD MEDAL
HAARLEM OIL
CAPSULES

The world's standard remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles since 1696; corrects disorders; stimulates vital organs. All druggists, three sizes.

Look for the name Gold Medal on every box and accept no imitation



Stearns' Electric Paste

is recognized as the guaranteed exterminator for Rats, Mice, Ants, Cockroaches and Waterbugs.

Don't waste time trying to kill these pests with powders, liquids or any experimental preparations.

Ready for Use—Better than Traps

2-oz. box, 35c 15-oz. box, $1.50

SOLD EVERYWHERE

ACTS ON THE LIVER STOMACH, KIDNEYS AND BOWELS
Nature's Remedy
NR TABLETS NR
A. H. LEWIS MEDICINE CO ST. LOUIS, U.S.A.
25 TABLETS NR

NR Tonight
Tomorrow Alright

Get a 25c. Box.

Your Druggist

Headaches
Are Usually Due to Constipation

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

Nujol

A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

The Difficulty.

"Does the doctor hold out any hope of your Uncle Dob's getting well?" asked an acquaintance.

"Oh, yes!" replied Zeke Sawney of Straddle Ridge. "He says that in a month or so Uncle Dob will be ready to whip his weight in wildcats? The dickens of it is, when he gets well whur are we going to get the wildcats?"—Kansas City Star.

Overheard by W. M.

Madge—"See that man? He's a phrenologist." Mame—"Heavens! What a lot of religions there are!"

BELL-ANS FOR INDIGESTION
6 BELL-ANS
Hot water
Sure Relief

Sure Relief
FOR INDIGESTION

BELL-ANS

25¢ AND 75¢ PACKAGES EVERYWHERE

Cuticura Soap
—The Healthy—
Shaving Soap

Cuticura Soap shaves without mug. Everywhere 25c.

Seen and Heard In Indiana

Muncie.—The election of Albert J. Ball of Indianapolis as state commander, acceptance of the invitation of Frankfort as the 1924 meeting place and adoption of resolutions declaring that the explanation of Governor McCray provided no excuse satisfactory to Civil war veterans for vetoing the Memorial day anti-race bill and calling for the appointment of a committee to draft a bill prohibiting all forms of amusement on that day, featured the closing session of the annual Grand Army of the Republic state encampment here.

Anderson.—In the appraisement of the estate of John W. Lovett, attorney, who died recently, it was said by the Madison county assessor that the assessment would be approximately $15,000. Two daughters, Mrs. Nellie Reeve and Mrs. Louis Seabury, both of Chicago, will receive $153,239.26. The widow, Mrs. Pearlie Lovett, will receive $23,616 in addition to an annuity of $75 a week for her personal expenses.

Fort Wayne.—The Turn Verein Vorwaerts society of this city has accepted an invitation to entertain the 1924 meeting of the Midwest organization in this city. The states represented in the district are Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Michigan and Ohio, besides representatives from St. Louis and Louisville.

Logansport.—The general contract for constructing the Cass county hospital has been awarded L. E Wickersham, of this city, for $78,532. The Hipskind company of Wabash received the heating and plumbing contract for $28,187, and George W. Cann, of Logansport, the electrical work for $4,200.

Winchester. — Leslie A. Cortner, twenty-eight, of this city, has been appointed superintendent of the Indiana Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' home at Knightstown. Mr. Cortner is a veteran of the World war, a graduate of the Winchester high school and of Purdue university.

Indianapolis.—Clyde A. Walb of Lagrange was unanimously elected chairman of the Republican state committee at a meeting of the committee here, succeeding Lawrenc E. Lyons of Brook, who resigned. Lawrence Cartwright, of Portland, was unanimously elected vice-chairman.

Indianapolis.—Indianapolis assessors and the state board of tax commissioners have appraised the Citizens Gas company at $14,521,880 for taxation purposes next year. The figure is $2,844,220 higher than last year's appraisement on which the company is paying taxes this year.

Desota.—It required only one day of eight hours for 32 neighbors and friends of Elmer F. Pittenger of Desota to rebuild his residence, which was destroyed by fire. The wives of the workers also prepared numerous articles needed in the Pittenger home.

Valparaiso.—City officials estimated that 20,000 people visited this city to attend a klan ceremony. Several thousand marchers, many of whom were not masked, paraded through the main part of town, after which an initiation was held. There was no disturbance.

Anderson.—A number of prominent men in Indiana attended the funeral of Paul P. Haynes, ex-member of the Indiana public service commission and at one time a prominent Anderson attorney, which was held at the First Presbyterian church at Anderson.

Fort Wayne.—Charles P. Carr lay uninjured in a brass bed here when a bolt of lightning wrecked the room all about him. The bolt tore out a hole eleven feet in length by three feet in width, splintered the roof and a window sill.

Hartford City.—Senator John E. Watson will speak on the evening of June 1 at a meeting sponsored by the Hartford City Rotary club. Prizes will be given at the meeting in the Americanization essay-writing contest of the club.

Clinton.—Ralph Van Landingham, twenty-four, of Terre Haute, was killed when the taxicab he was driving was overturned near Blanford. His head and neck were caught beneath the edge of the car body.

Warsaw. — One thousand dollars damage was done to the roof of the court house here in a demonstration of a high-powered fire engine pumper, according to the board of county commissioners.

Elkhart.—Ed Jackson, secretary of state, was the speaker at a meeting of the Baugo Township Company No. 120 of the National Horse Thief Detectives' association at Baugo Grange hall, three miles southwest of here.

Petersburg.—One of the relics of pre-war days was destroyed by fire when the old Posey homestead, built on the high bluffs along White river, burned.

Columbus.—Fire destroyed the factory of the Columbus Wood Turning company with a loss estimated at $20,000.

Lapel.—The W. F. C. Hardwood company is a new business for Lapel. The company is now building a sawmill at the east edge of the town, replacing the Woodward mill burned last fall. Clarence Fisher and Lawrence Woodward are the active members of the firm.

Fort Wayne.—The two camps of Spanish-American War Veterans, Henry W. Lawton camp No. 36 and Charles A. Zollinger camp No. 86, were merged into one large organization at a joint meeting of the two associations.

Muncie.—The bond of Raymond McKinley in the sum of $1,500 was ordered forfeited by L. A. Guthrie, sitting as special judge in the Circuit court, when McKinley failed to appear for trial on a charge of robbing the Hoover general store in Wheeling more than a year ago. McKinley is alleged to have been one of a party of four automobile bandits who held up the owner of the store and obtained more than $200. The members of the band are now serving prison sentences and one was not apprehended.

Connersville. — After deliberating more than five hours a jury in the Franklin Circuit court at Brookville returned a verdict of guilty in the case of the state against Fred Hildenbrand, charged with unlawful possession of a still, fined him $500 and imposed a four months' sentence at the Indiana state farm.

Bedford.—John, twelve years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fields of this city, who, with several other of his boy friends, hopped a train for Mitchell, and was carried on to Salem, missed his footing when he alighted and his right foot was crushed beneath the wheels.

Marion.—Charles Maddox, an adult leader of a gang of juvenile thieves here, received a sentence of from one to eight years in the Indiana state prison on the charge of receiving stolen property. Maddox entered a plea of guilty. He admitted that he had paid boys certain sums for stealing.

Marion.—Harold Atkins, aged three, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Atkins, of Marion, ate several medicine tablets which he found in a drawer at the home of his grandparents here, and died three hours later. Each tablet contained one-twentieth of a grain of strychnine.

Anderson.—Rollin Gwinn, thirty-three, former Purdue university student, and Jesse Gwinn, thirty-two, half brothers, of this city, were fatally hurt when an automobile driven by Jesse Gwinn was struck and demolished by a Chesapeake & Ohio passenger train at Muncie.

Indianapolis.—The Republican state committee, in session at this city, accepted the resignation of Mrs. Daisy Douglas Barr of Indianapolis as vice-chairman of the committee, following the acceptance of the resignation of Lawrence E. Lyons of Brook as state chairman.

Rockport.—After five hours' deliberation a jury in the Spencer Circuit court awarded $4,500 to Raymond Wahl, whose right arm was cut off when he attempted to cross the tracks of the Southern railroad in front of a moving train.

Anderson.—Eagerness to see his sweetheart, in whose home there was smallpox, cost Charles Cox a fine of $11. Cox entered the girl's home despite the smallpox card and he was arrested on complaint of the health board.

Greenfield.—At a special meeting of the city council Marshall Winslow was elected mayor to succeed Frank S. Larrabee, who resigned because of illness. Winslow, who was engaged in the newspaper business for a number of years, is a Democrat.

Evansville.—Ralph Baker and William Dunlaw, small boys playing in the cemetery at Stewartsville, Posey county, found a still in a hollow metal monument painted to resemble stone. The Posey county officials were notified and took charge of the still.

Frankfort.—Rev. E. E. Moorman was elected president of the Indiana Ministerial association of the Disciples of Christ by the state convention of the ministers of Churches of Christ. Rev. Mr. Moorman is pastor of the Frankfort Christian church.

Columbia City.—For the second time this year officials of the Peabody Lumber company of this city have announced an increase in wages for all employees. The second increase will total about $16,000 a year. The company employs 100 men.

Wabash. — When seven farmers, drawn for service as petit jurors in the Wabash Circuit court, announced that they are now behind in their farm work and are unable to obtain laborers, they were excused by Judge Switzer from serving.

Warsaw.—A petition containing the names of 1,401 citizens of Warsaw has been presented to the city council, which is asked to repeal or amend the milk pasteurization ordinance so that raw milk may be sold.

Richmond.—Louis Stowe, thirteen years old, residing with his parents south of here, died of injuries received when an auto in which he was riding with his father turned over an embankment.

New Albany.—Mrs. Irene Smith, seventeen years old, wife of Russell Smith, is in a serious condition from the effects of burns about her limbs and body resulting from her clothing catching fire from a coal oil stove.

Huntington.—A camping ground site of two acres is to be fitted up by this city on part of the ground bought with Memorial park west of the city on the Maple Grove road.

Terre Haute.—Mrs. Jennie E. Levering, aged eighty, one of this city's foremost church workers, died at her home here.

Portland.—A head-on collision between passenger train No. 2, on the Lake Erie & Western railroad, and a freight train, which occurred at Oakland, between Coldwater and Fort Recovery, O., near here, is believed to have been caused by the death of George Bassler, age sixty-one, of Lima, O., while at the throttle of the passenger train engine.

Valparaiso.—The contract for a new administration building at Valparaiso university has been awarded by the trustees. The new building will cost $50,000.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

Copyright, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.

LESSON FOR JUNE 3

JEREMIAH, THE PROPHET OF COURAGE

LESSON TEXT—Jeremiah 35:1-18.

GOLDEN TEXT—Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong. —1 Corinthians 16:13.

REFERENCE MATERIAL—Jeremiah 9:1-9; 13:1-9; 16:1-4; Matthew 2:17, 18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Sons Who Honor Their Father.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Story of the Rechabites.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC —Jeremiah, the Courageous Prophet.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC —Jeremiah's Service to His Nation.

Jeremiah was one of the last prophets of Judah. He saw the nation go into the Babylonian Captivity and Jerusalem destroyed, after which he went into Egypt. He was a lonely, misunderstood and unpopular prophet. He was most bitterly hated and persecuted. His own countrymen turned against him. He was placed in stocks and then thrown into a horrible dungeon from which he narrowly escaped with his life. The teacher should give a little sketch of his life. The following is suggested:

1. His Call (1:2-10).
2. His Commission (1:11-19).
3. His Sympathetic Heart (4:19).
4. His Great Sorrows (10:15-21).
5. The Divine Power Which Urged Him Forward and Sustained Him (10:7-9).

Because he was called upon to prophesy against his own nation and at the command of God urged them to surrender to the Babylonians, he was regarded as a traitor guilty of treason against his own nation.

I. The Rechabites' Test (vv. 1-5).

In the days of Jehoiakim, the Lord charged Jeremiah to bring the Rechabites into the house of the Lord and test them regarding the drinking of wine. This he did in a place where the people might behold them, the aim being to teach Judah by example. The father of the Rechabites had given command that they should not drink wine. Their filial obedience put to shame the children of Judah for their lack of obedience. Jonadab, the father of the Rechabites, was only a man but the one whose commands Judah disregarded was the Almighty God, their Creator and Savior. It is God's plan that every man be tested. Being a free agent, he can have character only through testing.

II. The Filial Loyalty of the Rechabites (vv. 6-11).

Though they were out of their own country in the midst of a foreign people they refused to drink wine, declaring that they had been true to the instructions of Jonadab all their lives. It is a fine thing when children remember their fathers and render obedience to their commands.

III. The Loyalty of the Rechabites in Contrast With the Disloyalty of Judah (vv. 12-16).

1. The Appeal (vv. 13, 14). He made the appeal on the basis of the filial loyalty of the Rechabites. He also reminded them that he had spoken to them in person, rising up early to do so.

2. The Ministry of the Prophets (vv. 15, 16). When the people failed to render obedience to God, he sent to them the prophets, who pleaded with them to amend their ways by turning away from their idols. Matthew Henry indicates the points of contrast somewhat as follows: (1) The Rechabites were obedient to one who was but a man; the Jews disobeyed the infinite and eternal God. (2) Jonadab was dead and could not know of their disloyalty or correct them for it. God is all-knowing and lives forever and will punish for disobedience. (3) The Rechabites were never reminded of their obligations, but God sent His prophets to speak to His people. (4) Jonadab left the charge but no estate to support the charge, but God gave the people a goodly land and prospered them in it. (5) God never assigned His people a task as hard as Jonadab's, but God's people disobeyed Him while the Rechabites obeyed their father.

IV. Judgment Upon the Jews for Disobedience (v. 17).

God declared that He would bring judgment upon them according to what He had said. Judgment is laid upon those who disobey and rebel against God.

V. Reward of the Rechabites for Their Loyalty (vv. 18, 19).

Because they had been true to the commands of Jonadab, they should always have a representative before God. God has such a regard for filial obedience that He lets no act go unrewarded.

Be Sure of Happiness.

Before we passionately desire anything which another enjoys, we should examine as to the happiness of its possessor.—Rochefoucauld.

History.

History is little more than the register of the crimes, follies and misfortunes of mankind.—Gibbon.

Great Secrets.

The great secrets of being courted are to shun others and to seem delighted with yourself.—Bulwer.

EXPECT BIG CROPS

Conditions in Western Canada Please Farmers.

Seeding Has Been Begun Earlier Than for Many Years, and Soil Is in Perfect Shape.

With weather conditions highly favorable, the farmers of Western Canada, with the exception probably of a portion of Manitoba, have completed seeding from ten to fifteen days earlier than for some years past. In some parts of Manitoba there were floods which delayed seeding, but they have abated, and left the land in good shape for quick work and speedy germination. In Saskatchewan soil conditions for seeding were never better. With a generous quantity of snow, which after melting left needed moisture, and another snowstorm after seeding was finished, there was an ideal condition created. From all parts of Alberta there came the best of reports as to rainfall and snow moisture, leaving the ground in the condition required for the prospects of a good crop.

Spring, as in most other parts of the continent, was backward, but notwithstanding this, as has been said, farmers were able to get on the land earlier than for some years. In fact, seeding was practically commenced about the 12th of April, which to many readers may seem remarkable, when it is known that several hundred miles farther south it was not possible to do spring seeding for several days later. Reports to hand on the 16th of May state that wheat is up above the ground in a great many places, oats are being sown, and corn planted. Farm labor was scarce for awhile, but the demand has fallen off. One feature of the demand for farm help is that farmers are now employing help by the year, at of course smaller wages than those paid for special work. The increasing tendency to employ help by the year is evidence that farmers are not relying solely upon wheat growing, but are going out into other branches, such as dairying, stock raising, etc. The prospects in all portions of Western Canada were never brighter than at present. Information regarding the condition of the crops at any time will be sent on request made to any Canadian government agent.—Advertisement.

Fidelity Above Everything.

Nothing is more noble, nothing more venerable than fidelity. Faithfulness and truth are the most sacred excellences and endowments of the human mind.—Cicero.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Mailing Coins.

To send a small coin through the mail, use a narrow strip of adhesive plaster to fasten it to the paper. It will arrive at its destination safely.—Designer Magazine.

TODAY I AM REAL WELL

So Writes Woman After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Jamestown N. Y.—"I was nervous, easily excited and discouraged and had no ambition. Part of the time I was not able to sit up as I suffered with pains in my back and with weakness. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, both the liquid and tablet forms, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash for inflammation. Today I am real well and run a rooming house and do the work. I recommend your medicine to every woman who complains, and you may use my letter to help any one else. I am passing through the Change of Life now and I keep the Vegetable Compound in the house, ready to take when I feel the need of it."—Mrs. ALICE D. DAVIS, 203 W. Second St., Jamestown, N. Y.

Often some slight derangement may cause a general upset condition of the whole system, indicated by such symptoms as nervousness, backache, lack of ambition and general weakness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will be found a splendid medicine for such troubles. In many cases it has removed the cause of the trouble.

YOU CAN'T CUT OUT
A Bog Spavin or Thoroughpin
but you can clean them off promptly with
ABSORBINE
and you work the horse same time. Does not blister or remove the hair. $2.50 per bottle, delivered. Will tell you more if you write. Book 4 A free.
W. F. YOUNG, Inc., 310 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

Occasionally.

All four of the members of a quartet are unalterably convinced that the other three cannot sing, and sometimes they are right about it.—Kansas City Star.

A Blessing.

Mrs. Scrappington — My contempt for you is too deep for words.

Scrappington—I am thankful for that.—Boston Evening Transcript.

Instant relief from CORNS without risk of infection

Safely! You can end the pain of corns, in one minute. Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads will do it, for they remove the cause—friction-pressure, and heal the irritation. Thus you avoid infection from cutting your corns or using corrosive acids. Thin; antiseptic; waterproof. Sizes for corns, callouses, bunions. Get a box today at your druggist's or shoe dealer's.

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

Made in the laboratories of The Scholl Mfg. Co., makers of Dr. Scholl's Foot Comfort Appliances, Arch Supports, etc.

Put one on—the pain is gone!

Children Cry for

Fletcher's CASTORIA

MOTHER:- Fletcher's Castoria is a pleasant, harmless Substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups, especially prepared for Infants 1 month old to Children all ages.

To avoid imitations, always look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher
Proven directions on each package. Physicians everywhere recommend it.

ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE
THE ANTISEPTIC, HEALING POWDER FOR THE FEET

Takes the friction from the shoe, relieves the pain of corns, bunions, callouses and sore spots, freshens the feet and gives new vigor.

MAKES TIGHT OR NEW SHOES FEEL EASY

At night, when your feet are tired, sore and swollen from excessive dancing or walking, sprinkle Allen's Foot-Ease in the foot-bath and enjoy the bliss of feet without an ache.

Over One Million five hundred thousand pounds of powder for the feet were used by our Army and Navy during the war. Trial package and a Foot-Ease Walking Doll Sent Free. Address ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE, Le Roy, N. Y.

In a Pinch, Use ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE

L 912

Friday Special

CARNATIONS
We will have several dozen fine carnations which we will be able to sell at $1.00 a doz.
Cabbage and Celery Plants, 10c a doz.

NEWS OFFICE

The St. Joe News

William S. Quance,
Editor and Publisher.

One Year, - - $1.50
Six Months, - - - .75
Three Months, - - .40
One Month, - - - .15
Single Copy, - - - .05
(Advertising Rates on Application)

Entered at the postoffice at St. Joe, Indiana, as second class matter.

[illegible] Advertising Representative
THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

Old Fashioned Charm

St. Joe is not far behind in bringing the very latest to its bounds. Except for a yearning for grandfather's four-poster bed or the old Seth Thomas hall clock or a few pieces of period furniture, we scorn things that bring memories of lavender and old lace. This is true everywhere. Beautiful things in grandmother's day often cause a smile now.

But we find a bit of old fashioned charm in St. Joe that one cannot afford to overlook. These days of landscape gardening have nearly crowded out the simplicity and grace of the flower gardens in our grandmother's youth.

Possibly you have noticed the residence of Mrs. Kate Leighty when the flower garden is at its best. It is indeed a beauty spot with spring and summer bringing daffodils, hyacinths, tulips, bleeding hearts, columbine, bachelor buttons, hearts ease, and all that truly should grow in this rare old garden

St. Joe is fortunate in having this fine flower spot not only because of its rareity but for many years Mrs. Leighty has used the best of the flowers to help decorate graves on Memorial Day.

Thanks to the human heart by which we live,
Thanks to its tenderness, its joys
and fears,
To me the meanest flower that blows can give
Thoughts that do often lie too deep for tears. —Wordsworth.

A Birthday Party

A party was given Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fellers, in honor of their son Austin's eighteenth birthday. The evening was spent by playing games, music, and social time. A delicious lunch consisting of Parker House rolls, meat, spaghetti, pickles, fruit salad, cake, cocoa, and coffee and mints was served. There were eighteen present. All departed at a late hour after a very enjoyable evening; wishing their friend many more happy birthdays.

Golf and Golf.

Fifteen per cent of the people play golf, says an expert. If you call it.—Wall Street Journal.

NEWVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Glawe moved to Auburn the first of last week.

The farmers around here are having to do a lot of their planting over again.

John Rude and wife entertained two of their grandchildren of Mooresville last week.

C. O. Berry and family of near Auburn, were the Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Stafford.

Justin Glowe, Byron Miller, Donald Ayers and John Cook have employment with the automobile works in Auburn.

Mr. and Mrs. Gillingham went to Edgerton, Ohio, Wednesday of last week to consult Dr. Manuel in regard to the latter's health.

Mrs. Madona Richmond and three children of Peoria, Ill., spent a couple of weeks visiting relatives here. She returned to her home last week.

John Lyons of east of Newville, was taken to the hospital at Garrett the first of last week. His son, Frank, accompanied him to the hospital.

D. D. Dumas received word that his son Estol had three fingers severed from his left hand while working in a factory at Jackson, Mich. Mr. Lumas left for Jackson. His daughter, Mary, accompanied him.

Wm. Miller received word that his mother, Mrs. S. P. Miller of Groverhill, Ohio, died last Thursday. Deceased was once a resident of Newville for a short time. Mr. Miller was not well enough to attend the funeral.

May 11th proved an unlucky day for your correspondent. While placing something overhead in the woodhouse she fell from a chair breaking one rib, cracking another and injuring the right hand so that it was useless for about ten days, and was severely hurt otherwise. Drs. Harrison and Showalter of Butler, did the binding up. At this date she is convalescent and thank the good Lord that every day, in every way we are getting better and better.

SOUND HIDES BRING MORE MONEY

Only sound hides free from cuts on the flesh side, well taken off, of regular even pattern, properly salted and cured, can command a high price and make good leather. Greater care must be taken in summer than in winter in salting, curing and marketing hides, especially by the farmer or the country butcher who has only an occasional hide to cure. Partly decayed hides are practically useless.

Definite directions for the skinning, curing and marketing of hides are given in Farmers' Bulletin 1055, a copy of which will be sent on request by the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Meaning of "Unicameral."

The word "unicameral" means "having, or consisting of, a single chamber," and is applied to a legislative assembly.

Day Recognized as Belonging to All Who Served Nation

Memorial day is generally observed throughout the world this year, due in large part to the efforts of the American Legion, according to the following announcement made at Legion headquarters at Indianapolis:

"Originally designated by the Union veterans of the Civil war as a particular decoration day for their fallen comrades, May 30 gradually has become a day set apart in memory of all Americans who died for their country. Although it has long been the custom of many southern states to observe a memorial holiday of their own on April 26, the tendency to a uniform observance has been apparent since the World war. The Legion, composed of both the North and the South, officially adopted May 30 as its Memorial day and posts of the World war men on both sides of the Mason-Dixon line have, for the last three years, simultaneously honored the dead of the Civil, Spanish-American and World wars.

May 30 International Holiday.

"When the Inter-Allied Veterans' federation, made up of World war veterans of France, England and Canada, Italy and the others of the allied nations and of which the Legion is a member, adopted the Legion's date for the observance of rites for the dead. May 30 became an international holiday, comparable only in universal observance to Christmas. In the years to come it will be observed by Legion posts and allied veterans' organizations in the following countries other than the United States: Canada, Belgium, France, Poland, Turkey, Mexico, Argentina, Brazil, British Isles, Chile, China, Cuba, Guatemala, Japan, Peru, Porto Rico, Portugese West Africa, Santo Domingo, Spanish Honduras, India, Venezuela and the Canal Zone, Hawaii, Philippine islands and the territory of Alaska.

"As it did last year and the year before, the Legion will decorate and hold appropriate exercises over the grave of every American who sleeps on foreign soil, as well as thus honoring the graves of American and allied veterans who are buried in the cemeteries of this country. Legion posts in France, Belgium, Poland and Turkey will visit old battlefields and adjacent cemeteries.

Huge Task Completed.

"The United States graves registration service has completed its huge task of returning to this country the bodies of 42,023 of the A. E. F. who died overseas, but 30,000 Americans still remain permanently buried in cemeteries of the allied nations.

"To finance the Memorial day decoration of graves overseas, each of the Legion's 11,000 posts was asked to subscribe an amount equal to five cents for each of its members. A central committee of the Legion in France will receive the funds from this country and have charge of decorating the individual graves.

"Several months before Memorial day Hanford MacNider, national commander of the Legion, sent each post a request that exercises this year be made as personal as possible. 'With this end in view,' Mr. MacNider wrote, 'the Legion is ready to make special efforts to aid relatives and friends who think on Memorial day not so much of the whole army of the dead as they will of some one youth who went forth to fight and did not come back.'

All Veterans to Be Honored.

"Gold star parents, desiring that especial attention be paid to the graves of their departed, requesting a certain type of floral decoration or religious ceremony, were asked to communicate their wishes to the organization's national headquarters, from which they were relayed to the legion post nearest the place of burial.

"The Legion will not confine its exercises and decorations to the memory of World war heroes alone. The graves of all veterans of all American wars will be visited and decorated and fittingly honored. Last year the organization requested its posts and units of the Legion auxiliary to seek out, in each community, graves of all American soldier and sailor dead and to prepare charts showing where such graves were located and how they could be reached. The efforts of the World war men have resulted in many graves of Civil war veterans being rescued from obscurity and the graves of several veterans of 1812, long since forgotten, have been found and restored.

Bodies Abroad Cared For.

"A similar plan of keeping a close and honored watch on graves of Americans buried overseas has been evolved. There will be in France four principal cemeteries wherein men of the A. E. F. will sleep forever. At present a special fine arts commission is working on the project which will entail, for the collection of bodies and the beautification of cemeteries, an expenditure of more than $1,000,000. These fields of honor will be located at Belleau Wood, near Chateau-Thierry; Bony, near St. Quentin; Suresnes, near Paris, and Romagne, in the Argonne, near Montfaucon. More than 500 Americans will remain buried in England. A gift of land by the British government allows for the future decoration and care of these graves. Under plans already advanced a little cemetery for those Americans who died in England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales will be located at Brookwood, Surrey, England.

"This year still fewer of the proud, white-haired old heroes of '61-'65 will bear their colors and their flowers to the sacred ground where their comrades are in eternal bivouac. Last year the thinning ranks were filled with sturdy, tanned youngsters in their army drabs and navy blues who were honored to march at the side of the veteran patriarchs on their holy mission. The present Memorial day finds the hosts of Grant and Lee all but dissipated and as the youths of the World war strive for the honored files of the vanished procession, the day takes on a new significance."

MEMORIAL days will come and with the passing years History will narrate their observances. But far above and beyond the pageantry of these glorious days are the scrolls of eternal truth; the history which men's ideals write, the spiritual architecture which makes a nation great. Therein lies the deeper meaning of the day. And the fadeless beauty of Old Glory can only be surpassed by the response to the echoes of the far-sounding prophecies which it awakens.

Progressive.

A better tomorrow is born of a good today.—Boston Transcript.

Chiropractor Optician

Calls made at your home by
APPOINTMENT.

EARL E. FRISBIE,
Butler, Indiana.

Office Cat

When it comes to bills, we give the stork credit for having the longest.

—‡—‡—‡—

Anvbody will make a mistake once. "Fools make the same mistake twice." Try to beat yesterday's record today.

—‡—‡—‡—

A little bee
sat on a tree
and then he sat on me
o g.

—‡—‡—‡—

Journalism Jane says men are like the moon: shine best at night, and pown to their last quarter a good part of the time.

—‡—‡—‡—

Little daubs of powder, little spects of paint, makes the little freckle, look as if it 'aint.

—‡—‡—‡—

Being otherwise engaged many stenographers are giving notice they intend to quit about May 31.

—‡—‡—‡—

De Luxe Travel.

If you can't travel, you can get Pullman luxury at home. Just crawl up on a closet shelf and stick a cinder in your eye.—Coatesville Record.

Make Your Trip More Enjoyable by a Refreshing Night on Lake Erie
(Your rail ticket is good on the boats)
Thousands of east and north bound travelers say they wouldn't have missed that cool, comfortable night on one of our fine steamers. A good bed in a clean stateroom, a long sound sleep and an appetizing breakfast in the morning!
Steamers "SEEANDBEE" — "CITY OF ERIE" — "CITY OF BUFFALO"
Daily, May 1st to November 15th
Leave Cleveland - 9:00 P.M. } Eastern Standard Time { Leave Buffalo - 9:00 P.M.
Arrive Buffalo - 7:30 A.M. } { Arrive Cleveland - 7:30 A.M.
Connections for Niagara Falls, Eastern and Canadian points. Ask your ticket agent or tourist agency for tickets via C & B Line. New Tourist Automobile Rate—$10.00.
Send for free sectional puzzle chart of the Great Ship "Seeandbee" and 32-page booklet.
The Cleveland and Buffalo Transit Co.
Cleveland, Ohio
The Great Ship "Seeandbee" — the largest steamer on inland waters of the world
Fare $5.50

SOUR STOMACH
causes bad breath, gassy pains, coated tongue and belching.
Always find relief in
CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS
Sweeten your stomach and breath—only 25c

Organized a Camp Fire

A meeting was held Thursday evening at the home of Miss Martha Miser for the purpose of organizing a Camp Fire for the girls of St. Joe. Eight were present at the first meeting, at which Miss Josephine Johnson presided. The aim of the organization here is "Civic and Social Betterment." The girls promptly voted to help in any way they could to make Memorial Day a success and tendered their help to the Memorial Day committee. They have planned a hike for Thursday of this week.

Tragedy at Altona

James Thomas, aged 39, and Willian Ingram, 26, both colored, are dead as a result of a revolver duel fought on Tom Loving, colored, porch, at Altona supurb, Sunday morning. The trouble arose over a woman, Mrs. Ingram. Thomas had beed visiting the Loving home and when Ingram learned he was there he declared he was going to get Thomas, as Thomas had misled his wife and broke ub his home. Ingbam walked on the Loving porch and asked if his wife was there When answered that she was not, he drew a .38 calibre revolver and fired at Thomas. Thomas in turn drew a .32 calibre gun and opened on Ingram, his gun being an automatic. When the smoke of battle cleared away Thomas was dead with three wounds in the head, and Ingram was dead with eight bullets in his hide, one of them being in his head. Loving fled at the first round. Mrs. Ihgram confessed that she had been guilty with Thomas, the family living then at LaPorte. The couple separated and Ingram came to Garrett and worked in the B. & O. shops. He was a soldier of the late war. Thomas had a wife and child at La Porte. she and the child just having arrivec here Saturday. A great sensation was caused by the gun battle and its donble results.

Christian Church Notes

Mrs. Eva Sheffer will entertain the Martha Society Thursday afternoon.

There will be a council meeting Friday night of the Sunday school officers and teachers. A full attendance is desired. The meeting will be held at the church beginning at 7:30 p. m.

H. R. Minnick, M. D.
St. Joe, Indiana
Office at Residence
PHONE NO. 16X

Lutheran Notes

The sermon next Sund[illegible] at the Lutheran church [illegible] the Third Day of Creation. W[illegible] having Sunday School at 9 [illegible] each Sunday. We try t[illegible] one something to do [illegible] and take part.

The sermon in the evening will be at 7:30 Everybody welcome

Rev. S. D. Steffey, Pastor.

Bible Thoughts for the Week

Sunday.

HOW TO OVERCOME EVIL.

Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honour preferring one another; recompense to no man evil for evil. Provide things honest in the sight of all men. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.—Romans 12:10, 17, 21.

Monday.

EARTHLY TREASURES.—Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal.—Matthew 6:19.

Tuesday.

SAVING GRACE.—By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God.—Ephesians 2:8.

Wednesday.

FRUIT OF THE SPIRIT.—Love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance against such there is no law.—Gal. 5:22, 23.

Thursday.

LIFE AND GOOD DAYS.—He that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile.—I Peter 3:10.

Friday.

SEEK TODAY.—Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near. Isaiah 55:6.

Saturday.

THE ETERNAL GOODNESS.—O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.—Psalm 107:1.

Sacrifice First.

You cannot win without sacrifice.—Charles Buxton.

Frank L. Milliman
TRUSTEE
Concord Township
Office Day Friday of Each Week at his residence 2 miles north and 1-2 mile West of St. Joe.

WATCH
for every important announcement of a merchandising event that will mean money to you.
Patterson- Fletcher Co.
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA
The Store That Does Things
Wayne & Harrison Sts.

Lehman's
CLOTHING HOUSE
ESTABLISHED 1867
MENS AND BOYS OUTFITTERS
810 CALHOUN STREET
BEN LEHMAN PROP.
Fort Wayne, Ind.

L 912

MAY

$ Money $

A MESSAGE TO SEEKERS OF SUCCESS

Miracles in Money

A city skyscraper seems a miracle in steel and stone, but is only a vast number of girders painstakingly placed together—a vast quantity of bricks placed end to end and one above another.

Miracles in money are seeming miracles only. You can work miracles in your own life.

Saving Wins Success

You can have a big prosperous farm, own a car, or travel wherever you wish.

Men who have really succeeded spell it S-A-V-E. You can win the same success. You do not need a lot of money to do it. You need no great education.

You need only the determination to start now and to continue. Let us help you.

This Bank Will Help You Save.

Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank

Capital Stock, - $25,000

Spencerville, Ind.

The Bank of Personal Services

SPENCERVILLE

Mrs. John Haifley is still quite ill at this writing.

Roy Chaney of east of town is ill with Scarlet Fever.

Don Kimes and wife have moved into the Summers tenant house.

Mr. and Mr. Dwight Coolidge and children were Sunday guests of friends at Hicksville.

Mrs. Nancy Chaney will act as hostess to the C. C. club on Friday afternoon.

Frank Wertman and wife spent Sunday afternoon with Henry Stotler and family near Harlan.

Dr. and Mrs. Frank Silberg and daughter, were Sunday dinner and supper guests of Sophia Miller.

Daniel Bice, Verna Reed, Walter Beerbower and Harold Walts of South Bend, spent Sunday at this place.

Mort Shutt, and Mrs. Gertrude Markle and children, were Sunday afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Harter of Hall's Corners.

Decoration Day services were held on Wednesday at the White City Cemetery, Mr. Stump of Auburn gave the address. Music was furnished by both the Lutheran and Methodist choir.

B. F. Markle and family visited Alfred Muhn and family at Auburn, Sunday afternoon.

John Squires and Miss Effie Spuires of Fort Wayne, were guests on Sunday of Harvey Beam.

Dr and Mrs. W. W. Carry and J M. Beams and wife visited the ladies' brother, Morton Shutt and family Sunday.

Mildred Bogar and Ross Bair of Fort Wayne, were Sunday guests of the latter's mother, Mrs. Hattie Bair and daughter.

George Wilmot, who is working at Pontiac, Michigan, is visiting his parents, Vern Wilmot and wife, this week.

Miss Fannie Vallieu and Miss Brettian of Fort Wayne, Orley Woodring and family of Newville, spent Su day the guests of J. C. Vallieu and family.

Mrs. Anna Boger and grandson, Gustave Goeltzenleuchtner, of Auburn, are visiting the former's daughter, Mrs. Gust Hafner and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Beery very pleasantly entertained the following guests at their home east of town, Sunday: Harley Beery, wife and sons and Mrs. Nora Kinsey of Fort Wayne, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Beery of New Haven and Mrs. Louis Markle of Wise's Corners.

After 8 Weeks
You Must Change the Feed

For the first 8 weeks, Conkey's Buttermilk Starting Feed is the proper Feed, scientifically, for chicks, but

Growing Chicks Must Have a Different Feed

They must have more protein than the little chicks can stand. The same feed cannot serve for both purposes—for little chicks and for growing fowls—if you expect to get the best results. That's why Conkey makes

Conkey's
THE ORIGINAL
Buttermilk Growing Mash

This is the great developing feed that most successful poultrymen use to bring their fowls quickly to early maturity—that insures early broilers and layers. Just right in protein and low in fibre. It is a wonderful bone and flesh builder. Feed it for rapid and certain results.

Conkey's The Original Buttermilk Starting Feed

Should always be fed for the first 8 weeks. It is an appetizing combination of pure, sweet grain and concentrated sanitary Buttermilk combined by a special process. Conkey uses Semi-Solid Buttermilk only—never dried Buttermilk.

STEWARD LUMBER & GRAIN COMPANY, Spencerville, Indiana
E. LEIGHTY GROCERY, St. Joe, Indiana

GLASSES—$2.50 up, Benj. F. Griest, Eyesight specialist, American Bldg., Hicksville, Ohio.

Aileen Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Jason Kees of Fort Wayne were guests on Sunday of William Allen and family

Mr. and Mrs. Mertin K mes and James Pring of Robinson Chaple, spent Sunday with the former's father, Mr. George Kimes and wife.

F. L. Beams and family and Marjorie Hollobaugh were Sunday afternoon guests of Jerry Klopfenstein and wife of near Grabill.

Eck Hursh and family and Mrs. Emila Gloyd and son Gerry, were Sunday dinner guests of Mrs Sylvia Vansile and family.

George Kinsey of St. Joe, Harry Kinsey of Fremont and Roy Bowser, spent Saturday and Sunday at Silver Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Chaney, Mr. and Mrs. Dayton Chaney and daughter were Sunday guests of the former's brother, Milton Chaney and wife. B. F. Markle and family were Friday evening guests in the Mose Oberholtzer home near Harlan.

Mrs. Timbrook, widow of the late James Timbrook, died at the home of her son, William, of near Hicksville. The funeral was held at this place on Monday afternoon, Rev. Fred Brewster, officiating. Innerment was made in the White City Cemetery. Mrs. Timbrook resided at this place many years ago.

Mrs. Emila Gloyd received word last week of the recent arrival of the fourth son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Osborne of Delphi, Indiana, who will answer to the name of Harold Steward Osborne. Mrs. Osborne will be remembered as Miss Gladys Gloyd.

The following guests very pleasantly surprised Mr. and Mrs. Ben Souls at their home on Sunday in honor of Mrs. Soul's birthday anniversary: William Oberholtzer and wife, Clyde Ginder and daughter of Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Oberholtzer, Mr. and Mrs William Maxwell of St. Joe, and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Miller and family of this place.

On Sunday evening an election of officers was held by the Christian Endervor Society of the Lutheran Church as follows: President, Doris Beams; Vice president, Doris Rhoades; Secretary - Treasurer, Marcella Zimmerman; Assistant, Marjorie Furnish; Chorister, Hershel Zeis; Assistant, Florence Beams; Organist, Doris Rhoades; Assistant, Garnett Beams. These officers will be installed at the regular church services in two weeks.

COBURN'S CORNERS

For good glasses see Griest at American Building Hicksville, Ohio.

Fred Gee, who is working at Ft. Wayne, spent the weekend at home.

Miss Harriett Frank of Auburn, is visiting her grandfather, O. J. Baker and her aunt, Mrs. Matie Gee for a couple of weeks.

The Ladies Aid Society has been invited to meet with the Coletown Ladies Aid in an all day meeting at the home of Mrs. Mark Murphy. A potluck dinner will be served.

Decoration Day services were held at Coburn's Corners, Wednesday morning with decoration of graves at Alton cemetery following The Rev. Bransford of Hicksville, delivered the address.

The Rural Housewives Club met Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Mark Murphy. A short time was spent with needlework and in a social way after which a business session was held. Guests present were Mrs. Will Sauers of Coletown, Mrs. John Nugen, Mrs. Claire Miller and daughter and Miss Harriett Frank all of Auburn. The hostess assisted by her mother, Mrs. Sauers and sister, Mrs. Miller, served a delicious luncheon of sandwiches, tropical fruit with whipped cream, olive aspic salad, walnut cookies and coffee to the eighteen present. The next meeting is to be held Tuesday evening, June 5, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Abner Trostel, at which time the tenth anniversary of the club's organization will be celebrated. Both active and honorary members with their families are invited.

HOW'S THIS?

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE will do what we claim for it—rid your system of Catarrh or Deafness caused by Catarrh.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an Ointment which Quickly Relieves the catarrhal inflammation, and the Internal Medicine, a Tonic, which acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces, thus assisting to restore normal conditions.

Sold by druggists for over 40 Years.
F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

COLETOWN

Try a want ad in the News.

Curtis Hursey and wife were Sunday guests of Jay Hart and family.

Edwin Guthrie and wife were Sunday guests of Rev. Brewster and family at Spencerville.

John Nugen and wife, Mrs. Grace Miller and daughter, Georgia were guests of Will Sauers and wife Wednesday.

Lester Pierman and family visited Sunday with Henry Murphy and wife

George Brown was a guest of Kenneth Meek Sunday.

Jay Hart and wife called on W. W. Wilder Sunday evening.

Mt. Pleasant

Patronize the advertisers.

Miss Majel Knox, who has been attending school near Albion has joined her parents here.

G. G. Hamilton and wife had as Sunday dinner guests their daughter, Mrs. Knox and family.

Clarance Keller, wife and little daughter spent Sunday at Garrett with her sister, Mrs. Bertie Ginder.

Miss Phyllis Rickett of St. Joe, was an overnight guest of Mr. and Mrs. Waldo Rosenbury recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Praul entertained at dinner Sunday, Stirl Brunson and family of Butler.

Miss Joyce Bonecutter of Butler spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Shank.

Charles Inhoff and wife and William Mutzfeld and wife of Butler, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. E B. Nimmons.

Miss Gertrude Ginder went to Fort Wayne Sunday for a two-weeks visit with her brother, Elgy Ginder and wife.

Mark Shull and family and Mr. and Mrs. John Knight were Sunday afternoon callers on Hicksville relatives.

R.M. Johnson and wife and Roscoe Johnson and wife of Auburn, were Sunday evening callers at the home of John Knight.

James Harter and wife of St. Joe, were Sunday guests at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Goldie Ginder and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hall of Waterloo, spent Saturday evening with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Gunsenhouser. Their little daughter, Avis, remained for a longer visit.

Gordon Skinner of Kalida, Ohio, and Miss Ella Brown were united in marriage May 23. Miss Brown has been a school teacher for a number of years and the groom is a farmer and a mechanic. They will reside in Putman County.

CONCORD

Quite a few of the farmers are planting corn aroud here.

This is a poor year for raising chickens, so many are having bad luck with them.

Mrs. Dell Draggoo and son and Mrs. Ada Messenger called on Chas Morr and famify Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jackson and daughter, Mabel, Mr. and Mrs. Ford Jackson and daughter, Iris, Mr. and Mrs. Holl Jackson spent Sunday in the home of Bert Jackson.

$5 ENROLLS YOU

Place Your Order Now For a Ford

Father starts it—mother finds she can add a little—even the kiddies will contribute their pennies and in a surprisingly short time, the whole family is enjoying the pleasures of owning a Ford. Here is how you can do it through the

Ford Weekly Purchase Plan

Bring the first $5 in to us. Enroll under the terms of the new, easy way to buy a Ford. Select the car you want. We will deposit your money in a local bank, at interest. Add a little each week. You will be surprised at the rate the money piles up when everyone is helping. Soon the payments, plus interest paid by the bank will make the car yours. Come in—let us give you full particulars.

FRANK W. SILBERG, Agent,
Spencerville, Ind.

WOOL!

Before selling yours see
WM. G. ERICK
SPENCERVILLE, IND.

"A Stitch in Time Saves Nine!"

That fellow "Ole Proverb" certainly seemed to cover the map of human affairs with labels, and as in the case of many medicines, you've just got to read the labels and follow directions.

Now, tucked away in most people's memory are such items as leaky roofs, falling plaster, buildings far from weather and wind proof, which help to make the fuel bill run high, besides countless other memories of ills that came from letting things "go to rack and ruin."

Well, if you won't or can't build a new home or out buildings, at least repair the old one. Every "two-bits" invested that way is more than apt to save a dollar.

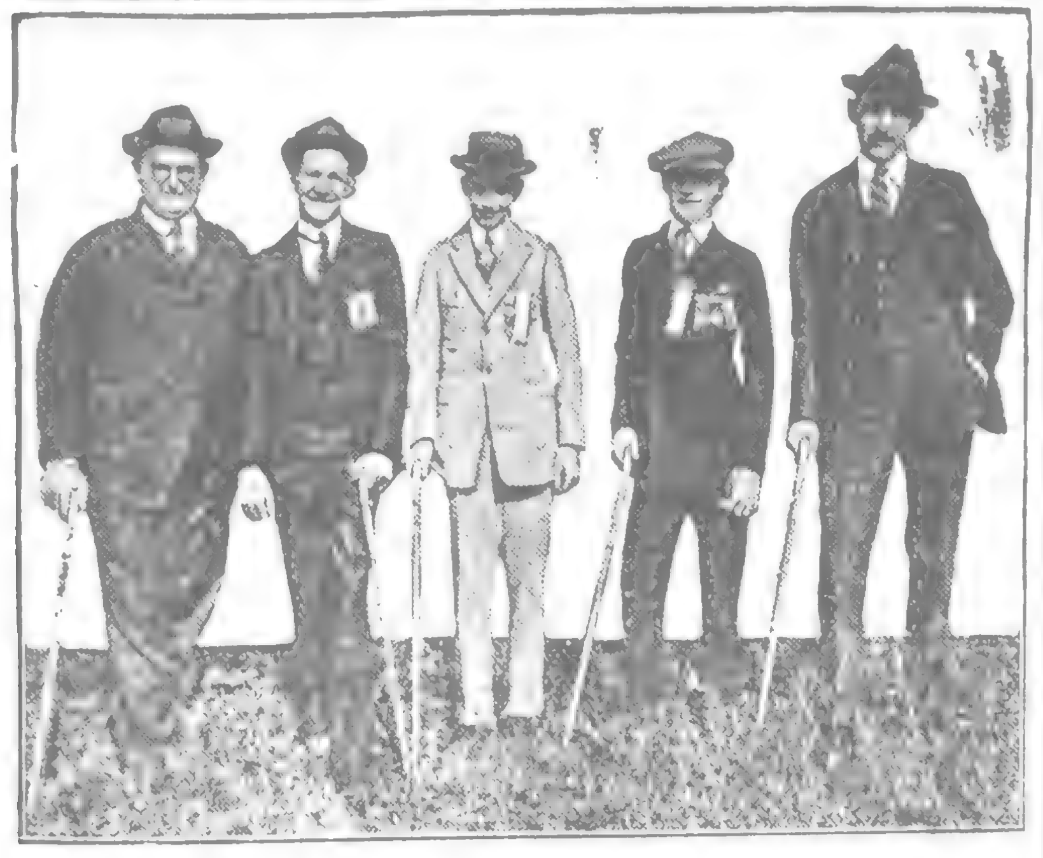
Think of us when youthink of this, as we have a full and complete stock of everything needed in building and repairing—and prices are right.

Spencerville Lumber Co.
ASHUR CULP, Manager
Lumber and Building Material of All Kinds
Spencreville, Ind.

MAY

L 912

American Farm Bureau



These Maryland boys, winners of first prize in junior dairy cattle judging contest at the National Dairy show held in St. Paul last fall, are now being trained to go to England to compete with teams from all countries. They are from left to right—B. B. Derrick, county agent, Harford county, Maryland; Richard U. Wills, Hubert Snodgrass, Charles F. Cushing of Harford county, and P. W. Chichester, assistant state boys' club agent.

CAPPER-TINCHER ACT IS CONSTITUTIONAL

Supreme Court Decision Declares Trading in Futures Influences Prices.

The farmers were right. Agriculture has scored another great victory. The United States Supreme court in a decision handed down recently, with only two votes (Justices Sutherland and McReynolds) dissenting, upheld the constitutionality of the new Capper-Tincher act regulating grain exchanges and admitting co-operative marketing associations to seats on boards of trade.

The opinion of the Supreme court as handed down by Chief Justice William H. Taft, completely overrules the attack made on the constitutionality of the Capper-Tincher act by the Chicago Board of Trade and fully upholds the contentions of the Department of Agriculture, the farm bloc, and the Farm Bureau.

In this decision the entire system of grain marketing is made subject to regulation by the secretary of agriculture as interstate commerce; and it is made mandatory on the grain exchange to provide a seat to any farmers' co-operative grain marketing association which applies.

The decision as read by Chief Justice Taft is quoted as follows:

"It is clear from the citations in the statement of the case of evidence before committees of investigation as to manipulation of the futures market and their effects, that we would be unwarranted in rejecting the findings of congress as unreasonable, and that in our inquiry as to the validity of the legislation, we must accept the view that such manipulation does work to the detriment of producers, consumers, shippers and legitimate dealers in interstate commerce in grain and that it is a real abuse.

"But it is contended that it is too remote in its effects on interstate commerce, and that it is not like the direct addition to the cost to the producer of marketing cattle by exorbitant charges and discrimination of commission men and dealers. This is hardly consistent with the affidavits the plaintiffs presented from the leading economists, who say that dealing in futures stabilizes cash prices.

"More than this, prices of grain futures are those upon which an owner and intending seller of cash grain is influenced to sell or not to sell as they offer a good opportunity to him to hedge comfortably against future fluctuations.

"Manipulations of grain futures for speculative profit, though not carried to the extent of a corner or complete monopoly, exert a vicious influence and produce abnormal and disturbing temporary fluctuations of prices that are not responsible to actual supply and demand and discourage not only this justifiable hedging but disturb the normal flow of actual consignments. A futures market lends itself to such manipulation much more readily than a cash market."

Chief Justice Taft said that the previous decision constituted an argument in favor of the validity of the new act, since congress had met the objections which the Supreme court had pointed out in its decision against the legality of the first act. The court declared that the grain exchange merely was a gateway through which grain flowed from the west to east and to Europe. It is impossible to distinguish between transactions in cash grain and in grain to arrive from stock shipments. The latter transactions constituted interstate commerce.

The court upheld the government's contention that futures trading affects the cash price of grain. The relation between cash grain and future dealings is evidenced by the fact that the corners in grain have resulted from dealings in futures.

Last fall the American Farm Bureau federation petitioned Federal Judge Carpenter in Chicago to be permitted to intervene in the case as codefendant with the government. This petition was denied on November 17, 1922. Nevertheless Attorneys Newton Jenkins and Donald Kirkpatrick had outlined the farm bureau's case very completely in their petition, every contention of which is now sustained by the highest tribunal.

President O. E. Bradfute of the American Farm bureau says: "The Supreme court has sustained the validity of the Capper-Tincher grain futures law in its entirety. The decision seems to go to unusual length in recognizing the national public interest involved.

"The farmers of America will recognize in this decision the establishment for all time of their fundamental right to follow their own products as far to market as they like. The President of the United States and the federal congress have already repeatedly voiced their interest in and their support of co-operative marketing. Now comes the third branch of the national government, the United States Supreme court, and upholds the legality of co-operative marketing. It is a decision of far-reaching importance and will sustain the growers of farm crops everywhere in their belief that our co-operative marketing program is right."

MISSOURI COUNTY IS RAISING SOY BEANS

One of Many Instances Where Farm Bureau Co-Operation Pays Farmers.

Linn county, Missouri, is rapidly becoming the soy bean center of the nation. The Linn county farm bureau has sponsored the organization of the Linn County Soy Bean Growers' association, and through that organization was organized the first soy bean selling association in the United States.

Linn county soy beans have been sold in every state in the Union except the New England group, and the growers have sold at this time their entire crop. Soy bean seed has also been exported to Canada and one order filled for an enterprising farmer in South Africa who read of the Morse soy bean seed grown in Linn county.

Much of the success of the sales of this seed is due to the trade mark of the Linn County Selling association, according to County Agent J. Robert Hall. Mr. Hall says the trade mark has resulted in the sale of every soy bean that has been grown in Linn county in the past three years, as it is now known throughout the United States.

To change this trade mark would be robbing the Linn county farmers of a hard-wrought reputation. The trade mark is their emblem of co-operation, service and good soy bean seed.

The Linn County Soy Bean Growers' association is now able to extend its national sales service outside of Linn county and is selling and buying seed for farmers all over the state.

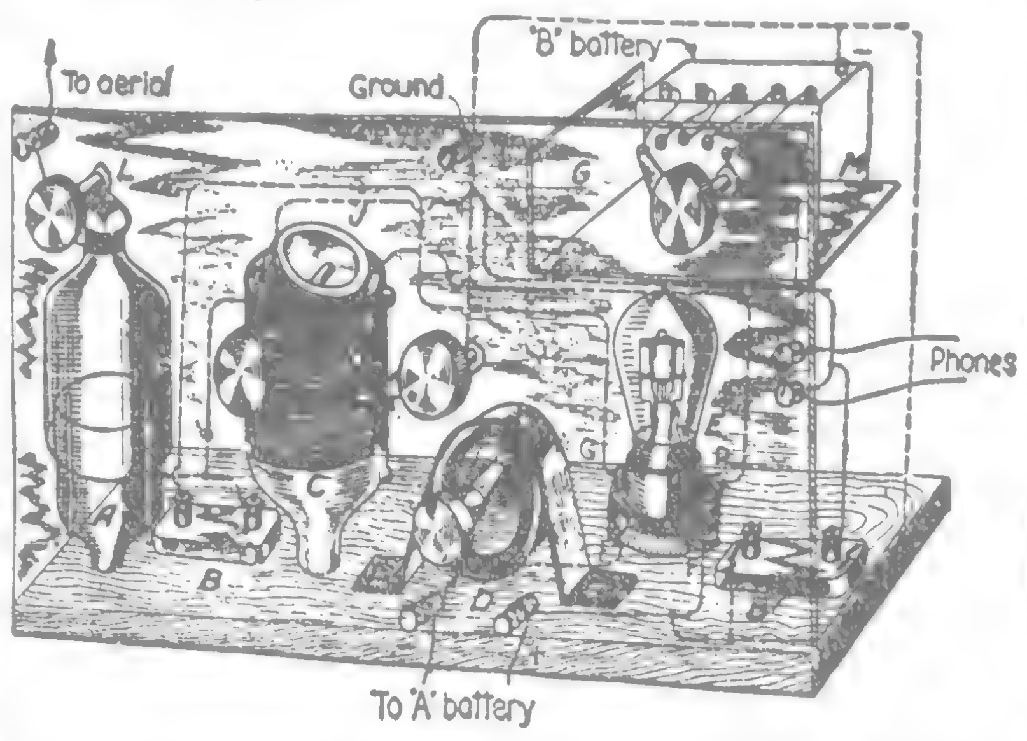
That the organization of the Linn County Soy Bean Growers' association is a success is attested by the fact that where three men were growing soys in the county ten years ago there are 1,200 farmers growing that crop today. This is one of the many instances where farm bureau co-operation has paid the farmers of Missouri.

AGENCY TO MARKET PRODUCE

Mississippi Growers Organizing State-Wide Association to Sell Their Truck.

Truck growers of Mississippi, with the assistance of the Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical college, are organizing a state-wide association through which all the produce of members will be marketed. The organization is to be known as the Mississippi Farm Bureau Truck Association, Inc., with headquarters at Jackson, Miss. It is the outgrowth of the old Mississippi Truck Growers, Inc., which for the past two years has been serving as the selling agency for 10 local associations throughout the state. The new federation expects to have at least 30 affiliated associations with a combined output of 2,000 carloads of perishable products. Forty-four towns in the state have been designated as shipping points.

THE BOTTLE REGENERATIVE RECEIVER



The Complete V. T. Regenerative Bottle Set. It Can Be Constructed by Amateurs.

To make this set, procure a wooden base, two inches thick by six inches wide, and of sufficient length to mount all the instruments.

The variable condenser is composed of two bottles, one slightly smaller in diameter than the other. Cut the bottom off the larger of the two, and coat the inside with tin-foil. Coat the outside of the smaller bottle with tin-foil, and at equal distances around the bottle paste four strips of waxed paper to keep the two sheets of tin-foil from touching each other. The smaller bottle is mounted by drilling a hole through the base, and sealing the neck of the bottle in it with insulating compound. The larger bottle is slipped over this, and is raised and lowered by means of a cord fastened to its neck, the upper end of which passes over a roller in the top of the cabinet. At the end of the roller is fastened a knob and dial, and by turning this the capacity of the condenser is varied.

The stator of the vario-coupler is composed of a bottle from which the bottom has been cut off. It is fastened in the base the same as the smaller bottle of the variable condenser. The rotor is a section cut off a smaller bottle, which will just rotate within the stator. Holes are drilled in the sides of the stator and rotor in such a position that a rod can be passed through them, which is used to turn the rotor.

The rheostat is composed of a section about one inch long, cut from the same bottle as the rotor of the vario-coupler. This is wound with resistance wire as is shown in the diagram. Cut a circular piece of wood which just fits inside the rheostat. In the center of this bore a hole, and pass a rod through it which carries an arm making contact with the resistance wire. This rod also passes through the panel and carries on the end a knob and pointer.

The instruments are mounted in a cabinet, the front of which is made of a piece of window glass, drilled for the various switches, etc. A switch is used to vary the amount of inductance in the primary of the vario-coupler.

In the upper right hand corner of the cabinet is fastened a small box that contains the "B" battery, which is controlled by a switch mounted on the panel.

Besides the instruments above described, a vacuum tube, a socket, and two fixed condensers are used in the circuit.

The hook-up is also given herewith.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)

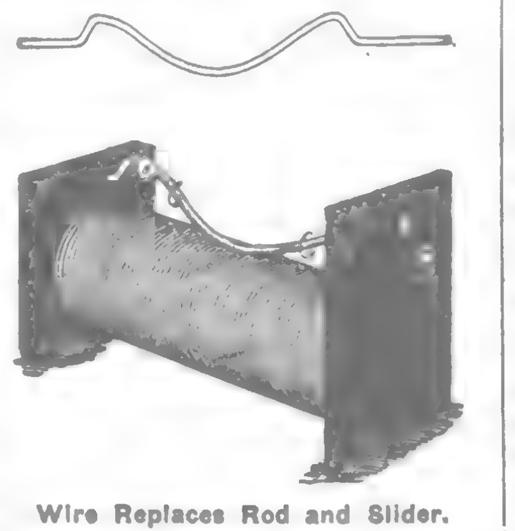
Tuning-Coil Slider Gives Fine Results

A tuning-coil slider which will appeal to many and one that will come within the ability and means of the amateur was recently worked out. It gives fine results and is made on novel lines.

A wire helix takes the place of the ordinary coil slider, over which it has several outstanding merits.

First—It is cheap and simple as compared with the assemblage of rods, standards, springs, contacts, etc., involved in ordinary slider construction.

Second—It produces its shifting of the contact point by a rubbing contact parallel with the turns of the wire, instead of across them, so that it avoids the common tendency to drop in between two adjacent turns; it is possessed of a smooth movement instead of a chattering movement, and does not wear off copper particles which short the adjacent turns.



Wire Replaces Rod and Slider.

Third—The fact that it works by rotation permits operation by a neat rotating rod on one end, of any desired type.

The contact is a straight-line traverse, parallel to the axis of the cylinder, along which line the insulation of the wire must be removed in the usual manner.

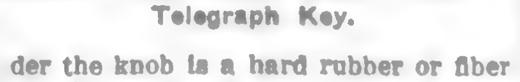
Mount through holes in the coil end plates so that the helix is somewhat sprung against the coil, making good contact. The straight ends should be of appreciable length, in relation to the helical portion, to facilitate this springing. The helix should be about 300 degrees—five-sixths of one turn. One-eighth inch diameter brass wire is about right for four-inch length of the wound portion of a coil. For longer coils, heavier wire is better.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)

Telegraph Key for Radio Transmission

The accompanying illustration shows a good method of converting an ordinary telegraph or light wireless key into a regular heavy duty, easily operated, wireless key. This has been used on 500 watts continually for some time with satisfaction. This key is not tiresome to operate, as it was before it was changed.

To make the key, first remove the lever and file off both contacts, to present more surface for the dimes to rest upon. File both sides of the dimes and then solder them in their usual places. It requires a little perseverance to make them solder well and rest evenly. However, it is worth the trouble. When the contacts have been soldered on properly, the extension arm is put in position. This consists of a piece of square metal, about ¼ inch by ¼ inch by 2 inches; which dimensions work best. One can vary the length to suit individual taste. A piece of the aluminum sounder arm can be used for this part of the lever. Two holes are drilled in the piece, one to fasten it on the lever, the other for the knob. One small bolt at C is enough as there is not much strain at this point. At C, also, is fastened an ordinary telegraphic key spring, wound with larger diameter loops. This makes the spring weaker and the action of the key more resilient. No way of adjusting the spring has been provided as one can stretch it until he gets the right tension and then leave it alone. Under the knob is a hard rubber or fiber disk, about two inches in diameter, on which to rest the fingers. This key will handle heavy currents and by moving the spring from A to C and the addition of the arm, it becomes easy to operate without making as many mistakes as before. The whole key should be mounted on a neat, wooden base to prevent the arm from hitting the table.



Heavy Duty Key Made From a Telegraph Key.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)

THE RADIO SOUND-MARK

BROADCASTING stations are rapidly identified with the slogans or other distinguishing sounds with which they open their programs. The Atlanta Journal uses the "bong, bong, bong" of a big gong; the Louisville station plays a few bars of "My Old Kentucky Home"; the Atlanta and West Point railroad station, in Georgia, blows four blasts on a locomotive whistle; the Davenport (Ia.) station begins with "Out Where the West Begins"; another station identifies itself with, "Out Where the Corn Grows Tall"; some of the broadcasters sound a signal on a telegraph key.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)

A Definition of Radio.

An engineer gives as a definition of radio "A system of communication whereby intelligence is transmitted with the speed of light in all directions, for any desired distance without the aid of any artificial medium, by the propagation and detection of electrical disturbances in space."

The Difference.

The difference between a radio receiver and one appointed by the court is that the radio receiver broadens your business while the other generally winds it up.

To Have Radio Concert Hall.

In Prescott, Ariz., one of the hotels is to have a "radio concert hall." All who care to come are invited.

◆ROAD◆ BUILDING

Wider Highways Help Solve Traffic Problem

A dispatch from London states that country roads and city streets to be laid out hereafter in Great Britain will have a right of way 120 feet wide in most instances and 100 feet wide as a minimum, if present plans of the government are carried out. The same dispatch states that because motor traffic has made it obvious that the old narrow country roads are not in these days safe, and because unemployment in many lines makes this time seem a favorable one for the construction and improvement of highways, public enthusiasm has greeted the official plan for the widening of existing roads and the establishment of the 120 foot width as the official standard for the future.

England's roads approached 100 per cent perfect long before any great accomplishment in highway construction had been recorded in this country. Long before the war the highways of England had become rivals of the railways through the use of motor trucks and steam traction engines, often hauling several trailers, each with a capacity of tons. The roads bore this traffic well and their maintenance, which calls for almost daily inspection and continuous repairs, has enabled these highways to stand up under a much heavier traffic than 90 per cent of American roads receive.

The plans of the government will involve a total of several thousand miles of additional new construction, destined to make London the center of the most adequately roaded section of the world.

The United States, just embarking with governmental assistance upon the construction of an interstate, nationwide, primary highway system, will consider the conclusions which an infinitely greater experience has forced upon British highway authorities. While few of our roads, like those in the vicinity of London, need a right of way 120 feet in width at the present time, that traffic requirements will ultimately demand such a width seems almost certain.

Canada Will Spend Big Sum in Building Roads

A million dollars is being spent in road building in British Columbia this year. Most of the work will be done between now and early autumn. The army of laborers now engaged will be shifted to farms during the heavy harvest season.

British Columbia's program is being duplicated by the three prairie provinces. Modern highways are piercing new agricultural sections as rapidly as these districts are settled by incoming farmers. Under the comprehensive program all the branch highways are linked with main roads, thus making western Canada's highways virtually a unit.

"Behind the entire plan," said a good-roads official, "is the establishment of main arteries of travel with a network of connecting roads. These roads will join all the cities and towns and will connect with highways that link up the different provinces.

"Western Canada is one of the richest agricultural districts and its output is rapidly increasing. Farmers are evolving into business men. They are doing much of their marketing with motor trucks. Many motor truck lines are already established for rapid movement of crops to railroad terminals. Good roads are to a large extent eliminating distance. Western Canada realizes that they are indispensable to the development of a country, agriculturally and industrially, and so the ambitious program is being put forward with all speed consistent with good judgment.

"Canada's roads problem was largely solved when the Canadian government appropriated $20,000,000 to be used in construction of main highways and market roads."

Establish Highways on Narrow Rights-of-Way

Too many states are establishing their main highways on narrow rights-of-way and proceeding to install permanent improvements which are bound to increase the value of the adjacent property. When the states come to widen their rights-of-way, as will ultimately be necessary, a tremendous expense will be involved which could be eliminated entirely should the original right-of-way established be made wide enough to accommodate any necessary future increase in pavement width. Such far-sighted provision for the future works no hardship on adjacent farmers as they can be allowed to cultivate the land which for a time will not be required. No expensive improvements, however, would be undertaken on the width set aside for the ultimate road.

Campaign Against Ads.

The Ohio state highway department has begun a campaign against advertising placards along highways. It has recently torn down and removed nine truck loads of these signs. This is done under a state law.

Roads in Canada.

At the close of 1922 there had been placed under agreement for federal aid, in connection with the Canadian highway act, 274 projects at an estimated cost of [illegible] for 5,786 miles of road in the different provinces.

After EVERY Meal

give your digestion a "kick" with WRIGLEY'S.

Sound teeth, a good appetite and proper digestion mean MUCH to your health.

WRIGLEY'S is a helper in all this work—a pleasant, beneficial pick-me-up.

WRIGLEY'S P.K. CHEWING SWEET

12

Opportunity Calls from CANADA

Visit Canada this summer—see for yourself the opportunities which Canada offers to both labor and capital—rich, fertile, virgin prairie land, near rail ways and towns, at $15 to $20 an acre—long terms if desired. Wheat crops last year the biggest in history; dairying and hogs pay well; mixed farming rapidly increasing.

Excursion on 1st and 3d Tuesday of Each Month

from various U.S. points, single fare plus $2 for the round trip. Other special rates any day. Make this your summer outing—Canada welcomes tourists—no passports required—have a great trip and see with your own eyes the opportunities that await you.

For full information, with free booklets and maps, write

W. S. Nethery, Desk W, 82 E. Rich St., Columbus, O.
Canadian Government Agency, Desk W, 116 Monument Pl., Indianapolis, Ind.

Authorized Canadian Gov't Agt.

GENUINE NORTHERN SEAL

TRADE MARK—REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. APPL. FOR

There is only one Genuine NORTHERN SEAL.

"Northern Seal"

is "America's Greatest" and "Standard of the World." For information and protection, ask your local furrier, or write for booklet to NORTHERN SEAL, Pierini Park, Springfield Gardens, L. I., New York.

Copyright, 1923

SHOE REPAIRING—LEARN AT HOME

Get my quick method. Start own shop. Make good money while learning. P. O. check $2. JOLY, Box 143, W. Duluth, Minn.

Pit Safety-Spray.

After nine years' experimenting, an Aspatria (Cumberland) miner claims to have discovered a liquid which, when sprayed, will render mine explosions almost impossible and purify the air.

The charm of a bathroom is its spotlessness. By the use of Red Cross Ball Blue all cloths and towels retain their whiteness until worn out.—Advertisement.

Heartless.

Mrs. Goodsole—I haven't seen you at church for some time. Don't you like the rector?

Mrs. Dogophile—No, I don't. I'll never forgive him for refusing to read the funeral service over my poor little dead doggums.

Cuticura Soap for the Complexion.

Nothing better than Cuticura Soap daily and Ointment now and then as needed to make the complexion clear, scalp clean and hands soft and white. Add to this the fascinating, fragrant Cuticura Talcum, and you have the Cuticura Toilet Trio.—Advertisement.

Mean Insinuation.

Mrs. Hoyle—"My husband is a man of letters." Mrs. Doyle—"I'll wager that most of them contain bills."

Giggling sounds very foolish, doesn't it, unless it is at what you say to provoke it.

5-Room House $538

Not Portable

You can buy all the materials for a complete home direct from the manufacturer and save four profits on the lumber, millwork, hardware and labor.

Price quoted includes all lumber cut to fit, windows, doors, woodwork, glass, paints, hardware, nails, lath and roofing. Complete drawings and instructions. Many styles to choose from. Satisfaction or money back.

Houses, Cottages, Bungalows

Highest grade lumber for all interior woodwork, siding and outside finish. Send today for money-saving Aladdin Catalog No. 2382.

THE ALADDIN CO., BAY CITY MICHIGAN

Also Mills and Offices at Wilmington, North Carolina; Portland, Oregon; Toronto, Ontario

MAY

L 912

The Joy of Living

By SIDNEY GOWING

Illustrations by ELLSWORTH YOUNG

Copyright 1922 by Sidney Gowing

CHAPTER XXIII—Continued.

—11—

"But," said Jake with devilish ferocity, "I've got you, too." He raised one knee, and rested his pistol hand on it. "If I give up to you, there's somethin' I'm goin' to have you do first. You'll take my terms an' do what I ask—or I'll drop you, right there and now."

There was not the faintest doubt but that he meant what he said. A glance into his eyes told the listener that.

"Nothing doing," said Billy quietly. "I don't take orders from a malefactor. Least of all at the point of a gun."

"Then," said Jake thickly, "you're cold meat. I guess it's the best way. It gives me a chance yet."

"They don't electrocute in this country," said Billy, "they hang. But they do it very efficiently. You can shoot me in the back though, if you want to. I'm going to see about your exit."

He turned deliberately and walked to the mouth of the cave. Jake's finger trembled on the trigger.

"Come back!" he said hoarsely.

There was something so broken and piteous in the tone, that Billy turned his head. Jake flung the pistol toward him; it fell on the sand at Billy's feet, and he picked it up.

"I can't get you with a gun," gasped Jake, "but listen to what I got to say, if you're a man! For God's sake, listen!"

And Billy listened.

* * * * * * *

Some minutes later Billy stepped out of the cave into the sunlight. He was looking unusually grave, his lips were tight set; his eyes were positively harried. He walked a few steps, muttering to himself. He started as a voice called him excitedly by name, and he was aware of Monsieur de Jussac running toward him.

"Spencer!" he cried. "I have been looking for you everywhere. Where the devil have you been? The police have inquired for you at the abbey, and I think they are not far behind. I thought it well to come and warn you."

"The police?"

Bertrand turned round sharply. He permitted himself a military expression that would not pass the censor.

"And here they are!" he said, with a gesture of despair.

The helmet of Constable Polson appeared on the brink of the opposite cliff, about the same time as Panke's peaked cap obtruded itself over the one behind them, and the felt hat of Inspector Arkwright hove in sight among the bramble bushes below. In a very short time all three men were in the pit, closing strategically upon Billy and Bertrand.

"I don't think," murmured Billy, "that I ever knew policemen arrive so—so—what's the word?"

"A propos," said the Vicomte grimly, twisting his mustache.

"Thanks. That's it."

"Is there anything I can do?"

"Thanks again, but I think not. We'll see how they play the hand."

"That's him—the young one!" exclaimed Panke, as the three approached. Inspector Arkwright walked up to Billy, and addressed him by name.

"William Spencer?"

"That same bird," replied Billy pleasantly.

"And an admirable chauffeur," murmured de Jussac. "He drives like the Angel of Death."

Arkwright's cold gray eye swiveled upon the speaker.

"Who are you, and what are you doing here?"

"The Vicomte de Jussac, at your service. A guest at the abbey. Knowing Spencer was here, I came to inform him he was wanted."

"Oh. All right, sir. He's certainly wanted." The inspector turned to Billy. "Come along, my lad. We are overdue at Stanhoe police station."

"Does that mean I'm arrested?"

The inspector looked at him searchingly.

"That will depend on circumstances. Have you any objection to accompanying me?"

"I've no objection to anything. This is my afternoon off. But may I take it you are looking for the enterprising fellow who burgled the abbey?"

"I include that among my activities," said Arkwright sardonically.

"Then this is your lucky day. He's in the cave there."

"In the—cave?" said Arkwright, staring.

"If you'll step this way," said Billy, "I'll show you."

He turned toward the bushes. Arkwright, after a moment's hesitation, accompanied him, and motioned to Inspector Panke to follow. Bertrand brought up the rear. Billy led them into the cave.

Jake, prostrate on his couch of bracken, greeted them with a sullen stare. Inspector Arkwright looked at him—at the bandaged leg, the stubble-covered face, and deep-set eyes. The handkerchief with the broken food was no longer visible.

"That's your man," said Billy, "known to the popular press as Jack the Climber; but I gather he prefers to be called Jake—I think we ought to humor him so far. His motorcycle is in the clay pit up the slope. His leg is rather badly hurt."

"See if he's shamming," said Arkwright briefly to Panke.

"Do I look as if I was shamming, you gazaboo!" growled Jake.

He certainly did not. Inspector Arkwright put a question to him, which Jake did not answer; nor did he look at the inspector—his eyes were fixed on Billy. Not a word of reply would the captive vouchsafe to any of Arkwright's queries. Billy took the Vicomte by the arm, led him outside, and drew a long breath.

"Got a cigarette?" he said anxiously. "I gave my last one to Jake."

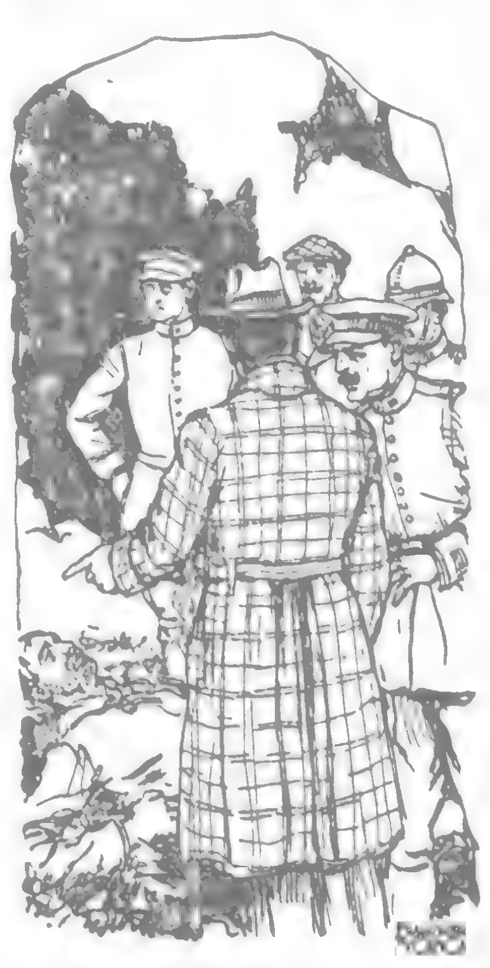
Bertrand produced his case.

"But what a triumph!" he said with a dazed air.

"It's not the sort I enjoy," replied Billy, "but I had to see it through."

The two inspectors emerged.

"Panke," said Arkwright, "there's a gate in the field-fence just up there, I think. Will you and Polson lift it off its hinges and bring it here? We must get the man out; he can't walk." He turned abruptly to Billy. "And now—will you explain, Mr. Spencer?"



"See If He's Shamming," Said Arkwright.

"Sure," said Billy. "I believe you know it was I who came across the thieves on the night of the holdup, and got knocked out. It seems to have been taken for granted the pair of them made a get-away on their machine, and likely were half across England by morning. I wasn't so sure. The case was important for me, too, for it looked as if I was going to be suspected.

"I happened to come across some tracks of a cycle tire on the field here; they were old and faint, but they set me thinking. I wish I'd struck them before. I'm used to following trails—had a lot of experience in it. Went to the place where the argument happened, up the lane, and made out that the motorcycle, after the scrap, came back along the road yonder. The tracks are there yet if you've eyes to see them. I guess the machine was half-crippled, and they were driving it too hard. I made out that it crashed again—a bad crash that time. Do you follow me?"

"Yes," said the amazed Arkwright, "but how—"

"Here's a piece of the machine—found it on the road," said Billy, handing him the scrap of metal. "The tracks didn't go on. So what became of the machine? I found the tire-marks passing through a gateway into the field.

"What did that say? That they could wheel the machine, though they couldn't drive it. Engine done up. What would they do with it? Hide it, so nobody would know they didn't get clear away. You'll find the machine, a twin Indian, over in the old clay pit, under some brushwood.

"What did the two of them do then? You can see by the tracks in the field that one of them was dead lame. So lame that he had to be carried or dragged, half of the way. It must have taken quite a while. They couldn't be far off, and, to cut it short, I searched the pits through and found Jake where he is. I didn't get wise to it till now. He's got a leg so badly sprained that a compound fracture wouldn't have laid him up much more thoroughly. And here you are, Inspector, just in the nick of time, as the story-books say. Of course," added Billy, "you'd have found it out yourself as soon as you got to work. I happened to be on the spot, that's all. And I shall be obliged if you'll say nothing about my share in it at headquarters. Thief-catching isn't really in my line—I'm a motor-engineer, and it might do me harm to have it known I was wasting time on things that aren't my business."

Inspector Arkwright gazed at Billy dumbly. Arkwright was not a man of ungenerous instincts.

"I call that a very remarkable piece of work for an amateur," he said ungrudgingly.

"I suppose I've set your mind at rest, that I'd nothing to do with the burglary myself? You're not aching to haul me off to the station house any more? Or are you?"

Inspector Arkwright regarded Billy thoughtfully.

"No," he replied quietly, "but there are one or two points that have to be cleared up yet."

Billy took some papers from a pocketbook and handed them to Arkwright.

"If you want information as to my identity," he said, "you might look through those."

The inspector did so. His usually immobile face gave a twitch of surprise.

"Thank you. I'll keep these for the present," he said, with a change of manner. "I will have a word with you at the abbey, Mr. Spencer, when this business is off my hands."

"I'll be there," said Billy, with an inward twinge of anxiety.

Panke and the constable arrived, carrying a gate between them, which was taken into the cave. The prostrate Jake was lifted onto it, and borne out into the open.

"Wait! Set him down," said Arkwright suddenly. "He's safe, anyhow. We've got to get the other one." He turned to Billy. "You've seen nothing of her—the woman?"

Billy gave him a stare of undisguised amazement.

"The woman?" he exclaimed.

Jake threw away the stub of his cigarette.

"Yes—Calamity Kate!" said Arkwright impatiently. "Good Lord, man, can't you see she must be somewhere here, too? She's been bringing him food and water, and tending his leg—how else could he have lived there six days when he can't move?"

"Great Christopher!" said Billy. "I suppose you're right."

"The prisoner refuses any information. But I'll have the pair of them," said Arkwright grimly. "I—"

"I suggest," broke in Panke, who was chafing at being thrust into a subordinate part, "that we get this man away as soon as possible, and that two of us wait in the cave. The woman probably visits it only at night, and the next time she comes with supplies, we shall get her."

"The weak point about that," replied Arkwright patronizingly, "is that it's not certain she only comes at night; this is a lonely place, and it won't surprise me if she is close by. She may have observed us already. We'll search these pits thoroughly first. There are half a dozen of these caves, and we'll go through them all. Mr. Spencer, I'll trouble you to remain by the prisoner. Panke, you and the constable try that cave opposite, and I'll take this side."

Inspector Arkwright strode forward with stern determination.

"The bag is not complete," he said grimly, "till I've got that woman!"

CHAPTER XXIV

"Sisters Under Their Skins."

Aimee came as near to sheer panic as she had ever been yet when, after overhearing from her coign of vantage in the second floor window the questions of the police, she saw them start for the crag pits.

The only bright feature of the situation, though not dazzlingly bright, was that de Jussac was already on his way, in the same direction. She had seen him go, and guessed his errand. Bertrand, at least, was an ally.

"I'd rather they got me than Billy!" she said with a little sob.

The one obvious and reasonable thing for Aimee to do, was to remain where she was. To lie low, like Brer Rabbit, and take no part in the coming crisis. As a natural consequence, it was precisely the thing which her mind refused to entertain. If Billy was going to meet trouble, she determined to be on the spot. There was no knowing to what lengths he might go, in his passion for self-sacrifice.

Ten minutes later Aimee was in the bushy dip of ground leading into the crag pits. The police were well ahead of her, converging round the far end. Aimee had taken some trouble to avoid being seen by them. At the moment she could not see them at all, and took it for granted they could not see her either.

Bending low and running between the bushes, Aimee made for the entrance of the Sphinx's cave. It seemed to her that must be where Billy had gone. On arriving at the mouth, however, she discovered her mistake. Through a gap in the brushwood she caught sight of Billy a considerable distance farther along the pits. And with him was de Jussac.

The police arrived almost immediately afterward. Aimee, crouching behind the bushes, watched the meeting.

Her throat felt dry and hot, her hands opened and shut nervously. She hesitated, uncertain what to do. Would Billy "get away with it?" A gleam of hope and confidence returned. Billy had a wonderful knack of getting away with things.

She saw the party disappear into the cave nearest them; she witnessed the emergence of Billy, and was aware of a certain relief of tension when the police returned and spoke with him. Finally, wondering as she watched, Aimee observed the arrival of the gate—saw the prostrate body of Jake carried into the open. The distance was considerable. But the significance of that pathetic figure on the gate came home to her. Aimee was not slow of comprehension. She began to realize the meaning of it all. The police had what they wanted. The captive could be no other than Jack the Climber himself. Billy had "got away with it" with a vengeance.

Aimee was staring dumbly at the group, when she heard a faint animal-like noise close beside her. She turned sharply, to find that she was not alone.

A woman, in a stained and ragged dust-cloak, was crouching behind the screen of brambles a few yards away. She was young, and not ill-looking, save for the deathly pallor of her face and the disorder of her hair. Indeed, there was a wild gipsyish beauty about her, that survived even the hunted expression in her eyes.

She was staring through the bushes at the distant group.

"They got him!" she said in a strangled whisper. She huddled herself together trembling.

"An' they'll get me, too. Let 'em. No good my runnin' for it.

"I dunno who you are!" she muttered. "What you doin' here? Are you goin' to gimme away?"

Aimee did not move. Her heart beat fast. But there was no menace in the woman's eyes; only an expression so broken and piteous that somehow a lump came into Aimee's throat. She had not the faintest doubt who this hunted woman was.

"You know who I am," the woman said thickly; "I can see it in your face." She came a step nearer. "Are you goin' to call out?"

Aimee did not answer that question.

"Is he much hurt?" she said quietly, looking towards the distant group round the man on the gate.

"Hurt?" said Calamity Kate. "He smashed himself days ago, it was." She had subsided on the sand, and embraced her knees with her arms, staring before her with unseeing eyes. "I got him down here. Tried to help him along—couldn't walk. Then I had to carry him."

"You!" said Aimee, looking wonderingly at the girl's slight figure.

"Yes, me. It took me—hours. Carried him—on me back—somehow. When it came daylight, I found the cave. Got him in. I ripped up me skirt to bandage him. I stole food for him, nights. In two or three days more I guess he'd have been able to get away. Now they've got him, an' they'll have me."

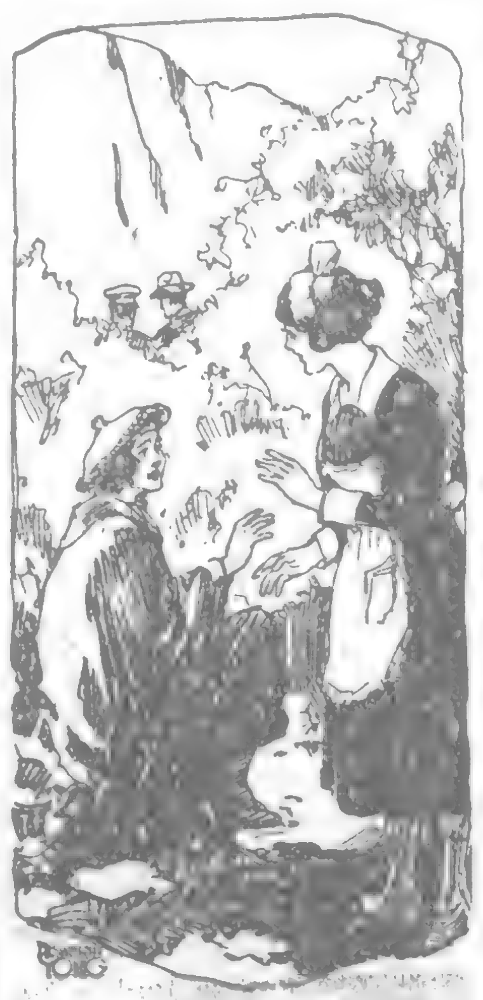
She rocked herself gently to and fro.

"It'll be h—l for Jake!" she said thickly. "To know they've got me!" She looked at Aimee. "If I could go with him—if they'd put us both in the same jug—I wouldn't care. But they don't do that."

She gave a great sob.

"I'd give me life to get him out of it. But he's done, and he'll know they've got me. It'll be h—l for him. My man!"

An unreasoning flood of tears came into Aimee's eyes. She looked once more towards the group. The police were spreading out across the pits, moving in her direction.



"Are You Goin' to Gimme Away?"

"My man!" sobbed Kate.

"You love him?" said Aimee haltingly.

"He's my husband!" said the woman. She flung herself face downwards on the sand, and wept.

Suddenly Aimee stooped and caught her by the shoulder.

"Come with me!" she said swiftly, and, turning, crept in through the screen of brambles, into the cave.

Kate looked up comprehendingly. Then, with the instinct of the hunted animal she dived through the bushes and went to ground. The girls found themselves together in the cool gloom of the cave.

Kate stared at Aimee with wondering eyes.

"I'm sorry for you!" said Aimee unsteadily.

"I never thought," said Kate, "to find any woman sorry for me."

She glanced round the walls of the cave.

"They'll find me here—just the same."

"They may not." Aimee, very pale, looked at the fugitive. "Don't you think," she said, "that if you got clear this time, you might—drop it all? Try—something different?"

"I might," said Kate slowly. "But—they'll get me."

She caught sight of the Flying Sphinx, standing in the dim light at the cave's end.

"What's that?" she exclaimed, and moved swiftly to the machine. Aimee watched her.

"You couldn't ride it," said Aimee, "not even if the way was clear."

"I can ride anything with an engine to it!" said Kate desperately. There was a gleam of hope in the hunted eyes; already her hands were busy with the levers; searching, examining. But she stopped, baffled. The controls of the Sphinx were too much for her.

The next moment Aimee was beside her.

"That's the throttle!" said Aimee swiftly. "Here's the starter — this changes the gear—you have to be careful with the intake. On the second speed she goes over the roughest ground like a bird—on the level road she'll do eighty. If you could get her out clear of the bushes—but you'd never get away with it—"

The woman turned to her, gasping.

"Will you let me try—?" she exclaimed.

It was then that a shock of revulsion came over Aimee. This was the female rattlesnake who had nearly killed Billy, and caused all the trouble. Why should Aimee feel pity? The broken man in the hands of the police—

A rustle among the bushes at the cave's mouth made the two women turn quickly. De Jussac, stepping inside, halted and stared blankly at them both.

"Ten thousand devils!" exclaimed Bertrand, momentarily startled out of politeness.

"You needn't be frightened for me," said Aimee quickly. "She'll do me no harm."

Bertrand's active brain took in the situation briefly.

"No harm!" he said. "Name of a name! If the police found you here with that!"

Aimee turned very white. That aspect of the case had not even occurred to her. In the stress of new emotions, the realization of danger to herself had been crowded out. If she had to explain to the police . . .

"Yes," said Aimee quietly. "If they come here—I'm done for."

The strident voice of Inspector Arkwright was heard, very close at hand.

Monsieur de Jussac pushed his way out through the brambles and regained the open air. The three policemen together were converging towards the spot.

"Another cave there!" cried Inspector Arkwright. "I thought so. This way, Panke!"

De Jussac halted before the entrance, and, selecting a cigarette from his case, lit it deliberately.

"You may save yourself the trouble, Inspector," he said amiably. "There is nothing here."

Arkwright hesitated.

"Are you certain?" he said, coming forward again.

"I have proved it," said Bertrand, "at much expense to my skin. Curse these briars!"

"All right," said Arkwright, turning away; "push on and search the other end, Panke. No use wasting time here. I think we're on a fool's errand after all."

The three police passed out of sight round the bend of the pits. There was a long pause. Aimee's face peered cautiously through the brambles.

"What a fearful liar you are, Vicomte!" she said with mingled remorse and admiration.

Bertrand, without turning, bowed gravely.

"I do my best," he murmured, "in defense of a lady with such a genius for getting into difficulties. But let me beg of you to remain where you are."

"Are the police out of sight?" said Aimee eagerly.

"For the present, yes. They are away round the corner—all three. But they may come back."

A moment's silence followed the warning. Then the brambles parted, and the Flying Sphinx came thrusting through. Kate was beside it, her hands gripping the bars, her face white and strained, her teeth tight set. She gave a swift glance to either side, and began to run the machine down the slope.

De Jussac, with an amazed exclamation, turned to intercept her. He found a hand detaining him; Aimee had gripped him by the arm.

"Let her go!" said Aimee breathlessly. "Let her go!"

"Name of a name!" said Bertrand blankly. But he obeyed. There was little choice. Already Calamity Kate was well down the slope, running beside the free-wheeling Sphinx that gathered more and more impetus by its own weight. The deftness with which the woman steered it between the clumps of bushes was astounding.

"She hasn't a dog's chance," said Aimee with a gulp, "but what chance there is—let her take it."

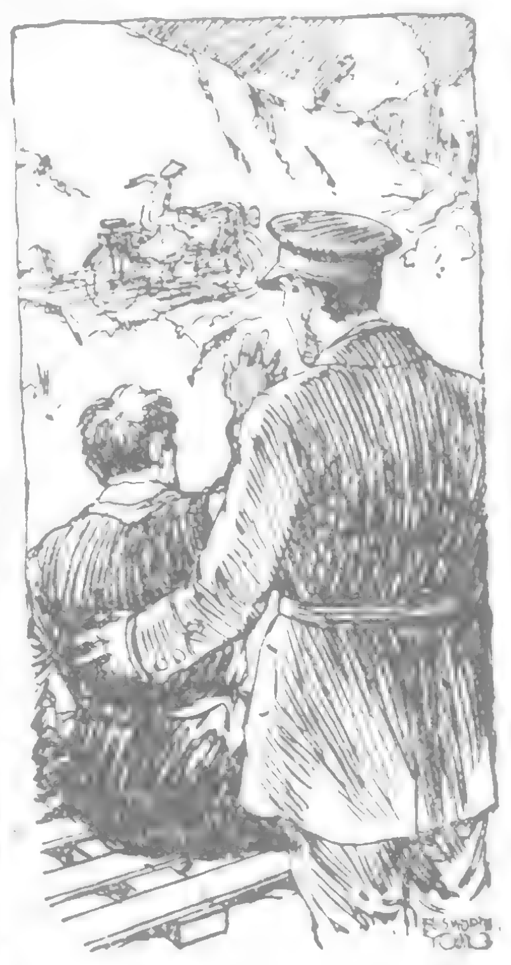
"A nation of sportsmen — quoi!" murmured Bertrand with a paralysed air. He glanced to the left, where the police had disappeared round the shoulder of the bluff. There was still no sign of them. Kate, reaching the trodden path at the bottom, turned sharp to the right and swung herself into the saddle.

"It is one's duty to stop her," said Bertrand, twisting his moustache in perplexity. "But—one does [illegible] a woman."

"She'll never get started on that ground," said Aimee.

The engine fired, stopped, fired again—the wheels threw up spirts of sand, then getting onto harder ground the machine ran swiftly ahead with the faint pulsing whirr that was the Sphinx's song of triumphant progress. She shot forward much too fast, and was only just controlled in time.

No other cycle than the Sphinx could have made good over such ground; no other could have sailed so efficiently and noiselessly up the steep path through the gap towards the higher ground at the far end. It was a wonderful exhibition of riding. As the fugitive sped by, Billy, standing on guard beside the captive Jake, turned and stared in petrified amazement.



He Uttered a Hoarse Cry.

Jake raised himself to a sitting position on the gate, and stared, too. He uttered a hoarse cry—almost a cheer.

The Sphinx and its rider breasted the crest of the rise, staggered, and sailed away out of view.

CHAPTER XXV

Two of a Kind.

Aimee gave a little gurgle of excitement as the Sphinx vanished.

"She's away! And I don't believe they've seen her! If she can stick to it over the field to the gate, there's open road before her and she's clear!"

Aimee turned to de Jussac with shining eyes. He shrugged his shoulders faintly.

"A supremely foolish act, mademoiselle," said Bertrand.

"She was in trouble—just as I've been. Everybody's shielded me at their own risk," said Aimee defiantly. "How could I do less for her?"

"Alas, the morals of the age!" said Bertrand, and he laughed gently. "A sermon would not become me—I also am a coadjutor. I will observe the movements of the enemy."

He climbed quickly onto the shoulder of high ground that divided them from the end of the pit, and returned in a few moments.

"Obviously our industrious police did not see her," he said; "they are now searching the last of the caves."

"Then it's time I got back into mine," said Aimee turning to dive back into her retreat.

"Not so!" exclaimed Bertrand quickly, catching her by the hand. "That is no place for you."

"Why?"

"The gentleman from Scotland Yard will search it before he leaves—he took my word for the moment, but he will make sure. It was merely that he was in a hurry. You must get out of this while you can; like your friend the lady burglar. Come along!" said Bertrand, setting off at a run and pulling her with him.

"You're right!" ejaculated Aimee. With long strides they sped round the clump of bushes, Aimee in tow of Bertrand, and, turning sharp to the right, scurried up one of the steep paths that led out of the pits.

Billy suffered yet one more shock as the pair of them came into his field of vision. He gaped at them, hardly able to believe his eyes. In a few moments they had passed; Aimee reached the top of the pit, and Bertrand glanced apprehensively back in the direction of the police.

"All clear!" he gasped, utterly out of breath. "Get to the road—get out of sight. Back to the abbey, dear lady, and for pity's sake stay there, for you are very wearing. Go!"

"Thanks, awfully!" panted Aimee, and departed as fast as her legs would carry her. De Jussac retreated into the pit, mopping his brow. Taking no notice of the frantic signals of Billy he returned to the cave, dived into it, took a hurried look round and kicked plenty of loose sand over a pool of oil that was the sole legacy of the Sphinx. He left the place with a sigh of relief and, encountering the search party of police, permitted himself to smile.

"Nothing doing!" said Inspector Arkwright. "Panke, will you go back? Bring the car down over the meadow; we'll get the man on it, clear the pits, and set a watch in the cave where we found him." He moved towards the late stable of the Sphinx. "But I'm going to look through this place and make sure."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Waste waters from fish oil plants yield materials useful for fertilizer and for poultry food.

Get Your
Daily Bread - - Welcome Flours
at the J. C. Bailey Store St. Joe
Made by G. A. WARD of the
ALBION ROLLER MILLS, Albion Indiana

HERE AND THERE

Envelopes at the News office.

Patronize The Advertisers.

Get a June Cosmopolitan.

Glen Cole spent Saturday night and Sunday a guest of his father, L. E. Cole and son, Harry.

Ora Baker is adding a new kitchen to his farm residence, north of town.

Mrs. Rose Meese is spending a few days visiting her daughter, Mrs. Cal Hutton of near Auburn.

Dan Myer and family of Hicksville were Saturday evening supper guests of George Kees and wife.

Miss Louetta Daily of Hamilton, was a Sunday evening guest of Miss Doris Keesler.

Mrs. Belle Harmon of Fort Wayne is her for several days visiting her daughter, Mrs. Charles Rice.

Charles Rice left Monday for Kokomo to attend the commencement of his nephew, Charles Fridlin. He expects to remain for the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Kees left Friday for a several days visit with relatives at Fort Wayne and Auburn.

The little Misses Jean Havens and Beulah Storer, are visiting for several days in the Byron Widney home.

Mr. and Mrs. James Rhodenbaugh left Monday morning to visit friends at Marion until after Memorial Day.

The latest improved electric hair clipping machine has been added to the equipment of Hull's Barber Shop. Both of St. Joe,s shops are equipped with electric clippers.

Mrs. Clay Coburn and children spent the day Sunday with her parents, Will Koch and wife. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson were afternoon callers.

Mrs. S. S. Davis, who spent the past several months in Chicago, returned here Monday for an indefinite stay with her daughter, Mrs. H. M. Widney.

Mr. and Mrs. Dodge Donley and family, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Coole and children and Mrs. Frank Cutter all of Auburn, were afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Koch, Sunday.

Take a look at the two large snow ball clusters in the News Office window, sent in by Mrs. C. C. Woodcox, stating that they measure in circumference 14 by 19 inches.

David Hogg of Fort Wayne, who delivered an address at the last Concord Township Sunday School Convention, on April 22, delivered the commencement address for the graduation class of the Waterloo high school last Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wade had the following afternoon guests Sunday: D. R. Koeht, wife and daughters Phyllis and Marguerite and Miss Mary Burl of Decatur, John Engle and family and Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sechler were evening guests. Mr. and Mrs. Koeht and daughters and Miss Burl spent over night in the home of Mr. Koeht's uncle, Henry Krabill.

C. R Baumgartner, D V M
Veterinarians
OFFICE and HOSPITAL
SPENCERVILLE. - IND.
Phones—Office No. 7
F W Silberg, D V M

Miss Lenore Moore left Thursday for her home at Cromwell.

Lee Gurgett and family of New Haven took Sunday dinner with William Miller and wife.

Mrs. Andres Fiedley from Detroit, Michigan, is visiting her sister, Miss Minnie Thompson, a couple of weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Walker of Hicksville, spent Sunday with the former's sister, Mrs. Ella Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Peters and Mrs. Ellen Wiers were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Rolla Wiers.

William Lyons of Michigan was a Saturday night and Sunday guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Benninghoff.

Mr. and Mrs. Grady Woodcox and children were Sunday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. C C. Woodcox.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Herrick and sons of Fort Wayne, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Maxwell.

Dr. and Mrs. C. R. Price entertained the latter's brother, Guy Dill and nephews, Lyman and Lester Dill, all of Pierceton, last Thursday.

Mrs. William Nagel of near Defiance, came Sunday for a several days visit with her sister, Mrs. Craig Sheffer and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Woodcox and little son spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lawson.

The Misses Portia Hadsell and Kaherine Shull visied friends at LaGrange, South Bend and Sturgis, Mich., from Friday until Monday.

Mr. and Mrs Charles Rice entertained Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Staman Jr., Merritt Sechler and Carl Perkins.

Mrs. Everett Mavis and children returned home Sunday evening after a week's visit here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sechler.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hart and children of Napoleon, Ohio, spent Saturday night and Sunday with St. Joe relatives.

Mr and Mrs. Don Burley and son of Brooke, Ind., are here for a two weeks' visit with relatives, excepting Mr. Burley who returned home the first of the week.

Jim Simons and family from Huntertown, were Sunday guests in the Kimes home, and Mrs. George Kees, Lucile Curie and Grace Peters were afternoon callers.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Randall, little grandson, Harry Jr., Mrs. Mary Bowman and son, Ray, visited Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Leighty near Auburn Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Fyler and Mrs. H. C. Hathaway of Auburn, and Mrs. William Errick of Spencerville, were guests of Mrs. Alice Warner last Wednesday.

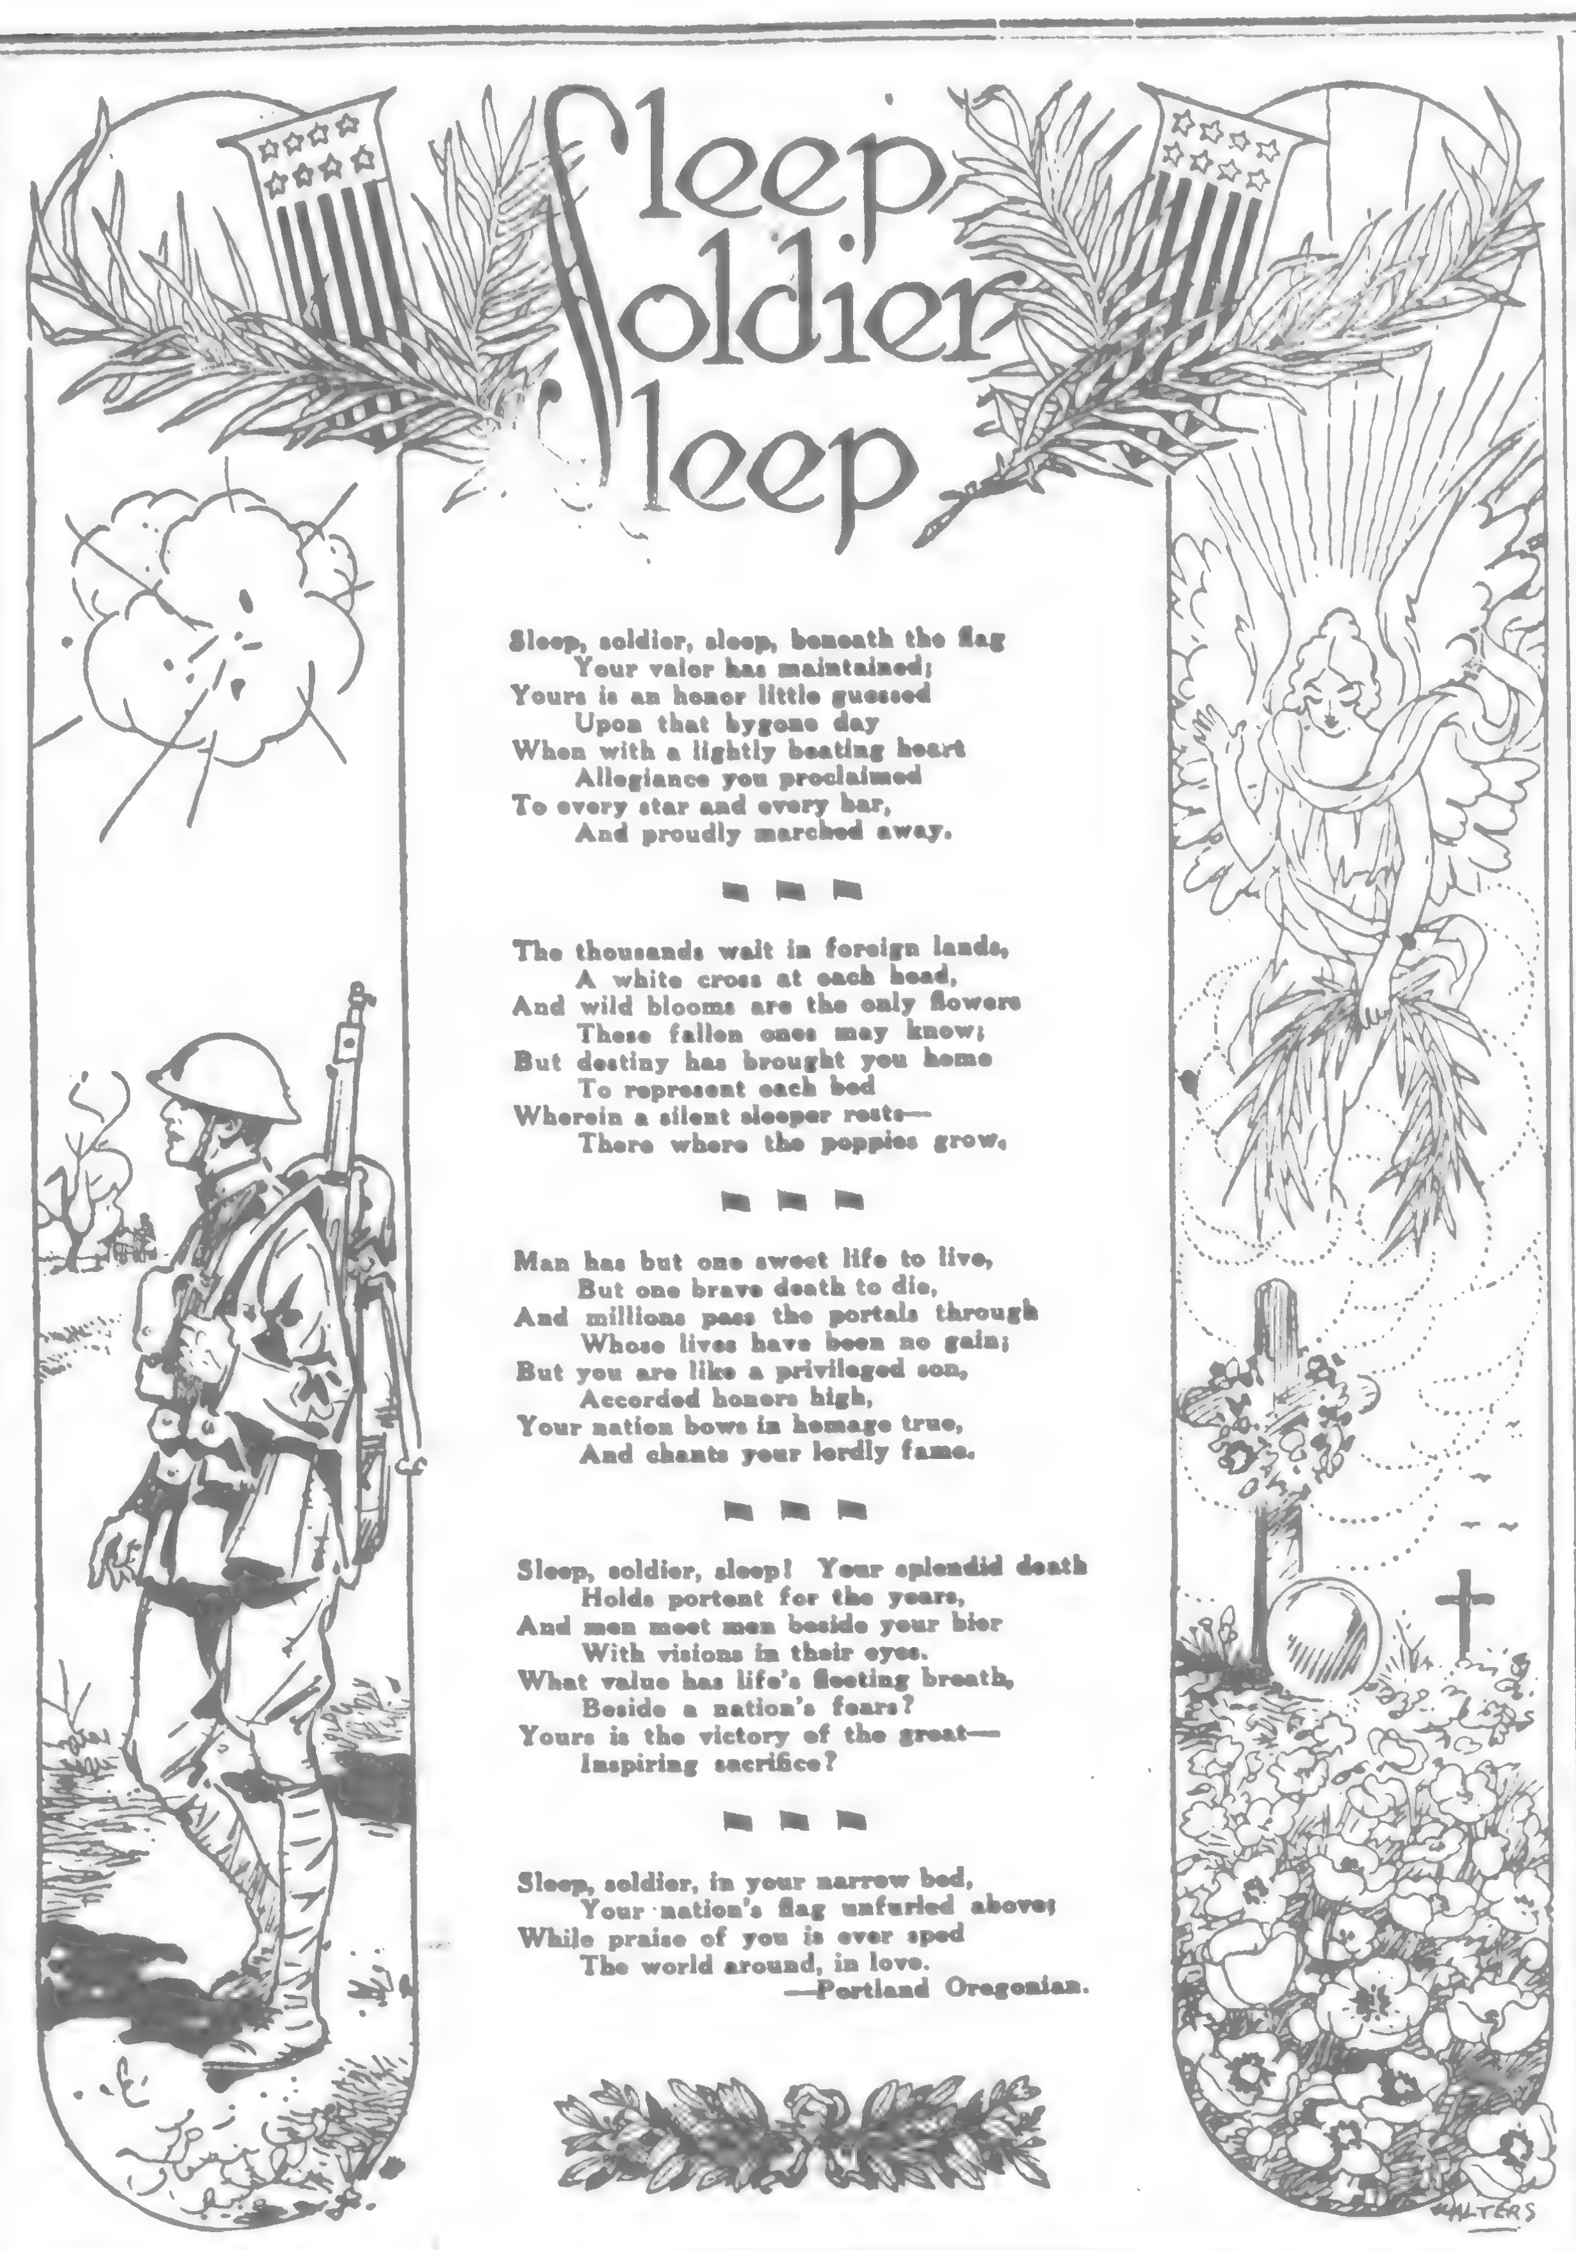
Mrs. Frank Myrtle, Mrs. Harold Myrtle and son, Lysle of Chicago, were Wednesday evening supper guests, and Fred Randall and family of Harlan, Thursday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Randall.

Word received here late last week by Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Randall informed them that their son Harry's wife who had submitted to an operation at the City Hospital at Lima, Ohio, earlier in the week was doing very nicely.

Charles Cochran and wife have moved their household goods from the old hotel building into the Kinsey residence, corner of Main and Fifth streets. Mr. and Mrs. John Woodcox and sons have moved here from Convoy, Ohio, and will occupy the old hotel until Autumn when they will go to Decatur.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Smith entertained Sunday, the former's mother, Mrs. Dancer, his sister, Goldie Dancer, and three brothers, Roy, Richard and Frank Smith, all from Holgate, Ohio. Also, Ralph Smith, wife and son and Claude Smith from Defiance, Thomas Stykemein and Mr. Myers from Napoleon, Ohio, Dewey Smith and wife from St. Joe. Jacques Smith went to Holgate with his grandmother to stay a couple of weeks.

A CRY IN THE NIGHT, griping pains in the vitals, cramps, weakening diarrhoea - whether child or adult, immediate comfort and ease in
CHAMBERLAIN'S
COLIC and DIARRHOEA
REMEDY
Pays to keep always on hand.



Sleep Soldier Sleep

Sleep, soldier, sleep, beneath the flag
Your valor has maintained;
Yours is an honor little guessed
Upon that bygone day
When with a lightly beating heart
Allegiance you proclaimed
To every star and every bar,
And proudly marched away.

* * *

The thousands wait in foreign lands,
A white cross at each head,
And wild blooms are the only flowers
These fallen ones may know;
But destiny has brought you home
To represent each bed
Wherein a silent sleeper rests—
There where the poppies grow.

* * *

Man has but one sweet life to live,
But one brave death to die,
And millions pass the portals through
Whose lives have been no gain;
But you are like a privileged son,
Accorded honors high,
Your nation bows in homage true,
And chants your lordly fame.

* * *

Sleep, soldier, sleep! Your splendid death
Holds portent for the years,
And men meet men beside your bier
With visions in their eyes.
What value has life's fleeting breath,
Beside a nation's fears?
Yours is the victory of the great—
Inspiring sacrifice?

* * *

Sleep, soldier, in your narrow bed,
Your nation's flag unfurled above;
While praise of you is ever sped
The world around, in love.
—Portland Oregonian.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Bowman and daughter Eloise spent Sunday with Mrs. Bowman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Baker at Fort Wayne.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sechler, daughter Thelma, Harold Carpenter and Theodore Cole of Butler and Miss Kathryn Curie were afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sechler Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Koch and mother Mrs. Catherine Curie were Sunday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Brown at Garrett. They also visited D. C. McCann and Henry Reinoehl at the Sacred Heart hospital, finding both slightly improved.

Mr. and Mrs. Derwood Ridgway drove to Paulding Friday and brought their daughters Janace and June and also their nieces Patrice Wineland and Ethel Freeburn who had been visiting their aunt Mrs. Clarence Dorsey who also returned with them to visit here until Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Monroe and daughter Martha of Williamsport, Miss Pauline Black of New Waverly, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Copp and daughter Vernell of New Haven were Saturday and Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Monroe. Mr. and Mrs. Chester Ken and two daughters Velma & Virginia of Fort Wayne, Mr. and Mrs. John Keen of Corunna, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hart and daughter Loa of Napoleon, Ohio, Mrs. Lenore Kagey and daughter Florence of Warsaw, Miss Melba Andress and Mrs. Belle Ridgway were afternoon callers.

THE W L DOUGLAS SHOE

For Sale Only At
Chaneys'
Auburn, - - - - Ind.

Charles iMser began work Monday for the Sears Pickle company at Fort Wayne.

Mrs. Frank Sechler and brother Sylvester Widney are visiting Fort Wayne relatives for ten days.

A. D. Goodwin, daughter Miss Margaret and sons Goebel and Carl and Miss Martha Miser were Angola visitors Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sechler and daughter Louise motored to Greenfield Saturday, Mr. Sechler returning Sunday and his family remaining for a week's visit with relatives.

Mrs. Benjamin Repp of Auburn was a Tuesday evening supper guest and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Krise, son Tom and daughter Mary, also of Auburn were Wednesday evening supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton.

The Hessian fly probably will not be t serious factor in this year's wheat crop over most of the important wheat-growing regions, according to reports received by t he United States Department of Agriculture.

The DeKalb County Anti-Tuberculosis Society will hold another free Clinic June 11, in the Assembly Room of the Court House at Auburn, from 2 to 4 p. m. Dr. James Stygall of Indianapolis will be in charge of the clinic. If you have a cough, or are feeling badly and do not know the cause, come and be examined. Examinations are Free.

From living on a five cent loaf of bread a day as an unknown alien in San Francisco to the presidency of a fifty million dollar industrial concern in Japan is the record during the past seventeen years of Fusanobu Isobe, Tokio, prominent foreign alumnus of Indiana university. On a visit to America last month Isobe stopped off in Bloomington for a visit with friends among the townspeople and faculty who helped him work his way through the state university. Isobe was graduated from Indiana university in 1909 with the A. B. degree in chemistry.

Dr. Bonnell M. Souder
HOSPITAL
Established in 1914
206 West Seventh Street
AUBURN, INDIANA

39 Years Ago

From Our Files

The Imortal J. N. is in town today.

Wm. Stauffer, formerly agent at this place, was in town Thursday.

Joe Baker went to Hicksville yestrday to assist one of the barbers of that place.

John McHugh will sell his household goods at auction next Monday.

Charlie Meek and wife will leave for their new home in Avilla next week.

The railroad bridge over Bear Creek near Concord came near burning down yesterday morning.

John P. Widney and wife of Bellville, Ohio, were in this vicinity last week visiting relatives.

We received a letter from Prof. Gordon last week. He is well and sends his regards to all his friends here.

George M. Williams and wife of Zanesville, Ohio, were visiting in town last week, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Davis.

John Widney moved into town last week and thereby increased the population of St. Joe by an addition of seven inhabitants.

H. K. Reynolds is now agent at this place, J. S. Davis having been transferred to Milford Junction. J. H. Trippe is back working at night again.

Morris Widney is married. Morris is a splendid singer, and is acquainted with a grea many different songs, but he will probably hear something new in the musical way, now.

Mueller, the brewer of Tiffin, Ohio, failed last week. He used to ship lots of beer into this part of the country, but we hope he is so badly smashed up that he will never do it again.

The Decoration Day exercises were well carried out and due honor was paid to the memory of those who died in their country's defense. Rev. Stewart of Garrett, was the speaker of the day, and the Jackson Township Cornet band furnished the music.

The DeKalb County Sunday School Convention will be held at Corunna this year, on the 10th and 11th of June. An interesting program has been arranged, and it is hoped as many as possible will attend.

Legal Publications

Notice of Final Settlement of Estate

Cause No. 2532.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to all persons interested in the estate of Elmer Moody deceased, to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held at Auburn, Indiana, on the 7th day of June 1923, and show cause, if any, why my Final Settlement Accounts with the estate of said decedent should not be approved; and said heirs, and all others interested, are notified to then and there make proof of heirship or claim and receive their distributive shares.

Witness, my name, this 10th day of May, 1923.

WM. G. ERICK, Executor,
Atkinson & Husselman
Attorneys.

Notice of Final Settlement of Estate

Estate No. 2570

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to all persons interested in the Estate of William J. Orr, deceased, to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held in Auburn, Indiana, on the 9th day of June, 1923, and show cause if any, why my Final Settlement Accounts with the estate of said decedent should not be approved; and said heirs and all others interested, are notified to then and there make proof of heirship or claim and receive their distributive shares.

Witness, My Name, this 9th day of May, 1923,

Clyde E. Hart, Administrator.
Link & McClintock,
Attorneys.

J. M. Sounsberry and family spent last Sabbath in Fort Wayne.

The Sunday School at Concord will be held in the afternoon during the summer months.

C. A. Meek and his brother Frank, will open up a grocery and restaurant at Avilla the first of next month. Charlie has many friends here who are sorry to see him leave, and we think they all join with us in wishing him success in his new enterprise.

Bloomington, Indiana. DeKalb county students attending Indiana university will participate in various events on the program of the state university's ninety-fourth annual commencement exercises. The commencement program opened Wednesday, May 23. Various athletic events including a baseball game between Indiana and Purdue are on the program. The regular spring semester will not close until Saturday before the final commencement exercises on Wednesday.

The tentative list of candidates for degrees and the major subject of each candidae from DeKalb county has been announced by the university authorities as follows: Wilbur E. Bowman, commerce and finance; Howard E. Dilgard, commerce and finance, Waterloo; Russell Updyke, commerce and finance, Garrett.

DeKalb students enrolled at Indiana University during the spring semester number as follows: Garrett, 5; Auburn, 7; Butler, 3; Waterloo, 4; Ashley, 2.

In May of 1924 the Purdue University will have completed the fiftieth year of its service to the state, the nation and to the world. The trustees and the faculty are now planning to mark our Semi-Centennial in various distinctive ways—ways that will give satisfaction and pride to all of those who have been, and are yet, a part of Purdue; ways that will serve to center the attention of the university world upon Purdue as one of the nation's educational achievements. Of these plans you will hear more and perhaps much during the coming months.

H. O. WILLIAMS
THE
Abstracter
is able to furnish you with a complete Abstract of Title to any description of Real Estate in DeKalb County.
OFFICE
West Seventh Street
AUBURN
FIRE INSURANCE
NOTARY PUBLIC

L 912

JUNE

JUNE

L 912

BE A BOOSTER!
When it comes to public improvements. The town needs your help.

ST. JOE NEWS.

BE A BOOSTER
Renew your subscription to the News. $1.50 cents a year.

VOL. XXXVII ST. JOE DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, JUNE 7, 1923 No. 23

NEWS OF THE TOWN

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hickman and little son spent Thursday afternoon at Hicksville.

Mrs. Charles Cochran who has been ill since Thursday with an attack of appendicitis, is improving.

Mrs. Albert Wade and little daughter of Detroit, came Sunday evening to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kinsey.

Mrs. Clyde Havens and children, Robert Johnson and Miss Hilda Koch visited Mr. Havens at the Hope-Methodist hospital Sunday.

Dr. Minnick reports a 7½ pound baby daughter, to be called Eva Joy, born to Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Beller, of 8 miles southwest of St. Joe, Thursday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Brunson entertained the following relatives Sunday at dinner: Mr. and Mrs. John Bash, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Scantlin and two children of Hillsdale, Mich., Mr. and Mrs. George Seevers and three children of near Hicksville, Ohio, Mrs. Levi Rowe and four children of near Butler, and Sidney Brunson of Newville.

A change in the Wabash passenger and mail train schedule took effect Sunday. No. 1 regular stop, south bound is now due at St. Joe at 11:40 a. m., and No. 4, regular stop north bound at 7:25 p. m. Two new trains were put on as flag stops at St. Joe, No. 50, northbound, due here at 5:06 a. m., and No. 51, southbound, at 7:25 p. m. No. 51 is not a mail train.

R. H. C. News

The tenth anniversary of the Rural Housewives club was fittingly observed at the home of Abner Trostel and wife Tuesday evening, about fifty being present. The club members had been divided in two committees, one on entertainment and the other on refreshments. The decorations were carried out in the club colors, green and white, each guest being given a lovers knot of green and white ribbon upon arriving.

The place of entrance was made to represent a landing for emigrants and the guests were received by "Unlce Sam." Other amusements of the evening were contests and living pictures.

The refreshment committee served nut sandwiches, coffee, strawberry ice cream and angel food cake. The favors were white geranium blossoms with green leaves and with stems wrapped with tin foil, thus carrying out the club colors, and the tin foil emblematic of the tenth anniversary.

"Modern Athens."

"Modern Athens" is a name often given to Boston, Mass., a city remarkable for the high intellectual character of its citizens, and for its many excellent literary, scientific and educational institutions and publications.

Visitors Come to St. Joe

The 1923 Get-Acquainted Tour of Wholesalers, Jobbers, Manufacturers and Bankers of Fort Wayne, conducted under the auspicies of the Wholesale and Jobbers Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce of that city started Tuesday merning at 7 o'clock.

They were scheduled to visit 30 towns in all, making a three day tour of it, spending just enough time at each stop to get acquainted with the merchants who they are doing business with.

Their first visit was at Grabill, where they were given a fine reception, they said. The next stop was at Leo and then Spencerville and at 8:50 they arrived at St. Joe and made a stay of about 15 to 20 minutes. From St. Joe they went to Newville and then on to the following towns listed in order of their stops:

Butler, Edgerton, Edon, Montpelier, Pioneer, Frontier, Montgomery, Camden, Reading, Hillsdale, Jonesboro, Allen, Quincy, Coldwater Bronson, Burr Oak, Sturgis, Howe, LaGrange, Flint, Angola, Freemont, Pleasant Lake, Hudson, Ashley, Fort Wayne.

There were seventeen auto loads of the party besides the large truck which conveyed the seventeen members of the General Electric Company band. The party consisted of fifty-eight representatives of thirty-seven firms. All the autos bore flags and banners advertising the tour. All members of the party wore white felt hats with the words "Fort Wayne" printed on the band.

The G. E. Band assembled in front of the Leighty block and played several fine pieces Jamie Clark, a Scotch piper, and Drum Mayor Finley, also a Scotchman, dressed in their native costumes, also gave some fine entertainment.

The party consisted of men who seldom get away from their offices in Fort Wayne and therefore have not had another chance to get acquainted with their retail customers Hence this tour.

Best Averages in County

Martha Miser, daughter of Ed Miser and wife St. Joe, is honored as having the highest average in the eighth grade examination in DeKalb county this year, her grade being 94.6 per cent.

Margaret Koch of Spencer township received the next best average in the county, it being 94 per cent.

The News joins with these young ladies' friends witn congratulations.

Missionary Society Entertained

The Lutheran Missionary Society was most pleasantly entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Ulm Saturday afternoon.

The program was in charge of Mrs. Vina Fish. "Africa" was the interesting study. Mr. Ulm furnished free transportation and Mrs. Ulm free homemade ice cream and cookies.

Notice to Rebeccahs

The report of Grand Lodge held at Indianapolis last month will be given by Mrs. Blanche Michealls, of Waterloo, our district president of the Rebeccah Assembly, next Friday evening, June 8, at the Odd Fellows Hall. All members are urged to come as a good attendance is desired.

Catherine Curie, Secretary.

Items of Interest

Garrett.—On the Chicago division of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad the 5,000 employees were paid during the month of May $627,000 for their work.

Auburn.—Mrs. Nancy Evans, 83, for 10 years a resident here, died Thursday, May 31, at her daughter's home, Mrs. George Thomas. She was buried at Newville.

Ft. Wayne.—A "floater" going by the name of Edward Brown, age 45, was picked up by police at the Rescue Mission and found guilty of obtaining money under false pretenses and was sentenced to the state prison to serve a term of from one to seven years.

Ft. Wayne—Tommy Milton, of St. Paul, Minnesota, driving a H. C. S. Special won the 500 mile automobile race over the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Memorial Day, before a throng of 150,000 spectators. His average speed was 91.4 miles per hour.

Fort Wayne.—When the office of the building inspector closed Thursday evening the total number of permits issued for May was 320, 155 of them for new homes. The total value was $2,150,360. This was the biggest building estimate in the history of the city.

Auburn.—In an effort to avoid hitting a plank in the road, the automobile in which Jay Funk, Howard Reasoner, Howard Guilford and Erton Manon were returning from the races at Indianapolis, Decoration Day, was ditched and smashed badly. Gilford and Funk suffered slight injuries.

Ice! Ice! Ice!

I will deliver ice in St. Joe every Tuesday and Saturday.
Earle Smith.

Cord Tire for Sale

One 32x4 new Sterling Cord, fully guaranteed, $17.50.
J. L. Rhodenbaugh

M. P. Church Notes

9:30 a. m. Sunday School.
7:00 p. m. Preaching Service.
Dr. C. S. Johnson will preach in the absence of Rev. Havens.

Lutheran Notes

The preaching service at the Lutheran Church next Sunday will be at 10:30 A. M. The sermon will be on the Spiritual Life and will be for all who desire to get nearer to Christ.

Sunday School at 9:30. One of the younger classes of girls will have charge of the opening exercises.

The prayer meeting is always on Thursday evening The attendance has been good but we need some more. Come and let us study the word and pray and sing.
S. D. Steffey, Pastor.

Strawberry Festival

Class No. 4 of the Lutheran Sunday School will hold a Strawberry Festival at their church on Saturday evening, June 16.

Notice

The Ladies Aid of the M. P. church will meet Thursday afternoon, June 14, at the home of Mrs. Belle Barney.

Devotional . . . Loretta Hull
Bible Lesson
Topic, "Mexico"
Leaders, Belle Barney, Mae Miser
Business
Benediction

39 Years Ago

From Our Files

John Means and Cad Walters have dissolved partnership

Wes Hart sold 35,000 brick to parties in Butler last week

Billy Curie drives around in a bran new butcher wagon

H. K. Reynolds can laugh the heartiest of any man in town When he laughs he laughs all over.

It is reported that David Murray had one of his horses struck by lightning and killed during one of the heavy storms of last week.

Dr. Bowman [illegible] have built fine [illegible] of their residence [illegible]

Bert [illegible] sas, hu [illegible]

Patronize the advertisers

COAL

Fill up and keep filled up. Don't forget that the place to store your coal is in your bins, not in your dealer's yard, not at the mines.

Prices are now lowest of the season with all prospects of them going up, as coal is being mined below the cost of production at the present time.

We are trying to give you good advice. It is up to you to take it.

Place your orders now for the following coals:

Hocking Valley, Egg and Lump
Buffalo White Ash, none better
Hard Coal Chestnut and Egg

Please settle your last season's accounts now and make your credit good.

FEED

Hominy, Bran, Middlings, Tankage and other feeds.

The St. JOE ELEVATOR

Samuel Keesler, Mgr. Grain Dept.
Bert Jackson, Mgr. Coal Dept.

Call on us—glad to see you. Come in whether you want anything or not.

For Check Users

I
Keep blank checks and vouchers under lock.

II
Write checks with safety ink or with a check writing machine that shreds the paper and impregnates it with the amount in ineradicable ink.

III
In writing checks leave as little space as possible between the figures of the amount and start the written amount as close to the left-hand margin as possible, drawing heavy parallel lines through the unfilled space.

IV
Use only an alteration-proof check paper.

V
Destroy all checks marred in drawing and never issue a check with eracers on it.

VI
Do not issue checks to unvouchedfor strangers, and never make them out to "Cash" or "Bearer".

VII
Do not sigh blank checks.

VIII
Scrutinise all certified checks as the stamps are not difficult to duplicate.

IX
Be careful how and where you sign your banking signature.

X
On checks you deposit endorse them to the order of the bank of deposit, making it impossible for them to be cashed by a thief without alteration.

St. Joe Valley Bank---A State Bank

St. Joe Garage
Boost St. Joe

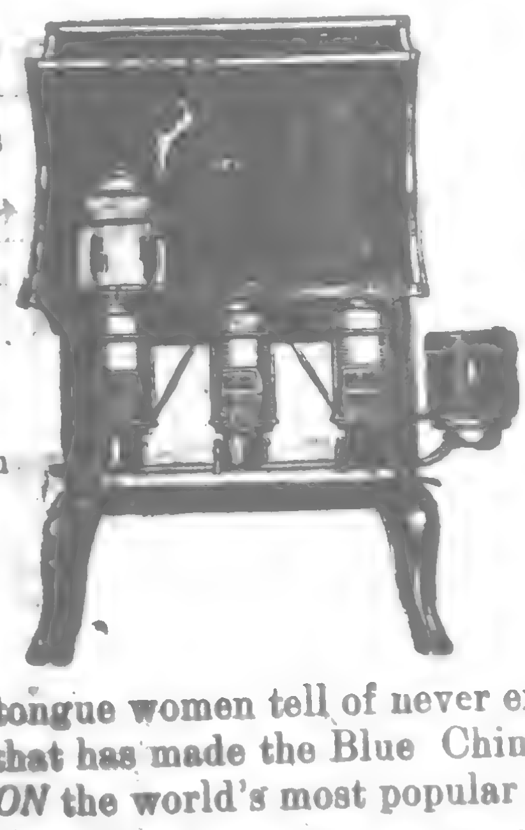
The Good
MAXWELL

The Indiana Highway Gasoline Tax is a fair tax, but why pay more than necessary. We guarantee twenty miles on a gallon and can prove it if you ask for a demonstration.

Tires Tubes
Patches Cement
UNITED STATES QUALITY
Repairing
Welding Storage
Gasoline
Oils Greases

Service all the time Phone No 36

OVER 4 MILLION NEW PERFECTION OIL STOVES IN DAILY USE



In eveay tongue women tell of never ending satisfaction that has made the Blue Chimney NEW PERFECTION the world's most popular oil stove. Known and sold all over the world, because of the never ending service and satisfaction given. We also have the New Superfex Burner.

E. R. KINSEY

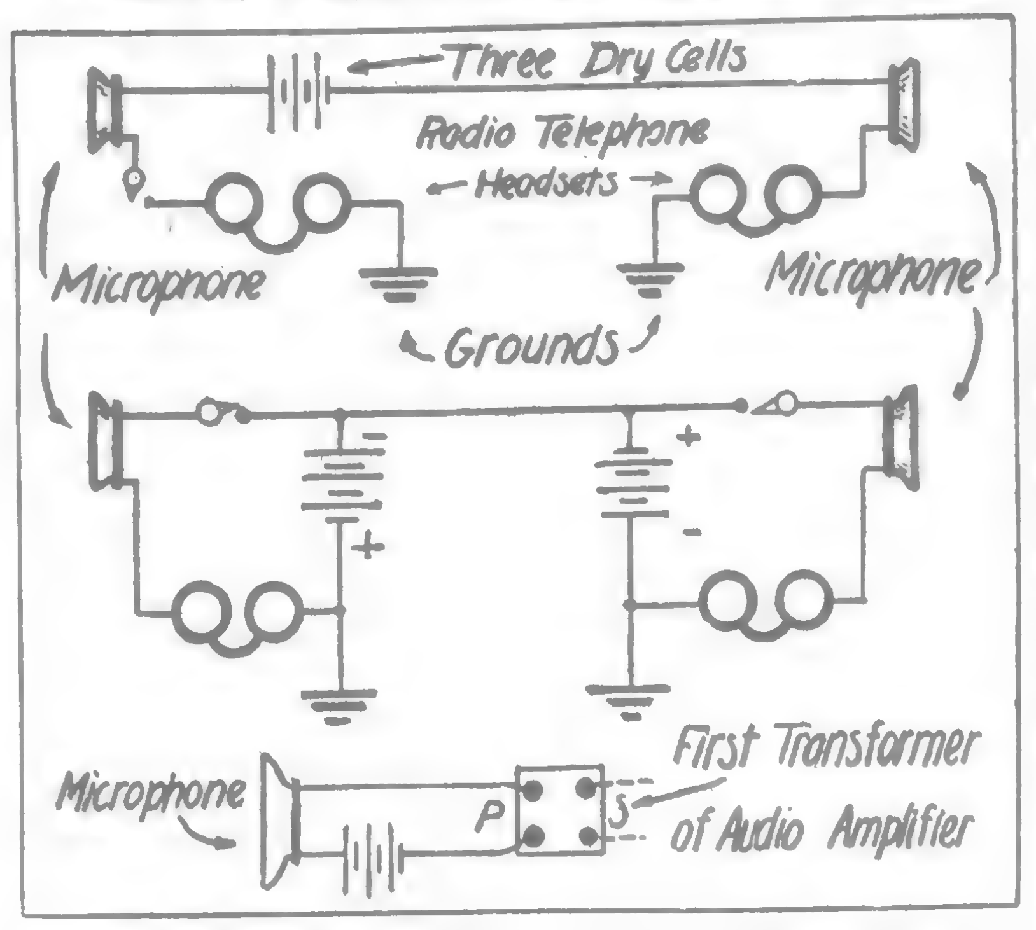
Hardware Furniture Undertaking

JUNE

L 912

RADIO

(Edited by G. Douglas Wardrop, Editor of Radio Merchandising.)



Telephone Microphones May Be Used for Conversation Between Houses or for Operating One's Own Loud Speaker.

There are many ways in which the ordinary type of telephone transmitter or microphone may be used along with one's regular radio apparatus. It is possible to set up a very simple telephone circuit between two neighboring houses or to put these microphones into service for relaying radio broadcasting over a wire to a friend's house.

A few suggestions are given in the accompanying sketch for hooking up microphones with other radio apparatus which the fan will recognize as legal. The simplest form of straightaway phone circuit is shown on the top. It will be noted that two microphones, two sets of radio headphones and three or four dry batteries are connected in series. Between the two is run a connecting wire which need not necessarily be of copper. Ordinary galvanized iron wire can be substituted with equal success, provided there is no actual contact with the ground. The return is by means of the water supply system, thereby effecting an economy in wire.

The objection to such a method is that the battery is used continuously unless a switch is inserted to disconnect it. Then it becomes impossible to talk to the other station without sending notice beforehand. A somewhat better circuit is suggested and it will be noted that there is a battery at each station.

A point to be called to attention is that the batteries are connected in opposition. There is a very good reason for this. When the microphone at one end is spoken into the fluctuating current travels not only through the telephone head set located there, but also through the line and ground to affect the phones on the other end. If the batteries were not connected in opposition the current sent from one end would merely traverse the battery at the other end and have very little effect upon the receivers. But with the connections as shown and the same voltage used on each end the double operation of the line is assured.

Radio fans who have in their possession a set with a two-stage amplifier may easily connect their microphones in such a way as to amplify their own voice and reproduce it through the loud speaker. That this may be accomplished it is merely necessary to connect the microphone in series with three or four dry cells and the primary of the first audio frequency transformer. It is not even necessary to disconnect the leads coming from the detector tube. That tube may be left unlighted.

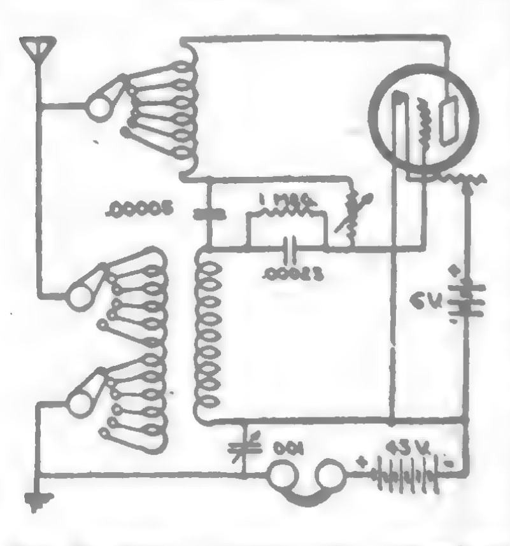
Such an arrangement gives far greater input to the transformer winding than is ordinarily obtained from the detector tube, with the response in the loud speaker being correspondingly greater.

It must be pointed out most emphatically that it is strictly against the law to employ a telephone microphone with a regenerative receiving set for radiophone transmission. Speech can be carried on over a distance of three or four blocks, but it is very likely to cause interference with nearby receiving stations and anyone attempting such experiments places himself in danger of arrest. Variations of the schemes outlined above will suggest themselves to any radio experimenter and are not in conflict with existing laws.

Interest Aroused in New Kaufman Circuit

Considerable interest is being aroused in radio circles throughout the East over the efficiency of the new Kaufman circuit, originated by Wolff Kaufman. This circuit is illustrated here. At first glance, no especial differences are noted in the circuit. Actually there are two distinct departures from the usual form of circuit.

First, the plate circuit feeds through the primary tuning inductions before passing through the receivers to the opposite side of the plate battery. In series in the plate circuit and the antenna lead, is added a single layer inductance consisting of 80 turns of



No. 22 cotton covered wire wound on 4-inch tubing. The last 20 turns are tapped at every turn. This tapped switch connects to the antenna side while the tapped side of the coil connects to the plate of the tube. The untapped end of the coil with a condenser in series connects to the grid side of the secondary of the variocoupler. In addition, a variable grid leak is added from the grid of the tube to the lead, connecting this condenser and the tapped coil.

Considerable experimentation and analysis is taking place in this circuit to determine the exact theory of operation. On the surface, we have obviously a form of regenerated feed back which may be compared somewhat to a reflex idea in which the plate energy not only feeds to the primary circuit and thus reinforces its power, but in addition feeds directly back through a capacity and inductance coupling to the grid circuit.

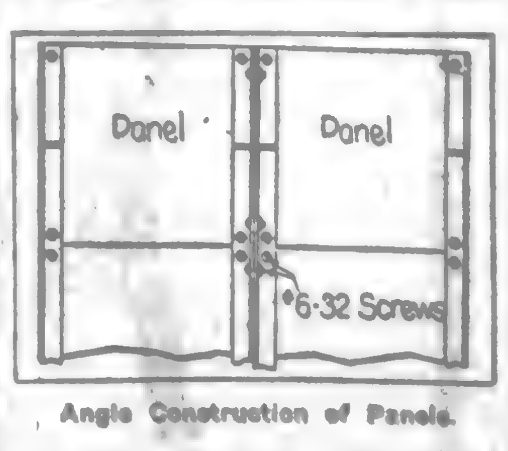
It will be noticed that the capacity coupling between this plate and the grid circuit has a very low value and apparently the most effective control of this grid feed back is by means of the variable grid leak. Although the circuit is new apparently on the surface, it is but a combination of various developments and ideas that have been presented in the past and due credit should be given to the originator for the time and patience required in developing it to a practical stage.

Undoubtedly the circuit affords unlimited possibilities of still further development along this line and it is quite apparent that more will be heard from it from time to time.

Mounting of Panels on Aluminum Angles

Amateurs often experience difficulty in mounting unit panels. The usual way to mount them is on a large board with spaces cut out for each panel, but this is very troublesome, and every time a new panel is to be added a new board must be made. By mounting them on aluminum angles a neat job will result, and when another panel is added the old ones are left intact.

This angle can be purchased for about ten cents a foot. Use angle three-quarters inch wide by one-eighth inch thick. Make panels 4½ inches square and mount three in a row, so to mount six use four pieces of angle each 13½ inches long, as shown. This is much more compact than wood, makes a neater job, takes less time to make and permits short leads.



Angle Construction of Panels.

Church to Have Class for Radio Instruction

El Cajon, Cal., has a community church that has come to the conclusion that radio is the great thing of the day and offers a constantly expanding field of knowledge. The church has, therefore, installed a complete radio equipment in a tower room and has invited those who are interested in the use and development of radio to join a class for instruction. A government-licensed radio operator is in charge.

What Is Said by Those Who Listen

Vast Radio Audience Tells What It Thinks About the Programs.

By William H. Easton.

If the radio audience could realize some of the problems that have to be solved by those who are engaged in preparing programs, they would, I am sure, not only sympathize with them but would wonder how they preserve their sanity. No one before has ever had to entertain a million or so people every night; and consequently those who have undertaken this simple little task have had to stumble along as best they could learning as they go and profiting wherever possible by their mistakes. They are, however, exceedingly fortunate in having an audience that tells them frankly just what it thinks about their efforts; and with the hundreds of letters that reach them daily as a guide they have been able to work with some degree of certainty.

The first rule that the letters lay down is: Give the radio public infinite variety. If you were to open their mail some morning, the first letter would probably say: "I enjoyed your concert so much last night. That's right; give us more good music and do away with those execrable popular selections." Then the second letter would say: "For the love of Mike, cut out the uproar and give us good old American jazz." Letter number three would read as follows: "Professor Simpkins' address on the "Color of Cats" was the most interesting speech I ever listened to," and letter number four would state: "Why do you inflict your audience with such stupid stuff as the talk on 'cats'? I hung up my receiver in disgust."

Difficult to Please Everybody.

With testimony like this it is quite evident that it is very difficult to satisfy everybody all the time. The only thing to be done is to draw from the entire field of music, literature, science, politics, culture, hygiene and religion, and thus please everyone at least part of the time. Consequently those who do not like jazz music must bear in mind that many will listen to nothing else; while those who do not like speeches must remember that a very large number of radio listeners are isolated or are invalids, and absolutely depend upon radio for their contact with the outside world.

The second point that the letters prove is, there must be constant improvement in broadcasting both technically and artistically. No station can maintain its programs on a dead level and retain the interest of its audience. The complaints soon begin to come in. Curiously enough, they are all to the effect that the programs are getting so poor. This is not the case. They are just as good as ever; but the taste of the audience has improved. It is for this reason that KDKA is experimenting so constantly in every direction. Its engineers are incessantly striving for better tone reproduction and for the elimination of unpleasant noises. Its program staff is incessantly working for better artistic effects and for entirely new features. They began with the phonograph; then introduced artists and speakers in person; then went outside of the studio for church services, important meetings, symphony concerts, operas, and sporting events; and recently established an orchestra so that incidental music could be rendered in the best possible manner. Thus, in accordance with the well-known formula, "Every day in every way we are getting better and better." But no one realizes more fully how much more must be done in order to continue to preserve the good opinion of the radio audience.

Must Eliminate Interference.

The third important fact that develops from the correspondence is, interference must be eliminated. Not only must the audience be able to hear this station clearly and distinctly whenever they wish to hear it, but they must also be at perfect liberty to eliminate its signals and receive equally clearly the program of some other station that may, for the moment, please them better. This is their most serious problem at present. The great increase in the number of stations has filled the ether with chaos and confusion, and if this is not remedied broadcasting will die out. The government, the radio engineers, and those broadcasting stations that are interested in radio for its own sake, and not for selfish reasons, are struggling with it valiantly. Though the situation may at times look hopeless, one should not forget that worse troubles than this have been smoothed out.

Broadcasting is only an infant. If it develops as rapidly within the next two years as it has in the past two (and there is every reason to believe that it will) interference will disappear; trivial programs will make way for those of real interest and importance and it will be possible to hear not only the large American stations clearly and distinctly, almost anywhere in the United States, but stations in London, Paris and Rome as well.

Should Please Wives.

At the annual dinner of the Hotel Men's association the speeches of the association were received by the wives of those present who had a dinner at another hotel. This suggests great possibilities for men who find it necessary to maintain two separate family establishments.

INDIANA State News

Terre Haute.—Impressive ceremonies marked the laying of the corner stone of the new St. Patrick's parochial school. Fifteen hundred persons participated in a parade and a gathering of 4,000 witnessed the ceremonies. Rt. Rev. McGregor Dowd presided and Rev. Thomas Travers of Fort Wayne made the address. The ceremonies were closed by the singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" and "On the Banks of the Wabash."

Valparaiso.—Mrs. Anna Lemburg, ninety-two, won a suit in the Porter Superior court when Judge H. L. Crumpacker found in her favor in an action brought by her four children to have a conservator appointed to take charge of her estate, valued at $75,000. All the evidence showed that Mrs. Lemburg was capable of handling her financial affairs in a profitable manner.

La Grange.—The co-operative creamery at LaGrange, owned by farmers of LaGrange county, after numerous difficulties and obstacles, has closed its doors. The failure of the undertaking is said to have been due largely to keen competition on the part of other creamery interests and the refusal of many farmers to patronize the institution.

Decatur.—Miss Emilie Christ of Woodburn has been selected supervising nurse for the new Adams County Memorial hospital. Miss Rowena Shoaf of Decatur was selected as surgical nurse supervisor, and Miss Naomi Butler, also of Decatur, and Miss Erlene Franz of Berne were named assistant nurses.

Terre Haute.—Tentative plans for new terminal shops and roundhouse to care for the increased business of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad to be constructed in the near future north of Terre Haute, are being discussed by officials of the railway company, according to word received from the railway headquarters.

Fort Wayne.—Fort Wayne has taken second place in building operations in cities of Indiana, nosing out South Bend for the first time in five months. Indianapolis is first, with building estimated at $3,215,976, while the estimate for Fort Wayne is $1,939,275 and for South Bend $1,439,162. Evansville is in fourth place.

Anderson.—A suit for $25,000 damages against the city of Anderson on behalf of Norman Noble, thirteen, who was burned severely when he came in contact with a fallen electric wire several months ago, was compromised at the close of the second day of the trial by his counsel accepting judgment for $4,500 and court costs.

Petersburg.—Remonstrants against the Clay township road roads lost their hearing before the state tax board. The board, after taking the road question under advisement, has decided in favor of the construction which links the city and Princeton, and reduces the distance from Petersburg to Evansville nine miles.

Indianapolis.—Governor McCray was informed by officials of the Standard Oil company of Indiana that in order to assist the state highway building program the price of gasoline will not be increased so as to pass on to the consumer all of the 2-cent gasoline tax.

Columbia City.—The heaviest damage done by the frost recently was suffered by onions near Columbus City, according to Lee Aker, one of the principal growers in northern Indiana. He declares that the sudden cold spell will result in a one-third cut in the crop harvested late in the summer.

Shelbyville.—Steve Enders, rural mail carrier of the Shelbyville post office, completed 23 years in the government service as a rural mail carrier. In many of the boxes on his route he found gifts from patrons addressed to him in appreciation of his services.

Laporte.—A receiver for the Stanley hotel to collect rents and profits on the building for payment of a $1,000 judgment is sought by the Moore & Richter Lumber company in a suit filed in the Circuit court.

Muncie.—Sylvester F. Kiser, seventy, a brick contractor and a former member of the city council, died at his home. He was a member of the Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows and Red Men.

Laporte.—E. H. Gunther of Aurora, Ill., was elected director of the Laporte Choral society for the coming year at a recent meeting of the directors of the society.

Indianapolis.—In selecting high school textbooks, the state board of education, by a vote of 10 to 3, barred the teaching of the German language.

Shelbyville.—The Carnegie Public library advisory board of Shelbyville elected Mrs. Leo A. Guttin president and Miss Esther Kinsley secretary.

Terre Haute.—After knitting continuously for 76 hours and 33 minutes in what was said to have established a world record for marathon knitters, Mrs. Eliza Beckmeyer of Terre Haute laid down her needles and yarn. She was the winner of a group of twelve women who started in the contest.

Indianapolis.—Indianapolis has a population of 246,610, according to figures compiled for the 1923 city directory by Charles S. Murphy, Indianapolis manager of R. L. Polk & Co., publishers. The directory will be published next month.

Ft. Wayne.—The 1923 Ft. Wayne school enumeration is 21,649, L. C. Ward, Ft. Wayne school superintendent, announced. This means that Ft. Wayne drops to fourth instead of third place in Indiana school city enumerations and means that Mr. Ward will be replaced on the state board of education by W. W. Borden, South Bend superintendent, because South Bend this year passed to the place Ft. Wayne has held since 1867.

Lafayette.—Tippecanoe county organized a DePauw university campaign at Trinity Methodist Episcopal church. Dr. George F. Grose, president of DePauw, was the guest of honor at a meeting of DePauw alumni. The organization plans to raise the county's share of the proposed DePauw endowment. Dr. George F. Keiper was appointed chairman of the Tippecanoe county committee.

Indianapolis.—Money paid by taxpayers under a specific state tax levy for the care of the state's insane, its other benevolent wards and its prisoners hereafter will be kept strictly in an account by itself, and no longer will be merged into the state general fund from which are paid general state running expenses, Robert Bracken, state auditor at Indianapolis, has directed.

Indianapolis.—When the state board of education at Indianapolis opened a second list of bids for supplying more than $1,000,000 worth of text books for Indiana high schools, it was discovered that prices of only six books out of more than three hundred submitted had been reduced since April 30, when all bids were rejected by the board on the ground of excessive costs.

Shelbyville.—Jesse J. Smith, sheriff of Shelby county, has stored eighteen half-barrels of beer and one keg of beer in the basement of the county jail and has placed a wrecked automobile truck in a garage, awaiting a call from the owner. The truck and beer were found at the side of a road near Morristown. The truck had skidded from the road and had been wrecked.

Monticello.—Neal Johnson of Cass township is being held in the city jail following a raid in which a still was confiscated. Five charges have been placed against him. Besides the still, 300 gallons of mash and several gallons of whisky were found. Johnson was just released in March from the Indiana state farm, where he served a sentence for a similar offense.

Terre Haute.—Eight new directors for the Terre Haute chamber of commerce were elected to fill the offices of eight members of the board of directors whose terms have expired. They are: B. W. Eggleston, Walter E. Rahel, James A. Cooper, Jr., Ross D. Harriott, James J. Fagan, Thomas L. Kemp, Isaac L. Goodman and W. I. Condin.

Evansville.—Ross W. Puckett, formerly assistant principal of the Central high school, has been selected principal of the Benjamin Bosse high school now in course of construction. Mr. Puckett is now taking his master's degree at Columbia university. He is a graduate of the Iowa State university.

Columbus.—The annual meeting of the Columbus High School Alumni association was held here. The following officers were elected: Herbert Linsmith, vice president; Miss Lela Dipper, treasurer; Miss Lillian Fahy, secretary; Miss Lorene Golden, recording secretary. H. Karl Volland is the permanent president of the organization.

Greencastle.—Mrs. Sarah Nutt, eighty-one, died of paralysis at the home of her sister, Miss Harriett Peck. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Wilbur Helm Evanston and Mrs. Paul Miller, St. Louis, and a son, William, of Los Angeles, Cal.

Fort Wayne.—Donabelle Long, six, was killed and her brother, Robert, three, died while being taken to the Sacred Heart hospital at Garrett following an accident in which they were crushed under wagon wheels north of Churubusco.

Lafayette.—One of the most bitterly contested elections in the history of Benton county was ended when Special Judge George A. Williams awarded the Bolivar township trusteeship to Lawrence Burns, Democratic candidate for the office.

Jasonville.—The city council let the contracts for paving East Main street to the L. P. Beard Construction company of Indianapolis. The material will be concrete. The paving will be 26 feet wide and will cost $37,000.

Newport.—The Vermillion county courthouse was burned with a loss estimated at $150,000, with $30,000 insurance. The building was set on fire by a bolt of lightning.

Kokomo.—While Dr. George W. Kemp, sixty-eight, of Russiaville, was bending over the grave of his son, Roy, he fell dead of heart disease.

Columbus.—Hundreds of persons attended the home-coming at Hope under the auspices of the American Legion.

Anderson.—Henry C. Durbin, seventy-seven years old, prominent veteran of the Civil war, and brother of Col. W. T. Durbin, ex-governor of Indiana, died of apoplexy at Anderson.

Indianapolis.—Shortage of $9,124.84 in the cash accounts of the treasurer's office of Knox county, during the period James M. Adams of Vincennes was treasurer, has been discovered by examiners for the state board of accounts, according to a report filed with Lawrence F. Orr, chief examiner at Indianapolis, by W. D. Schreeder and C. B. Bales, field examiners.

Sullivan.—The funeral of Jefferson Abell, age seventy-nine, who died of heart disease at his home at Sullivan, was held at Center Ridge. His widow and a son, Frank Abell, survive.

The Same Old Backache!
Does every day bring the same old backache? Do you drag along with your back a dull, unceasing ache? Evening find you "all played out"? Don't be discouraged! Realize it is merely a sign you haven't taken good care of yourself. This has probably strained your kidneys. Take things easier for awhile and help your kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills. Then the backache, dizziness, headaches, tired feelings and bladder troubles will go. Doan's have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!
An Indiana Case
"Every Picture Tells a Story"
Mrs. L. Simmons, 515 Garden St., Kendallville, Ind., says: "My kidneys were out of order and I had frequent attacks of backache and a soreness over my kidneys. Mornings I often had to neglect my work. Dizzy spells made the trouble worse and the action of my kidneys was irregular. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they relieved the backache, headaches and other signs of kidney complaint."
Get Doan's at Any Store, 60c a Box
DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

The automobile is outdistanced by the gossip when it comes to running people down.

Pat. Process Lloyd LOOM Products
Baby Carriages & Furniture
Ask Your Local Dealer
Write Now for 32-Page Illustrated Booklet
The Lloyd Manufacturing Company
(Heywood-Wakefield Co.)
Dept. E
Menominee, Michigan (16)

HOUSEWIVES—NO NEED TO GRIND KNIVES. Jiffo knife sharpener puts keen edge on blade in five seconds. Guaranteed 10 years. Send dollar bill. If not satisfactory will refund money. PACIFIC SALES CO., 36 South State Street, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

THE PERFECT CLUTCH LOCK
FOR FORDSON TRACTORS
Makes a two-man job easy for one man. Saves time lost in gear shifting, lengthens life of your gears, releases clutch so you can crank the tractor without running machinery you are belted to, etc., etc. Write today for more information. Sold on 10-day free trial offer, with money-back guarantee. Price $6.50 f. o. b.
CLUTCH LOCK COMPANY
Box 14 Marshall, Minn.

REPRESENTATIVES—EACH COUNTY, To call on physicians and merchants to obtain outstanding accounts. Pleasant work; good pay. Commercial Utility Co., Quincy, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED
LIVE WIRES ONLY
To sell hosiery, sweaters, aprons, novelties, men's and ladies' ready-to-wear, and cosmetics. Write for folder and price list.
DORCHESTER SPECIALTY SALES CO.
6320 Dorchester Ave. Chicago, Ill.

No Soap Better
—For Your Skin—
Than Cuticura
Soap 25c, Ointment 25 and 50c, Talcum 25c.

Careful.

"Well, I swear, Lum!" ejaculated a surprised acquaintance. Cut off your whiskers, hain't ye? What in torment did you do that for?"

"Well, I'll tell you, Zeke," answered Lum Gudgeon of Clapboard Springs. "I don't get a decent drink of licker only just now and ag'in, and every drop a feller wipes off'n his whiskers under them circumstances is just that—p'tu—much wasted."—Kansas City Star.

The Matter.

"Ah, Runt, my beloved brother," called Blister, "wilt thou hasten hither, and—"

"Here! What the h—l's the matter with you?" astoundedly interrupted Blister Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, hurrying up.

"The presiding elder is in the house; that's what's the matter! And if you don't hush your mouth and do as I tell you I'll maul the stuffing out of you as soon as he leaves."—Kansas City Star.

Weight of Human Heart.

An ordinary human heart weighs 9 1-3 ounces, yet its power is sufficient to raise its weight 20,280 feet in an hour.

If coffee disagrees drink Postum
There's a Reason

L 912

American Farm Bureau

Marguerite Martin is America's healthiest child. That was the judges' decision at the first national Boys' and Girls' Clubs congress held in Chicago a short time back. Marguerite is a fourteen-year-old Tennessee girl. She lives with her mother on a farm near Shepherd, Tenn., attends high school and wants to be a physical culture director. Her score was 96 5-10 out of a possible total of 100. Marguerite weighs 116 pounds, is 62 5-10 inches tall, has brown eyes and wears her hair bobbed. She wears her hair bobbed because she thinks it is sensible. She enjoys plenty of outdoor exercise, believes milk is a good beverage, eats only wholesome food, and abstains from too many sweets.

CO-OPERATIVE LAWS APPROVED BY BUREAU

Producer Given Opportunity to Market Products in Economioal Manner.

Ohio has taken its place in the list of states having a co-operative marketing law approved by the co-operative marketing department of the American Farm Bureau federation. The bill was signed recently by Governor Donahey of that state following its passage in both house and senate without one dissenting vote, although amended in several minor particulars in the house of representatives.

In commenting upon the new law, Henry Ballard, counsel for the Ohio Farm Bureau federation, says, "Experience in the organization and operation of agricultural co-operative marketing associations for the past few years has shown conclusively that Ohio co-operative marketing laws were ineffective in the accomplishment of the purposes which led to their enactment. The so-called Griswold and Brand acts were based upon the proposition that the associations were to be merely selling agencies for their members. In addition such associations are charged with a public interest or use, and the public utilities commission is vested with the power to regulate, supervise, and investigate such associations, with a further requirement of a fee of $100 by each of such associations.

"Associations formed under these acts, while they have made some progress, have not been able to function effectively for the following reasons:

"Because the association has been limited to acting merely as a bargaining sales agency for its members and could not take title to the product to be sold, it has not been able to secure satisfactory results when dealing with distributors of the members' products. This is due to the inability of the association to guarantee delivery of any particular volume of products. The new law provides for a contract between the association and its members whereby delivery of products may be required for such number of years as the members decide upon.

"The new law enumerates the powers of the associations so that there can be little possibility of objection ever being raised upon the ground of attempted monopoly or organization in restraint of trade. This law is based upon the theory that producers should be given the power to market their products in a businesslike, economical manner. It gives them the opportunity to stabilize prices, to give the producer a fair return only, and to give the producer a larger percentage of the consumer's dollar.

"There is in the law no element of what may be termed purely class legislation, because the law itself gives no rights to such associations as will conflict with the rights of any other class of persons. It merely gives permission to those persons who desire not only to better their own condition but that of the consuming public also, the means of accomplishing these purposes.

"The new law is in line with the recommendation recently made by the federal reserve board in its annual report to congress in which it said: 'Co-operative marketing offers the best solution for the difficulties faced by American farmers and that there must be relaxation of present banking laws governing farm credits.'

"Organizations formed under the proposed act can qualify for the securing of farm credits from banks."

PLAN TO ERADICATE DREAD HOG DISEASE

Members of New Madrid (Mo.) County Farm Bureau Saved Much Money.

Hog cholera eradication is one project of the New Madrid (Mo.) county farm bureau. It has been on the program of work for six years. In that time it has saved its members $314,876 by this one project. The loss to the farmers of this county every year due to the ravages of this disease was over $91,000 before the farm bureau was organized and began active work for the reduction of these losses. In the spring of 1923 the sixth annual survey was made and it revealed that the total loss to the farmers was only $20,592 in the last year.

In accomplishing this the New Madrid county bureau has been instrumental in reducing the number of farms reporting cholera from 157 in 1918 to 29 farms in 1923. In most of these cases the cholera was brought in by hogs shipped into the county and measures were taken immediately for its control.

In order to follow out the campaign in a systematic manner the New Madrid bureau sent out questionnaires to every farmer in the county each year to make a survey of the cholera conditions. In almost every instance these questionnaires were sent back to the bureau filled out with the necessary information.

In the sixth annual report sent out from the county the following facts are brought out: Number of farms reporting cholera April 1, 1918, 157; number reporting in 1923, 29; number reporting cholera during the year, 356 in 1918, 133 in 1923; number of hogs lost from cholera, 12,440 in 1918, 2,574 in 1923; value of these hogs at 8 cents a pound, $91,520 in 1918, $29,592 in 1923; percentage of farmers who believe in vaccination, 60 per cent in 1918, 82 per cent in 1923.

These facts alone indicate the tremendous success of the New Madrid bureau in its campaign.

The actual savings to the members was computed at 8 cents a pound and does not take into consideration the high prices paid for hogs during the war period which would have practically doubled the savings.

In addition to the large decrease in cholera among the hogs, the pork production of the county has been built up through the efforts of the New Madrid bureau. A recent survey shows that there are approximately twice as many hogs in the county now as there was before the county farm bureau was organized.

MINNESOTA GROWS POTATOES

Leaders of Co-Operative Selling Agency Plan to Have Many Acres Under Contract.

One hundred thousand acres of potatoes under contract by July 15, is the goal of Minnesota leaders who are behind the movement to organize a co-operative marketing agency. This decision was reached at a meeting of the committee of 23, which appointed an executive committee composed of J. A. Monson of Braham, Earl A. Barker of Bemidji, A. M. Dunton of Bagley, Marius Waldahl of Plummer and Walter Oby of Detroit, to have active charge of the details. S. G. Rubinow, who so successfully organized the Maine Potato Growers, will have charge of the campaign.

IMPROVED ROADS

Smooth Surface Needed for Concrete Highways

If we are going to construct a concrete surface for our primary roads, it is very important that the surface of the concrete should be made smooth. Not only does this smoothness add to the comfort of the traffic, but it is also a factor in the lasting quality of the road surface. The ordinary layman very seldom thinks of the impact as the load passes over the rough road. If the pavement is rough the impact may be serious. Recent experiments by the United States bureau of roads have given us data concerning this impact, which are very interesting.

For instance, if truck wheels drop one inch when traveling at a speed of 16 miles an hour, and if the wheel load is 8,000 pounds, they will deliver a blow to the pavement of 56,000 pounds, or seven times as much as the load of the wheel. Under the same load, the pneumatic tired wheels deliver an impact equivalent to 14,000 pounds.

Often this impact is not caused by rough pavement but by a defective wheel, or a small obstruction dropped on the road surface, or if large skid chains are used. The wheel strikes the obstruction, rises over it, and falls, delivering an impact. Or, if the solid rubber tire is defective, each revolution of the wheel delivers an impact to the pavement.

It may be that with our heavy truck traffic, the cement surfacing will be stressed to an extreme extent by this impact on account of the rough surface or defective wheel. The surface cracks and breaks, and repairs are necessary.

The surface of the concrete for our roads can be made smooth if care is taken in surfacing the same, and the inspectors should see to it that this surfacing is rightly done.—E. B. House, Colorado Agricultural College.

Jacks Protect Highways From Overloaded Trucks

Weighing jacks with which the load carried by a heavy truck may be ascertained by road police are helping Maryland protect its new state roads from damage by overweight vehicles. Most roads are constructed to withstand a moving load of ten tons. Heavier loads break down the subgrade and start ruts, the police assert.

Each weighing machine consists of a screwjack operating in an oil-filled cylinder. When four of these jacks are placed under the suspected truck, lifting it clear of the ground, its weight is transferred to the oil cylinders and can be read directly on the pressure gauges. If the truck is found to weigh more than ten tons, the excess material is unloaded by the roadside. The jacks are of aluminum alloy, weighing only 40 pounds each, so that the inspectors can carry them about in a light car.

State officials estimate that this supervision reduced overloading 75 per cent within 30 days. California has also recently passed a law limiting the weight of motor-trucks, and road officials and taxpayers are seeking to reduce the maximum permissible weight below the limit now set—30,000 pounds gross weight for four-wheeled trucks, and 40,000 pounds for six-wheeled vehicles, providing the axles are at least 96 inches apart, and there are not more than 800 pounds on each inch of rubber tire width.—Popular Science Monthly.

Iron Ore Quite Useful in Road Construction

Iron ore, found in northwestern Louisiana, has proven of great value in road building in that state and, in some localities where it has been used, has effected a saving of $2,000 to $3,000 a mile in the cost of construction. Highway engineers in Louisiana have been using the ore as a binder instead of sand clay and have found it far superior to that material in many instances. During 1922 the Louisiana state highway department completed 850 miles of new roads. Most of this mileage consists of gravel. The remainder consists of roads built of shells, sheet asphalt or bitulithic. The 1923 program includes a larger amount of asphaltic construction.

Growing Popularity of Autos Shows Road Needs

With the growing popularity of the automobile, there has come a parallel increase in the need of building up the highways. Of course, it is not to be done within a few years. Many sections of the Old World have excellent highways, but they have been built for centuries. But certainly we should begin now to lay the foundation of a great highway system.

Many Motor Vehicles.

According to figures compiled by the bureau of public roads in Washington, there are 12,238,375 motor vehicles in the United States. The report shows 10,890,112 private passenger cars, 69,459 taxicabs, busses and cars for hire, 182,714 motorcycles and 29,328 trailers.

Illinois State Roads.

The Illinois highway commission is working toward the completion of 1,000 miles of state paved road, or approximately enough to give an ardent tourist a run for his money

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D.
Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

Copyright, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.

LESSON FOR JUNE 10

NEHEMIAH, THE BOLD BUILDER

LESSON TEXT—Nehemiah 4:6-15.

GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye not afraid of them, remember the Lord.—Nehemiah 4:14.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Man Who Was Not Afraid.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How Nehemiah Built the Wall.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Nehemiah Got Things Done.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Nehemiah, an Example for Men of Affairs.

Nehemiah was a cupbearer to the Persian king. While performing his duty as cupbearer, he learned of the distress of his brethren in Jerusalem.

Having secured a leave of absence from the Persian court and credentials from the king, he journeyed to Jerusalem. After resting three days without disclosing his purpose to anyone, he made a survey of the walls by night. Having thus obtained first-hand information, he called the representatives of the Jews together and said, "Let us build the walls of Jerusalem."

I. Preparation for the Building (Chap. 3).

The division of labor in this project shows Nehemiah's administrative ability. A wise distribution of labor makes difficult tasks easy. Note some outstanding features of this great work:

1. Stress Laid Upon Indifference (3:5). In administrative tasks it is just that unfaithfulness should be pointed out. Such action will be a warning to some and encouragement to others, in that it shows the integrity of the director.

2. Help Rendered by Women (3:12). Perhaps Shallum had no sons to aid him. It was a fine thing for the women to help, even in building a wall, when there were no men to do it.

3. Stress Laid Upon Earnestness (3:20). If one knows that his faithfulness will be recognized, he will earnestly pursue his tasks.

4. Every One Built Over Against His Own House (3:10, 23, 28). No incentive to exertion is quite so strong as that which concerns one's own family.

5. Certain Guilds of Men Undertook Certain Work (3:8, 31, 32). Wise administration sometimes calls for such alignment of efforts. Men of the same class and craft will surely work better together.

II. Hindrances Encountered (4:1-6:14).

1. Scoffing of Sanballat and Tobiah (4:1-6; cf. 2:19, 20). The opposers of God's servants usually begin by hurling at them shafts of ridicule. They called the Jews a feeble folk and asserted that the tread of a prowling fox would break down their stone wall.

2. Conspiracy for a Sudden Attack (4:7-9). When the enemy saw that the work was actually succeeding they changed from ridicule to an attempt to throw the workmen into a panic. When the enemy cannot succeed by scoffing they resort to intimidation.

3. Conspiracy With the Jews (4:10-23). They sought by means of the Jews from the outside to discourage their brethren by showing that the task was hopeless and that at any time they were subject to a sudden and secret attack.

4. Greed and Oppression of the Rulers (5:1-13). The Jews of that day, like the profiteers of our time, took advantage of the poor and oppressed them so that they mortgaged their land and sold their daughters into slavery. Nehemiah boldly rebuked them for their crimes and ordered a restoration to be made, exacting an oath of them that they would fulfill their promises.

5. Plot to Take Nehemiah's Life (6:1-14). When Sanballat and Tobiah failed in every way they sought by craft to get Nehemiah away that they might kill him.

III. The Wall Completed (6:15-7:4).

So energetically did they pursue their tasks that in fifty-two days the wall was completed. When the enemies heard that in spite of all their schemes the work was actually finished they were dejected, for they perceived that the work was of God.

We may learn from this:

1. That God's children are assailed by enemies, but in view of Romans 8:31 they should not fear.

2. That when attacked by enemies we should pray (4:9). Their faith was accompanied by wise precautioning: (1) Set a watch (4:9). (2) Men were permitted to be with their families (4:13) and thus would fight better. (3) Half worked and half watched, all armed for battle (4:16). (4) They worked with sword in one hand (4:17). (5) They slept in their clothes in readiness (4:23). Prayer and faith are not slothful or inactive.

Everything.

Everything without tells the individual that he is nothing; everything within persuades him that he is everything.—X. Doudan.

Easier Than to Think.

To follow foolish precedents, and wink with both our eyes, is easier than to think.—Cowper.

Tricks of the Wand.

The mines of knowledge are often laid bare by the hazel wand of chance.—Tupper.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

RED TOP'S HAPPINESS

"Cackle, cackle," said Mrs. Brown Hen. "What makes Red Top seem so happy?"

"Cackle, cackle," said Miss Brown Hen, "I'm sure I do not know, but I would like to hear the reason for the great happiness he seems to feel today."

"Cackle, cackle," said Miss Fidgety Fashionable Hen, "I, too, would like to know the reason. Never have I seen Red Top so happy."

"I have seldom seen him so happy, at any rate," said Mrs. White Hen. "Cackle, cackle, something very exciting must have happened."

"Something very exciting must certainly have happened," said Miss White Hen, "and we must all hear about it. Surely Red Top will tell us what is making him so happy."

"Surely he will tell us," said Mrs. Speckled Hen. "Cackle, cackle, it would be very unkind of him if he kept such a secret from us."

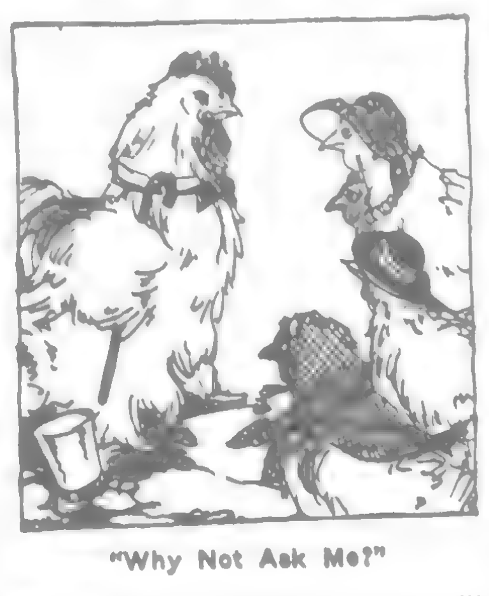
"It would be very unkind of him if he did anything like that," said Mrs. Brown Hen.

"Surely Red Top would not be so unkind as to keep it a secret from us," said Miss Brown Hen.

"I feel sure he will tell us," said Miss Fidgety Fashionable Hen, "and I hope he will tell us soon."

"So do I," said Mrs. White Hen.

"Well," said Red Top, as he wandered about the barnyard, "what silly hens they are."



"Why Not Ask Me?"

"Did I hear him say we were silly hens?" asked Mrs. Brown Hen. "Did I hear him say that?"

"It seems to me that that was what I heard," said Miss Brown Hen."

"I am sure that is what I heard," said Miss Fidgety Fashionable Hen.

"I feel quite certain I heard him say that," Mrs. White Hen remarked.

"I am quite sure I heard him say that, cackle, cackle," said Miss White Hen.

"Cackle, cackle, that is what he said, I am sure of it," said Mrs. Speckled Hen.

"It is just what I said and you heard quite correctly," said Red Top.

"There, I was sure I had heard correctly," said Mrs. Brown Hen. "Cackle, cackle, I was sure of it."

"And so was I," said Miss Brown Hen. "I knew I had, cackle, cackle."

"And I knew it too," said Miss Fidgety Fashionable Hen. "I knew it, too, cackle, cackle."

"So did I," said Mrs. White Hen. "I knew I had heard correctly, cackle, cackle."

"So did I," said Miss White Hen.

"The same here," said Mrs. Speckled Hen.

"Well," said Red Top, "first of all you wonder why I am so happy. You all speak of it. Then you all say that you hope I will tell you. Then you hear me say that I think you're a very silly lot of hens. And you are perfectly sure that I said that after hearing me admit that that was what I said.

"Of course I called you silly! You wonder what is making me so happy and what has made me happy. You hope I will tell you the reason. You think it would be very unkind of me not to tell you the reason. And yet—not one of you has asked me to tell you! Isn't that silly? Why not ask me to tell you the reason for my happiness, instead of wondering if I will, and thinking it will be unkind if I refuse?"

"That would have been the sensible thing to have done in the first place," agreed Mrs. Brown Hen.

"It would have been the sensible thing to have done," said Miss Brown Hen.

"But ask me now—instead of just saying it would have been the sensible thing to have done," shouted Red Top.

"Tell us, Red Top," they all cackled.

"I was given a special treat of corn this afternoon, and it made me feel very happy because I liked both the corn and the extra attention!"

Time Well Spent.

I had been employed but a few days by a large publishing house. The young woman in charge asked me to examine the waste paper basket at the manager's desk. This, she said, had to be done each day before closing time. I asked the reason, and she informed me he was in the habit of throwing valuable papers and checks away. I went over the papers, cutting open the envelopes. That day I found two checks and other days found one or two, and sometimes orders sent through the mail, so the time was well spent.—Chicago Tribune.

Aspirin

Say "Bayer" and Insist!

BAYER

Genuine

Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer product prescribed by physicians over twenty-two years and proved safe by millions for

Colds Headache
Toothache Lumbago
Earache Rheumatism
Neuralgia Pain, Pain

Accept "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" only. Each unbroken package contains proper directions. Handy boxes of twelve tablets cost few cents. Druggists also sell bottles of 24 and 100. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.—Advertisement.

Use for Coal Screenings.

Patents have been granted for a process for utilizing anthracite coal screenings for fuel by mixing them with water gas tar without compression into briquettes.

Red Cross Ball Blue is the finest product of its kind in the world. Every woman who has used it knows this statement to be true.—Advertisement.

Recognized His Limitations.

The great dramatist of France, Corneille, was so absent and embarrassed in society that he wrote of himself a witty couplet, implying that he was never intelligible except through the mouth of another.

THIS LITTLE BABY GIRL

Was Benefited by the Good Her Mother Got from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Pittsburgh, Pa.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my little girl was born, and the effect it had was wonderful. This will be the first child I have nursed, as I had to bring my two boys up on the bottle. I was very nervous and worried, tired all the time, and after I read about the Vegetable Compound I tried it and kept on with it. I still continue its use and recommend it to my friends. You may publish these facts as a testimonial for your medicine."—Mrs. Wm. Klinge, 169 Plymouth St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

It is remarkable how many cases have been reported similar to this one. Many mothers are left in a weakened and run-down condition after the birth of the child, and for such mothers the care of the baby is well-nigh impossible. Not only is it hard for the mother, but the child itself will indirectly suffer.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent tonic for the mother at this time. It is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs, and does not contain any harmful drugs. It can be taken in safety by the nursing mother.

Bilious Attacks
Are Usually Due to Constipation

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication. Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

Nujol
A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Removes Dandruff-Stops Hair Falling
Restores Color and Beauty to Gray and Faded Hair
60c. and $1.00 at Druggists.
Hiscox Chem. Wks. Patchogue, N. Y.

HINDERCORNS Removes Corns, Callouses, etc., stops all pain, ensures comfort to the feet, makes walking easy. 15c. by mail or at Druggists. Hiscox Chemical Works, Patchogue, N. Y.

Kill All Flies! THEY SPREAD DISEASE
Placed anywhere, DAISY FLY KILLER attracts and kills all flies. [illegible]
DAISY FLY KILLER
HAROLD SOMERS, 150 De Kalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

JUNE

L 912

COME
TO FORT WAYNE
This Week and See What
$25
Will Buy During Our Tremendous Selling of Men's and Young
Men's
$30, $35 and $40
SUITS
AND $30 to $45
TOP COATS

MORE THAN 2000
Fine Garments
Will Go at
The One Price
$25
Don't Miss This Wonderful Event

See Fort Wayne Papers
For Full Details

PATTERSON - FLETCHER CO.
The Store That Does Things
Wayne and Harrison Fort Wayne

The St. Joe News

William S. Quance,
Editor and Publisher.

One Year,	$1.50
Six Months,	.75
Three Months,	.40
One Month,	.15
Single Copy,	.05

(Advertising Rates on Application)

Entered at the postoffice at St. Joe, Indiana, as second class matter.

Foreign Advertising Representative
THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

Wild flowers may be wild because everybody is after them.

—‡—‡—‡—

Wonder why they don't arrest the storms for brewing?

—‡—‡—‡—

A clock strikes but the hands remain at work.

—‡—‡—‡—

Hunks of ice seem just as small in the summer as tons of coal look in the winter.

—‡—‡—‡—

No girl ever loved a man so much that she didn't try to find out how much the engagement ring cost.

—‡—‡—‡—

Our idea of hard luck is when a man works for his board and then loses his appetite.

—‡—‡—‡—

Slogan for Henry Ford's Presidential campaign — "Honk for Hank."

—‡—‡—‡—

Many a poor worm doesn't know which way to turn. When the worm turns, he meets either a chicken or a fisherman.

—‡—‡—‡—

A town is like water. If it moves it is fine. If it stands still—well, it doesn't smell good, so let's keep St. Joe moving.

—‡—‡—‡—

Memorial Day was observed in St. Joe last week in the old fashioned manner. Most of our citizens found it inconvenient to attend the races at Indianapolis, and having no conveniently located speedway of our own, were not in a position to express our regard for our Civil War heroes in the modern approved way.

—‡—‡—‡—

YOU CAN'T KICK AND PULL

When a mule kicks, he can't pull. The same is true of a man.

When a man kicks, he isn't doing much pulling.

As soon as some mule starts kicking over the traces or rarin' up about something that don't exactly suit him, wallop him over the ears with a club a couple of times. If he don't straighten up and start pulling again, unhook his trace chains and turn him out of the team. It's the only way to get along.

A kicker not only doesn't do any work himself but instead upsets the whole organization. He holds back all of his teammates and plays havoc generally.

—‡—‡—‡—

TO RETIRE SPEED DEMONS

A Chicago judge gave four speeding motorists their choice to go to jail or quit driving for one year. They chose the latter.

A good precedent. There should be some way to detect the speed fiend before he does any damage, and deprive him of the right to drive. Failing in that, the next best thing is to withdraw his driving privilege when he is found out.

Only it might be better to double the thing up and send them to jail and deprive them of the right to drive, too. Something has to be done—that's certain. Fortunately there are a few babies being born—otherwise the population would steadily dwindle on account of the auto slaughter.

—‡—‡—‡—

KEEPING BUSINESS AT HOME

No town can be permanently prosperous in which the citizens and tradesmen dependent on each other do not patronize one another. The fact is, but little is ever made in going away to trade, if it can be secured at home, and oftener there is a loss. Show us a town in which the people make it a rule not to send away for anything they can get at home, and we will show you a town in which business is lively, and everybody buys, and trade is centered from abroad. Prices are low and the tradesmen patronize each other, having no suspicion that confidence will be abused. Let it be understood that when business men of any town get in the habit of sending abroad for purchases the business will languish. Having no confidence in each other how can they expect others to have confidence in them? No, that's not the way to build a town. Patronize each other, and keep your business at home.

Chiropracter Optician

Calls made at your home by
APPOINTMENT.
EARL E. FRISBIE,
Butler, Indiana.

THE INFLUENCE OF GOOD ROADS

Associated with the extraordinary rapid development of the automobile and the motor truck within the last few years has come a nationwide awakening to the necessity of good roads. Incidentally, the building of good roads carries with it a standard of higher living, economic advancement, and growth in educational and other departments of life. The road which is almose impassoble in summer because of deep sand, or quite impassable in winter because of unfathonable mud, is no longer countenanced if there seems the slightest possibility of bettering it. On the other hand, the well-built highway exercises an influence far more than economic upon the community through which it runs, lifting the people literally out of ruts of mental and social stagnation.

—‡—‡—‡—

MAKES THEM WORK

Who would suffer most if the I. W. W. radicals had been successful in demoralizing operating industry on May 1st?

The working men and communities where the industries are located.

A man who listens to the talk of an I. W. W. is on a par with the man who looks down the muzzle of a loaded gun while fooling with the trigger.

What can the I. W. W. give the American workmen but demoralized government and unemployment.

Why don't the I. W. W. go to Russia? Because the workmen there are starving to death under the policies which they advocate here and an I. W. W. could not fill his stomach there off the labor of others who might have to WORK and starve.

The I. W. W. agitators have just been turned down hard but they will not profit by the lesson. They should be rounded up and sentenced to WORK.

—‡—‡—‡—

PLANT WINDOW BOXES

No single thing about a house lends in the same peculiar charm and attractiveness as do window boxes.

Fresh and cool beauty spots, they give to their prettiness, the season long to window ledges and porch rails, to the sides of outside steps, to the windows of office buildings, school houses, garages, and many other places.

If you canno buy them ready-made, a carpenter will make them for you. See that holes are bored in the bottom of them at six inch intervals in double rows to provide for drainage.

Whether you plant them with flowers of foliage depends upon the location. Foliage will flourish in the shade, while flowers need more sunlight. Be sure that the soil is well fertilized.

The Vinca Vine is a favorite window box plant. The wandering Jew will grow in the shade and make a mass of green foliage. English Ivy and trailing Latana are very good for the purpose. Asparagus and Boston ferns are good, a small rubber plant can be used at times to advantage.

Begonias and geraniums lend bright spots of colors. Many varieties of Petunias are delightful for window box growing. Heliotrope, Lebelia and Marguerites are favorites for this sort of planting. Polyanthas, bush Baby Rambler roses—will do well with the proper care. Sweet Alyssum and Candytuft are good border plants.

Make Your Trip More Enjoyable by a Refreshing Night on Lake Erie
(Your rail ticket is good on the boats)

Thousands of east and north bound travelers say they wouldn't have missed that cool, comfortable night on one of our fine steamers. A good bed in a clean stateroom, a long sound sleep and an appetizing breakfast in the morning!

Steamers "SEEANDBEE" — "CITY OF ERIE" — "CITY OF BUFFALO"
Daily, May 1st to November 15th

Leave Cleveland - 9:00 P.M. } Eastern { Leave Buffalo - 9:00 P.M.
Arrive Buffalo - 7:30 A.M. } Standard Time { Arrive Cleveland - 7:30 A.M.

Connections for Niagara Falls, Eastern and Canadian points. Ask your ticket agent or tourist agency for tickets via C & B Line. New Tourist Automobile Rate—$10.00.

Send for free sectional puzzle chart of the Great Ship "Seeandbee" and 32-page booklet.

The Cleveland and Buffalo Transit Co.
Cleveland, Ohio

The Great Ship "Seeandbee" — the largest steamer on inland waters of the world.
Fare $5.50

C&B Line

CONSTIPATION must be avoided, or torpid liver, billiousness, indigestion and gassy pains result.
Easy to take, thoroughly cleansing
CHAMBERLAIN'S
TABLETS
Never disappoint or nauseate—25c

Office Cat

When a liner arrives from Europe and passes through the rum fleet off New York Harbor, the band plays, "Comin' Through the Rye."

—oo—

The modern widow may be weeping because she misses him, or she may be weeping because she didn't miss him.

—oo—

Since the war there's only two kinds of men left, majors and minors. The majors can't do any work and the minors won't.

—oo—

THE SHOCK OF HIS LIFE

"Take care of this man,' said the sergeant to the warden, as he went to lock him up. "Give him a nice dry cell. He used to make batteries."

—oo—

About the most important thing going on now is light underwear.

—oo—

An open fireplace openly arrived at is the dream of every dear, sweet girl.

—oo—

In a certain drug store there is a glass bowl on a stand with a single goldfish in it. On the outside of the bowl is placed a placard bearing the following answers to questions which the druggist has become tired of answering in person:

This is a goldfish. It is alive.

There is only one of it. We got it from a boy.

We do not know where the boy got it. It has never died. We do not know how old it is. We feed it when we want to. It eats what we give it.

That is water it is in.

We got the water from the faucet.

We have had the fish ever since we got it.

—oo—

A man who is always itching to get somewhere isn't necessarily ambitious. He may have fleas

—oo—

Give some men a fair start and they will take an unfair advantage.

—oo—

AN ARTISTE

The way of art is long,
  The restless clocks keep ticking;
Her art has made her strong
  With those who do the picking;
She has no voice for song,
  But she has legs for kicking.

—oo—

You nearly always find a prospect in the mental attitude you expected to find him in.

—oo—

The reason it took centuries to build the Pyramids, is because it was a government job.

—oo—

Just because a girl wears clocks on her hose, you can't always tell how fast she is.

Notice

A meeting of the young men of this community will be held next Tuesday evening at 8 p m. for the purpose of organizing a Boy Scout Organization. We want every young man in this community between the ages of 12 and 20 to be there.

H. R. Minnick, M. D.
St. Joe, Indiana
Office at Residence
PHONE NO. 16X

COLETOWN

Irene Pierman spent the past week with her sister, Mrs. Everett Welch.

Sterl Wade and family called on Henry Murphy and wife Sunday afternoon.

Charles Aldrich and wife called on several friends in this vicinity Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs Davenport, Albert, J. C. Woodrow, Maxine, and Lavon Hart of Fort Wayne, called on J. W. Hart and wife Sunday afternoon.

John Nugen was a supper guest in the Will Sauers home Saturday evening. Mrs. Nugen returned home after spending a few days with them.

Disabled world war veterans of Michigan have welcomed the offer recently made by the Henry Ford Hospital and already more than fifty are undergoing treatment at the big institution

CONCORD

Mrs. Dan Morr is not very well.

Louis Howey spent Sunday evening with Ira Bone and wife.

Mrs. Ford Jackson and baby spent Wednesday at the home of her parents in Auburn.

Miss Louis Murphy and Cleota Morr started to Angola, to school Monday.

Charles Jackson and family entertained Saturday night Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Belden of Toledo and Mrs. Nan Lysher of St. Joe.

Charles Jackson, wife and daughter, Mable, and Ford Jackson, wife and daughter spent Sunday with Holl Jackson and wife.

Mrs. Jay Fetters has been assisting in the care of her mother, Mrs. Aron Carper, who is quite poorly.

Frank L. Milliman
TRUSTEE
Concord Township

Office Day Friday of Each Week at his residence 2 miles north and 1-2 mile West of St. Joe.

Lehman's CLOTHING HOUSE
ESTABLISHED 1867
MENS AND BOYS OUTFITTERS
810 CALHOUN STREET
Fort Wayne, Ind.
GEO LEHMAN PROP

L 912

$ Money $

A MESSAGE TO SEEKERS OF SUCCESS

Miracles in Money

A city skyscraper seems a miracle in steel and stone, but is only a vast number of girders painstakingly placed together—a vast quantity of bricks placed end to end and one above another.

Miracles in money are seeming miracles only. You can work miracles in your own life.

Saving Wins Success

You can have a big prosperous farm, own a car, or travel wherever you wish.

Men who have really succeeded spell it S-A-V-E. You can win the same success. You do not need a lot of money to do it. You need no great education.

You need only the determination to start now and to continue. Let us help you.

This Bank Will Help You Save.

Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank

Capital Stock, - $25,000

Spencerville, Ind.

The Bank of Personal Services

SPENCERVILLE

Florence Steward is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Ada Berry at St. Joe, for a few days.

Mrs. Sylvia Vanzile is visiting her sister, Mrs. Cal Gump and family near Huntertown.

William Hollabaugh and children of Auburn spent Sunday with Frank Hollabaugh and family.

Ellen Lake went to Angola Monday morning where she will attend the Tri-State college.

The Harwood reunion will be held on Saturday, June 9, at the home of Anson Dunton and wife near Huntertown.

Vol Hay and Henry Hay spent Sunday at Warsaw with the former's sister, Mrs. James Brown and other relatives.

The following guests were entertained for Sunday dinner at the home of Isadore Badica of near Wallen, Mrs. Lora Hughs of Okla., Mrs Alice Goff and Rev. Hubert Clugston and wife of Fort Wayne, Anson Dunton and wife of Huntertown, Dale Tonkle and wife, Mrs. Oscar Reams and Delmar Tonkle and wife of Union Chapel, Mrs. Emila Gloyd and two sons and Ashur Culp and family.

Bargain Day, Saturday the 9th. at Warner's Hat Shop.

Mesdames Charles Chapman and Dayton Webb were Sunday guests of Leslie Langham's at Coburntown.

Mesdames Ora Billman and Nettie Perkins and son of near Harlan were Friday guests of Joel Bets and wife.

Mr. Newman and children of Ohio, spent several days the past week with Charles Rhoades and wife.

Fathers and Sons day will be observed on Sunday, June 10 at the Methodist Church. All men and boys are extended a hearty invitation to attend.

James Vallieu, wife and children James and Wayne, visited Mrs. Vallieu's mother, Mrs. Priscilla Hardesty at Paulding, Ohio, Sunday.

The following ladies very successfully passed tha examination which was held here recently for the Home Hygiene nurse training class and the graduating exercises were held on Tuesday afternoon at Auburn: Mesdames Estella Goldsmith, LeAnna Steward, Hasel Steward, Dora Wilder, Ethel Bowser, Audra Wade, Princess Rectenwal, Elsie Fisher and Mable Erick.

After 8 Weeks
You Must Change the Feed

For the first 8 weeks, Conkey's Buttermilk Starting Feed is the proper Feed, scientifically, for chicks, but

Growing Chicks Must Have a Different Feed

They must have more protein than the little chicks can stand. The same feed cannot serve for both purposes—for little chicks and for growing fowls—if you expect to get the best results. That's why Conkey makes

Conkey's
THE ORIGINAL
Buttermilk Growing Mash

This is the great developing feed that most successful poultrymen use to bring their fowls quickly to early maturity—that insures early broilers and layers. Just right in protein and low in fibre. It is a wonderful bone and flesh builder. Feed it for rapid and certain results.

Conkey's The Original Buttermilk Starting Feed

Should always be fed for the first 8 weeks. It is an appetizing combination of pure, sweet grain and concentrated sanitary Buttermilk combined by a special process. Conkey uses Semi-Solid Buttermilk only — never dried Buttermilk.

STEWARD LUMBER & GRAIN COMPANY, Spencerville, Indiana
E. LEIGHTY GROCERY, St. Joe. Indiana

For good glasses see Griest at American Building Hicksville, Ohio.

Frank Baltz and wife and Will Summers and wife Sundayed at the Jacob Baltz home.

Victoria Fredly of Detroit, Mich. spent several days last week with Jacob Baltz and wife.

Otis Geoltzenleuchtner and wife of Auburn were Sunday guests of Gust Hafner and wife.

Dwight Coolidge and family were Sunday evening callers of William Jolly of Hicksville.

J. E. Sturgis of Cincinnati, O., was an over Sunday guest of W. F. Rhoades and family.

Mrs. Jennie Newsbaum of Harlan is visiting at the home of Mrs. Alice Henderson this week.

Willie Dove and wife of Wayne, spent several days last week with the W. F. Rhoads family north of town.

Ada and Richard Markle and Mrs. Lyle Barr of Ft. Wayne, spent several days last week with their grandfather, Jerry Markle.

Wm. Sommers and wife and Mrs. Jacob Baltz visited at the home of Rolla Moffett and family at Auburn one day last week.

On Thursday afternoon at the Methodist Church the first division of the ladies will meet to make their summer arrangements and plans.

Mrs. Gertrude Borthwick and son Ronald of St. Joe and Mrs. Gladys Anderson of Chicago, were guests Saturday of Mrs. J. C. Vallieu.

Joel Betz and wife spent Saturday and Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. Walter Perkins and husband. Moses Price of Black Creek took dinner their Sunday.

Mrs. Vernie Reed and babe, who has been a patient at the Auburn hospital, Was brought to the home of her parents, W. S. Tyndall and wife, Sunday.

Ray Hoover and wife of Lima, Ohio, Mrs. Mary Hoover of Oakwood, Ohio, spent Sunday at the home of Dwight Coolidge and family.

Mrs. Nancy Chaney very pleasantly entertained the members of the C. C. Club on Friday afternoon. A contest was won by Mrs. F. A. Dean. There were nineteen ladies present.

Jerry Markle and son William of this place, J. D Markle and children Ada and Richard and Lyle Barr all of Fort Wayne, were recent guests of B. F. Markle and family.

Those that attended on Saturday the Bowser-Walters reunion from this place, at the home of Theo. Bowser of near Huntertown, were R. U. Bowser and family, Mrs. Emila Gloyd and son Gerry, Mrs. Sylvia Vansile, Louis Hutchinson and Frank Rhyne and family.

The Christian Endeavor society of the Lutheran Church were honored for having the largest number of delegates at the Auburn District Convention held at Kimmell, Ind., on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Marjorie Hallobaugh, Florence Beams and Lillian Steffey were the delegates and Mrs. Frank Beams, Garnett Beams and Frank Markle, wife and children attended the Sunday meetings.

The following people were entertained to a birthday dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Strubing west of Spencerville, given in honor of Mr. Strubing and their little neice, Eula Faye Gorrell, whose birthdays came on Saturday: Mrs. E. Strubing, Clyde Strubing and family, George Strubing and family, Milo Gorrell and family, Don Gorrell and family, Dallas Camp and family, Frank Brewster and Benjamin Stuckey all of Hicksville, Simon Stuckey of Auburn, Glen Gorrell and family of Paulding and Dannie Burley and family of near Farmer Center.

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. [illegible] proves that [illegible] Catarrh is a [illegible], it is [illegible] influenced by [illegible] conditions.

HALL'S [illegible] MEDICINE [illegible] [illegible] assists [illegible] years.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, [illegible]

Mrs. Ella Fisher of Pleasant Lake was a recent guest at this place.

Mrs. Wm. Allen had the misfortune to fall Saturday evening and sprained her ankle.

Mrs. C. A. Scott and Manassa Rupert attended Memorial services at Scipio, Saturday.

B. A. Rhoades and family of Concord, visited his parents, C. A. Rhoades and wife, Sunday.

LOCAL ITEMS.

Forty-seven attended the Aid meeting held at the home of Mrs. Mark Murphy last Thursday, both the Coletown and Coburns Corners Aids being present. A potluck dinner was served and several comforts tied.

William Randall and wife received word from their son, Harry, that his wife was so far recovered from her recent operation as to be able to leave the Lima City hospital and go to the home of her mothor in the same city last Monday.

Mt. Pleasant

Henry Scheer and wife of Chicago, spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Praul.

Vernon Haggerty and wife were Thursday visitors in the home of Eugene Praul and family.

Children's Day will be observed at Mt. Pleasant next Sunday evening, June 10.

Mrs. Florence Rinhart and children spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. D. Ginder.

Harvey Knot and wife of Muncie are visiting their son, A. H. Knot and family.

Miss Corally Knox has been staying with her grandparents, Mr and Mrs. G. G. Hamilton.

Stirl Brunson and family were Thursday supper guests of Robert Lanning and wife.

Miss Mary Wolf, of Butler, was a weekend visitor at the home of Harry Ginder and family.

Mrs. John Weicht spent Memorial Day with her grandmother, Mrs. Oberlin in Butler.

John Weicht and Clarence Keller spent Memorial Day fishing at Balls Lake, near Hamilton. They report a fine catch.

Mr and Mrs. C. M. Inhoff and son motored to Columcia City Thursday and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. James Ray.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Nimmons, Mrs. Mary Praul, and Mrs. C. M. Imhoff and son attended Memorial services at Waterloo.

Miss Vera Archer of Fort Wayne was a Sunday guest of Miss Doris McCollough. In the afternoon they visited at Butler, in the home of Dale Higley.

Fire destroyed the garage and brooder house at the home of A H. Rinhart, Friday. The automobile and 500 little chickens burned.

Waldo Rosenbury and wife and Don Washler and wife were Sunday dinner guests of Clarence Keller and family.

J. S. Varner and family were Sunday guests of Jerry Varner of Butler. They also visited at Edon Ohio, in the home of M. W. Varner.

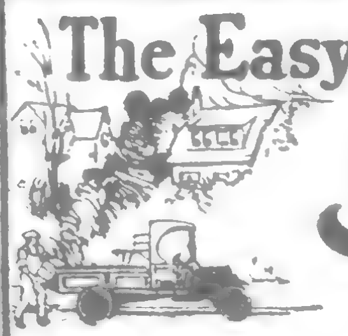
Hiram Ginder, wife and little son attended the birthday dinner of Don Campbell at Waterloo Sunday.

Harry Ginder and family had as Sunday dinner guests Roy Snyder and family, Frank Ginder, wife and children and Mr. and Mrs. George Keller.

PATTERSON-FLETCHER CO. MAKE GREAT PURCHASE

During a recent trip to Chicago, Patterson-Fletcher Company purchased from Hart, Schaffner & Marx more than $61,000.00 worth of clothing. This is probably the largest single purchase ever made by any Northern Indiana Store. In addition to the above purchase, they bought several hundred whipcords, gaberdine and fancy topcoats from C. B. Shane and more than 500 suits from Henry Sonneborn & Co., of Baltimore.

Today Paterson-Fletcher Company begin a tremendous selling event that will make retail records in Northern Indiana.



The Easy Way to Own a Ford
ONE-TON TRUCK

Here is a chance for you to get started toward greater profits—or to build up a business of your own—and it costs only $5 to make the start.

Everywhere, Ford One-ton Trucks and Light Delivery Cars are saving more than this every year for their users. So, as soon as your truck starts running it will quickly take care of the purchase price and add new profits as well.

It will widen the area in which you can do business, enlarge the number of customers you can serve—and keep your delivery costs down to the lowest point.

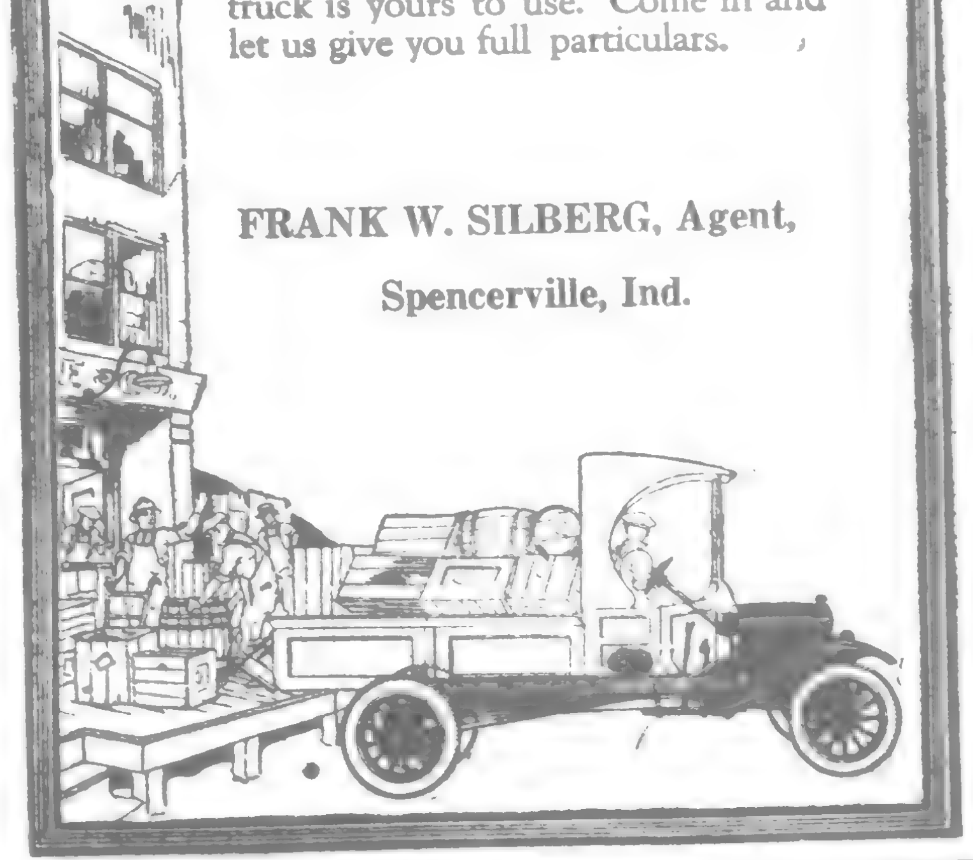
Start now toward the ownership of a Ford Truck or Light Delivery Car—use the

Ford Weekly Purchase Plan

$5.00 Enrolls You

Under the terms of this Plan, we deposit this money in a local bank at interest. Each week you add a little more — this also draws interest. And in a short time the truck is yours to use. Come in and let us give you full particulars.

FRANK W. SILBERG, Agent,
Spencerville, Ind.



NEWVILLE

John Rude and wife took dinner Sunday with their son, Burl Rude and wife.

Dewey Miller of Auburn, was a Sunday guest of his parents, John Miller and wife.

Mrs. Amanda McAdams of Fostoria, Ohio, is here visiting relatives.

Memorial Day was observed here in a very impressive manner. Only two veterans of the Civil war were in attendance, Elijah Inhofe of Butler and John Miller of this place.

Milo Stafford, of Wisconsin, was the guest of his sister, Mrs. Dave Griest and husband, Memorial day.

Carl Clark and wife of Fort Wayne called on Mrs. John Miller Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Fred Countryman, who died at her home in Butler Friday morning was brougnt to Newville Sunday afternoon for interment.

Harry Fuller and family of Garrett, called on John Miller and family enroute from Hicksville to their home Sunday evening.

Robbie Wyatt, wife and baby of Auburn, were Sunday guests of LeRoy Kinney and family. This was baby's first visit to grandpa and grandma Kinney's.

HAY ROPE!

The haying season will soon be here so now is the time to rope your carriers and hay slings. We have just received a shipment of the best long fibered that money can buy.

PURE MANILLA ROPE

This is the rope that will not kink.

See the sample in our window.

We also carry a full line of
PORTER HAY TOOLS

Spencerville Lumber Co.
ASHUR CULP, Manager
Lumber and Building Material of All Kinds
Spencreville, Ind.

JUNE

L 912

The Joy of Living

By Sidney Gowing

Illustrations by Ellsworth Young

Copyright 1922 by Sidney Gowing

CHAPTER XXV—Continued.

—12—

"By all means, Inspector," said Bertrand yawning. "I am a mere amateur. All caves look alike to me. Mind the briars; they prick most accursedly."

Arkwright's inspection of the cave was brief.

"It is empty, but the place has been used, and recently," he reported. "Strange they should not have chosen it; it is the best hiding place in the pit."

"Perhaps they only recently discovered this desirable residence, and were about to shift their quarters," suggested de Jussac. "No doubt, if a few watchful policemen ambush themselves efficiently during the dark hours, they will catch the amiable consort of that cutthroat yonder. One hopes so. It is painful to the law-abiding to know that malefactors are at large. Particularly when they are females."

Inspector Arkwright looked at him dubiously, and made no reply. Billy, also, when the two rejoined him, eyed de Jussac with extreme thoughtfulness, and had some difficulty in suppressing his emotion. He was still mounting guard over Jake, who lay upon his improvised stretcher and gazed up at the sky with a singularly beatific smile. De Jussac offered him a cigarette, which he accepted silently.

"I think," said Inspector Arkwright, "I'll call on you two gentlemen to assist me and we'll get him out of this. I want the place cleared."

It was not an easy matter to carry the gate and its burden out of the pits. By the time they had achieved it, the car arrived from Jervaulx and wound its way over the flat turf. Jake was lifted into it.

"I must trouble you to accompany me, Mr. Spencer," said Arkwright.

"Anything to oblige the police," said Billy, squeezing himself into the front of the car. It was a tight fit.

The journey to Stanhoe was made almost in silence. When the car arrived at the police station Jake was duly disposed of, while Billy cooled his heels in a dingy waiting room that had been whitewashed some time during the period when Sir Robert Peel was reorganizing the force. Presently Inspector Arkwright joined him. The inspector closed the door, and regarded Billy with a sphinx-like but faintly humorous eye.

"I think, Mr. Spencer," he said quietly, "that you have no very high opinion of my intelligence?"

"Wrong there," said Billy, politely. "I don't know that I'd class the Stanhoe staff with the world's great thinkers. But I've heard a lot about Scotland Yard, and, if I may say so, you come fully up to sample."

"There is no harm now in my telling you that I know precisely what your movements have been, Mr. Spencer. I know that it was you, and not the prisoner, who stayed at Ivy cottage as the tenant of Mrs. Sunning. I know that your companion, at the same time, stayed next door. I have also a fairly accurate comprehension of the reasons which led you to accept temporary employment in the Jervaulx abbey household. I did not, till now, know who you were. But the papers you gave me establish your identity. And that makes all the difference."

Billy was silent.

"I am, you see, in possession of the facts."

"There's one recent fact," thought Billy, "that you're not wise to."

"Your affairs, Mr. Spencer, though somewhat complicated, do not call for the intervention of the police," said Arkwright, with the ghost of a smile, "and no official cognizance will be taken of that matter; unless something unforeseen occurs. I am a thief hunter and not a castigator of rash young men. What I know, I shall, doubtless, keep to myself."

Billy felt an enormous sense of relief, combined with a sharp twinge of conscience.

"The irresponsible couple who ensconced themselves at Ivy cottage," said Arkwright, with a dry smile, "made a good deal of trouble for themselves."

"Inspector," said Billy, "did you ever do a fool thing?"

Inspector Arkwright twinkled.

"A good many, when I was your age. And, sometimes, even now. However, I wish you good fortune. I am not ungrateful to you for your share in the running to earth of Mr. Jake. It is the duty of the civilian to assist the police. The woman will still be brought to book. And I shall call on your formidable employer before I leave. Good-by, Mr. Spencer."

Billy walked out of Stanhoe police station and made his way back to the abbey on foot.

"Gee!" he said pensively. "But that last stunt was awful dangerous! Of course, I see well enough what happened. But it was just a lucky accident neither Aimee nor that blamed nuisance of a woman was seen getting away. The luckiest sort of accident. Inspector Arkwright isn't the fool I took him for, by a long way. I wonder how much he knows? But he can't know that."

He shook his shoulders.

"It came near being a real crash—just when everything had come right. It put the wind up me worse than anything yet. But there's nothing to be scared at now."

Despite the excellent turn affairs had taken, Billy's mind was troubling him. He had the air of a small boy whose raid on the jam cupboard is about to be discovered. When he arrived at the abbey there was no sign of his partner. After lingering for some time near the most likely haunts, Billy sighed and retreated to the garage.

He had not been there long when Aimee's face appeared furtively round the angle of the door.

"Hello!" she said, stepping inside.

She halted, and they looked at each other dubiously. Aimee was decidedly pale, her eyes pathetic and rather frightened.

"I couldn't help it, Billy!" she said suddenly.

"Couldn't help what?"

"You saw us getting away, didn't you? And the girl—and the Sphinx? Has Monsieur de Jussac explained to you?"

"I haven't seen him," said Billy, quietly, "but I guess it isn't hard to see how things were. You might as well tell me, though."

Aimee, very gloomily, described her encounter with Calamity Kate.

"I know," she concluded, shakily, "you're thinking me an idiot. I'd no right to take such a risk—with the police there and everything. I—I suppose she's a thief. But she's done such a lot for that man, and she was so miserable. He's her husband. And I couldn't help thinking about you and me, Billy, and how I should feel if you—you—"

She broke down and began to cry quietly.

"That's how it was. Are you very angry with me?"

Billy gasped and, stepping quickly to her, pulled Aimee's hands away from her face.

Billy Pulled Aimee's Hands Away.

"Angry—with you?" he exclaimed, holding them tight. "I was afraid you'd be mad with me! You ought to. Why, I did the same thing, and I'd no excuse! I ought to have made sure that woman was run in."

"You—did the same thing?" said Aimee, staring.

"Yes! Of course, I never dreamed you were in the pits, or I wouldn't have done it. That crippled crook in the cave got over me. They've got him for five or ten years; and he's earned it. But he was all broken up about his wife. Neither of them deserve a scrap of sympathy. But—the poor devil was in such a state, that somehow I fell for it. He never whined on his own account; he was thinking of his wife. It got me on a raw spot. He knew I must have tracked him through her—he begged me to say nothing about her.

"And I didn't. I gave him that much rope. Never told the police I'd seen her close by. Running down women is their job. If it's got to be done, let them do it. They haven't any choice—but I had. All the same," said Billy, "if I'd dreamed for a moment you were in the pits, I'd have chased fifty female thieves sooner than you should take a chance! I ought to be horsewhipped for riskin' it."

"I think it was fine of you, Billy!" cried Aimee with sparkling eyes.

"No!" he said. "It's you that were fine."

"This," said Aimee, "is what comes of growing sentimental. Neither of us would have dreamed of making such—such fools of ourselves a week ago. What will become of her? Will she get away?"

"I don't know or care. If she made the road, there's juice enough in the Sphinx to take her a hundred miles from here. I only hope they don't find her with the machine. But I'll bet they don't. She'll get clear and cover her tracks—she's the sort that does."

"But the Sphinx," said Aimee, with intense remorse, "our Sphinx, Billy! I've lost her for you!"

Billy laughed.

"We'll mighty soon have another—there's two hundred landed at the docks last week—same model; and a factory being equipped to build the new model over here. Mass production."

"What! You never told me it had got as far as that! But—I wanted the old one, Billy—our Sphinx."

"Maybe you'll have her yet. Only I'm not going to let her make trouble for you. We're pretty near done with trouble."

"But how—"

"Never mind. I'll tell you some time. Gee! how you'll laugh! But I'm giving you the cinch—it is so."

"Billy!" she cried, "isn't that splendid! Though I—I—"

"Well?"

"I haven't been worrying so much about it lately," said Aimee swiftly. "But it's good to know. And what's going to happen now?"

"I know one thing that's going to happen now," said Billy, and he kissed her with—as de Jussac would say—empressement.

"Billy!" said Aimee a little breathlessly. "Aunt said we had to be decorous!"

"So we are," replied Billy. He kissed her again.

Half an hour later Billy, passing the main porch, encountered Lady Erythea.

'Spencer," she said, "I was about to send for you. The person from Scotland Yard, who has just left, informed me that he had not only captured one of the thieves, but that you had rendered him invaluable assistance. It really seems a remarkable ending to the affair—but it does not surprise me in the least! I said from the first that you were more likely to make a success of this problem than all the police in the country, if they would only consult you. I was perfectly right—my judgment, in fact, is never wrong."

"Yes, my lady."

"I am quite capable of reading between the lines," said Lady Erythea with suppressed triumph. "It is my conviction that the capture of this abominable thief was due entirely to you. The police are imbeciles."

Billy shook his head.

"On the contrary, Inspector Arkwright is an uncommonly clever man, my lady," he said respectfully. "As for me, I had—luck. Luck's a queer thing. Even cleverness won't always beat it."

Lady Erythea looked a little out of her depth.

"In any case," she continued, "I am very pleased that this absurd suspicion of the police regarding you is cleared up, and that you come out of the affair with such credit. It confirms my opinion of you."

Lady Erythea contemplated Billy's tall figure and serenely handsome face with a certain regret.

"I am sorry," she said, "that you are leaving Jervaulx."

Billy smiled.

"The week I have spent in your ladyship's service," he said gently, "has been the happiest time of my life."

Lady Erythea was not given to expressing her emotions. But her austere face positively tinged a faint pink color with pleasure.

CHAPTER XXVI

—

"Where Is My Daughter?"

"Why can't we stay on for another week, Billy?" said Aimee, leaning a little farther out of the study window, duster in hand. "Go to Aunt—the Missus, I mean—and ask her to let you keep the job. She'll jump at it."

"Nothing doing!" said Billy sternly.

Aimee sighed. The hour was nearly noon on the day following the Odyssey of the crag pits. No news had been heard of Calamity Kate, who appeared to have drifted out of history on the Sphinx. A brief interval of peace had settled upon Jervaulx.

"There'll be a vacancy for a parlormaid an' chauffeur," announced Billy with decision. He was standing on the gravel just outside the window. "All the bother with the police is wiped off the slate. It's only a fool that backs his luck too far. And it's time to quit the game and turn the lights out."

"That means Aunt has got to know who I am, and who Georgie is; and—and all the rest of it."

"There's no way out of that, I'm afraid."

"I know. But I do rather funk it, Billy. The worst if it is poor old Georgie is in a tighter place than I am."

"We'll have to see her through it."

"Don't you think," said Aimee, distinctly worried, "that it would be best if Georgina arranged to cut short her visit and went home—and Amy Snooks gave notice, or just cleared out. You as well. Then we—we could explain it all by letter, or something. I think it would look better that way."

Billy looked at her a little oddly.

"I am in a funk, Billy," said Aimee, trembling slightly. "I don't care for myself, but it's awful to think of poor Georgie having the storm break on her. She isn't built for it. I believe if the thing isn't sprung on us suddenly, and we manage it at the right time, we—we might get away with it."

"Right again," said Billy, "but I shan't go. I shall stay and put it through myself."

"No!" said Aimee quickly. "I won't hear of that."

"You just leave it to me," said Billy, soothingly, "there's another way. I'll show you."

The whirr of a motor interrupted him. A large automobile was approaching up the park road. Aimee looked at it. Such an expression of horror came over her features that Billy was startled.

"What's the matter?"

"That's absolutely torn it!" said Aimee in strangled tones.

"Eh!"

"It's Dad!"

Aimee dived back into the room like a rabbit retreating into its burrow.

The automobile swept up to the main entrance; the Very Reverend Lord Scroope descended.

"Is Lady Erythea in?" he said, almost curtly, to the butler. "Announce me at once, please. Lord Scroope."

Mr. Tarbeaux showed him into the empty drawing room. Lord Scroope deposited his hat among a cluster of Dresden ornaments. His brow, usually white and serene as alabaster, was clouded. Lady Erythea entered majestically.

"Anthony!" she said.

Lord Scroope, omitting any greeting, regarded her fixedly.

"I received your letter by last night's post, Erythea, announcing Aimee's engagement to Alexander. I borrowed the bishop's car, and I have been traveling from Closeminster since seven this morning."

Lady Erythea received the news with a smile of approval.

"The silly child wished me to delay announcing her betrothal. But that, of course, I could not consent to. I wrote to you at once, Anthony. I commend the energy you have shown in hastening to congratulate them—and me. One so seldom sees you in a hurry."

Lord Scroope deliberately placed a pair of gold-rimmed pince-nes on his nose and stared at his sister-in-law.

"The news of this engagement," he said earnestly, "is unwelcome to me. Entirely unwelcome."

Lady Erythea stiffened in every limb. Her ear-trumpet was presented in one hand; with the other she raised her lorgnettes and directed them at Lord Scroope. The two regarded each other glassily.

Regarded Each Other Glassily.

"I do not understand you," said Lady Erythea with frigidity. "Alexander is a young man of unexceptionable character and prospects. Jervaulx will be his. The Scroope estate is entailed, and I am sufficiently au fait with your affairs to know that when your two sons in the Service are provided for there will be no overpowering fortune left for Aimee. It appears that if there is any complaint, it should come from me."

"The financial aspect of the question does not weigh with me," said Lord Scroope with asperity. "I object to the match itself. If Alexander is to marry at all—"

"If he is to marry!" interrupted Lady Erythea warmly. "Of course he is to marry. Though I confess I was very much afraid he never would. Permit me to tell you, Anthony, that in taking up this attitude as to the marriage of priests, you stand on a very shaky foundation. You yourself are a Clerk in Orders, and an extreme Ritualist. Shall I remind you that if you had not married Delicia—and an excellent thing it was for you—this situation would never have arisen!"

"I am not conscious of having expressed any such argument," said Lord Scroope very stiffly, but with a certain pinkness about the ears. "As for Alexander, he is in every way an excellent young man. But if he is to marry, the last thing I should have desired is his alliance with my daughter. Their temperaments are so opposed that I am convinced nothing but unhappiness could result—in fact, your news seemed to me almost incredible. I do not know what to do—the position is very difficult for me, if the child has really become attached to him," concluded Lord Scroope, with visible distress.

"Good gracious, man, what did you expect?" exclaimed his sister-in-law.

"It never entered my head," said Lord Scroope, emphatically. "I thought that your influence, and that of Alexander, would have a steadying effect on Aimee, who was in some need of it. But this—!"

Lady Erythea showed increasing exasperation.

"You are talking rubbish!" she exclaimed, sharply. "Of all the girls known to me, no more suitable mate could be found for Alexander. Indeed, during her sojourn here Aimee has endeared herself to me scarcely less than to him. Her piety, her quiet devotion—the complete absence in her of all slanginess—all these speak eloquently in her favor."

Lord Scroope gazed at her in bewilderment.

"I really do not follow you, Erythea. And I am greatly disappointed," said Lord Scroope heavily, "greatly disappointed. I did not foresee this."

"I am not responsible, my dear Anthony, for your lack of foresight," said his sister-in-law, acidly. A shadow darkened the window, and she turned. "But your daughter can answer for herself."

Georgina stepped in through the open window, followed by Mr. Lambe. Suddenly observing Lord Scroope she halted and became rigid. Every scrap of color left her cheeks. Alexander halted also, and slowly turned a deep plum color.

"Since it is a fait accompli," said Lady Erythea to her brother-in-law, almost with a touch of pleading, "be amiable, Anthony, and bestow your blessing on the happy pair."

She raised her ear-trumpet as though to share in the benediction. Lord Scroope looked at Georgina dumbly and then stared at Lady Erythea.

"What did you say?" he asked dizzily.

"The happy pair!" said Lady Erythea, loudly and irritably.

"Where is my daughter?" exclaimed Lord Scroope with consternation. "Erythea, where is my daughter?"

Lady Erythea started. She glanced at Georgina's horror-stricken face, and then, with deep concern, moved to her brother-in-law's side.

"My dear Anthony," she said in a low voice, "come upstairs and lie down. It will soon pass off. Do not be alarmed, Aimee. Lean on my arm, Anthony."

Lord Scroope shook himself free.

"Are you in your senses, Erythea? This is my niece by marriage—Georgina Berners. What is she doing here?"

"Y-yes," gulped Alexander's fiancee. "I'm Georgina. I couldn't help it."

She collapsed into an armchair and burst into tears. Alexander stood over her like a large and protective dog; he laid a hand on her shoulder and glared at the others with defiance.

Lady Erythea turned pale. It was disconcerting to find two members of the Scroope family simultaneously smitten with insanity.

"Where is Aimee?" insisted Lord Scroope, turning upon her. "Where is my daughter?"

"Dad!"

The disheveled parlor maid darted in through the door. Aimee's cap was awry, her face was pale, her eyes very bright; the top of her apron heaved tumultuously. She stopped short, as Lady Erythea glared speechless at this irruption.

"Don't cry, Georgie," said Aimee; "it wasn't your fault."

"Have I been transported into Bedlam?" asked Lord Scroope, dizzily. "Or are you rehearsing a charade? What is she doing in this costume?"

Lady Erythea struggled for breath.

"This," she said grimly, "is my parlor maid, Snooks, whom I foolishly engaged on your recommendation. She has engaged herself again, however, to my chauffeur."

Lord Scroope looked at his sister-in-law with commiseration.

"This," he said, in the soothing tone with which one would address a delirious person, "is my daughter, Aimee. I am rather glad to find her—in any costume. I began to wonder what you had done with her."

Lady Erythea's frame slowly stiffened. Her fingers clenched the ear-trumpet as though it were the handle of a club. Her eyes were terrible. Before the storm could break, Aimee intervened.

"It wasn't Aunt's fault, Dad," she said breathlessly, "nor Georgie's—nor Alexander's. It was all mine. And if you all want to beat somebody, it had better be me! I—I'm here to explain!"

"Some explanation," said Lord Scroope quietly, "seems to be called for."

Aimee, avoiding her aunt's eyes, addressed herself to the quivering ear-trumpet.

"I didn't want to come here. Dad made me. I was—frightened of you. Anyway, I didn't think Jervaulx would suit me, and that you'd hate me. So I skipped the car at Burn Ash," said Aimee, her speech pouring from her like a torrent, "and made the chauffeur bring Georgina on here. And I went off on my own!'

"Georgina arrived here, and you took her for me. You insisted she was me. And she didn't dare explain, for fear of getting me into a row. That's what Georgie is! She can't lie—she can't even act—but she'd let you cut her in pieces before she'd get me into trouble!

"I got here the same night, and climbed into her room. And Georgie begged me to own up, and I wouldn't. And I came the next night; Georgie was ready to give it all away—and then the burglars got in. I was nearly caught, all the household chased me, the butler tore a great piece out of my skirt. But I got away, and at last right down by the crossroads, I ran into Bil—Mr. Spencer."

Aimee paused for breath.

"Who," inquired Lord Scroope, in the hush that followed, "is Mr. Spencer?"

"A motorcyclist. He had come across the thieves getting away, had a fight with them—they were too many for him, but he got back some of the jewels. I told him the awful mess I was in. Of course, the police were after me—I'd seen their car already. If they got hold of me, they'd know the—the silly thing I'd done," said Aimee with a gulp. "It would come out that I was your daughter—it would be all over the country, and in all the newspapers!"

Lord Scroope, very pale, drew a deep breath, and gave a prolonged shudder.

"B—Mr. Spencer told me I'd got to go back and make a clean breast of it all. He wanted to tell you. But I didn't dare. I refused to let him say anything—I made him swear he wouldn't. It was my trouble, not his. So he did what I asked; even though it meant the police would suspect him, too. So he took the jewels to Aunt Erythea, and never said a word about me; and when she offered him the job as chauffeur he took it; so that the police wouldn't suspect him—or me! He came here and drove Aunt's cars!"

"And you?" said her father quietly. "What happened to you?"

"I went back to Scroope next day. I found Amy Snooks was coming here as maid—I made her go to Seabridge, and took her place, Dad. Just to be safe from those beastly police—in the hope they'd catch the thieves, if we gave them time—and then they wouldn't catch me and make me explain. And it's just what happened; Billy—Mr. Spencer—caught one of them yesterday, and the police have got him. Nobody knows anything about me, except you here!"

Aimee panted like a deer at bay.

"And Billy's asked me to marry him, and I'm going to!" she said desperately. "I love him! There's nobody like Billy—he's been splendid! He isn't a chauffeur at all—till Aunt made him one. And I'd marry him, even if he was!" declared Aimee, on the verge of tears.

There was a stunned silence. For once speech denied itself even to Lady Erythea. Georgina was sobbing gently in the chair. Alexander still stood over her and said nothing.

"I seem to find a thread of enlightenment in this story," said Lord Scroope, slowly. "Yes, I think I know enough of you, Aimee, to understand. I have a question to put. You came here on the day following the burglary. Where did you spend the previous night? What were you doing?"

"I was in a cave!"

Lord Scroope passed a long white hand across his brow.

"A cave?" he repeated, blankly. "You have reverted, it seems, to the customs of our Neolithic ancestors—"

"It was a ripping cave," said Aimee a little hysterically, "down in the crag pits. All the little rabbits for company. It was more peaceful than Jervaulx. I know it wouldn't have suited Georgie."

"May I ask when this unknown young man permitted himself to propose to you?"

"Yesterday!"

"We will not pursue that matter," said Lord Scroope, gloomily; "this hardly seems the time or place for detailed explanations. I feel—"

The door opened and Monsieur de Jussac entered. He gave a slight start as his eyes traveled rapidly over the group.

"A thousand pardons! A family matter, I perceive," he said quickly. "I will withdraw—"

"Don't go, Vicomte!" exclaimed Aimee. "Anyone who's a friend of mine is welcome here. You may as well be in at the death."

"If I can be of any service—" said Bertrand. He bowed courteously to Aimee's father. "Lord Scroope, I presume."

"You," said Lady Erythea to Bertrand, trembling with wrath, "were also in this conspiracy! You appear to know the whole story!"

"You Were Also in This Conspiracy."

"Oh, of course he knows it," said Aimee, wildly, "just as Billy knew it, and Georgina, and Diana, too. They all did their best for me—right from the beginning. I wasn't worth it—but they did."

"It seems," said Lady Erythea, gripping the back of a chair, "that everyone in my household knew all about this—except myself and my nephew! Who, through his position and his innocence, now finds himself—"

"I beg your pardon, Aunt," said Alexander, pallid but calm, "I, also, knew everything that was to be known—from the moment Aimee entered this house. I knew that Georgina—was Georgina. I am as culpable as any."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Imagination and Memory.

Imagination is not, like memory, held to actual experience. It takes the mind beyond its own experience, beyond the present and apparent. It idealizes.

JUNE

L 912

Matrimonial Adventures

The Bright Bees of Toupan

BY

James Branch Cabell

Copyright by United Feature Syndicate

JUST A LITTLE ABOUT JAMES BRANCH CABELL

Mr. Cabell is to me a very pleasant voice over the telephone. I called him up when I reached Richmond. He lives five miles out of town. He had already joined the Star Author Series of Matrimonial Adventures through the solicitation of Mr. Joseph Hergesheimer.

I wanted to talk to Mr. Cabell about his story for the series, but the warm sunshine and the spring flowers that the New Yorker sometimes erroneously associates with Virginia were visiting elsewhere. It was snowing when I arrived and Richmond had become a jeweled city of gleaming icicles when I left the next morning. I did not meet Mr. Cabell, because the roads to town did not take kindly to the weather and motor traveling was unsafe.

If James Branch Cabell had written nothing else, as the author of "Jurgon" alone he would have a unique place in American letters. But Mr. Cabell's other books are an additional reason for his high place in American literature. "The Bright Bees of Toupan" follows, and I know of no other writer who would have treated the very intricate subject of marriage in this perfectly delightful fairy-tale style.

After all, should artists marry? I leave it to you—and Mr. Cabell.
MARY STEWART CUTTING, JR.

Miramon Lluagor had very wonderfully prospered at magic; he was, as they say, now blessed with more than any reasonable person would ask for, and the most clamant of these superfluities appeared to him to be his wife.

They tell how Miramon was one of the Leshy, born of a people that was neither human nor immortal, telling how his home was builded upon the summit of the mountain called Vraidex. Here in the old days dwelt Miramon Lluagor, at a discreet remove from the prudishness of men and the disreputable amours of the High Gods, retiredly in his Doubtful Palace; wherein, as they report also, this wizard designed the dreams for sleep.

His taste was for the richly romantic. But his wife Gisele had quite other notions, a whole set of notions, and her philosophy was that of belligerent individualism. And the wizard, to keep peace, at least in the intervals between his wife's more mordantly loquacious moments, would design such dreams as Gisele preferred. But he knew that these dreams did not express the small thoughts and fancies which harbored in the heart of Miramon Lluagor, and which would perish with the falling of his doom unless he wrought the fancies into dreams that, being fleshless, might evade carnivorous time. And Miramon hungered for the lost freedom of his bachelorhood.

His wife also was discontent, because the ways of the Leshy appeared to this mortal woman indecorous. The doom that was upon the Leshy seemed not entirely in good taste to her who had been born of a race about whom destiny did not bother; in fact, it was a continual irritation to her that her little boy Demetrios was predestinate to kill his father with the charmed sword Flamberge. This was a doom which Madame Gisele found not at all the sort of thing you cared to have imminent in your own family; and she felt that the sooner the gray Norns, who weave the fate of all that live, were spoken to quite candidly, the better it would be for everybody concerned.

She was irritated by the mere sight of Flamberge. So her thinking was not of silk and honey when, after polishing the sword as was her usage upon Thursday morning, she came into Miramon's ivory tower to hang the weapon in its right place. With Miramon sat that sleek person whom men called Ninzian. It was not known to all of Ninzian's friends that he was an evil spirit who had come out of the Bottomless Pit to work iniquity; but Miramon Lluagor knew this, and therefore he made appropriate use of the demon, and indeed upon this very afternoon the two were looking at that which Ninzian had procured for the wizard at a price.

"Good-day to you, Sir Ninzian," says Madame Gisele, politely enough. And then she spoke, in a different tone, to Miramon Lluagor. "And with what are you cluttering up the house now?"

"Ah, wife," replies Miramon, "these are the bees of Toupan, a treasure beyond word or thinking. They are not as other bees, for theirs is the appearance of shining ice; and they crawl fretfully, as they have crawled since Toupan's downfall, about this cross of black stone—"

"That is a very likely story for you to be telling me, who can see that the disgusting creatures have wings to fly away with whenever they want to. And besides, who in the world is Toupan?"

"He is nobody in this world, wife, and it is wiser not to speak of him. Let it suffice that he made all things as they were. Then Koshchei took the power from Toupan, and made all things as they are. Yet three of Toupan's servitors endure upon earth, where they who were once lords of the Vendish have now no power remaining save to creep humbly as insects; the use of their wings is denied them, the charmed stone holds them immutably. Oho, but wife, there is a cantrap which would free them, a cantrap which nobody has as yet discovered, and to their releaser will be granted whatever his will may desire."

"This is some more of your stuff and nonsense, out of old fairy tales, where everybody gets three wishes, and no good out of any of them."

"No, my love, because I shall put them to quite practical uses. For you must know that when I have found out the cantrap which will release the bees of Toupan—"

Gisele showed plainly that his foolishness did not concern her. She sighed, and hung the sword in its accustomed place. "Oh, but I am weary of this endless wizardry!"

"Then, wife," says Miramon, "then why are you perpetually meddling with what you do not understand?"

"I think," said Ninzian, at once, for this demon, too, was married, "I think that I had best be going."

But Gisele's attention was reserved for her husband. "I meddle, as you so very politely call it, because you have no sense of what is right and proper, and no sense of morals, and no sense of expediency, and in fact, no sense at all."

Miramon said, "Now, dearest—!" Sir Ninzian was hastily picking up his hat. But Gisele continued, with that resistless and devastating onflow which is peculiar to tidal waves and the tongue of her who speaks for her husband's own good.

"Women everywhere have a hard time of it, but in particular do I pity the woman that is married to one of you moonstruck artists. She has not half a husband, she has but the tending of a baby with long legs—"

"It is so much later than I thought, that really now—" observed Ninzian, ineffectively.

"—And I might have had an earl, or a well-thought-of-baron, who would have had the decency to remember our anniversary and my birthday, and in any event would never have been in the house twenty-four hours a day. Instead here I am tied to a muddlehead who fritters away his time contriving dreams that nobody cares about one way or the other. Yet if only you would be sensible about your silly business I could put up with the inconvenience of having you underfoot every moment. People need dreams to help them through the night, and nobody enjoys a really good dream more than I do when I have time for it, with the million and one things that are put upon me. But dreams ought to be wholesome, they ought to point an uplifting moral, and certainly they ought not to be about incomprehensible thin nonsense that nobody can halfway understand. They ought, in other words, to make you feel that the world is a pretty good sort of place after all—"

"But, wife, I am sure that it is," says Miramon, mildly.

"Then the more shame to you! and the very least you can do is to keep such morbid notions to yourself, and not be upsetting other people's repose with them."

"I employ my natural gift, I express myself and none other. The rosebush does not put forth wheat, nor flax either," returned the wizard, with a tired shrug. "In fine, what would you have?"

"Oh, a great deal it means to you what I prefer! But if I had my wish your silly dream-making would be taken away from you so that we might live sensibly."

Now as she spoke Gisele slapped viciously at the black cross. And a thing happened to behold which would have astonished the magi and the enchânters who had given over centuries to searching for the cantrap which would release the bees of Toupan. For now without any exercise of magic the scouring rag swept from the stone one of these insects. Koshchei, who made all things as they are, had decreed, they report, that these bright perils could be freed only in the most obvious way, because he knew this would be the last method attempted by any learned persons.

Now for an instant the walls of the ivory tower were a-quiver like blown veils. And the bee passed glitteringly to the window, and through the clear glass of the closed window, leaving a small round hole there as the creature went to join its seven fellows in the Pleiades.

Toupan, afloat in the void, unclosed his ancient unappeasable eyes; and Jacy returned to his aforetime estate in the moon, and all plants and trees everywhere were withered, and the sea also lost its greenness, and there were no more emeralds. And the High Gods were appalled to see their doom so near at hand, and they cried out to Koshchei who devised them.

Koshchei answered: "Have patience! When Toupan is released I fall with you. Meanwhile I have made all things as they are."

And in that instant Miramon Lluagor, as he stood blinking in his ivory tower, was aware of a touch upon his forehead, as if a damp sponge were passing over it, and he perceived that he had forgotten the secret of his wizardry. Something he could yet recall, they say, of the magic of the Purin and the cast stones, of the Horse and the Bull, of the Water, and most of the lore of the Apsarasas and the Faldhin rune remained to him. He could still make shift, he knew, to control the bitter Duergar, to build the fearful bridge of the White Ladies, or to contrive the dance of the Korred. He kept his mastery of the Shedeem who devastate, of the Shehireem who terrify, and of the Mazikeen who destroy. But such accomplishments, as he despairingly knew, were the stock in trade of any fairly competent sorcerer anywhere; and that supreme secret which had made Miramon Lluagor the master of all dreams was gone away from him completely.

He was very angry. "Accursed woman!" he cried out, "now indeed has your common sense completed what your nagging began. This is the doom of all artists that have to do with well-conducted women. Truly has it been said that the marriage bed is the grave of art. Well, I have put up with much from you, but this settles it, and I wish you were in the middle of next week."

With that he caught the soiled scouring rag from the hand of Gisele, and he slapped at one of the remaining bees, and brushed it from the black cross. And this bee departed as the other had done.

Toupan now moved his wings, exulting, and by his moving the worlds in that part of the universe were dislodged and ran melting down the sky; Gauracy swept the fragments together and formed a sun immeasurably greater than that which he had lost. And the High Gods were frightened now with reason, for in this intolerable glare they showed as flimsy and incredible inventions, and they knew that if ever the last remaining bee were freed from the cross, the dizain of the Pleiades would be completed, and their day would be over, and the power would return to Toupan.

Yet Koshchei, lifting never a finger, said only: "Eh, sirs, have patience! For I made all things as they are, and I know now it is my safeguard that I have made them in two ways."

But Miramon, in his ivory tower upon Vraidex, knew only that his wish had been granted, for Gisele had gone just as a bubble breaks.

"And a good riddance, too," says Miramon. He turned to Ninzian, that smiling fiend. "Why, did you ever see the like of such outrageousness!"

"Oh, very often," replied this Ninzian, who too was married. Then Ninzian asked, "But what will you do next?"

Says Miramon, "I shall wish to have back the secret and the solace of my art."

But to Ninzian this seemed less obvious. "You may do that by releasing the third bee. Yes, Miramon, you can get back your art, but you will be left defenseless against the doom which is appointed. No, friend, by my advice you will employ the cantrap as you at first intended, and will secure for yourself eternal life by wishing that Flamberge may vanish from this world of men." And Ninzian waved toward the sword with which the Norns had foreordained that Miramon Lluagor must be killed by his own son.

The fallen wizard answered: "Of what worth is life if it breed no more dreams?" And Miramon said also, "I wonder, Ninzian, just where is the middle of next week?"

Sleek Ninzian spoke, secure in his infernal erudition. "It will fall upon a Wednesday, but nobody knows whence. Olybrius states that it is now in Aratu, where all that enter are clothed like a bird with wings, and have only dust and clay to eat in the unchanging twilight—"

"She would not like that. She had always a delicate digestion."

"—Whereas Asinius Pollio suggests, not unplausibly, that it waits beyond Slid and Gjold, in the blue house of Nostrand, where Sereda herds the unborn Wednesdays, under a roof of plaited serpents—"

"Dear me, now that would never suit a woman who had an almost morbid aversion to reptiles!"

"—But Sosicles declares it is in Nibalba, where Zipacna and Cabrakan play at handball, and the earthquakes are at nurse—"

"She would be none the happier there. She does not care for babies, she would not for one moment put up with a fractious young earthquake, and would make things most unpleasant for everybody. Ninzian"—and Miramon coughed—"Ninzian, I begin to fear I have been a little hasty."

"It is the frailty of all you artists," the fiend replied. "In any event you have one wish remaining, and no more. You can at will desire to have back again the control of your lost magics, or you can have back your wife to control you."

"Yes," says Miramon, forlornly.

"And indeed," the demon went on, with that glib optimism reserved for the dilemmas of one's friends, "indeed it is in many ways a splendid thing for you to have the choice clear cut. Nobody can succeed alike at being an artist and a husband. I hold no brief for either career, because I think that art is an unreasonable mistress, and I think also that a wife is amenable to the same description. But I am certain no man can serve both."

Miramon sighed. "That is true. There is no marriage for the maker of dreams, because he is perpetually creating finer women than earth provides. The touch of flesh cannot content him who has arranged the shining hair of angels and modeled the breasts of the sphinx. The woman that shares his bed is there, of course, much as the blanket or the pillow is there, and each is an aid to comfort. But what has the maker of dreams, what has that troubled being who lives inside the creature which a mirror reveals to him, to do with women? At best, these animals afford him models to be idealized beyond the insignificant truth, somewhat as I have made a soul-contenting portent with only a lizard to start on. And at worst, these animals can live through no half-hour without meddling where they do not understand."

Now Miramon kept silence. He was fingering the magic colors with which he blazoned the first sketches of his dream. Here was his white, which was the foam of ocean made solid, and the black he had wrung from the burned bones of nine emperors. Here was the yellow slime of Scyros, and crimson cinnabaris composed of the mingled blood of behemoths and dragons, and here was the poisonous blue sand of Puteoli. And Miramon, who was no longer a potent wizard, considered that loveliness and horror which a moment ago he had known how to evoke with these pigments, he who had now no power to lend life to his designs, and kept just skill enough it might be to place the stripings on a barber's pole.

And Miramon Lluagor said: "It would be a sad happening if I were never again to sway the sleeping of men, and grant them yet more dreams of distinction and clarity, of beauty and symmetry, of tenderness and truth and urbanity. For whether they like it or not, I know that it is good for them, and it affords to their starved living that which they lack and ought to have."

And Miramon said also: "Yet it would be another sad happening were my poor wife permitted eternally to scold the shivering earthquakes in the middle of next week. What does it matter that I do not especially like her? There is a great deal about myself that I do not like, such as my body's flabbiness, and the small nose which makes ludicrous the face I wear; but do I hanker to be transformed into a sturdy man-at-arms? Do I view the snout of an elephant with covetousness? Why, but, Ninzian, I am astonished at your foolish talking! What need have I of perfection? What would I have in common with anybody who was patient with me and thought highly of my doings? No, Ninzian, it is in vain that you pester me with your continuous talking, for I am as used to her shortcomings as I am to my own shortcomings. I regard her tantrums with the resignation I extend to inclement weather. It is unpleasant. All tempests are unpleasant. Ah, yes, but if life should become an endless clear May afternoon we could not endure it; we who have once been lashed by storms would cross land and sea to look for snow and pelting hail. Just so, to have Gisele about keeps me perpetually fretted, but now that she is gone I am miserable. No, Ninzian, you may spare your talking, you need say no more, for I simply could not put up with being left to live in comfort."

Sir Ninzian had heard him through, with that patience which is requisite to frends. And Ninzian, shrugging, said, "Then do you choose Miramon for your wife and no more dreams, or for your art and loneliness?"

"Such wishing would be overwasteful," Miramon replied, as he dusted away the third bee. "Since I can bear to give up neither my wife nor my art, no matter how destroyingly they work against each other, I wish for everything to be put back just where it was an hour ago."

The last bee flew in a wide circle, and returned to the cross. Life reawoke in all which had perished in that hour, and Gauracy's baleful sun was gone, and the dislodged worlds and satellites were revolving trimly in their former places. And the High Gods rejoiced; for there were only seven Pleiades, and Toupan, afloat in the void, again seemed harmless enough, because the eyes were closed wherein is tireless and unappeasable malignity, and a foreknowledge which is perturbing to the Gods.

Koshchei said only: "What need was there to worry? Did I not make my creatures male and female? And did I not make the tie which is between them, that cord which I wove equally of love and of disliking? Eh, sirs, but that is a strong cord, and though all things that are depend upon it, my weaving holds."

But Miramon in his ivory tower knew nothing of how he had played havoc with the universe; he only knew that upon the black stone cross three bees were crawling fretfully, and that his wife Gisele had come back to him enraged.

"A pretty trick that was to play on me!" she says. "Oh, but I pity the woman that is married to an artist!"

"But why do you perpetually meddle without understanding?" he replied, as fretful as the accursed bees, as angry as the intolerable woman.

And they went on very much as before.

Ireland's Famine of 1847.

In 1847, famine in Ireland shocked the sensibilities of the people of the United States, who devised means to relieve some portion of the distress, concerning which many painful accounts were printed in the papers at the time, the Detroit News recalls. American vessels were freighted by private subscriptions in the United States and were sent on errands of mercy to Ireland, where entire families were howling with the pangs of hunger, and dying upon the pavements of a crowded city, while speculators in breadstuffs furtively cast the "sweated" portions of their granaries into the nighttide, that it might be carried out to sea.

It was said that 200,000 pounds sterling were due to the Provincial Bank of Ireland by one house engaged in the importation of corn, which was bought by the cargo at £13 per ton, merely to be hoarded for a rise in prices. No satisfactory report of the distribution of the articles sent from America was ever made.

WANTS PUBLIC TO KNOW FACTS

Cannaday Eager to Tell Sufferers How Tanlac Restored Him After Flu Attack.

"If I had the time I would sit down and write a letter to everybody in Indiana and tell them about this wonderful Tanlac, how it rid me of stomach trouble and put me back on my feet," is the enthusiastic statement made a few days ago by Augustus Cannaday, a railroad shopman, living at 1738 North Fifth St., Terre Haute.

"Two years ago I had an awful attack of 'flu' that left my stomach all out of fix, and from that time on until Tanlac set me right I was a very sick man. I was troubled with gas pains, bilious spells, and splitting headaches. I had no appetite and was so weak I was continually losing time from my work.

"Before I ran across Tanlac I had about given up hope, but five bottles of this medicine has ended my troubles and built me up to where I feel like a man made all over again."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

Tanlac vegetable pills are nature's own remedy for constipation. Sold everywhere.—Advertisement.

Reflection of Middle Age.

"The modern dance is no dance in the first place, and when you've learned it at last—it isn't modern any more."—London Mail.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Too Much of Good Thing.

Money and time are the heaviest burden of life, and the unhappiest of all mortals are those who have more of either than they know how to use.—Johnson.

Freshen a Heavy Skin

With the antiseptic, fascinating Cuticura Talcum Powder, an exquisitely scented, economical face, skin, baby and dusting powder and perfume. Renders other perfumes superfluous. One of the Cuticura Toilet Trio (Soap, Ointment, Talcum).—Advertisement.

Unhappiness Explained.

Man's unhappiness, as I construe, comes of his greatness; it is because there is an Infinite in him, which with all his cunning he cannot quite bury under the Finite.—Carlyle.

Sure Relief FOR INDIGESTION

BELL-ANS FOR INDIGESTION 25 CENTS

6 BELL-ANS Hot water Sure Relief

BELL-ANS

25¢ AND 75¢ PACKAGES EVERYWHERE

Women Made Young

Bright eyes, a clear skin and a body full of youth and health may be yours if you will keep your system in order by taking

LATHROP'S GOLD MEDAL HAARLEM OIL CAPSULES

The world's standard remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles, the enemies of life and looks. In use since 1696. All druggists, three sizes.

Look for the name Gold Medal on every box and accept no imitation

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With Othine—Double Strength

This preparation for the treatment of freckles is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of Othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double-strength Othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

IF YOUR VETERINARIAN Uses "Cutter's" Serums and Vaccines he is doing his best to conserve your interests. 25 years concentration on one line count for something.

The Cutter Laboratory
"The Laboratory that Knows How"
Berkeley (U.S. License) California

NR To-NIGHT Tomorrow Alright

NR A vegetable aperient, adds tone and vigor to the digestive and eliminative system, improves the appetite, relieves Sick Headache and Biliousness, corrects Constipation.

Used for over 30 Years

NR Jrs

Chips off the Old Block

NR JUNIORS—Little NRs

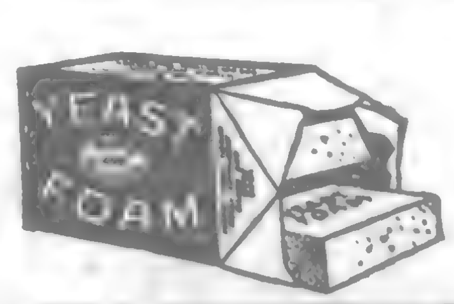
One-third the regular dose. Made of same ingredients, then candy coated. For children and adults.

SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST

A bore is a man who has nothing to say and insists upon saying it.

Every department of housekeeping needs Red Cross Ball Blue. Equally good for kitchen towels, table linen, sheets and pillowcases, etc.—Advertisement.

There may be mighty little poetry in the life of a poet's wife.



Yeast Foam assures a light, tender dough

Start your children out right—teach them how to bake good, wholesome home-made bread.

Send for free booklet "The Art of Baking Bread"

Northwestern Yeast Co.
1730 N. Ashland Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

SHINOLA

AMERICA'S HOME SHOE POLISH

Black - Tan - White - Ox-Blood - Brown

In the handy box that opens with a turn of the key. No broken nails or soiled hands. Softens and preserves leather. Sheds moisture. Shoe shining with SHINOLA is a nifty thrifty habit.

"The Shine for Mine"

JUNE

L 912

Get Your

Daily Bread - - Welcome Flours

at the J. C. Bailey Store St. Joe

Made by G. A. WARD of the

ALBION ROLLER MILLS, Albion Indiana

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Try a want ad in the News.

Lucile Curie spent Sunday with Florence Hart, north of town.

Coral Simanton is ill, being bedfast with arterial rheumatism.

Mrs. Vina Fish was a Hicksville visitor Tuesday forenoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Clay Coburn and childrem were Sunday guests of T. A Northrup and wife.

A Real Bargain for wide awake customers at Warner's Hat Shop, Saturday June 9.

Sam Armstrong and wife visited Mr. and Mrs. Ora Inbofe and Elijah Inhofe at Butler, Sunday.

GLASSES—$2.50 up, Benj. F. Griest, Eyesight specialist, American Bldg., Hicksville, Ohio.

The Tri-Mu Sunday School class gave Mrs. Howard Williams a miscellaneous shower Friday evening.

Dr. Price and wife and Mr. and Mrs. Del Nelson attended Memorial services at Scipio, Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Will Witherspoon, wife and two children and Mr. Smith of Garrett were Sunday afternoon callers of W. E. Henley and wife.

For Sale—Fine Eating Potatoes and late seed.

George Walters,
St. Joe, Indiana

Nine young friends of Goldie Henley helped her celebrate her twelvth birthday anniversary, Map 29.

John Wineland, wife and granddaughter, Janace Ridgway, were Sunday guests of Glen Freeburn and wife. Janace remained for a few days.

Mrs. Anna Dilley had as Sunday guests Mr. and Mrs. John Dilley and three sons of Waterloo and Mr. and Mrs. Link Smith and two daughters of Auburn Junction.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Mavis of Auburn were over night guests Saturday of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sechler, driving on to Defiance Sunday morning to visit his mother, Mrs. Charles Mavis.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Patterson of Fort Wayne, Mrs. Mary Heiber and Mrs. R. J. Hilegass and son Robert of Huntertown and Miss Helen Diller also of Fort Wayne, were Decoration Day guests of J. P. Buckingham and wife.

John Milliman and wife had as Sunday guests Sam Springer, wife and daughter of Leo, Jay Springer, wife and daughter of Cedarville, Mrs. John Keester of Spencerville, Grace Graves of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Milliman, Marion Milliman, Mrs. Mary Shuff and Miss Susan Sechler.

C. R Baumgartner, D V M

Veterinarians

OFFICE and HOSPITAL
SPENCERVILLE. - IND.

Phones —Office No. 7

F W Silberg, D V M

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Miser, daughter Martha and sons Charles and Frank, visited Auburn relatives Sunday.

Mrs. Andrew Fredly of Detroit, Michigan, is spending the week with her sister, Miss Minnie Thompson.

Ed Woodcox of Logansport, spent over Sunday here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Woodcox.

Mr.and Mrs. G. M. Barney spent Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. Chas. Jordan and family at Fort Wayne.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Reasoner and Mr. and Mrs. James Harter visited relatives at Butler, Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Ophelia Headley of Newville, spent several days the past week with her brother, Laney Gee and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Buckingham and Mr. and Mrs John Ulm spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs John Roose at Wauseon,Ohio.

Mrs. John Guisinger, Mrs. Anna Baker and son Walter Baker, motored to Hicksville and Spencerville Sunday where they called on relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Laney Gee and Mrs. Ophelia Headley visited Sunday afternoon in the homes of I. S. Hadsell, C. W. Jackson and C. M. Thayer at Hicksville.

Mrs. Harry Urmson of Akron, Ohio, came Tuesday for several days visit with her father, O. J. Baker and her sister, Mrs. Matie Gee.

There was a total of 390 children examined in the different clinics held in DeKalb County during the two weeks in May, 185 boys and 205 girls.

The DeKalb County Board of Review met Monday at the court house to be in session for thirty days. They will hear complaints of property owners and review valuations made by assessors.

Charles Todd with a companion both of Fort Wayne, were arrested at Columbia City last week for intoxication. Whether or not this is the same Charles Todd who recently went to Fort Wayne from here we did not learn.

Burch Hays, Mr. and Mrs. John Guisinger, Mrs. Earnest Brown and son Berwyn, all of Garrett, were Friday evening supper guests of Will Koch and wife. Mrs. Guisinger and Berwyn Brown remained for a ten day visit with the Koch families and other relatives.

According to DeKalb Circuit Court news Amos F. Gamble, formerly of Concord Township, has brought suit in this court against William Keeler and Don P. Hindman on a promisory note. The complaint says that the note in the sum of $140 was executed in February 1920 to be due in 9 months. A $225 judgement is demanded.

NO TIME TO HUNT for a doctor or drug store when suddenly seized with agonizing intestinal cramps, deadly nausea and prostrating diarrhoea.

CHAMBERLAIN'S
COLIC and DIARRHOEA
REMEDY

gives instant warmth, comfort and ease from pain. Never fails.

Mrs. Albert Wade and baby are here from Detroit, to visit this week.

Mrs. Clarence Hart spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tom White.

Henry Sechler, wife and daughter and Harold Carpenter of Butler, were Sunday guests in the Byron Widney home.

Mary Armstrong spent Saturday night and Sunday a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Argyl Sechler near Newville.

Reports from D. C. McCann and Henry Reinoehl, both patients in the Sacred Heart hospital, are that both are improving.

Extra Special. Sacrificed to close out Hats that were $7 and $5 at $3, $2 and 1.50, at Warner's Hat Shop, Saturday, June 9th.

Wilbur Campbell of Auburn was a Saturday night guest of Howard Williams and wife. Sunday the three and Kathryn Curie were Angola visitors.

There were 17 special eastbound pullman trains run over the B. & O. railroad last Saturday and Sunday conveying Shriners to their national convention at Washington this week.

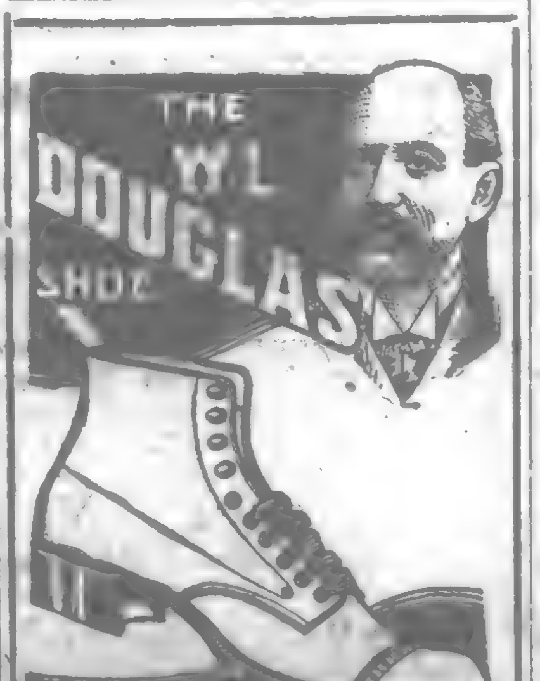
Merritt Sechler entertained at Sunday dinner Mr. and Mrs. Earl Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Staman Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rice and mother Mrs. Belle Harmon, the latter of Fort Wayne. Mr. Sechler also entertained at supper Chas. Hamm and family of Garrett.

William Curie is very fond of turnips and it is his custom to sow a large patch in his garden lot. This year he followed his custom but to his disappointment his turnips turned up to be cabbbage plants. He got hold of the wrong container that time.

Word was received here by Mrs. Wid Williams and Frank Scholes of the death of their nephew, Ford Scholes, eldest son of their brother, Rev. Joe Scholes, which occurred Thursday evening at Cleveland, where burial was made Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Chilcot and Miss Corwin of Toleda were Friday and Saturday guests of Roy Koch and wife, going to Wayne Saturday. They returned Sunday bringing with them Mrs. J. E. Thorp to spend the day before leaving for Defiance. Lloyd Belden and wife of Toledo, were also Sunday guests in the Koch home.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Reasoner returned home Thursday from a few days visit at Van Wert and Celina, Ohio, where they visited relatives and attended Memorial Day Services. Mrs. Jason Miller of Auburn, who was also a guest there, returned home with them and stayed for a few days visit before returning to her home in Auburn.



For Sale Only At
Chaneys'
Auburn, - - - Ind.

Bible Thoughts for the Week

Sunday.

FREE GRACE.—Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need.—Hebrews 4:16.

Monday.

JESUS SAID.—And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me.—John 12:32.

Tuesday.

SOURCE OF TRUE HELP.—My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth.—Psalm 121:2.

Wednesday.

MIZPAH.—The Lord watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from another.—Genesis 31:49.

Thursday.

HOW BEAUTIFUL.—How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!—Romans 10:15.

Friday.

SELF DENIAL.—Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it. —Mark 8:34, 35.

Saturday.

GIVING AND GETTING.—Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again.—Luke 6:38.

Miss Doris Keesler and Wilbur Yeiser spent Sunday in Fort Wayne.

Miss Esther Otis of Hicksville, came Monday evening from Fort Wayne for a week's visit with her aunt, Mrs. Ann Abel and son, Ross.

Mrs. Julia Wyatt, Mrs. Maranda Maurer and Mrs. Pearl Simanton spent Friday guests of Mrs. Anna Dilley.

Mr. and Mrs. William Pepple and mother, Mrs. Jane Pepple of Auburn, were Wednesday guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Kinsey.

Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Minnick entertained the following guests at Sunday dinner: Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Burtzner and family of Auburn, and Chet Bard of Corunna.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rhoads and daughter, Doris of near Spencerville, were Sunday dinner guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Florence Buchanan.

Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Minnick attended the funeral of Mrs. David Gump held Monday afternoon at the Cedar Brethren church near Garrett.

Mr. and Mrs. B. V. Widney, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Bowman and daughter, Eloise, spent Sunday at Lake Hamilton with Mrs. Mary Bowman and son, Ray.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Thayer of Hicksville, and B. A. Hadsell of Los Angeles, Cal., were Thursday evening guests of Dr. and Mrs. B. S. Sheer. Mr. Hadsell remained for the night.

Mrs. Nan Lysher of this place, spent Saturday night and Sunday with her mother, Mrs. Mary Timmerman at the Charles Jackson home in Concord. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Belden of Toledo, were also over night guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kees entertained Sunday at a family gathering the following: Mr. and Mrs. John Hart and children, Mr. and Mrs. Dane Walden, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Davenport of Fort Wayne, Mr. and Mrs. D. I. Gillingham, Mrs. Clara Gillingham of Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Myer and two children of Hicksville, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Will Beam and son of Logansport, Mrs. Caroline Chorpenning of Auburn, and Mr. and Mrs. George Kees and two children of this place.

Dr. Bonnell M. Souder
HOSPITAL

Established in 1914
206 West Seventh Street
AUBURN, INDIANA

STATIONERY

"CLOTH OF GOLD"

The paper you use is a part of the letter. A good paper gives your letter a better appearance.

"Cloth of Gold" box stationery is extra fine linen-finish paper and is a bargain at

25 cents a box

NEWS OFFICE

Mrs. Catherine Curie was a Wednesday dinner guest of her son, Grover Curie and family.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Patterson of Fort Wayne, attended Memorial Day services here Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Lenore Kagey and daughter, Miss Florence were recent dinner guests of the former's brother H. M. Widney and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kees of Marion, spent Wednesday here with the latter's sister, Mrs. C. C. Woodcox and family.

H. M. Widney attended the Bankers' and and Farmers' Banquet held in the Commercial rooms at Auburn the evening of May 29.

Oscar Burtzner of Fort Wayne, returned home Wednesday evening after having spent the day and previous night with Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Minnick.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Hamilton entertained at dinner Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. Lee O. Tustison, son Keith, and father, Charles Tustison of Defiance, Earl Tustison and daughter, Irma of Hicksville, and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Northrup of this place.

Richard Bayman Married

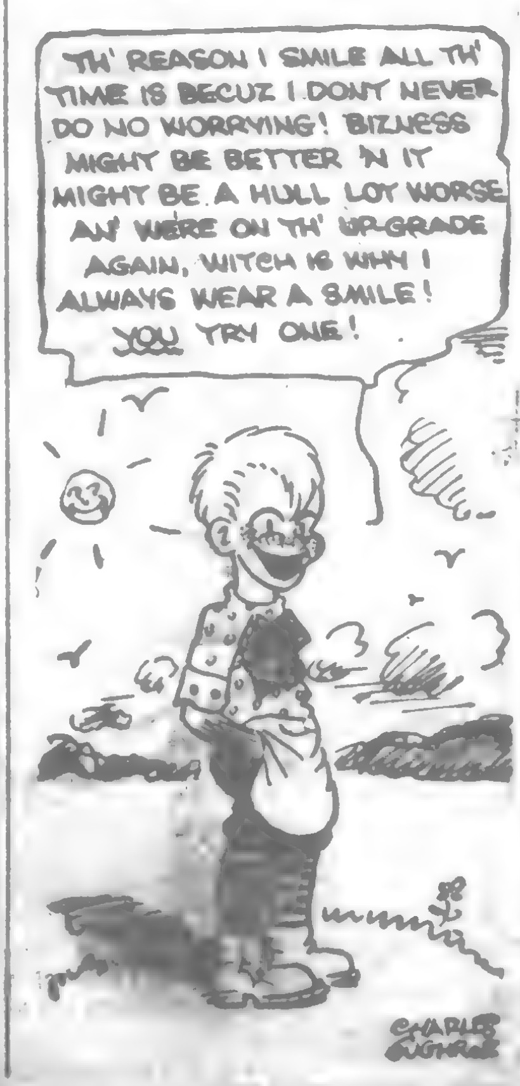
Friends of Richard Bayman, formerly of St. Joe, will be interested in the following item, clipped from the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel, of June 3.

"The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Hullinger, youngest daughter of Mrs. Edward Fry, of Monroeville, and Mr. Richard Bayman, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Bayman of New Haven, took place last Saturday in the Plymouth Congregational church of this city. The young people are now at home to their friends at New Haven.

Real Meaning of Life.

Any one can carry his burden, however heavy, till nightfall. Any one can do his work, however hard, for one day. Anyone can live sweetly, patiently, lovingly, purely, till the sun goes down. And that is all that life ever really means.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

MICKIE SAYS



TH' REASON I SMILE ALL TH' TIME IS BECUZ I DONT NEVER DO NO WORRYING! BIZNESS MIGHT BE BETTER 'N IT MIGHT BE A HULL LOT WORSE AN' WE'RE ON TH' UP-GRADE AGAIN, WITCH IS WHY I ALWAYS WEAR A SMILE! YOU TRY ONE!
CHARLES SUGHROE

Sunday School Report.

The following is a true and correct report of the various Sunday Schools in this neighborhood for last Sunday.

Christian	83	$ 3 70
M. P	65	7 12
Lutheran	87	4 62
M. E. Spencer	74	5.94
Lutheran	104	5 08
Newville U. B.	104	5 21
Christian	82	3.95
Coburntown	71	3 20
Concord	61	2 84
Mt. Pleasant	88	3 26
Rehobeth	90	6 90

Christian Church Notes

Olen Dermott will represent us at the State Sunday School convention.

An interesting council meeting was held last Friday evening at the church with a fair attendance.

Mr. Scholes and Mr. Borthwick each gave a short talk on the Temperance situation last Sunday morning.

The Loyal Workers class will have charge of the social hour next Sunday morning.

Patronize The Advertisers.

LUCKY TIGER SALES OVER TWO MILLION

Remarkable Records Made in Less Than Five Years

A statistical report recently submitred py the Lucky Tiger Remedy Company to their Board of Directors shows a most phenomenal growth of one of Kansas City's younger but nationally known institutions.

Lucky Tiger Hair Remedy was first put on the market about five years ago. The business was well financed from the start, and the organizers had proven faith in the merit of their product.

The report just submitted shows annual sales of more than two million bottles, sold through druggists, which does not include the thousands gallons sold thru the barber trade.

H. O. WILLIAMS

THE Abstracter

is able to furnish you with a complete Abstract of Title to any description of Real Estate in DeKalb County.

OFFICE
West Seventh Street
AUBURN

FIRE INSURANCE — NOTARY PUBLIC

HOME MADE SOCIAL

FRIDAY EVENING, JUNE 8th
LUTHERAN CHURCH LAWN

Cake served with cream

ST. JOE M. P. ORCHESTRA

JUNE

L 912

631

BE A BOOSTER!
When it comes to public improvements. The town needs your help.

ST. JOE NEWS.

BE A BOOSTER
Renew your subscription to the News. $1.50 cents a year.

VOL. XXXVII ST. JOE DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, JUNE 14, 1923 No. 24

The Great Ship Now On The Route

The largest and most costly steamer on inland waters of the world, the Great Ship "SEEANDBEE," with her sister ship "City of Buffalo," is now operating daily between Cleveland and Buffola.

Travelers may leave Cleveland or Buffalo on C. & B. Line steamers any evening at 9:00 (Eastern Standard Time,) enjoy a night of refreshing sleep on Lake Erie and arrive at destination following morning at 7:30.

Automobile tourists will find this a delightful way of relieving the monotony of long overland tours, and thousands of motorists each year make use of this "Save a Day" car-by-steamer service.

Railroad tickets reading between Cleveland and Buffalo (in either direction) are good for transportation on these steamers.

Strawberry Festival

The date for the Festival to be given by Mrs. Frank Curie's S. S. class has been changed to Friday evening June 16. Home made ice cream, strawberries and cake will be served on the Lutheran Lawn. A prize cake will be given. Come and get it if you can. The Tri Mu Orchestra will furnish music.

Many to Go to the State Convention

There is every indication that the largest delegation ever sent to any state convention, will represent DeKalb County at the coming state Sunday School convention at Indianapolis, June 19th to 21st. At the present time, the county officers have been notified of sixty-two delegates who expect to attend, and these come from bu eighteen of the county's sixty-two schools. Naturally many more than this can be expected, as every school will plan on sending one and more.

The program of this year's meeting is published in the June "Awakener," a copy of which is sent to every Sunday School superintendent, and from perusing this, one can see why this year's convention will be a record breaker. It is planned to make this the record convention for attendance, the largest Sunday School parade ever attempted, and the most magnificent pageant ever staged in any state convention. No wonder that Indianapolis is expecting ten thousand people in attendance.

The State office will accept preregistrations up to and including Friday, June 15th. Those who register by that time will be sure and get entertained. As these registrations are transferable, the schools can have nothing to lose by registering their delegation early.

Many expect to go through by automobile. Those who do not, are advised to go by traction. A very attractive fare has been offered, of one and a half fare for round trip. This offer is only good to those delegates who have a certificate issued by either Miss Sadie Coy or Geo. E. Beugnot, both of Auburn, and obtainable upon application to either.

COAL

Fill up and keep filled up. Don't forget that the place to store your coal is in your bins, not in your dealer's yard, not at the mines.

Prices are now lowest of the season with all prospects of them going up, as coal is being mined below the cost of production at the present time.

We are trying to give you good advice. It is up to you to take it.

Place your orders now for the following coals:

Hocking Valley, Egg and Lump
Buffalo White Ash, none better
Hard Coal Chestnut and Egg

Please settle your last season's accounts now and make your credit good.

FEED

Hominy, Bran, Middlings, Tankage and other feeds.

The St. JOE ELEVATOR

Samuel Keesler, Mgr. Grain Dept.
Bert Jackson, Mgr. Coal Dept.

Call on us—glad to see you. Come in whether you want anything or not.

What He Needed

A stump speaker shouted: "I want tax reform, I want land reform, I want dress reform—" and then some fellow in the crowd retorted; Yes, and what you really need is chloroform."

That's what the man got for talking too much. Possibly someone will yet suggest chloroform for us because we keep telling about the advantages of our Bank, but we have such a good bank we can't help talking about it. We are not trying to reform anyone. We ARE trying to be of service to everyone by offering the facilities of a strong, reliable accommodating bank. If you are not already a patron, we invite you now. You'll be welcomed'

St. Joe Valley Bank---A State Bank

Kicked By Horse

Lloyd Strong, little four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Strong residing on the old James Hamilton farm northeast of here, was kicked in the face by a horse as he attempted to pass it, and received a bad cut across the nose and a badly bruised forehead.

He was brought to St. Joe and Dr. Minnick and Dr. Sheffer dressed the wound which required two stitches to close. The little fellow will have a sore face for some time and will probably carry a scar across his nose.

Roll Of Honor

The following names are patrons who have either subscribed or renewed their subscription to the home paper at recent dates.

Mrs. Crist Sailer, Mrs. Abe Culbertson, Cad Shull, William Curie, Frank Tustison, Howard Shilling, Mrs. Alice Warner, Mrs. Walter Abel, John Betz, Ed Leighty, John Smith, Marie Goldsmith, Jay Bleeks Jacob Sechler, Orange Herrick Sam Keesler, W. H. Davis, and John Engle, of St. Joe; John Doll, Ellie Layman, F. W. Silberg, Mary J. Silberg, Ira Smith, Flossie Rhoades, of Spencerville; W. H. Farner, and Fugene Wyatt, and Cora Smith, of Auburn; Rev. Mumma, of Harlan; Roscoe Hart, and W. Z. Hathaway, of South Bend; Dell Draggoo, of Concord; Amos Gamble, of Lima, Ohio; Earl Tustison, Hicksville, Ohio; Helen Benninghoff, Fort Wayne; C. J. Lyon, Branch, Michigan; Frank Walker, North Liberty, Indiana. George Walter of St. Joe, is the latest new subscriber.

Church Notes

M. P. Church Notes

9:30 a. m. Sunday School.
10:45 a. m. Preaching Service.
7:30 p. m. Children's Day exercises at Concord.

Christian Church Notes

The Martha Society will meet Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Florence Smith.

The Loyal Sons and Daughters class will hold their regular monthly meeting with Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Maxwell next Sunday. A good attendance is desired.

J. O. Rhodes of Angola, preached Sunday afternoon.

Lutheran Notes

The Children's Day program will be given by the Primary classes at the Lutheran Church next Sunday evening at 7:30. Come and encourage the little ones and have a good time yourself.

Don't forget the prayermeetings on Thursday evening at 7:30. We are now studying the gospel of St. John. The next time we will begin the sixteenth chapter. This is the best and most important service of all. Be sure and come.

You missed something worth while if you did not see the girls of Miss Armstrong's class last Sunday morning open the Sunday School. Every part was good and well done. Be sure and come. The lessons are very interesting this quarter.

S. D. Steffey, Pastor.

R. B. Daily of Hamilton, was a St. Joe visitor Saturday.

Items of Interest

LaFayette:—A 422 acre farm north of West LaFayette has been purchased for the use of the Purdue University experiment station. The land is of the best in Tippecanoe county and will offer big advantages to the state.

Indianapolis:—The State Fair will soon have one of the most beautiful and practical swine barns in the country. Contract for the new structure was awarded recently and work is well under way. The building when completed will approximate $200,000 and will provide ample room for the large exhibit which will be made.

Kendallville:— Merle Eichman, aged 21, son of Albert Eichman, and a deserter of the U. S. Army, for which crime he has served a term in the state penitentiary, is now giving officers of Indiana, Ohio and Michigan a merry chase. He is now charged with having forged checks to the amount of $412.

Auburn:—A six weeks summer school for children who are back in their studies started Monday, June 11, at the McIntosh school building The expense of which will be borne by the parents. Classes in home economics are being held every afternoon and are open to everyone. The expense of these classes is borne by the State Board of Education and the only expense to the individual is the cost of material.

Indianapolis: — There are 817,788 persons of school age in Indiana this year compared with 772,471 last year. The enrollment shows Indianapolis as having 67,889 persons of school age; Evansville 23,083; South Bend 22,136 and Fort Wayne 21,649. These four cities have the highest enrollment. The three highest in enrollment will have representatives on the State Board of Education. Fort Wayne held third place previous to the recent enumeration when it gave way to South Bend.

Big Potluck Dinner

A pot luck dinner was served at the home of Mr and Mrs. Martin Hull, Sunday, in honor of Joe Ervin of Norton, Kansas and O. B. Draggoo who will return home with him in a few days, they will motor via Pikes Peak, Ocean to Ocean Highway from Indianapolis.

The following fity-two guests were present: George Bartlett, wife and daughter of Ft. Wayne, Frank Draggoo and wife, Artus Coyle and family, Milton Carper and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Brown, Frank Brown, wife and daughter and Kent Provines and family of Auburn, James Ervin and daughter, Mrs. Ada Messenger, Dell Draggoo and family, Earnest Johnson, wife and daughter and Lloyd Draggoo and family of Concord, Walter Mutsfeld and wife and George Kellar and wife of Butler, Edward Hull of Findlay, Ohio, John Shutt and R. E. Palmer of Spencerville.

Home Economic Program

The Concord Township Home Economic club will meet Friday, June 15, at 1:30 P. M. at the home of Mrs. Simone Smith. The following program will be carried out with Mrs. Rose Widney, leader:

Response Garden Hints.
Cold Pack Canning Leader
Vocal Solo Alice Tustison
Artificial Flower Domonstration Diadem Bone
Reading Pluma Hamilton
Music Ladies Quartette
Entertainment, Simone Smith and Beulah Coburn.

39 Years Ago

Wilson Lawhead is the daddy of a boy.

David Murray of Newville was in town last week.

Ves Wise has moved his family up to St. Joe and occupies the Walker house.

William Seely, trustee of Newville township was on our streets one day last week.

The new iron bridge over Bear Creek at this place has arrived, and will be put into position in a few days.

There was a remarkable sudden change in the weather last Monday afternoon. One minute people were wiping the sweat off of their brows and the next minute they were hunting a hot stove.

Two young men from Hicksville have rented the bakery of Mart Tustison and will supply the citizens of St. Joe with fresh bread, pies, cakes, etc. Give them your patronage.

Alex. Filley has made a prescription case for W. C Patterson which is hard to beat in point of design and beauty of finish. Alex. is a first class workman and when he undertakes to do anything he does it right.

Mrs. Mort Milliman presented us with some of the largest strawberries this week, that we have ever seen. They wasn't quite as big as a tea cup, but they were "whoppers," I tell you.

St. Joe Garage
Boost St. Joe

The Good MAXWELL

Have you noticed that you hear only words of administration for the MAXWELL? Everybody, even our competitors, says "The Maxwell is Certainly a Great Car."

Tires Tubes
Boots Patches

If in trouble call us. We will get to you in a very few minutes.

Service all the time

Phone No. 36 Days No. 76 Nights

LIVING ROOM SUITE

Overstuffed
In Two Tone Velour
and Tapestry

A 3-PIECE SUITE
$215.00

See our latest
STAND LAMPS
in all colors

E. R. KINSEY

Hardware Furniture Undertaking

JUNE

L 912

632

Matrimonial Adventures

One Man's Meat

BY

Dorothy Canfield

Author of "The Brimming Cup," "The Squirrel Cage," "The Bent Twig," "The Day of Glory," "A Montessori Mother," "Mothers and Children," etc.

Copyright by United Feature Syndicate

SOMETHING ABOUT DOROTHY CANFIELD

Dorothy Canfield has so many successes to her credit and is so versatile a person that one despairs of chronicling even a small part of her achievements. When little more than a girl she had won two degrees, a Ph.B. and a Ph.D., and it was not many years after that that she became famous as an author.

Her books are the type that live. To speak of one of her latest big successes, "The Brimming Cup," calls up mention of her earlier work and starts discussion of "The Bent Twig" or "The Squirrel Cage," or away from her novels to her books on the Montessori method.

When war came, Mrs. Fisher (she is Mrs. Fisher in private life) went to France with her husband and two children—where she did big and important work. But all the time she was working abroad she was writing, too, stories that appeared in our leading magazines, and books that were published upon her return.

MARY STEWART CUTTING, JR.

The first time I ever heard the threadbare saying about a square peg in a round hole, was when my father used it in an attempt to excuse Aunt Emily. Up to that time I had never heard anyone say anything of her except that she was a detestable woman with the most infernal capacity for being perfectly wretched herself and making everybody else so. What a home she made for poor mild Uncle Charlie, and for their three nervous, scrawny, rabbit-faced children!

You are not to think she neglected her home or her children. Indeed no! She house-kept with a fanatical competence and expended on the up-bringing of her children an extravagant energy which filled the house to its remotest corner, as a sawmill is filled by the strident energy of the saw. Never were three children so brought up as my poor little cousins. Aunt Emily was determined that she should do her whole duty by them, that they should be perfect, and do everything exactly right. Of course she knew much better than they what was right, and hence had never an instant of repose from her labor of pushing and shoving them into the way they should go.

Oh, how we hated to be sent on an errand to Aunt Emily's house. I spare you the description of what a meal at Aunt Emily's table was, with Aunt Emily teaching the children table manners. There are plenty of intolerable things in real life, without dragging into a story what happened when Uncle Charles spilled gravy on a clean tablecloth.

You notice, perhaps, that I say, "at Aunt Emily's table," and not "at Uncle Charles'"; and that sets me at another angle of their home life; what that home life meant to Aunt Emily's husband. He was what is known in America as a man "with no head for business," and yet there had never been anything but business in his life. He had been a handsome, dreamy-eyed, musical-minded young accountant in Emery's Emporium when Aunt Emily, very young herself, had married him; married him, apparently for the same reason that he was in business, because there seemed to be nothing else to do. But Uncle Charles was no money-maker, and imprisoned in a grinding round of petty economies and unescapable shabbiness, how Aunt Emily ate her heart out, and what a life Uncle Charles led! But not even Aunt Emily's terrible energy could put into her husband's gentle, artistic, uncommercial soul, a single gust of the stormy ambition which blew like a tornado in her harried heart. Uncle Charles hated all business desperately, and found the only pleasure in his life in his children.

My mother always said that those three Burton children would certainly just have wasted away, if it had not been for their father at this time. He had as great a gift for calming and cheering them as their mother had for damping the very life out of them. Whenever Aunt Emily was away from home for a few hours, and Uncle Charles was there with the children, what a good time they had in those short hours of respite, Uncle Charles in an easy chair, the children piled on top of him, his arms around them tight, while they had what they called a "visit." This meant a chatter of little voices, birdlike and free, which Aunt Emily had never heard in her life. Or perhaps they'd all sing together, for they had inherited Uncle Charles' gift for music.

If he had only had time he would have given piano lessons to all the children. But, dear me, he had no time except for that account keeping, and they had no money to pay a professional music teacher. Uncle Charles always looked ten years younger after such a visit with his children, whereas a rainy morning spent with the children in the house always made Aunt Emily look a thousand years old, "they wore on her so," they upset so the perfect order of her wonderfully kept house. And yet they did their best not to wear on her, by keeping away from her as much as possible. They never went home from school until it was actually suppertime, and always played in our yard, not their own.

The result was that Aunt Emily was left quite to herself in a Sahara desert of lonely housekeeping and desperate economies with the poor pittance which was all that Uncle Charles could earn. Her thin face grew grim and dark, as she mended and patched and turned and dyed and performed miracles on tough necks of mutton and cheap curtain materials. All of it she did with superlative skill but burning and raging inwardly (and many times not so very inwardly) against the necessity of doing it at all, and crying out bitterly with many fits of hysterical tears that she was killing herself for her family, and nobody gave her a bit of credit for it.

Oh, yes, everybody dodged when Aunt Emily hove in view, father as much as the rest, in spite of all his extenuations. Whenever we did have to go there, on unavoidable errands, we children would stand in the doorway, and assure her volubly that we couldn't come in, because our feet were muddy. This brought about the desired result of being told severely to hurry along then, and not get the whole house cold, with that door standing open.

Then came the climax in their misfortunes, as if they were not already sufficiently singled out for misery. Uncle Charles fell on the stairs, and hurt himself terribly, threw several vertebrae out of position, I believe, so that he lay almost wholly paralyzed from the waist down. And not a penny of savings to pay the doctor, not even for the grocer's bill at the end of the month. It was disaster, absolute black, irreparable disaster. Aunt Emily was stunned into silence, a dreadful gray silence, as of some one whose grudge against fate is rising to mania. I remember hearing father say to mother, after he came back from his turn at spending a night of care for Uncle Charles, "I'm afraid of the woman, I positively am. She looks as though she'd go mad." "Well, it's not out of sympathy for her poor husband, that's sure," mother answered acidly.

What do you suppose was the result of that terrific accumulation of emotion in Aunt Emily? What was the momentous, tremendous decision to reach which, in 1885, it was necessary for her to rise to that pitch of frenzy? Why nothing more nor less than this . . . and in those days it was a decision both momentous and tremendous for any married woman with children . . . she put on her bonnet, yes, bonnet, it was in the last days of bonnets, when only young girls wore hats . . . and marched down town to ask for work in Emery's Emporium.

She got it, of course. Even if it had not been Aunt Emily, the humane head of the firm would have felt under some obligation to the wife of a faithful employee of such long standing. And in addition to this, it was Aunt Emily . . . of course she got what she went after.

She was put . . . well, I don't know that I ever heard just in what small corner she was put at first, as an experiment; something easy and simple to suit her supposed inexperience of business and her supposed feminine incapacity for it. The life at home was organized somehow, anyhow, as best they could with different cousins taking turns to go in and help out with the work. Uncle Charles did not suffer any pain, and was quite himself as far as his head was concerned, his body like a log in the bed, but his eyes bright, his fine sensitive face pale, but calm and philosophic as always. He was quite able to direct the children as they dressed and undressed themselves and studied their lessons and learned to do the housework.

As Uncle Charles got better so that he could sit up in bed, things ran more smoothly. His bed was moved down to a corner of the dining room, where he could look into the kitchen. He could work with his hands now, which he had always loved to do, and they were never still from morning till night. My father gave him a wheeled tray which was always piled with work, done or to be done. He did all the mending and darning and he and Phoebe did the cooking and the kitchen work together. The children all brought their school books to their father's bedside, and "did" their lessons there, to a running accompaniment of such sympathetic, helpful comments from him, as they'd never known before. By mid-winter of that year, Uncle Charles was well enough to sit in a wheeled chair, which Aunt Emily bought out of the first raise in her salary, and presented proudly to him on Christmas day. After this, he was all over the house at once, active and cheerful.

He always sat beside Phoebe, as she practiced her music lesson, to listen, to play the bass in a simple duet, and to teach. My mother says she never saw a child get forward with her music as Phoebe did, after her father began to teach her. In no time she was playing the accompaniment for his light, clear baritone, and then the little house rang with music like a shell with the murmur of the sea. We all used to love to go there, as soon as school was over to "have a concert." Sometimes they sang Scotch airs . . . the tears we have shed over "Loch Lomond," the zest for battle poured into us by "Scots wha' hae"; or it might be Irish, . . . how we have laughed over "Father O'Flynn," and yelled out the chorus of the "Cruiskeen Bawn"; . . . or negro. There never was anybody who could sing "spirituals" like Uncle Charles. Oh, they were great concerts, we'll never forget.

And what was Aunt Emily doing all this time? You know as well as I do what Aunt Emily was doing. She was rising like a rocket through every plane of the management of Emery's Emporium. She was passionately interested in her work, because she could use it to serve her ambition; and because she was passionately interested in it, she mastered it, and owned it, and put it in her pocket. Everybody in that line of business in that part of the country soon knew her; she was hail-fellow-well-met with all the traveling men, who liked her bluff manners and sharp tongue, feared her piercing eye, and respected her capacity always to get the better of them.

She was detested but admirably served by the staff of the store, who were bewildered by her really inhuman capacity for endless exactitude of detail, angry at the everlasting high tension of her demands, but placated by the growing fame of the store and by her instant recognition of business ability in a subordinate. "Business ability!" How Aunt Emily adored it! What a starved, wolflike appetite she had for all that it stood for. How intensely she lived in her new life!

Before long she had developed a new line, advertising (this was before the modern science of advertising was dreamed of) and while I dare say it would be an exaggeration to claim that she was the first to expand the present principles of psychological advertising, I know a good many people who think she came very near doing so. Merchants from other cities came to see her window displays, and talked with her about advertising. Aunt Emily, who never did anything for nothing, soon saw that she had a marketable product there, and proceeded to put it on the market. She organized what I'm sure was the first advertising agency, and ran it in odd moments of her busy days.

She was up and off to work early, reading the morning paper as she ate breakfast, which Uncle Charles had seen to. Then they saw her no more till night, when she came home walking strongly in the door, looking very distinguished and chic in the beautifully cut tailor suits of the best material that money could buy . . . I am speaking now, of course, of the times after that difficult beginning. That period lasted, after all, only till she could get her bearings in the new world. Very soon, she was earning more money than Uncle Charles had ever dreamed of making. By the time Uncle Charles was around on crutches, there was a good competent girl in the kitchen. This left Uncle Charles more time and strength to give to the children, more leisure to perfect his own music, and more energy to plan the thousand ingenious variations, on the theme of domestic life which made their home the most delightful one to visit in, you can imagine.

Aunt Emily fitted in it all very comfortably. She was always agreeably tired by night, and relieved of her surplus energy, she was astonishingly good-natured and easy to get along with. There was plenty of money these days, for competent help, which Uncle Charles managed smoothly; there was plenty of money for good clothes, and good food, and nice china, and pretty glassware, and fine linen, all of which Aunt Emily enjoyed with a hungry pleasure which was never blunted by ceaseless repetition. She was happy for the first time in her life, Aunt Emily was, and although she was by this time, middle-aged and gray-haired, she was handsomer than she had ever been in youth. She grew and grew in acumen and business ability, and ripened with experience, till our small city was not big enough for her. She soared off to New York, carrying the family with her to an expensive apartment, and from there to Paris, where they lived for many years, Aunt Emily being the Paris representative of a great New York department store.

To the day of his death Uncle Charles always kept the children close to his heart, and directed their growth just as lovingly and wisely as ever. Phoebe is a professional pianist now, well known all over America and Europe. For years she was usually companioned by her father, crutches and all. Charlie is a successful architect, with a lovely French wife and two babies. It was beautiful to see Uncle Charles with his grandchildren! Bobby would certainly have gone straight to the dogs, if he had not had the most inspired handling at his father's hands. He was a wild, temperamental, unreasonable, warm-hearted, hot-tempered boy, who could not get on an instant with his mother. But Uncle Charles held to him through everything, made a man of him at last, for he is a noted field worker for the New York Natural History museum.

This story sounds as though it were petering out, doesn't it, and as though this was about all there was to it? But there is something else, something I never told anyone but father. It was the great shadow secret of my childhood, something father and I knew, and nobody else. But now that Uncle Charles and Aunt Emily are gone, I can tell it.

This is what happened: When I was nine years old (about three years after Uncle Charles' accident) I chanced to stay at their house over night. I had a bad dream, out of which I woke up with a start, and unable to get to sleep afterward, I got out of bed and wandered to the window to look out into the moonlight. And, there in front of the house, walking round the garden paths, what do you suppose I saw? You will never guess. I saw my Uncle Charles, walking nimbly and briskly without his crutches.

I went home the next morning in a maze of bewilderment, and climbed up to my father's attic study. Speaking all in an excited hurry, I told him what I had seen. His first expression was one of utter amazement, "Your Uncle Charles walking without his crutches!"

And he fell into a long, thoughtful brooding silence, looking over my head, and not listening to my rush of exclamations. Finally he glanced down at me, with a strange, anxious look and with a voice of deep earnestness, such as I have never heard addressed to me before, as though something of terrible importance depended upon me, upon me!

"See here my darling," he said urgently, "you must never, never, never tell anybody else what you have seen. Promise me you will never speak of it again, not even to me. Just put it right out of your mind, as if you had not seen it. Lift your hand and promise."

As soon as I could recover from my awe at the solemnity of his look, I lifted my hand and promised, and a silence fell between us.

Then I said, "Father, please, I want to ask just one thing. If Uncle Charles doesn't need his crutches . . ." But I got no further.

"Doesn't need his crutches . . . what are you talking about?" exclaimed my father. "He needs his crutches! What in the world makes you think he doesn't need his crutches? He couldn't get along a minute without them."

I stared at him, beside myself with astonishment. My father went on: "They are his only defense against the Inquisition."

"The Inquisition," I faltered, "Westward Ho" in my mind, "We haven't any Inquisition in America."

"Oh, yes, we have," said my father.

I struggled up through the overwhelming flood of my bewilderment, till I could get breath enough to speak, and protested, "But father, the only inquisition I ever heard of is . . . you know, that thing that tortures people because they don't conform to the religion of the particular country they're in."

"Well, that is the kind we have in America, all right," said my father, "and if it weren't for your Uncle Charles' crutches, it would seize right on him and torture all his family, including Aunt Emily."

"I don't understand a word of what you're saying," I cried out desperately.

"Well, maybe you will, sometime," answered my father.

ESSENTIAL TO MAKE CHOICE

Excellent Advice Which Young Mother Will Do Well to Give Deep Consideration.

Take the case of any young mother who has two or more children, no nurse and no maid. Life feels like a fight. There are certain things in that mother's life that have to be slighted. It mustn't be her children. It mustn't be her husband. And it mustn't be her charm.

What then?

Her house; her social duties. Put away all the knickknacks. You can have more elaborate beauty when your children are older. Have simplicity now. Have your house bare as possible and get your beauty in harmonious colors. Have one room where the children's toys can be dumped, and then have enough control not to think about the disorder of that room. Back of all the clutteredness in this world there is a law of order. Back of the messiness of that room is a bigger law of order than the mere orderliness of a room—it is the orderliness of a mind that has decided to keep its charm, its beauty, its strength, so that there will be a personality as the mother of that family instead of just a driven, patient, sweet woman. Take the dining room, if you have to, and have a jolly kitchen and eat there or in the living room. If you've got a spare bedroom, take that. Don't be an immaculate housekeeper—be an irresistible human. —From the Delineator.

Divided Skirt Is Old Idea.

No one thinks twice today of seeing a woman in breeches or a divided skirt. This fashion is much older than that of the crinoline, for so long ago as the Thirteenth century women rode astride in divided garments. In 1568, when France was in the throes of a terrible civil war, women again took to divided skirts for greater ease and comfort in riding.

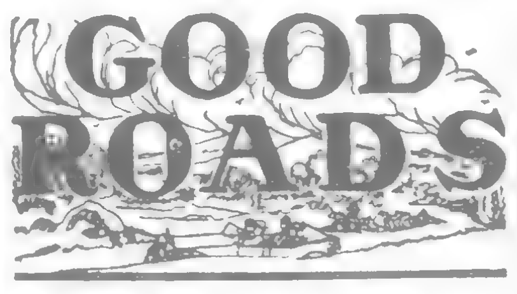
The third great revival of the fashion was in 1850, when an American lady, Mrs. Elisabeth Smith, adopted the much-discussed "bloomer" costume.

Another feminine fashion much older than most suppose is the form of hat called the "toque." This was first worn by ladies of the court of Henry III.

To Make It Permanent.

"Lawd bless muh soul!" exclaimed good old Brother Buckover. "Yo' doesn't tell me, sah, dat Jim Dinger, de gamblin' man, has done fuhsook his nickerties, 'knowledged de urror of his ways, axed to be took into de fellership of de church, and begged de bruddren and sistahs to pray for him dat he never backslide?"

"He sho' did, sah!" replied Brother Gump. "And I advocate dat de deacons take him out and ca'mly and delusively 'sassinate him befo' he slips ag'in into de susspole o' sin."—Kansas City Star.



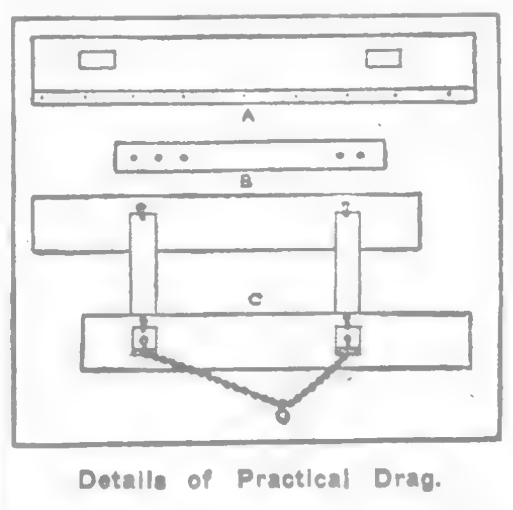
Farmer Can Construct Practical Road Drag

Every farmer should have a road drag. There is no excuse for not having one when it can be had with so little cost. Good road drags may be purchased or made at home.

On almost any farm some old plank can be found. Get two pieces of plank, oak if you can find it; 3 inches thick if it can be had; if not, 2 inches thick will be all right; 8 or 10 inches wide and 6 or 7 feet long. Three-inch plank is best as it is much heavier and will stand more heavy usage. You will also need two pieces of 2 by 5 or 3 by 4 preferably, if it can be had, 3 feet long. Some good tough wood is best.

Make these like illustration B. Bore five one-half inch holes in each as illustrated; one to be about 6 inches from the end, with a second one 3 inches or 2 inches from that inward, according to the thickness of your two large pieces of plank. At the other end bore one hole about 3 to 4 inches from the end, this hole to be used to hold clevis pin for the hitch. Bore another hole 6 inches from this end of the piece, and a third hole 2 or 3 inches inward from the second, according to the thickness of the large pieces of plank used.

In each of the large pieces of plank make two holes as in illustration A, one at each end 2½ inches from top edge of the plank. One hole should be 10 inches from the end, the other 16 inches from the end; make these holes so your two 3-foot pieces will slip into them easily. You will also need eight old bolts, one-half inch in diameter and 6 or 7 inches long, these to go into holes in the 3-foot pieces.



Details of Practical Drag.

Put together as in illustration C, having one plank with long end at one end, and other piece with short end at same end; slip in the 3-foot cross-pieces, drive bolts in front and behind the large piece through all the holes but the two for the clevis, having the end of each cross-piece containing the the three holes toward front. Get two clevises and put in the remaining holes.

It will require about one-half day's time to make this drag, and cost you nothing for material if you can find the plank and old bolts on the farm. But even if you must purchase these it is well worth having if you only need to use it on driveway and lanes. However, there are thousands of miles of roads that would be improved wonderfully if the farmers along those roads spent but a few hours occasionally in pulling a drag over them.

You can give your road drag longer life by nailing a piece of angle iron on the lower front edge of the plank as shown in illustration A. Nail a few boards across the top to stand on while using the drag. These can be nailed on the upright planks, from front to back plank, or can be nailed on the cross-pieces, lengthwise. Either place will be all right. You can then ride on it and help to hold it down when extra weight is needed.

Uniform Sign Is Urged by the Highway Bureau

Standardize danger signs along American roadways. Make them alike from coast to coast.

So urges the bureau of public roads, United States Department of Agriculture. The recommendation is made for the consideration of highway officials, automobile organizations, municipal officials and other persons interested in safe driving.

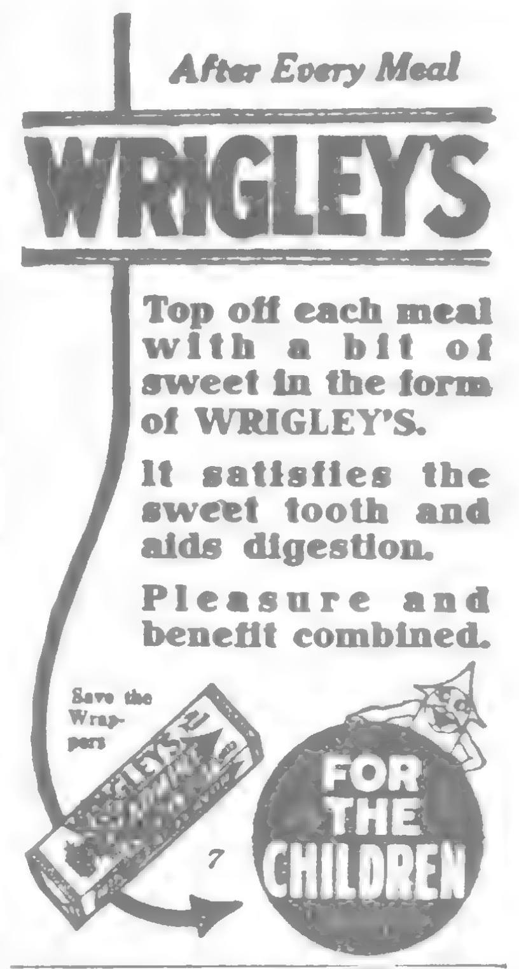
By standardization of all highway danger signs the department believes automobile accidents may be lessened. Deaths from automobile accidents have nearly doubled since 1915, and the rapid increase of such accidents, the department believes, can be appreciably checked by the adoption of standard danger signs, easily read and distinctive, along American highways.

A tourist at the present time will see almost as many kinds of signs as there are states he visits. Also, in some cases, the style of sign changes in going from one county to another.

The subject is under consideration by a committee of the American Association of State Highway Officials.

Delay of Many States in Road Building Seen

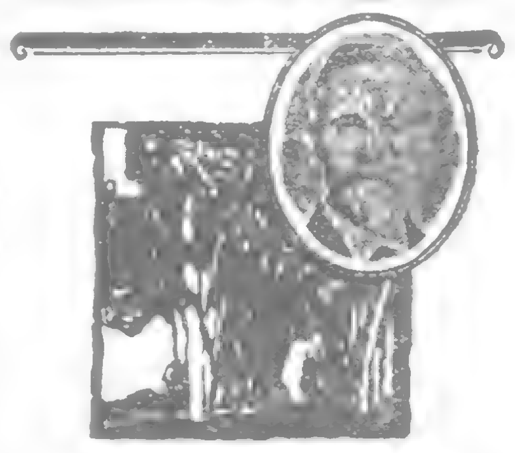
Due to failure on the part of many of the states to develop a road-building program, there is at present a total of $107,192,795 of federal and highway funds in unobligated balances, says the National Motorists' association, in decrying a condition which results from the various states being far in the rear on their highway construction programs. Added to this is another fund of $65,000,000 recently made available.



Top off each meal with a bit of sweet in the form of WRIGLEY'S.

It satisfies the sweet tooth and aids digestion.

Pleasure and benefit combined.



John Davey Needs YOUNG MEN
Who Desire
Interesting Travel
Fascinating Outdoor Work
Fine Associates
Steady Advancement
Immediate Openings

John Davey's organization, the Davey Tree Expert Co., Inc., has immediate openings for a limited number of energetic, ambitious young men, single, between 20 and 30 years of age.

The opportunity is unusual, offering reasonable wages at the start, and provides thoro, scientific training in the profession of Tree Surgery, preparing you for advancement, which is rapid, according to merit.

The work is rugged and fascinating; offers chance to travel extensively and association with fine fellows. Only clean, sturdy, red-blooded young Americans, lovers of the outdoors, will qualify.

Write, or, better yet, use the coupon.

COUPON

The Davey Tree Expert Company,
85 City Bank Bldg.,
Kent, Ohio.

I am interested in your offer. Please send me your illustrated folder and qualification blank.

Name ....

Address ....

....

HAD FORGOTTEN ONE THING

Over-Ambitious Bride Remembered Too Late Where Her Pie-Making Effort Had Been Faulty.

I had invited my husband's people to dinner, and, like a foolish bride, decided to make pies and cakes. The cakes were flat when they came out of the oven, so I set my hopes on the pies. In my excitement I forgot all about shortening, mixed the flour and cold water, adding more flour and flour until the paste was almost hard, and then, believing the peaches inside would make up for the tough dough, I generously filled the pies. They baked nice, looking fine, and I was pleased, but—my guests were not. They nearly choked to death over the crust.

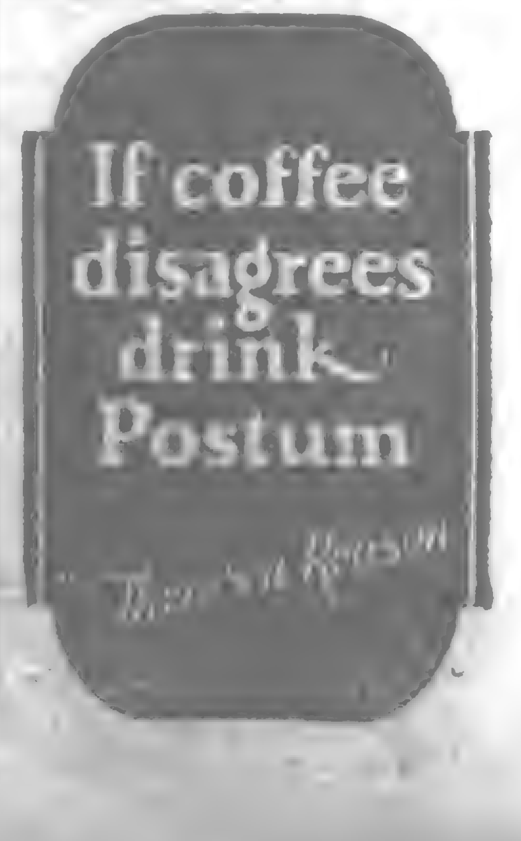
Hot with embarrassment I suddenly remembered I had omitted the shortening, tried to explain, made matters worse, finally fled from the room in tears.—Chicago Tribune.

In a Batch.

Triplets had come to a family in our town, and when Jane was told about it it was explained to her that it meant three babies, she could not contain her delight in the news.

Later in the day she was overheard telling a playmate the news in this manner: "What do you think, Madge, there's a batch of babies come to a house in the next block."—Exchange.

A rake will seem as light as a feather after putting in a hard winter with a snow shovel.—Milwaukee Journal.



If coffee disagrees drink Postum
There's a Reason

JUNE

L 912

Children Cry for

Fletcher's
CASTORIA

MOTHER:– Fletcher's Castoria is especially prepared to relieve Infants from one month old to Children all ages of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and, by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving natural sleep.

To avoid imitations, always look for the signature of Chas H Fletcher

Absolutely Harmless—No Opiates. Physicians everywhere recommend it.

No Tip.

Waiter—"Haven't you forgotten something, sir?" Restaurant Patron—"More than you ever knew."

WHY TAKE LAXATIVES?

Discovery by Science Has Replaced Them.

Pills and salts give temporary relief from constipation only at the expense of permanent injury, says an eminent medical authority.

Science has found a newer, better way—a means as simple as Nature itself.

In perfect health a natural lubricant keeps the food waste soft and moving. But when constipation exists this natural lubricant is not sufficient. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

As Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, it cannot gripe and, like pure water, it is harmless and pleasant.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals. Get a bottle from your druggist today.—Advertisement.

April showers bring May doubleheaders.—Boston Herald.

Ladies Can Wear Shoes

One size smaller and walk in comfort by using Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic, healing powder for the feet. Shaken into the shoes Allen's Foot-Ease makes tight or new shoes feel easy; gives instant relief to corns, bunions and callouses; prevents Blisters, Callous and Sore Spots and gives rest to tired, aching, swollen feet. 1,500,000 pounds of powder for the feet were used by our Army and Navy during the War. Sold everywhere. For Free Sample and a Foot-Ease Walking Doll, address Allen's Foot-Ease, Le Roy, N. Y.

Not Getting Ahead Much.

Judge—Your accomplice refuses to state where he lives. Where do you live?

Accused—Me? Your honor, I lives right across the street from him.

The war has made table linen very valuable. The use of Red Cross Ball Blue will add to its wearing qualities. Use it and see. All grocers.—Advertisement.

He Vamps.

Add Social Perils—Wolves in sheiks' clothing.—Boston Transcript.

Blessed are the innocent, for they have a lot to learn.

5 Pass. Sedan
$860
f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

The All-Year Car for Every Family

for Economical Transportation

CHEVROLET

Chevrolet is leading in the great shift of public demand to closed cars because this company has the world's largest facilities for manufacturing high-grade closed bodies and is therefore able to offer sedans, coupés and sedanettes at prices within easy reach of the average American family.

Six large body plants adjoining Chevrolet assembly plants enable us to make prompt deliveries of the much wanted closed cars.

As soon as you realize that your transportation requirements demand the year 'round, all-weather closed car, see Chevrolet first and learn how fully we can meet your requirements at the lowest cost obtainable in a modern, high-grade closed automobile.

Prices f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

Two-Pass. Roadster	$510	Five-Pass. Sedan	$860
Five-Pass. Touring	525	Light Delivery	510
Two-Pass. Utility Coupe	680	Commercial Chassis	425
Four-Pass. Sedanette	850	Utility Express Truck Chassis	575

Dealers and Service Stations Everywhere

Chevrolet Motor Company
Division of General Motors Corporation
Detroit, Mich.

SAPOLIO
CLEAN SCOUR POLISH with SAPOLIO

Quickly and easily cleans steel knives and forks.

Removes stains, grime and grease. Use it for pots and pans, aluminum and all kitchenware.

Avoid Substitutes, the name
SAPOLIO
is on the package.
Blue Band—Silver Wrapper.

ENOCH MORGAN'S SONS CO.,
Sole Manufacturers
NEW YORK U.S.A.

Hoosier News Briefly Told

Washington.—The city council, in a special meeting, awarded to the Premier Construction company of Vincennes, the contract for the construction of 65 blocks of asphalt street paveing in Washington. Their bid was $2.70 a square yard. The P. L. Beard Construction company received the contract for the construction of eight blocks of brick pavement on a bid of $3.60 a square yard. The latter firm also received the contract for all curb and gutters on a bid of 78 cents a lineal foot.

Peru.—Bessie J. Barnhart was granted a divorce from Omer C. Barnhart, and her former name of Bessie J. Francis was restored to her. Prior to her marriage to Barnhart she lived in Indianapolis. When her suit for legal separation was first instituted she sought alimony in the sum of $35,000, asserting that Barnhart was wealthy and had promised her all sorts of luxuries which he had failed to make good. No alimony was mentioned in the decree of the court when the divorce was granted.

Salem.—As a result of an active campaign that has been made in Washington county by members of the staff of the Indiana state board of health for the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis, widespread interest has been aroused and money has been subscribed for the erection of a portable building for the care of tuberculosis patients. The campaign has been in charge of Dr. H. W. McKane, director of the tuberculosis division of the state board of health.

Marion.—Dr. Ira Howerth of the University of Colorado, one of the leading sociologists of the country, and Dr. M. V. O'Shea, dean of the school of education of the University of Wisconsin, are among the educators obtained for the annual institute of Grant county teachers to be held in Marion the week of August 27. Dr. Robert J. Aley, president of Butler college, also has been secured, and two other speakers of national reputation will be added to the list.

Laporte.—Bonds valued at $2,000 were found lying in the road south of Laporte by travelers on the way from Indianapolis to Michigan City, who turned them over to the First National bank to be returned to the owner. The bonds were in a traveling bag which was lying open in the road.

Hartford City.—A shelter house, composed of a dressing room and a shower bathroom, is being erected by the Tennis club here. The club has two new courts, which will be opened within a few days. The club plans to issue a challenge soon to teams in this part of the state.

Shelbyville.—Frank Cowin is held in the Shelby county jail on a charge of assault and battery with intent to commit murder. The charge was filed by his wife, Mrs. Nora Cowin. She alleges that Cowin struck her two sons by a former marriage with a piece of iron bar.

Brazil.—Pete Willoughby, fifty-seven, a resident of Brazil for many years, hanged himself in the attic of his home in South Lambert street. The body was found by a member of his family. He had used a chain which had been part of a hanging lamp.

Terre Haute.—Henry Frazier, fifty-five, farmer and stock raiser, was crushed to death in his cornfield near Terre Haute, when a tractor became mired in the mud and reared up in front, the machine toppling over backwards on him.

Evansville.—J. S. Johnson, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, has accepted an invitation to address the annual convention of the Indiana Chamber of Commerce Secretaries' association, to be held at French Lick June 29 and 30.

Fort Wayne.—John Morton, charged with driving an automobile while intoxicated, was fined $100 and sentenced to three months on the state penal farm, when found guilty by Judge D. B. Douglas in the Fort Wayne city court.

Shelbyville.—Through gifts made by graduating classes, the Shelbyville high school has an endowment fund of more than $2,000, which is used to assist graduates of the local high school in obtaining a college education.

Logansport.—Nine road contracts, representing an expenditure estimated at $164,829, are to be let by the board of county commissioners at its June session. All roads are to be constructed of gravel.

Newport.—The Vermilion county courthouse was burned with a loss estimated at $150,000, with $30,000 insurance. The building was set on fire by a bolt of lightning.

Hartford City.—A large barn on the farm of John Beath, south of this city, burned when struck by lightning. The loss was $2,000.

Marion.—Horace Coats, former Indianapolis newspaper man, but lately of Chicago, has been named secretary of the Marion retail credit bureau.

Shelbyville.—Motion pictures, which have been shown in every community of Shelby county during the summer for two years, will again be shown this summer under the direction of the Shelby County Farm bureau. The shows are held in the open, and are witnessed by large crowds.

Indianapolis.—Governor McCray at Indianapolis appointed O. W. Smith of Martinsville as field inheritance tax investigator for the state board of tax commissioners, succeeding Schuyler C. Mowrer. Mr. Mowrer will become a member of the office force of the board.

Delphi.—Officers for the Carroll County Sunday School union were elected at the county convention as follows: President, Dr. E. D. Wagoner, Burrows; first vice president, John Robyler, Flora; second vice president, W. H. Casad, Monticello; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Ruth Tidrick, Bringhurst; superintendent children's division, Mrs. Paul R. Quick, Delphi; superintendent young people, Mrs. Fred Miller, Rockfield; adult superintendent, J. W. Elkenberry, Bringhurst; administration division, Irvin Brim, Flora, and education division, Dr. E. H Brubaker, Flora.

Terre Haute.—United States deputy marshals were in Terre Haute putting the final court order seal on Ft. Hayden, reputed liquor dispensary, that was operated by Dennis Shea and Joseph O'Mara. While in the city the marshals also took action on the court orders for destroying liquor seized at Ft. Hayden and at the place operated by Roy Dyous. Approximately 50 barrels of beer, a quantity of "moonshine" whisky and some bonded whisky was poured into the sewer at the federal building.

Richmond.—A baby clinic is being conducted here June 7 to 16, in which physicians and nurses from the state board of health and local physicians and dentists make examinations of children. After the children have been submitted to a preliminary examination, field workers of the state board give them development tests, including those for vision and hearing. Mothers are then advised of proper methods to correct defects. Clinics also are being conducted in the small towns and rural districts of the county.

Indianapolis.—A suit to mandate the state board of tax commissioners to approve and authorize the issuance of $73,000 worth of bonds by Franklin county to pay for the construction of a $69,990 concrete bridge over White river, at Laurel, was filed in the Marion Circuit court by William D. Moore, Jacob Klein and A. W. Waechter, Franklin county commissioners.

Terre Haute.—William M. Myers, general manager of the Highland Iron and Steel company, was elected president of the chamber of commerce at a meeting of the board of directors. Mr. Myers succeeds Paul N. Bogart. Other officers elected were Robert Nitsche, treasurer, and Sam McClary, secretary.

Columbus.—Wireworm is doing much damage in the eastern part of Bartholomew county. Thomas McFerron, a farmer, reported to S. R. Miles, county agricultural agent, that he had planted a 22-acre field twice and had failed to get a single stand of corn because of the worm.

Evansville.—Grand Master's day was celebrated here by nearly 5,000 Odd Fellows, who came from all parts of Indiana and northern Kentucky to pay their respects to Herdis F. Clements of Mount Vernon, who is the newly-installed grand master of the order in the state.

Wawaka.—Burglars, who ransacked the farm residence of Jacob Ramer, near Wawaka, passed up registered Liberty bonds valued at $1,000 and appropriated a revolver, a watch, a silver pencil and a foutnain pen. The robbers gained entrance to the house by breaking a window.

Indianapolis.—A $75,000,000 increase in the total Indiana tax appraisement is predicted by John J. Brown, chairman of the state board of tax commissioners at Indianapolis. The 1922 total is slightly more than $5,225,000,000.

Anderson.—Myron Miller a local horticulturist says that there will be only half a crop of peaches, that pears and plums will be good, that grapes will be reduced and that raspberries and blackberries will be plentiful in Madison county, despite frost damages.

Muncie.—Four motortrucks were burned in a fire which is thought to have originated in a short circuit in the wiring of an automobile in a garage at the home of G. W. Rowlett. The loss is $5,000.

Hartford City.—Contracts for three roads were awarded by the Blackford county board of commissioners in special session, as follows: C. L. Smith road, $44,787.57; Brown road, $14,975, and Dick road, $12,233.75.

Franklin.—Memorial services for Wadsworth Post, Grand Army of the Republic were held in the First Baptist church. Dr. F. H. Hodge, of Purdue university, spoke. The post has a membership of 28.

Salem.—Fred E. Hines, of Noblesville, great senior sagamore of the Great Council of Indiana, Improved Order of Red Men, made the memorial address at the services of the order at Salem.

Jasonville.—The Baptist congregation of Jasonville is advertising for bids for the construction of a new church, the outside dimensions of which will be 46 by 70 feet.

Anderson.—The Anderson Trust company was appointed receiver for the Love Coal company of Anderson. The principal item of assets, it was said, is coal on hand valued at $10,000.

English.—The Marengo Concert band, with 16 members, has been organized at Marengo. Guy Stewart is president of the organization and Irvin Oster is the leader.

Marion.—Ralph Gaylor, grand chancellor of the Knights of Pythias, was present at a district meeting of the Knights of Pythias at Fairmount. Lodges of Alexandria, Warren, Roll, Peru, Logansport, Vanburen, Swayzee, Jonesboro, Gas City, Wabash and Lafontaine were represented. Fifty candidates received the rank of page.

Bloomington.—Indiana university, it is reported, will send thirty-four cadets and five members of the military staff of the R. O. T. C. unit to the summer military camp at Camp Knox, Ky.

MRS. RUSSELL IS OUT WITH FACTS

Declares Tanlac Ended Nervous, Run-Down Condition, and Restored Perfect Health.

Here is another instance where gratitude to Tanlac will not be denied its natural expression in words of praise. Mrs. N. J. Russell, highly esteemed resident of 3150 Kenwood Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., recently said:

"I feel so indebted to Tanlac that I never miss a chance to praise it. When I began taking the medicine I was nervous, weak and underweight. My appetite was so poor I couldn't enjoy a thing, and what I did manage to eat made me feel so bad afterwards that I often regretted having eaten at all. I had terrible headaches, my sleep was restless, and I felt sick in so many ways I just didn't know what was the matter with me.

"But the Tanlac treatment has brought me back to health and happiness, and I just feel fine all the time. I keep Tanlac in the house regularly now as our family medicine."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Take no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

Tanlac Vegetable Pills are nature's own remedy for constipation. Sold everywhere.—Advertisement.

Indorse.

The children were required to use ten words in sentences as part of their home work in spelling. "Indorse" was one of the words. On one paper appeared the following sentence: "As the weather is stormy, we will have to stay indorse this winter."

Important to All Women Readers of This Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and maybe despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by parcel post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Partners.

Economic Professor—What is partnership?

Student—A firm consisting of at least three parties—a senior partner, a junior partner and the government.—American Mutual Magazine.

The Cuticura Toilet Trio.

Having cleared your skin keep it clear by making Cuticura your everyday toilet preparations. The Soap to cleanse and purify, the Ointment to soothe and heal, the Talcum to powder and perfume. No toilet table is complete without them.—Advertisement.

Would Like to Catch It.

"Bryan says that wealth is a disease." "That so? I wish it was contagious."

After a girl has been in love three or four times she ceases to regard it as a serious matter.

Safe instant relief from CORNS

One minute—and the pain of that corn ends! That's what Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads do—safely. They remove the cause—friction-pressure, and heal the irritation. Thus you avoid infection from cutting your corns or using corrosive acids. Thin; antiseptic; waterproof. Sizes for corns, callouses, bunions. Get a box today at your druggist's or shoe dealer's.

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

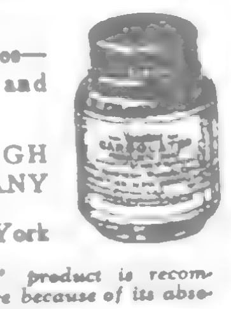
Made in the laboratories of The Scholl Mfg. Co., makers of Dr. Scholl's Foot Comfort Appliances, Arch Supports, etc.

Put one on—the pain is gone!

Vaseline
Reg U.S. Pat. Off.
CARBOLATED
PETROLEUM JELLY

No skin break too small for notice.

Be very wary of cuts, scratches and skin abrasions, no matter how slight. "Vaseline" Carbolated Petroleum Jelly—applied at once—lessens the possibility of infection.

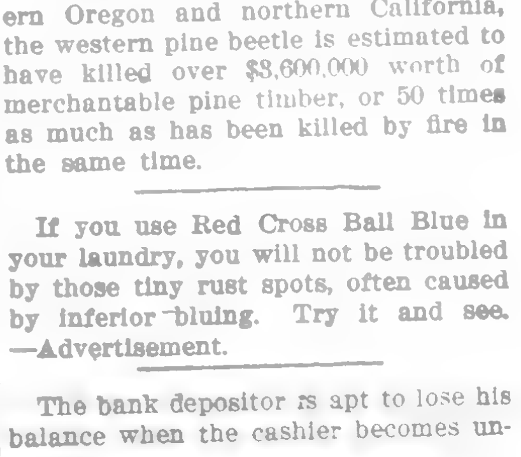


It comes in bottles—at all druggists and general stores.

CHESEBROUGH
MFG. COMPANY
(Consolidated)
State St. New York

Every "Vaseline" product is recommended everywhere because of its absolute purity and effectiveness.

Better Than Pills—For Liver Ills



NR Tonight—Tomorrow Alright

FOR SALE OR TRADE FOR FARM

One-half interest in 232 acres in fee; 16 third sand wells, which could be drilled to the queen sand, 3 gas engines, 2 power gas pump, timber, etc., located in the new queen sand pool at Tidioute, Pa.; the adjoining lease has good wells on it.

S. Y. RAMAGE, JR.
212 Central Ave. Oil City, Pa.

W. N. U., FORT WAYNE, NO. 24—1923.

Ravages of the Pine Beetle.

During the last ten years in southern Oregon and northern California, the western pine beetle is estimated to have killed over $3,600,000 worth of merchantable pine timber, or 50 times as much as has been killed by fire in the same time.

If you use Red Cross Ball Blue in your laundry, you will not be troubled by those tiny rust spots, often caused by inferior bluing. Try it and see.—Advertisement.

The bank depositor is apt to lose his balance when the cashier becomes unsteady.

For a light, sweet dough set your sponge tonight with Yeast Foam

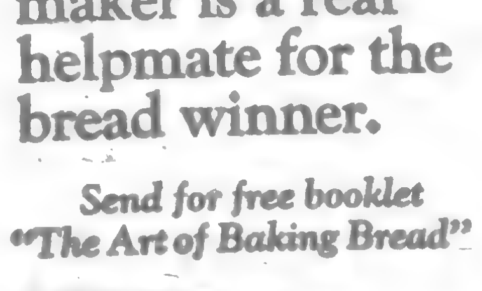
"Good bread is the pride of the thrifty bride"

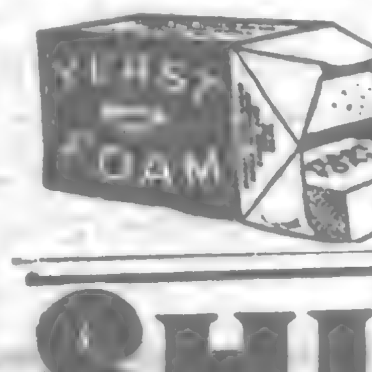
The wife who is a good bread maker is a real helpmate for the bread winner.

Send for free booklet "The Art of Baking Bread"



Northwestern Yeast Co.
1730 North Ashland Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

SHINOLA
AMERICA'S HOME SHOE POLISH
Black - Tan - White - Ox-Blood - Brown



SHINOLA and the Shinola Home Set should be in every home. Every member of the family can use it for it gives the quick easy shine. The shine that preserves leather and resists weather. SHINOLA in the handy quick opening box with the key.

It's easy to shine with the Home Set. "The Shine for Mine"

JUNE

L 912

The St. Joe News

William S. Quance,
Editor and Publisher.

One Year,	$1.50
Six Months,	.75
Three Months,	.40
One Month,	.15
Single Copy,	.05

(Advertising Rates on Application)

Entered at the postoffice at St. Joe, Indiana, as second class matter.

Foreign Advertising Representative
THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

HOW MUCH IS THE BAND WORTH TO YOU?

What kind of a band would our band be
If every citizen were just like me?
If you stop to think of this point real soon,
Your bound to give the band a boom.

As for business 'twould be nothing on Saturday night
And our town would be a lonesome sight.
If it weren't for the music in the air
We'd find the stores a little bare.

And as for the friends we see right then—
Sometimes we see even more than ten,
That we thought were surely dead or lost
And we wouldn't lose at any cost.

But of more concern are the boys who play
Who will be your citizens some near day;
They show an intent to make the town grow
Whether the town will or whether no.

For the sake of business, band boys and friends,
Let us try a little to make amends
For the lack of support the last year or so,
By giving a dollar to make our band go.

—‡—‡—‡—

A BLESSING IN DISGUISE

Governor Smith's approval of the repeal of the Mullen-Gage prohibition enforcement law in New York is not the calamity many may think it to be. To our mind it will prove to be a blessing in disguise. Since the passage of the 18th amendment altogether too many friends of prohibition have been wont to think the victory won and the war on rum ended. This act of Gevernor Smith will serve to shock these people into a realisation of the fact that the real fight has only begun. When the friends of prohibition in the country put on their armor and go forth to battle there can be no room for doubt as to what will be the issue. Governor Smith's act in approving the repeal is going to rekindle again the fires of enthusiasm and consecration that placed the 18th amendment in the constitution.

It is a notorious fact that the enforcement of the prohibition laws has been lax. Its enforcement has been attended with unlimited corruption of enforcement officials. The strictures of Governor Smith on this phase of the question cannot do otherwise than sting into the renewed determination the national authorities responsible for enforcement of the law. Instead of the New York repeal sounding the knell of prohibition, it will prove simply the toscin of war calling to arms its friends. The American people are too patriotic and too intelligent, having set their face for so beneficient a condition of things as that produced by prohibition, ever to turn back to the wastefulness, pauperism and crime that flow from the intoxicating cup.

—‡—‡—‡—

COMMUNITY SPIRIT

Life to each of us consists mainly of what we make of it. We can cast the soft rays of sunshine and happiness over our existence, or we can fill our lives with the shadows of greed and avarice, and insatiable longing for those things which we may not possess.

St. Joe is our home—the place where most of our lives will be spent—where memory is dear to us.

Shall we seek to cast out what there is of spirit of greed and suspicion, and ungenerous rivalry among men?

Shall we supplant it with one of kindness, of tolerance, and of good will toward each other?

Shall we make honorable thrift the watchword of our community?

It is the ideal existence, and is possible to any community where the people have the will and the courage to follow the path of honor and gentleness wherever it may lead.

—‡—‡—‡—

GIVE THIS A THOUGHT

Every morning when we wake up now, the sun is shining, and birds are chirping a welcome to the newborn day. Why not fall in line—arise and shine—smile and perk up at the call of this delightful spring. If we want to grunt and moan, of course we can do it, but the sun will shine just the same for those who have enough sense to enjoy it. Old Dame Nature has fixed things up so that there's no chance for the fellow who keeps out of step putting the whole procession on the blink. You might just as well bow to that old dame and march along.

—‡—‡—‡—

A new idea in club insignia has been developed by girls in Brown County, Tex., to enable other club members, their friends, and neighbors to identify them with H clubs. As they have chosen cannas for their club flower, each girl was given one to plant at the right-hand side of her front door. If a girl had more than one canna, they were planted on each side of the door. Club girls all over the county can locate each other easily by the cannas, and an indirect benefit of this simple but distinctive mark has been that all the girls take a great deal more pride in their homes and yards.

—‡—‡—‡—

The picnic season has started. Buy an umbrella.

—‡—‡—‡—

A great many screen productions haven't screened quite enough.

—‡—‡—‡—

It is all right to hit a fly when he is down.

—‡—‡—‡—

Some neighbors will take anything except a hint.

—‡—‡—‡—

Many an amateur gardener grows nothing but disgusted.

—‡—‡—‡—

The peak of prices means the part you stuck with.

—‡—‡—‡—

One wonders why a criminal is usually a better shot than a police officer.

Reflection on Femininity.

It has been said in praise of some men that they could talk whole hours together upon anything; but it must be owned to the honor of the other sex, that there are many among them who can talk whole hours together on nothing.—Addison.

Facts About Widows

The American Bankers Association tells this about widows:

18% of American widows live on their income.

47% supplement income by working.

85% are dependent.

And a table for daughter's and sons who have been heirs would show about the same percentage.

Can THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY interest you?

J. C. Hull, Representative,
St. Joe, Ind.

Chiropractor Optician

Calls made at your home by APPOINTMENT.

EARL E. FRISBIE,
Butler, Indiana.

BIG OPENING AT WINONA LAKE, INDIANA, JUNE 28TH

Without doubt the most auspicious opening in years, if not in its entire history will mark the beginning of the season's Assembly program at Winona Lake, Indiana, on June 28th.

Mr. Heaton, the program director for the Winona Assembly and Bible Conference, has secured for the first three days, June 28th, 29th, 30th, Bachman's Million Dollar Band.

This is one of the outstanding Bands of the Nation. They have played in practically all the large cities and are employed each winter season by the city of West Palm Beach, Florida.

In addition to this splendid band, the most elaborate program that has been presented in fifteen years will fill the extra long season from June 28th to August 15th.

It has been Winona's custom for the past few years to present one renowned artist. This year two artists of international fame will appear in recital. The first one will be Josef Lhevinne, the sensational Russian pianist on July 27th. This is the first great pianist of world note that Winona has ever offered.

On August 16th Tito Schipa, the most "talked of" artist during the past grand opera season. Schipa is rated by his tens of thousands of admirers as being artistically "head and shoulders" above all other tenors.

Reunion Meeting

Everyone connected with the Coburn family will please attend a meeting at Fred Hart's home, one-half mile south of Coburn's Corners, next Sunday afternoon, June 17, to make arrangements for the annual reunion to be held August 2.

Zay Sailer has purchased the Ella Smith property in the West End where Vernon Woodcox now lives. The deal was made last week.

Births

June 6.—Born to Mr. and Mrs. Menno Richer of 13 miles southwest of St. Joe, a nine pound boy, named Joseph S.

June 8.—Born to Mr. and Mrs. John Crothers of St. Joe, a seven and one-fourth pound boy, named Paul DeuWane.

Reported by Dr. Minnick.

Moving steadily up to a 6,700-car-a-day production, the Ford Motor Company on Monday, May 21, set a new daily record when 6,658 cars and trucks were completely assembled for domestic use, it is announced by The Ford News. This new production exceeds by 43 the best previous day which was May 9 with its record of 6,615.

Mr. Rufus Leighmer, a prominent and highly respected farmer, whose home was two miles east of Harlan, on the Fort Wayne and Hicksville road, died June 4, and was buried on Wednesday, the 6th. The funeral was held at his late home and he was buried at Scipio in Springfield township. He was very industrious and accumulated considerable wealth. He was a brother of Mrs. Ellen Weires and an uncle of Rolla Weires of this place, also a brother of Frank Leighmer of Hicksville, Ohio.

Make Your Trip More Enjoyable by a Refreshing Night on Lake Erie

(Your rail ticket is good on the boats)

Thousands of east and north bound travelers say they wouldn't have missed that cool, comfortable night on one of our fine steamers. A good bed in a clean stateroom, a long sound sleep and an appetizing breakfast in the morning!

Steamers "SEEANDBEE" — "CITY OF ERIE" — "CITY OF BUFFALO"

Daily, May 1st to November 15th

Leave Cleveland - 9:00 P.M. } Eastern { Leave Buffalo - 9:00 P.M.
Arrive Buffalo - 7:30 A.M. } Standard Time { Arrive Cleveland - 7:30 A.M.

Connections for Niagara Falls, Eastern and Canadian points. Ask your ticket agent or tourist agency for tickets via C & B Line. New Tourist Automobile Rate—$10.00.

Send for free sectional puzzle chart of the Great Ship "Seeandbee" and 32-page booklet.

The Cleveland and Buffalo Transit Co.
Cleveland, Ohio

The Great Ship "Seeandbee" — the largest steamer on inland waters of the world.

Fare $5.50

C&B

A CHILD IN PAIN runs to Mother for relief. So do the grown-ups For sudden and severe pain in stomach and bowels, cramps, diarrhoea

CHAMBERLAIN'S
COLIC and DIARRHOEA REMEDY

It has never been known to fail.

Office Cat

The loudest barkers are always with the side show.

—oo—

Any man who marries for money, earns it.

—oo—

Accidents will happen in the best families, and if the divorce reports are correct, that's where most of them do happen.

—oo—

MAKES YOU STRONG LIKE ONIONS

"My tonic fills you full of hope,
It's marvelous," says Dr. Snitcher
"There's gold and silver in the dope,
And that will make your blood much richer."

—oo—

The book of etiquette doesn't mention it, but it is good form to offer your plug before taking a chew yourself.

—oo—

Nature is very beautiful if you can find a spot where nobody has a picnic.

—oo—

When a girl wishes a man to save his money it is a sure sign he is going to need it.

—oo—

Taxpayers will be glad to learn that modernizing a battleship doesn't cost any more than building a new one.

—oo—

This is a marvelous age of economy kitchenettes and trick furniture for small apartments, according to Joe Hilliard, but nobody has quite equaled Henry Ford, aided by the motor thieves, in the development of the disappearing motor car.

Wretchedness usually is self-inflicted.

—oo—

It is estimated that alarm clocks added 500 cuss words to our language.

—oo—

That sardine cannery that is adopting efficiency methods, might study the way a street car conductor handles the situation.

—oo—

PASSING OF THE HORSE

I'd hate to be a horse fly,
And with the horse flies buzz;
The picking for the horse fly
Ain't what it used to was.

—oo—

A shrewd observer says there is no broadcasting station like the neighbor woman who hears a piece of scandal.

—oo—

Even if a girl does not want to get married, she usually likes to be engaged.

—oo—

Why is crossing a street like music? Because if you don't see sharp, you'll be flat.

—oo—

"It takes so little to make an editor happy," says a citizen. "Just tell the poor boob that you read one of his articles, and you need not say you liked it; a smile of child-like joy will pervade his whole being."

—oo—

A lot more of us would be gentlemen if we could only hide our meanness.

—oo—

A Walla Walla, Wash., wireless fan has heard Java on the Radio. But we're content to hear java on the percolator these fine Spring mornings.

We have discovered that most people work because they have to

—oo—

AND WE CAN WAVE AT EACH OTHER

The radio's the nicest thing
It's sure beyond compare
More folks, no doubt will want to sing
With music in the air

—oo—

Grover Cleveland Bergdoll is said to be worth $200,000, but most people wouldn't give a nickle for him

—oo—

Los Angeles messenger [illegible] advertises "instantaneous [illegible] one hour's notice."

—oo—

Old Man Jewhopsockey has got it in for the editor of the News-Tribune. He read an editorial claiming it paid to be courteous, and in trying it out the next day, a book agent sold him $49, worth of encyclopedia

—oo—

Men who try laying down the law to their wives probably wonder how Solomon lived so long.

—oo—

It didn't take the New Jersey couple who spent their honeymoon in a [illegible] cab, very long to discover that [illegible]ried life is full of bumps.

—oo—

It is comparatively safe to strike the average American without warning nowadays. He either is wearing thick glasses or has his hands in his pockets—frequently he is doing both

—oo—

Some men ought to learn to play the violin in order to give their chins a rest.

—oo—

The man who does as he pleases is easily pleased.

The Crowning Touch.

We are but shadows; we are not endowed with real life, and all that seems most real about is is but the thinnest substance of a dream—till the heart be touched. That touch creates us—then we begin to be—thereby we are beings of reality and inheritors of eternity.—Hawthorne.

H. O. WILLIAMS

THE Abstracter

is able to furnish you with a complete Abstract of Title to any description of Real Estate in DeKalb County.

OFFICE
West Seventh Street
AUBURN

FIRE INSURANCE NOTARY PUBLIC

Frank L. Milliman
TRUSTEE
Concord Township

Office Day Friday of Each Week at his residence 2 miles north and 1-2 mile West of St. Joe.

Newspaper Advertising Does Pay

WE BELIEVE IN IT

And we are reserving this space of value to tell you that we sincerely believe in it. Patrons read advertisements in this paper we know, because you are reading this ad as you read the others.

WE RECOMMEND IT

We print circular advertisements, but we do not recommend them as highly as we do the newspaper advertising. So many people never even carry a circular bill home with them as you will see by noticing the contents of the waste paper box at the Post Office But you show me one who takes the home paper from the mail and throws it away before they get home and I'll show you ninety-nine who do not.

The St. Joe Weekly News

St. Joe, - - - - - - Indiana

Lehman's CLOTHING HOUSE

ESTABLISHED 1867

MENS AND BOYS OUTFITTERS

810 CALHOUN STREET

BEN LEHMAN PROP.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

Money

$ $

Making a Living---
and Making Friends

Truly unfortunate is the man who gets nothing more than a living out of his business. Unless friendships develop out of his dealings with other other people, earning a living is apt to be a dreary task.

For this reason, we value highly the warm friendship existing between the Farmers & Merchants State Bank and its many depositors. Rendering bank service is our business; but we like to render it in a a way that brings us permanent friends.

We'll welcome YOUR friendship, too!

Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank

Capital Stock, - $25,000

Spencerville, Ind.

. The Bank of Personal Services

SPENCERVILLE

Jacob Baltz and wife were Sunday evening guests of David Knisley and family of near Harlan.

William Allen and family were guests on Sunday afternoon of John Moody and family west of town.

Charles Rhoades, a Civil War veteran, was taken to the Methodist hospital Saturday evening.

You can not afford to miss the $ Day Sale at Warner's Hat Shop, Saturday.

Henry Stalders and family and the Misses Gladys Hefley, Zelia Baughtman, were Sunday guests of Gust Hafner and family.

Mrs. Emila Gloyd and sons, Clarence and Jerry, attended the Harwood reunion at the Anson Dunton home near Huntertown.

F. W. Silberg has purchased real estate from C. A. Markle described as follows: pt. lots 27, 28, and 29.

Miss Jessie Caraham and Dale Clark of near Mount Olivet, were quietly married at the Methodist parsonage on Sunday afternoon at four o'clock by Rev. Brewster.

Dayton Webb and family were Sunday dinner guests of Mrs. Gertrude Markle and family. Misses Goldie and Marie Hull and Ralph Palmer were afternoon callers.

On Sunday W. P. Steward and wife entertained the following guests: H. H. Squires and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Wyatt Squires, Ed Cutter and wife and Miss Hamilton, all of Auburn, and Mrs. Ada Berry of St Joe.

Otis Koch, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Koch of east of town and Miss Marjorie Cauffman of of Claypool, was married on Saturday afternoon by Rev. E. E. Wright of Fort Wayne. The young couple will make their home at Fort Wayne, where the groom is employed at the G. E. works.

Miss Venus Beerbower was a Friday afternoon guest of Miss Marjorie Hollabaugh.

Henry Beams of Detroit, spent the weekend with his parents, F. L. Beams and family.

J. C Vallieu, wife and sons were Sunday supper guests of William Vallieu and wife of Harlan.

Miss Phyllis Green of Garrett, was a Sunday dinner guest in the Frank Beams home.

J. D. Markle and son, Richard, of Fort Wayne, were Sunday visitors here.

Saul Doty of Milan Township spent several days last week with Frank Wertman and wife.

B. F. Markle and family were Sunday afternoon guests of D. W. Myers and family of Hicksville.

Mrs. William Reed and daughters, Ida and Vera, spent Sunday at the home of Mrs. Cora Steward and family.

Rev. A. K. Mumma and family of Harlan attended the Christian Endeavor Society at the Lutheran church here Sunday evening.

Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Silberg and daughter, Orpha, and Mrs. Sophia Miller were guests on Sunday evening of Kenneth Miller and family.

William Tyndall, wife and son, Walter, Mark Tyndall and family of Woodburn, and Vernie Reed, wife and babe were Sunday dinner guests of Bieeks Erick and family.

Glenn Bets and family of Woodburn, Walter Pierman, wife and son spent Sunday afternoon with the formers parents, Joel Bets and wife.

Frank Wertman and wife, Louis Markle and wife and Samuel Markle spent Sunday with Mrs. Wertman's sister, Mrs. Pearl Kortnight and family. They also visited other friends at Columbia City in the afternoon.

For good glasses see Griest at American Building Hicksville, Ohio.

William Lake Jr. who has been teaching school in Michigan, returned home last week.

Dwight Coolidge and family spent Sunday with friends at Hillsdale, Michigan.

Orley Woodring and family of Newville spent Friday at the J. C. Vallieu home.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerry Wasson of Fort Wayne are at this place for a few days preparing to move their household goods to Fort Wayne.

Men's Day was observed at the Methodist Sunday School Sunday. On next Sunday evening they will observe Children's Day.

Mrs. Joel Bets has on exabition a beautiful Black lily which began to bloom on Saturday. Mrs. Bets has taken care of the lily bulb for ten years and at last was rewarded for her trouble.

Joseph Webb, wife and grandchildren, Marine and Virginia Webb spent Sunday with Mrs. Webb's brother, Daniel Billman of Farmers Center. Mr. Billman is quite ill at this writing.

Mrs. Jennie Moffit and daughter Jessie, of Auburn, were Sunday dinner guests of the formers parents, Jacob Baltz and wife. In the afternoon all motored to Harlan, where Mr. and Mrs. Balts visited their cousin, Thomas Dunkle and wife, and Mrs. Moffit and daughter visited Rev. A. K. Mumma and family.

Mt. Pleasant

A new well is being dug at Mt. Pleasant Church.

Ross Yarlett and family had as Sunday guests Boyde Huntington and family of Butler.

Mrs. Russel Fee and baby of Chicago, are visiting with Jud Fee and family.

Nick Funk and family of Butler were Sunday visitors at the home of Clarence Keller.

Eugene Praul, wife and little son spent Sunday at Butler in the home of Commodore Haggerty.

Homer McCollough, wife and son, Ralph, visited Cris Chinider and family at Fort Wayne, Thursday.

Carol Bell, Lilah Smith, Thelma and George Stringfellow and Raymond Moree, all of Avilla, spent Sunday guests of Majel Knox.

Eugene Praul and wife and Harry Ginder and wife attended the Gunsenhouser reunion which was held at Edgerton last Saturday.

Roy Sheffer, Pierce Haney and Miss Elizabeth Haney of Albion, were Sunday guests of John Knight and family.

Waldo Rosenberry and wife entertained Thursday Mrs. Guisinger and grandson of Garrett and John Koch and wife of St. Joe.

Mrs. Homer McCollough and daughter Doris, spent Friday at Newville with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Rhoads.

NEWVILLE

Byron Miller is the owner of a bran new Ford.

Hugh Traxler and wife were Ft. Wayne visitors Saturday.

Mrs. Minnie Dean is seriously ill at this writing.

Mrs. Mary Mitchell is quite poorly with heart trouble.

Byron Miller and his mother were St. Joe callers Thursday evening.

Sunday was Young Peoples Day at the U. B. Church. They rendered a good program.

Mr. Saylor and wife of Toledo, were over Sunday guests of W. P. Miller and wife.

FALLING HAIR QUICKLY STOPPED

Single Bottle of "Lucky Tiger" Brings Positive Results.

Falling of the hair, which means eventual baldness unless checked, now can be stopped in a few days. J. M. Lyle, of Minneapolis, Minn., is one of many thousands who testify to this welcomed fact.

"My hair was falling rapidly, and I was threatened with complete baldness. Everything I tried failed until, on advice of a friend, I began using Lucky Tiger Hair Remedy. A few days' use of this remedy stopped the fall of hair, and restored my hair and scalp to better health than ever before."

Lucky Tiger Hair Remedy is always guaranteed to give satisfaction. Ask your druggist today.

Terry Traxler and wife accompanied Hugh Traxler home from Fort Wayne for an over Sunday visit.

John Miller and family and Mrs. Viena Rude and little son, were guests of Dewey Miller and wife at Auburn, Friday afternoon.

The Newville boys, who have been working at the automobile factory at Auburn have all been turned off on account of a surplus of hands.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hass of Hicksville, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Levitus Reed and called on John Miller and family enroute home.

St. Joe Locals

Will Miller's new barn is rapidly being put up and it will add a big improvement to the place.

Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Maxwell spent Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Del Nelson.

Mr. and Mrs. Meade Baker attended the class social at the Clyde Hart home Sunday.

C. P. Bassett spent Sunday night and Monday at Fort Wayne, guest of his brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bassett.

Mrs. Harry Vrmson of Akron, Ohio, and Miss Harriet Frank of Auburn, were recent guests of Mrs. Meade Baker.

The Misses Evelyn and Dorothy Knight spent Saturday afternoon with their grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. B. S. Sheffer and their uncle, Craig Sheffer and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Filley and daughter of Huntington, and Mrs. Sarah Bartlett of Waterloo, were over Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Woodcox and family.

Merritt Sechler, mother, Mrs. Jacob Sechler, and sister, Mrs. Frank Curie, attended the meeting at the Auburn Lutheran church one evening last week, in which Mrs. Elizabeth Stanley, State W. C. T. U. president, spoke.

Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Minnick drove to Auburn Sunday evening to visit a grandson, Oscar Burtzner, who left Monday with two other young men by auto for the Pacific coast. They will camp along the way, the trip to be one for pleasure and sight seeing.

Now Easier Than Ever to Own a Ford

Through the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan

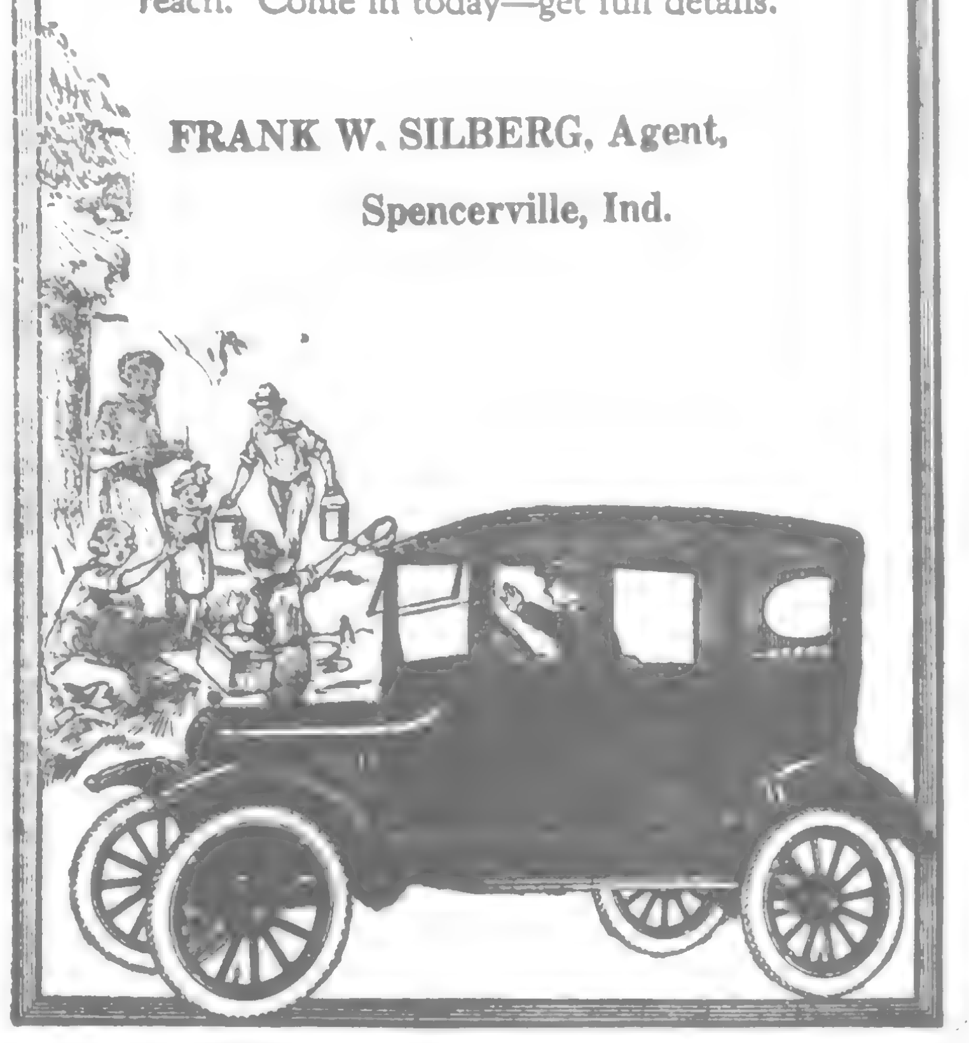
$5.00 —will enroll you and start you on the way to ownership. We will put the money in a local bank, at interest. Each week make an additional payment. Soon your payments plus the interest paid by the bank will make the car yours.

So plan to get out into the fields and woods — down to the beach or stream—the family and you—in the Ford Sedan. It is ready for business or pleasure anytime you step into the driver's seat and put your foot on the starter button.

It is a car for all weather with real comfort for everyone. And now it is within your reach. Come in today—get full details.

FRANK W. SILBERG, Agent,

Spencerville, Ind.



Class Social

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hart entertained Sunday at the regular bimonthly social of their Sunday School class, of which Mr. Hart is teacher. This class is noted for its sincere fellowship and fine social qualities, and members and guests enjoyed one of the finest meetings of the year.

Plates were served to sixty-four at the noon hour. Ice cream and cake were served as later refreshments. At the business session it was decided Mr. and Mrs. Claud Laub will entertain the class on the evening of July 4th. Mr. and Mrs. Lew Washler will entertain at the next regular social in August.

A rising vote of thanks was extended the host and hostess for their kind hospitality.

Birthday Party

A celebration in honor of Mrs. A. D. Perry's birthday was held at the home last Friday, in which a company of relatives partook of the day's enjoyment and the fine dinner served at noon.

The following were present: Mrs. Wallace Abel, Mrs. Ann Abel, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Tomlinson and son, Robert, Mr. and Mrs. Ella Wilmot, Mr. and Mrs. William Brown, Mrs. Fred Donley and children, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Herrick and family, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Mason and Vivian and Edward Kimes.

There are more highflyers on the ground than in the air.

Dr. Bonnell M. Souder
HOSPITAL

Established in 1914
206 West Seventh Street
AUBURN, INDIANA

C. R Baumgartner, D V M

Veterinarians

OFFICE and HOSPITAL
SPENCERVILLE. - IND.
Phones—Office No. 7

F W Silberg, D V M

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local [illegible], it is greatly influenced by [illegible]. HALL'S CAT[illegible] consists of an [illegible] Removes by [illegible] and the Internal Medicine, a [illegible] which assists in [illegible].

[illegible] Years.
F. J. [illegible]

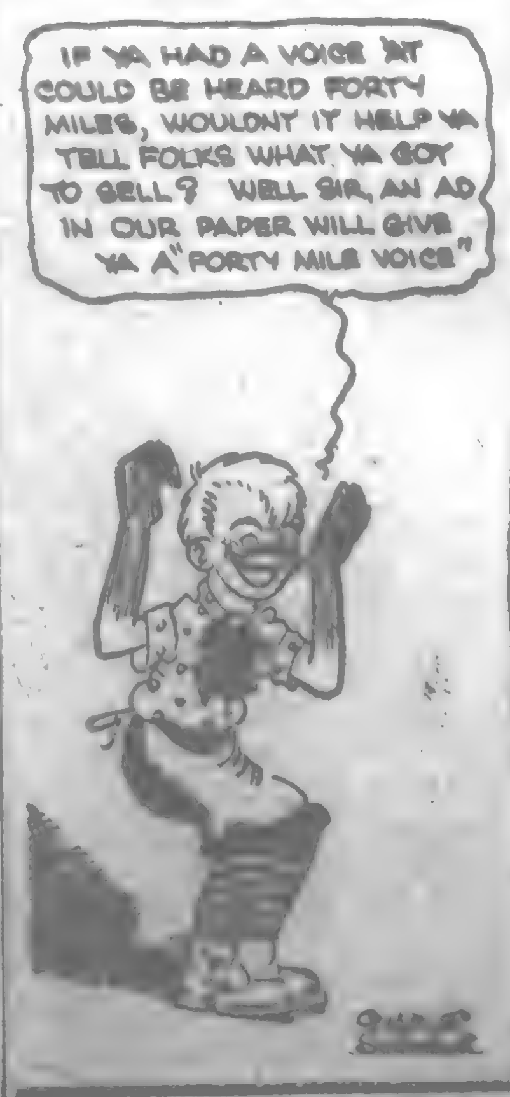
TWO TO-NIGHT

for loss of appetite, bad breath, coated tongue, biliousness,
Without griping or nausea

CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS

Set your liver right—only 25c

MICKIE SAYS



IF YA HAD A VOICE 'AT COULD BE HEARD FORTY MILES, WOULDNT IT HELP YA TELL FOLKS WHAT YA GOT TO SELL? WELL SIR, AN AD IN OUR PAPER WILL GIVE YA A "FORTY MILE VOICE"

Love of Home is a
Nations Bulwark

WAYS AND MEANS often seem to bar the way to the most natural and worthy inpulse of mankind.

But 'tis said: "Where there's a will, there's a way," so perhaps investigation may show that way to be easier than you may now think.

We will gladly help to direct your desire to
OWN A HOME
in the "channel of least resistance."
Come and talk this vital matter over with us.

Spencerville Lumber Co.

ASHUR CULP, Manager

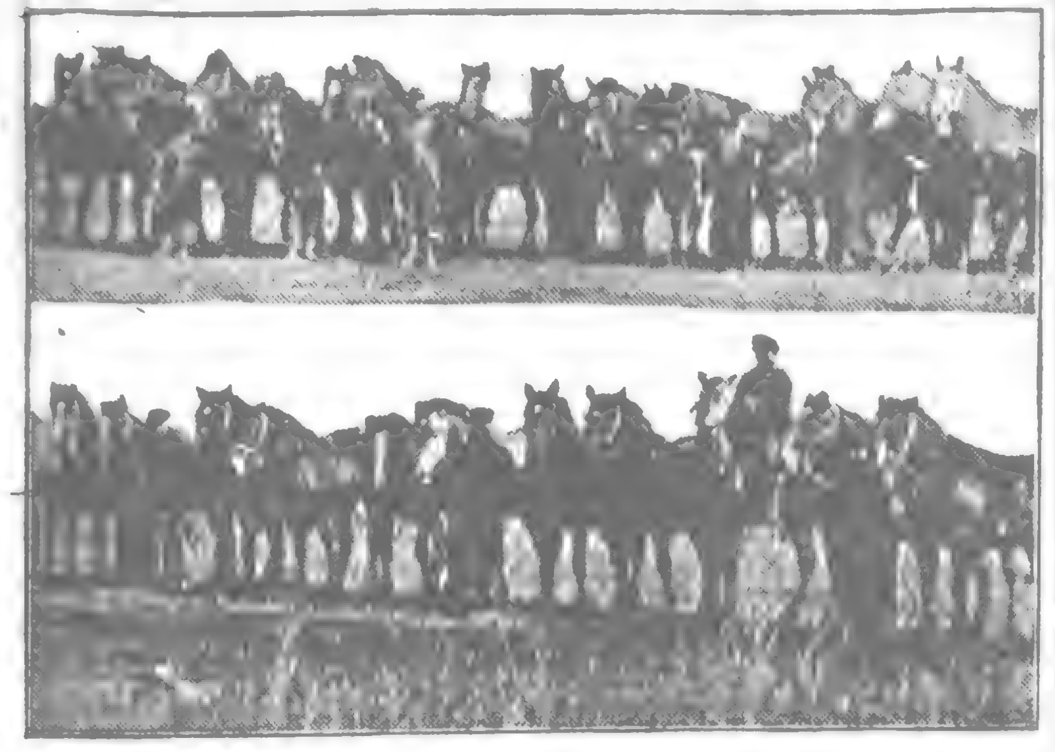
Lumber and Building Material of All Kinds
Spencreville, Ind.

JUNE

L 912

636

American Farm Bureau



Through an arrangement made with New England county farm bureaus, the North Dakota Farm Bureau federation sold 1,082 North Dakota horses direct to Eastern buyers.

The horses were sold at public auction, the sale being conducted by the county farm bureau.

The North Dakota farm bureau conducted the insurance and every horse injured and two lost in shipment from pneumonia were paid for from the insurance fund.

Horses were shipped direct through to the East and kept out of infected horse stables en route. The horses were thus delivered to the users free from disease.

The Eastern county farm bureaus appoint a committee to inspect and hitch every horse before the sale at the farm bureau auctions. This committee reports to the buyers exactly what they find when the horse or team is lead into the ring. This method of handling through the farm bureau inspires greater confidence in the horses on the part of the buyers and thus brings greater net returns to the North Dakota shippers. Men in charge of this work in the East say this method of handling horses would be impossible without the farm bureau in North Dakota and the farm bureau in New England working in co-operation.

INVENTION BY BLOOM RETURNS BIG PROFIT

Michigan Bureau Official Shows How to Sell Rhubarb.

Two years ago Frank A. Bloom, manager of the Michigan Farm Bureau Produce exchange, noticed that rhubarb was sold on the Detroit market in bunches tied together with a string and the string bruised the stalks. The bunches were of varying weight. Mr. Bloom thought there could be an improvement. He evolved a cardboard box which would hold just five pounds of rhubarb. Then a carton was made that would hold just ten of these five-pound boxes. The plan worked. The growers found they could get more money for their rhubarb. In boxes it shipped better, there was less discount for spoilage or freezing. But Mr. Bloom was not content with just improving the package. Three grades, choice, fancy and extra fancy, were adopted. Strict grading methods were adhered to. A brand label was adopted for the extra fancy grade and there has been a greater demand for this grade than could be supplied.

Manager Frank A. Bloom.

Did it pay? A comparison of results under the string tied bunch method and 50-pound carton method is shown in the following table:

The Old Way.
67 6-lb. bunches at 50c	$33.50
17 6-lb. bunches at 25c	4.25
Total	$37.75
Cost of dry goods boxes	1.50
Net return to grower	$36.25
The New Method.
40 5-lb. boxes at $1.25	$ 50.00
40 5-lb. boxes at 1.10	44.00
20 5-lb. boxes at .75	15.00
Total	$109.00
Cartons	5.00
Return to grower	$104.00

Over $66—187% more for same amount of rhubarb.

Mr. Bloom says little about the accomplishment. "Just another demonstration," he says, "that it pays to co-operate, standardize, advertise and be honest."

These are the principles on which the Michigan Farm Bureau Produce exchange is founded. The exchange does a monthly business around $60,000 in fruit, vegetables, poultry, eggs, dressed veal and pork.

Appointed on Loan Board.

E. E. Jones of Hartford, Pa., treasurer of the Federal Land bank at Baltimore, has been appointed to fill the position on the federal farm loan board formerly held by Capt. W. S. A. Smith. Mr. Jones is a trustee of the Pennsylvania Agricultural college and was formerly a member of the house and senate of Pennsylvania.

FIGHT TUBERCULOSIS IN STEUBEN COUNTY

New York Community Leads in Eradication of Disease.

According to a report from the United States Department of Agriculture, Steuben county, New York, now leads the country in the eradication of tuberculosis from its dairy herds, having more cattle under supervision than any other county in the United States.

The county farm bureau began the eradication work two years ago with the employment of a single veterinarian whose services were paid for by local dairymen. The dairy farmers of the county became interested in the work and launched a county-wide campaign to rid their herds of the disease.

In approximately 15 days 80 veterinarians supplied by the state and national departments of animal industry tested 45,000 head of cattle. To follow up the work and make it permanent the Steuben county supervisors appropriated funds to employ a full-time veterinarian. Subsequent tests that have been made have materially increased the total of herds under supervision.

It is estimated that as a result of the bovine tuberculosis eradication, cattle values have increased about $5 a head in the county. The county farm bureau reports that since the campaign a large number of cattle shipments have been made outside the county. "Certified and Grade A milk producers in the environs of large Eastern cities are coming to Steuben county to buy their milkers," says a statement from the farm bureau.

Recently the state federation appointed a tuberculosis committee composed of H. E. Babcock, member of the legislative committee of the National Live Stock association; L. A. Toan, president of the State Guernsey Breeders' club; E. R. Zimmer, secretary of the State Holstein-Friesian association; M. E. Buckley of the Lincoln School of Agriculture, Westchester county, New York, and Jay Coryell, state leader of farm bureaus. This committee is investigating the accredited herd plan as it is administered in the various counties of New York state with a view to formulating a permanent policy which will be acceptable to the dairymen of the state.

The New York state legislature has been asked to appropriate about $2,000,000 to pay indemnities owed dairymen on cattle slaughtered under the accredited herd plan and a sufficient sum in addition to carry on the work efficiently during the coming year.

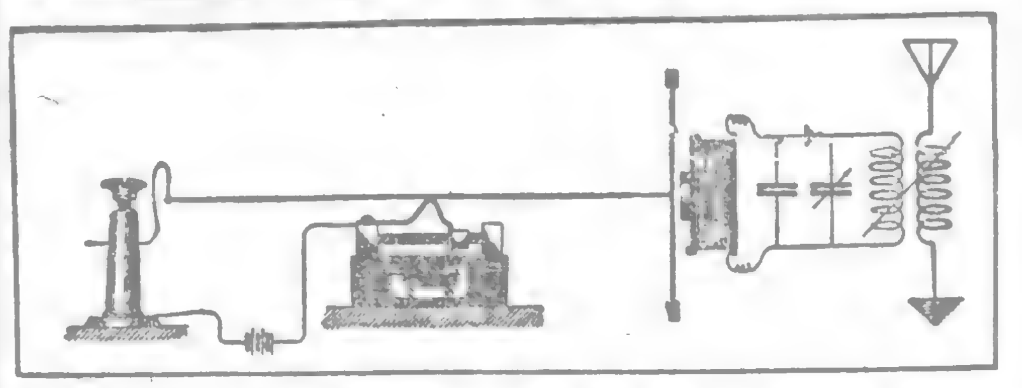
PLAN COMMODITY MARKETING

Approval Has Been Given by Board of Directors of Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.

Approval of plans to develop commodity marketing sections of the farm bureaus in township, county and state, has been given by the board of directors of the Ohio Farm Bureau federation. Under this plan county commodity associations of wool growers, live-stock producers, and others will become a section of the farm bureau organization. This system, according to the board, will prevent duplication of organizations. It will allow the financing of single agencies for the maintaining of services necessary to co-operative marketing associations to serve various organizations for handling specific products. The Ohio board has also appointed a special committee to work on plans for commodity associations who wish to come under the new co-operative law which will soon become operative in that state.

RADIO

(Edited by G. Douglas Wardrop, Editor of Radio Merchandising.)



Mechanical Relay Adaptable to the Recording of Received Signals.

By John F. Bront.

Some interesting results have been obtained with a relay built in a similar way to the one described and sketched here. The mechanical working principle of the apparatus is not a new one, yet is uniquely applied in the recording of received radio time signals by isolating them in a local circuit in which is included a recorder. Curiously enough the instrument is applicable to recording of continuous wave signals, more so than to those of decaying trains.

In detail we may examine what takes place when a straight steel wire has either or both of its ends thrust toward each other. A very slight movement of the ends toward each other is followed by the wire bowing outwardly in the center and forming an arc. The closer the wire is to its normal shape the greater will be the movement of the center of the wire outwardly from its normal position, when pressure is applied at either or both ends in a direction along the original normal axis of the wire, for a given movement of the ends toward each other. The slight movement of the ends toward each other, in fact, is magnified in the resultant movement or bending out of the center. As the ends are moved nearer each other, the resultant outward movement of the center portion grows less. If a curve were drawn, it would show a steep portion at the beginning and gradually rounding off toward the point represented where the ends of the wire are supposed to be parallel with each other in the bending process. That is when the wire is bent double.

Construction of Relay.

In the relay sketched here the steel wire is fastened to the diaphragm of a large-sized receiving phone. At the center where the greatest movement takes place for a given thrust on either end, is placed a contact which is included in a local circuit, as is a portion of the steel wire itself. The opposite end of the wire is securely held rigid. The contact below the center of the wire is adjusted by a micrometer arrangement which requires a large movement of the adjusting screw for a slight change in the height of the contact, which is made of spring brass and securely fastened at one end, while the lower end is drilled to pass the screw of the adjusting arrangement, and fits against the adjusting nut.

Operation.

In operation, the attraction of the diaphragm at each wave train makes a change in the position of the center of the wire and if the micrometer apparatus is adjusted correctly a local circuit will be opened and closed at each movement of the diaphragm. Especially where continuous waves are being dealt with, this type of relay is most efficient, and it is necessary only to rectify the received trains, without going through the operation of heterodyning. Each arriving train will cause attraction and release the diaphragm, which movement is communicated to the steel wire.

The wire is not maintained at its exactly straight horizontal position, but slightly bowed down in the center to facilitate the action of a permanent magnet placed immediately below the wire so as to insure the movement of the center of the wire downward and not to one side or upward when the movement of the diaphragm is communicated to it, through the action of the rectified trains of continuous waves.

The whole apparatus is in fact an amplifier and relay at the same time, although it has been made up for relaying only. The diaphragm movement is amplified in the movement of the center of the wire, which movement is the agency in closing and opening a local circuit. Experiments were made which reversed the usual order of things and arranged for the breaking of a local circuit which would operate a recorder instead of the usual type which is made to close a local circuit.

Batteries.

Primary batteries were connected in series with the recorder and one end of the steel wire, the circuit leading through the relay contacts when the circuit is closed by the movement of the wire.

In the reception of decaying trains of waves there is a movement of the phone diaphragm for every rectified train and if this type of relay were employed in the isolation of such signals in a local circuit, the high frequency of the vibrations would be generally too rapid to agree with the mechanical possibilities of the moving element. However, in regard to continuous waves, where the diaphragm of the phone is attracted by the whole signal duration if the train is rectified by crystal detector or audion tube, the resultant movement of the diaphragm and therefore of the wire is not rapid, comparatively at least, depending on the speed of the transmitted characters from the distant station, the movement of the wire occurring only at the beginning and end of the attraction resulting to the diaphragm. In this type of relay a fairly large-sized phone and a wire about 18 inches in length are requisite for best results. Longer wires give greater movement in the center, but they are subject to very slight local vibrations which are undesirable.

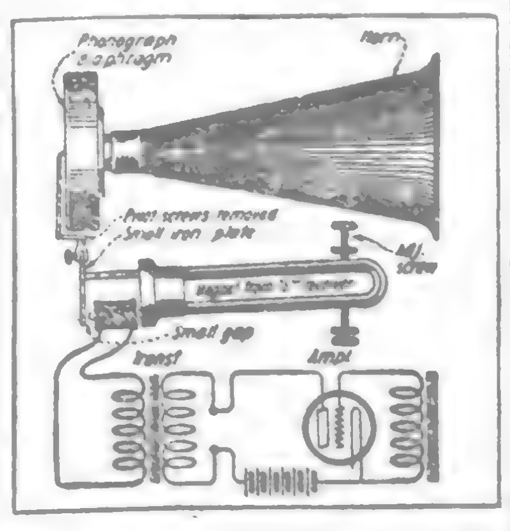
(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)

Amateur Can Build This Loud Speaker

The accompanying diagram shows a type of loud speaker which may be built by any amateur having a little experience with tools and enough patience to assemble it.

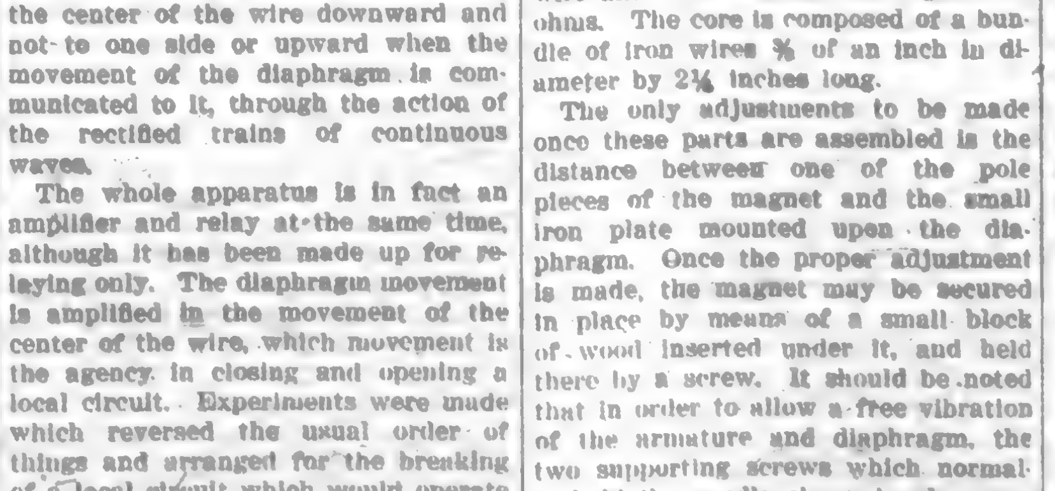
It consists mainly of a phonograph soundbox, upon which is fixed a small piece of iron in place of the needle. In order to maintain this small plate firmly, the needle support is cut with a hacksaw to provide a slot into which the small plate fits and is soldered. The electrical part of it consists of a magnet taken from an old 75-ohm telephone receiver with one of the coils wound with some number 34 wire, the whole winding having a resistance of about 15 ohms. The mounting of these two units is clearly shown in the diagrams and needs no further explanation.

Since this loud speaker is to be used with an amplifier, it is necessary to use a step-down transformer, the primary of which has an impedance equal to that of a vacuum tube. It will be necessary to experiment in order to get the exact winding. The secondary is wound with some number 34 enameled wire and has a resistance of about 20 ohms. The core is composed of a bundle of iron wires ⅜ of an inch in diameter by 2¼ inches long.



The only adjustments to be made once these parts are assembled is the distance between one of the pole pieces of the magnet and the small iron plate mounted upon the diaphragm. Once the proper adjustment is made, the magnet may be secured in place by means of a small block of wood inserted under it, and held there by a screw. It should be noted that in order to allow a free vibration of the armature and diaphragm, the two supporting screws which normally hold the needle clamp in place are removed, the only support being provided by the second pole piece of the magnet, to which it adheres by magnetic attraction.

(© Science and Invention and Radio News.)



Variocoupler Employed With Spider Web Coils.

The circuit shown in the illustration is a real DX set. This circuit may be a pet of some radio fans but it has given better satisfaction than any so far that many have used. It consists of a variocoupler with 40 turns on the rotor, two spider-web coils each 4 inches in diameter with 20 turns mounted permanently 4 inches apart, variable condensers, etc. The rotor of the variocoupler, as well as the spider-web coils, provide regeneration for the set. To tune the set rotate the aerial condenser until signals are heard, then increase regeneration with the rotor and vernier condenser. The results obtained with this set are extraordinary.

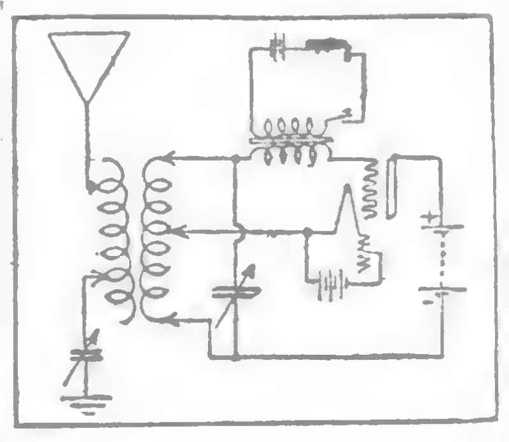
Use Simple Buzzer Modulating System

Equipment Is Coming Into Greater Favor With Amateurs.

For the amateur who is dabbling with CW there is no doubt that the modulated buzzer equipment is coming into greater use. In order to render signals emitted by a transmitter of the vacuum tube class in such a form as to be heard on a crystal or simple tube receiver, the radiated waves must be modulated in some manner at an audible frequency.

This result may be obtained in a number of ways. For example, an alternating current of audible frequency may be used as a source of plate potential, the radiated wave may be modulated by superimposing a voice wave upon it as in radio telephony, or the wave may be modulated by some form of chopper or buzzer connected in the grid of the tube transmitting circuit.

Possibly the cheapest and most flexible arrangement for small powered transmitters is to connect a buzzer in the grid circuit of the tube when calling a station or operating with a station equipped with a crystal detector and by throwing a switch cut out the buzzer when operating straight continuous wave work.



The diagram shows a simple tube transmitter of the inductively coupled Hartley type, which makes use of a single coil for the plate and grid circuits, but requires a separate coil in inductive relation to the first for coupling to the antenna circuit. The antenna circuit is tuned by means of the variable condenser and variations in the number of turns in the antenna coil.

The oscillating circuit is tuned by manipulating the variable condenser across the plate grid coil and by varying the taps on the coil which lead to filament, grid and plate.

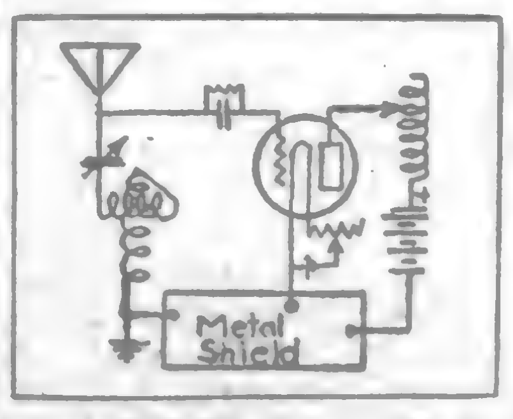
This circuit may be used in covering short ranges by employing receiving tubes of five watt tubes. When employing receiving tubes the plate potential may be supplied by blocks of ordinary B batteries having a voltage of 90 volts or more, but a drain on batteries of this type when five-watt power tubes are used would be so great as to render such operation too expensive. The plate supply for power tubes may be a small transformer with a chemical or tube rectifier connected to the secondary or a small motor generator of suitable voltage can be used.

In order to secure modulation of the output of the tube transmitter a small transformer is connected in the grid circuit of the tube in the manner indicated. In the primary circuit of this transmitter transformer are connected a buzzer, battery and key in series. The buzzer should be of the high frequency type which gives a clear tone. By substituting a microphone transmitter for the buzzer and key the same circuit may be adapted to radio telephone work.

To Improve Operation of Home-Made Set

Inspection of many home-made sets reveals the fact that their operation could be improved with little effort by properly combining the use of a metal shield and the layout of wiring.

This shield of copper or tinfoil, when placed behind the panel must be given a potential equal to that of the earth, otherwise it will have no effect toward eliminating stray capacity. But even after grounding the panel certain of the connections in and about the set are frequently carried for some distance parallel to this shield when by a little ingenuity the leads could be shortened by soldering them hard and fast to the metal surface. If this is done the appearance of the set is immeasurably improved and the shielding bettered.



The illustration shows how the terminals ending at the negative of the storage battery may be attached to the shield wherever it becomes handiest to do so.

Pretty Speedy.

Mat (reading)—The radio waves are sent out at vibrations as high as one million a second which would carry them around the earth six times in a second.

Pat—Be gorry! It won't be long before they'll be receivin' thim before they start.

2 MORE WOMEN JOIN THE ARMY

Of Those Who Have Been Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Milwaukee, Wisconsin.—"I had a bad pain in my left side and I could not lift anything heavy without having a backache. I tried different things. Then I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the newspapers and began taking it as the directions said. I feel very good now and can do all my work. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to all my friends, and you can use my testimonial letter."—Mrs. HATTIE WARZON, 870 Garden St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Gained in Every Way

Buffalo, N. Y.—"I had some female troubles that just run my health down so that I lost my appetite and felt miserable all the time. I could not lift anything heavy, and a little extra work some days would put me in bed. A friend had told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I gained in every way, could eat better and felt stronger. I had found nothing before this that did me so much good."—Mrs. J. GRACE, 291 Woltz Avenue, Buffalo, N. Y.

Opportunity Calls from CANADA

Visit Canada this summer—see for yourself the opportunities which Canada offers to both labor and capital—rich, fertile, virgin prairie land, near rail ways and towns, at $15 to $20 an acre—long terms if desired. Wheat crops last year the biggest in history; dairying and hogs pay well; mixed farming rapidly increasing.

Excursion on 1st and 3d Tuesday of Each Month

from various U.S. points, single fare plus $2 for the round trip. Other special rates any day. Make this your summer outing—Canada welcomes tourists—no passports required—have a great trip and see with your own eyes the opportunities that await you.

For full information, with free booklets and maps, write

W. S. Nethery, Desk W, 47 E. Town St., Columbus, O.
Canadian Government Agency, Desk W, 116 Monument Pl., Indianapolis, Ind.

Authorized Canadian Gov't Agt.

SQUEEZED TO DEATH

When the body begins to stiffen and movement becomes painful it is usually an indication that the kidneys are out of order. Keep these organs healthy by taking

LATHROP'S
GOLD MEDAL
HAARLEM OIL
CAPSULES

The world's standard remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles. Famous since 1696. Take regularly and keep in good health. In three sizes, all druggists. Guaranteed as represented.

Look for the name Gold Medal on every box and accept no imitation

ABSORBINE

Reduces Strained, Puffy Ankles, Lymphangitis, Poll Evil, Fistula, Boils, Swellings; Stops Lameness and allays pain. Heals Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Boot Chafes. It is a

Safe Antiseptic and Germicide

Does not blister or remove the hair and horse can be worked. Pleasant to use. $2.50 a bottle, delivered. Describe your case for special instructions and Book 5 A free.

W. F. Young, Inc., 310 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

An Inference.

Of course it may sound ungallant, but the Turk men seem to have abandoned polygamy after the Turk women abandoned the veil.—Dallas News.

About 10,000 varieties of fish are known.

Cost of building a first-class battleship is about $16,000,000.

Sure Relief
FOR INDIGESTION
BELL-ANS FOR INDIGESTION 25 CENTS
6 BELL-ANS
Hot water
Sure Relief
BELL-ANS
25¢ AND 75¢ PACKAGES EVERYWHERE

Cuticura Soap
Complexions
Are Healthy
Soap 25c Ointment 25 and 50c, Talcum 25c.

JUNE

THE ST. JOE NEWS, ST. JOE, INDIANA

The Joy of Living

By
Sidney Gowing

Illustrations by
ELLSWORTH YOUNG

Copyright [illegible] by Sidney Gowing

CHAPTER XXVI—Continued.

—13—

Lady Erythea stared at her nephew blankly. A curious expression came into her eyes. At last she seemed to detect in Alexander the one thing she had believed was lacking—the touch of the original Adam. But Lord Scroope's face hardened.

"You!" he said grimly. "You also knew the truth? The action of the others, I can understand. But—a Churchman cannot lend himself to such a conspiracy as this."

"Under correction, Lord Scroope," said de Jussac gently; "a gentleman cannot betray a woman's confidence without her consent."

Lord Scroope winced perceptibly. He turned to de Jussac and bowed.

"Am I receiving instruction from a layman?" he inquired.

"It is the last thing I would dare," replied Bertrand humbly. "It is I who seek instruction. Does not the Church respect the seal of the confessional?"

"I make no claim, and no excuses!" said Alexander suddenly. "I have only this to say. I loved Georgina Berners from the day I saw her. When I learned the real position I loved her more. Her loyalty and devotion only increased my esteem. She is the only woman living that I care for; I require you to remember that she is my promised wife. And nobody in this room," said Alexander hotly, "shall address one word of reproach to her!"

"Well done!" cried Aimee. "Alexander, you're a man. I'm proud of you, cousin!"

"Thank you, Aimee," said Alexander.

"It is for me," said Lord Scroope sternly, "to apportion the blame. Georgina Berners is here under—"

He was interrupted by the volcanic arrival of Billy through the window, panting and eager, the tuft of hair on top of his head erect like the crest of a cockatoo.

"I've been looking for you everywhere!" he cried. "You—"

"Go out!" said Lady Erythea fiercely.

"Pardon me," said Billy, advancing, "but I guess my place is here. Whatever blame is, I take it. Lord Scroope, I know that what I've done is past apology, but—"

"Shut up, Billy!" exclaimed Aimee. "I've told them everything—I've said all there is to say. And," she added, under her breath, "for once I think I've made a better hand of it than you could."

Before anyone could reply, Georgina rose, sobbing, and made a dive for the door.

"Let me go!" she said brokenly. "I want to go away. I want to go—"

Billy, glancing quickly from her to Aimee and Lord Scroope, turned and flitted out again through the window. No one noticed him. All eyes were on Georgina.

Alexander intervened—but it was Lady Erythea who, with an extraordinarily determined movement, overtook Georgina. Passing a supporting arm round the girl's waist, she turned and faced the stupefied company.

"Let me remind you all," said Lady Erythea, in a voice that compelled silence, "of one thing that is in danger of being overlooked. I am mistress here at Jervaulx! I have listened with an unexampled patience. Hold your tongue, Anthony! I have welcomed the alliance of Georgina with this family, and Alexander will have such a wife as I myself would have chosen for him. Georgina, your only fault is your devotion to the mad creature there, and for that I give you absolution. I require direction from no one—your marriage with my nephew shall take place as soon as possible."

"Aunt!" exclaimed Mr. Lambe, joyously, "I—"

"Do not interrupt me, Alexander!" said his aunt. She turned to Aimee.

"As for you," continued Lady Erythea, icily, "I really find myself in your debt. I can never be sufficiently thankful that you did not come here as my guest, and that Alexander was spared your authorized companionship! One shudders to reflect on the possibilities.

"You appear to have enlisted the services of everyone but me to shield your disreputable escapade, and to have enrolled many simple-minded persons in your defense. You may have deluded these men," said Lady Erythea, with a scornful wave of her hand towards the company, "but you do not delude me! I find in you no qualities but selfishness and deceit—and I am glad that your sojourn in my house has been confined to the servants' hall, though I dread to think what your influence may have been on my domestics, from whom I require honesty and decency."

Aimee, very white, suddenly broke into a flood of tears. The next moment Lord Scroope had his arm around her and held her to him.

"Not another word, Erythea!" he said sternly. "You have had provocation—but you have said enough and much more than enough. Gentlemen, I thank you for what you have done on my daughter's behalf. And you, too, Georgina. Come, Aimee, little girl. Let us go home."

He led her away; Aimee clung to her father, sobbing as she went. Before they reached the door it was opened quickly, admitting Billy, who closed it again. Over his arm was a long hooded driving cloak of Lady Erythea's, ravished from the lobby.

"Put this on!" he said to Aimee.

"Billy," she gulped, darting at it, "you think of everything."

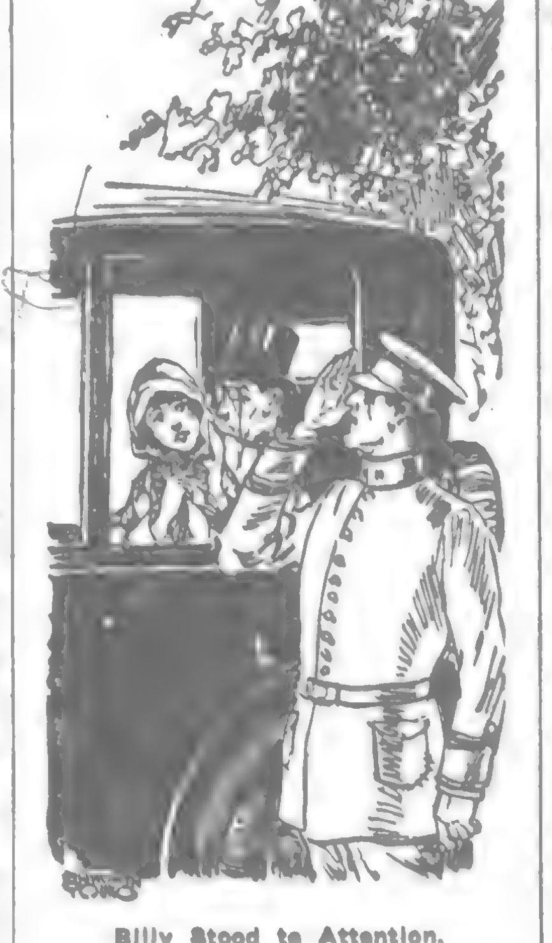
In a moment the cloak covered the parlor maid's dress and the hood was drawn over her cap. Lord Scroope stared in surprise at Billy.

"I've told your chauffeur, sir," said Billy, "to bring the auto round to this side—I thought you would like to avoid the front and the servants."

As he spoke the big motor slid to a standstill on the drive opposite the windows.

"Mr. Spencer," said Lord Scroope, looking at him judgingly, "I include you in my thanks."

Mr. Spencer bowed and passed out quickly through the window. He was holding the door of the car open when Aimee and her father got in. He snapped the door to, and, stepping to the front, spoke in an undertone to the chauffeur.



Billy Stood to Attention.

"Keep right away through the park here to the north gates," said Billy, pointing, "and drive like h—ll."

The bishop's chauffeur gave a slight start, and let in the clutch.

"Billy!" gasped Aimee, turning toward him as the motor slid by.

Billy stood to attention and gravely touched the peak of his cap. He watched the automobile disappear at a most unepiscopal pace down the back drive.

When it was out of sight, Billy walked very slowly to his quarters over the garage.

CHAPTER XXVII

Who's Who.

"We won't scold her any more today, Tony dear," said Lady Scroope, with the daintiest note of pleading in her voice, "will we?. This extremely naughty child. She has had a rough time."

"Yes," said Lord Scroope, heavily, "that is what I feel, Delicia. We—we must temper justice with mercy."

Aimee sat between her two stern parents on the lounge in the library at Scroope Towers. A night's rest had not restored the color to her cheeks. Her eyelashes were slightly wet. She smiled faintly.

"You dear people," said Aimee, stealing a hand into her mother's, while the other clasped the long white fingers of her sire, "you haven't scolded me at all. What you ought to do is to beat me. It's no use my trying to tell you how sorry I am. There aren't any words for it."

"Aimee dear," said Lady Scroope, stroking her hair, "try and look a little less tragic. This isn't like you. It's all over now."

"Is it?" said Aimee wistfully. "I am glad, mummie. I've told you both the story, all over and over. I've tried to make it clear. It's a fearful tangle, I know. You have both been so sweet about it."

"It is finished," said Lord Scroope gently. "I am so devoutly thankful, Aimee, to find you have come safely through the dangers which beset you at Jervaulx—what might have happened appals me to think of—that it is impossible to be harsh. And—and it distresses me to see you looking so unhappy. For the first time in your life. I can never remember to have seen you in such a mood."

Aimee stood up.

"The thing I want to know," she said, piteously, "is, what about Billy? You won't answer me. Mummie, you, I know, will understand. If I lose Billy, I don't care whether I live or die. That is all."

Lord Scroope passed his fingers through his snowy hair. Aimee's mother put an arm round her and led her out of the room.

"Go upstairs and rest for awhile, Baby," said Lady Scroope, gently. "You are very tired, and there has been talk enough."

In a few minutes Lady Scroope returned.

"This," said her husband, sadly, "is the most distressing aspect of the whole affair."

"I had a long talk with Aimee this morning," said Lady Scroope, "and it isn't a thing we can dismiss lightly, Tony. I know the child better than you do." She reflected. "This Bil—this Mr. Spencer appears to be rather remarkable."

"If we can trust Aimee's account," said Lord Scroope gloomily. "But—a young man picked up by the wayside," he added with a bewildered air. "My dear Delicia—?"

"He is not English, is he?"

"American, I understand. It seems curious," said Lord Scroope, pensively, "but I believe he is the first American I have met."

His wife laid a small white hand on his shoulder.

"Tony, darling," she said laughing, "you know very little of the world, but one thing at least you know. You saw this man. Is he—a gentleman?"

Lord Scroope paused.

"Whatever else he may not be, he is that."

"I rather gathered it from what I heard of him."

"But Delicia—"

The butler entered with a card on a tray. Lord Scroope inspected the card. It bore the name "Hiram B. Rivington," which conveyed nothing to Lord Scroope. Under it, in pencil, were the words, "About Mr. William Spencer."

"Is the bearer of this below?" asked Lord Scroope.

"Yes, m' lord. He wishes to see your lordship urgently."

Lady Scroope glanced at the card, and suppressed her curiosity nobly.

"I shall leave you to receive this visitor, Tony," she said. "I do not think Aimee ought to be left alone just now."

She retired. A very large, clean-shaven man with a rectangular jaw and thin, humorous lips, was ushered into the library. He was attired in roomy gray tweeds, his eye twinkled faintly, and there was something compelling about his presence.

"Lord Scroope?" he inquired, bowing courteously. "It's very good of you to receive a stranger. I thought that my nephew, William Spencer, would be here. He promised me to arrive about now. I guess it's something big that's delayed him."

"Is Mr. Spencer your nephew?" said Lord Scroope guardedly.

"That is so. You know him, I think."

"It is hardly the word. I know less than nothing of him, Mr. Rivington."

"Correct. He feels, and so do I, that a proper explanation is due to you, Lord Scroope. I don't know the whole story, but circumstances have impelled William, by no choice of his own, to break into the society of Eastshire county in a way that would probably be called unusual down here. He came to London and consulted me last night. He was very much distressed—which isn't usual with him. It's only fair to William that his credentials should be presented, and I think I'm the man to do it. I should like, Lord Scroope, to tell about Billy."

Lord Scroope stiffened. But there was an uncommon dignity in Mr. Rivington; there was also something remarkably likable about him. He appeared to have very strongly the Spencer gift of attraction.

"Will you be seated, Mr. Rivington. I will give my attention to what you have to say."

Mr. Rivington twinkled again, then became grave.

"I should have thought," he said, subsiding gently into an old bergere chair, "that it was enough for anyone to meet William to size him up. However, he is the son of my only sister, and of the late Lindon Spencer of Denver. Who was, on the whole, the finest man I ever knew in the course of a life that has been described as varied and comprehensive. And Billy is as good as his father. I wish you had met Lindon."

"I appreciate what you say," replied Lord Scrope. "I do not gather, however, what Mr. Spencer's occupation is."

"He has developed himself as a motor engineer."

"I know so little of mechanics—" began Lord Scroope.

"Mechanics," said Mr. Rivington, smiling, "are, of course, a matter of taste. They have an interest for me."

A light dawned suddenly on Lord Scroope.

"Is it possible," he said, "that you are the—the author as it were—of the Rivington motorcar?"

"That among other things," said the visitor pleasantly.

Lord Scroope looked bewildered. It was not possible, however ignorant one might be of mechanics, not to have heard of the Rivington automobile. Nor, however casual a reader of the secular press, could one avoid the echoes of the fame of that solid manipulator of millions, that human comet of progress, Hiram B. Rivington. The name on the pasteboard had not till now connected with Lord Scroope's mind.

He contemplated Mr. Rivington with wondering interest.

"Mr. Spencer," he said, "is indeed fortunate in his uncle."

"I would rather say that I'm fortunate in my nephew," replied Rivington. "Billy doesn't need an uncle. In my country we haven't much use for a young man whose only assets are his relatives. Billy has made good by his own efforts, sir. He is the inventor and proprietor of the Flying Sphinx motorcycle."

"An experimental machine, I understand. I hope, for Mr. Spencer's sake," said Lord Scroope, politely, "that it may prove—ah—successful."

Mr. Rivington smiled.

"The present model of the Sphinx, though a big advance on the others, is past the experimental stage. Of the first and second models, a quarter of a million have been sold in the States. The plant for the latest, on mass production, is now being laid down. In the company that's being floated I hold a third control—and I'm very thankful that I have. Billy stands to clean up three hundred and fifty thousand dollars on the deal—hard earnings."

"I have not a very good head for figures, Mr. Rivington. Could you translate that into terms of English currency?"

"About seventy thousand pounds."

Lord Scroope sat perfectly silent, gazing at Mr. Rivington.

"But the youngster himself is what I'm concerned with—not what he's got. However," continued Rivington, looking out of the window as a faint whirring noise was heard below, "I see he's arrived, so I needn't say any more. But I'm very glad to have had this chance to speak for him. Billy isn't good at praising himself."

Billy's card came up, and Billy shortly followed it. He looked at Lord Scroope diffidently.

"I shall be glad to have a few words with you, Mr. Spencer," said Lord Scroope with his most amiable air, "there was a staccato quality about our first meeting, that rendered a mutual understanding difficult."

"The first duty of an uncle," said Mr. Rivington, "is to realise when he's in the way. With your permission, Lord Scroope, I'll go below."

He retired, leaving the two together, and drifted into the sunny morning room overlooking the lawn. In a few moments Lady Scroope came in. Mr. Rivington made himself known to her. In a very short time Lady Scroope had skillfully elicited from Mr. Rivington all the information he had given to her husband, and a good deal more. She bubbled with amusement and sympathy as the enthusiastic Rivington expounded Billy's qualities.

"I had a few words with your nephew, Mr. Rivington, before he went upstairs," she said laughing, "a most magnetic and alluring young man. I tremble to think what his influence may be on my simple-minded husband."

Mr. Rivington, coloring with pleasure, looked admiringly at the little lady, wondering how she came to have a daughter as old as Aimee—who at that moment entered the room. Lady Scroope introduced her guest.

"Well!" murmured Mr. Rivington, holding Aimee's hand after shaking it and regarding her vivid beauty with the most intense appreciation, "I can understand Billy's anxiety now."

"Do you mean to say," exclaimed Aimee, "that Billy is here?"

"He is at present with your father in the library, dear," replied her mother.

Aimee departed hastily.

"Aimee," her mother called after her, "you are on no account to interrupt them."

"I'm going to be there when they come out!" said Aimee over her shoulder as she disappeared.

The two elder people looked at each other, and both of them laughed. Mr. Rivington was charmed. Lady Scroope was wholly unlike his preconceived notions of an English peeress. They resumed their conversation and drifted out through the windows to the lawn near the entrance, where stood the Sphinx. The original Sphinx, with pillion-seat de luxe attached.

Ten minutes later Lord Scroope, with a countenance that was positively animated, came toward them across the grass.

"My dear Delicia!" he exclaimed. "I have no objection to saying, even before Mr. Rivington, that William Spencer is a most remarkable young man. Not only has his conduct all through the affair been admirable, but his character appeals to me very greatly. There is more innate honesty, more of the very essence of religion, in that young fellow, than I have yet encountered in anyone of his age."

Mr. Rivington, coloring still more deeply, looked at his lordship with appreciative eyes. Lady Scroope smiled.

"Tony, dear, I have seldom heard you express yourself so warmly; and as a judge of character you have taught me to regard you as infallible. Certainly, from the rather brief interview I had with Mr. Spencer I formed a similar opinion. But do I understand that you have—?"

"Hem," said Lord Scroope, with some slight confusion, "we appear to be moving rather—ah—rapidly. I feel—"

He broke off, apparently at a loss, as Billy and Aimee came towards them across the lawn, side by side. There was something Olympian in Billy's aspect and the splendor of his smile. Aimee was radiant and glowing. Lord Scroope scarcely recognized in her the pallid and distressed young woman who had returned from Jervaulx. It was as though an errant descendant of the gods had restored his daughter to him.

"Dad!" said Aimee. "You've been splendid, dear. And I want to say all the nice things to Billy's uncle, that I haven't had a chance to, yet."

* * * * * * *

"I hope," said Lord Scroope, wrinkling his brow in perplexity as he and his wife stood in the library some hours later, after the departure of the visitors, "that I have not been too precipitate. Have I committed myself too far, Delicia?"

Lady Scroope pushed her husband gently into an armchair and perched herself on the arm of it.

"If you mean, dear," she said, stroking his hair, "did you definitely accept Billy Spencer as a prospective son-in-law—you certainly did. And a very good thing, too."

"Did I really?" murmured her husband. "I hardly recognize myself today, Delicia. It seems very precipitate. There are so many things to consider—to verify—"

"I haven't the slightest doubt that will be all right. Two of the soundest people I ever came across."

"But what—"

"What I like about Americans," said Lady Scroope, "when a proposition—that's what they call it, I think—when a proposition is clear, they don't waste time. I like people who don't waste time—it makes life so much less complicated."

"I am certainly conscious of a great access of happiness."

"Yes. Because Aimee is so happy. And Aimee's happiness is a very infectious quality. Still, at the moment, Tony dear, you are looking a little worried and anxious. Why?"

"The one rift in the lute," said Lord Scroope regretfully, "is this break with the Jervaulx household. Family quarrels are always petty and undignified. I fear the affair has alienated Erythea. I hope I did not convey the impression that I disapproved of Alexander's marriage. Really it is an excellent thing for Georgina, and he will have a most worthy wife."

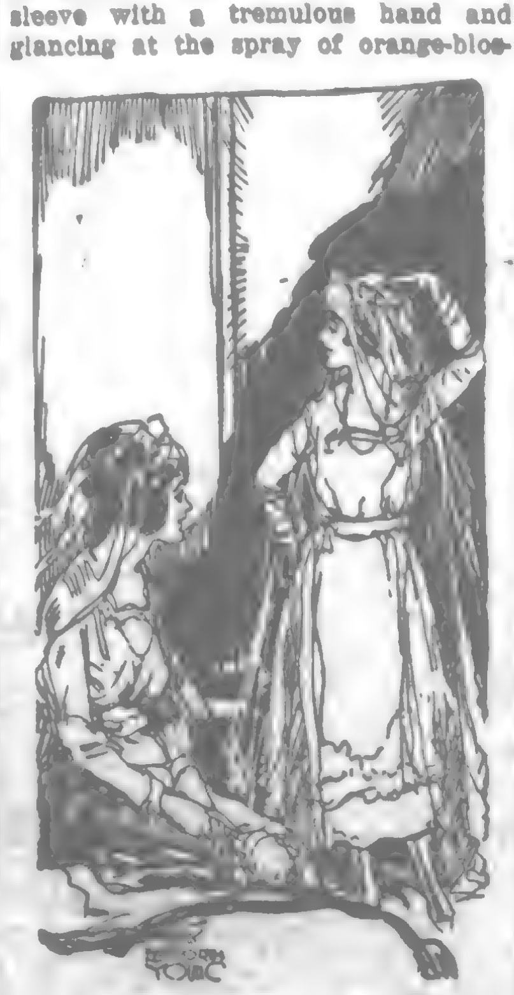
"I," said Lady Scroope, kissing the top of his head, "will make the peace with Erythea. Although she disapproves of my moral character, I am the only person she really listens to. I will go over tomorrow and pave the way. I've already talked that over with Mr. William Spencer," she added, twinkling, "and he will accompany me. I am persuaded he has great influence there. I suggest a double wedding here at Scroope. It will suit Erythea much better than at Jervaulx—as things are! Have no fear, Tony. It shall be arranged."

CHAPTER XXVIII

"All's Well—"

"What," said Aimee, with a little touch of scorn, "are you looking so frightened about, Georgie dear?"

"I'm n-not frightened," said Georgina faintly, smoothing her white silk sleeve with a tremulous hand and glancing at the spray of orange-blossoms on the boudoir table. "I'm supremely happy. But—one ought to feel a little frightened, surely? Are not you?"



"Isn't Billy Lucky?"

"Not a bit."

Georgina regarded her cousin with a faintly shocked expression, that changed slowly into a gaze of admiration.

"How perfectly lovely you look, Aimee!"

"Yes, don't I," returned Aimee simply, inspecting herself in the long mirror. "Isn't Billy lucky!" She suddenly encircled Georgina's waist with her arm. "I'm so glad you're happy, Georgie dear. Everybody's got to be happy today; even Aunt Erythea. In half an hour you and Alexander will stand at the altar. Don't tremble like that. I and Billy will be close to you. Dad will marry all four of us with splendid composure and dignity. There's nothing to be afraid of. Dad is at his best in emergencies like that."

"I do love dignity," said Georgina gratefully.

"Don't say nasty things to me on my wedding day. You'll get all the dignity you want. When you emerge after the wedding breakfast, the carriage with the two fat horses will be waiting for you; it will convey you to the train, and then away for—where did you say you were going?"

"Closeminster," said Georgina rapturously. "Alexander is to be inducted as assistant to the prebendary in six weeks time. I was so glad when he suggested we should go at once to the place where later his duties will lie. There, under the shadow of that glorious old cathedral—"

"You'll spend an idyllic, sedate honeymoon," said Aimee. "How perfect, dear. Aren't you grateful to me? If it hadn't been for my stunt, you might have missed a whole life's happiness. But Billy and I—"

"You're going through to Harwich on the car, aren't you, dear? Alexander told me—"

"There's Aunt Erythea!" said Aimee. "I'm glad mummie induced the old terror to come."

"Who is that with her?"

"My new uncle-in-law, Mr. Rivington. He's a peach! Aunt seems to be getting on with him splendidly. Look at her back! Who's the funny little man that seems half asleep, over by the cedar?"

"My Uncle Joseph," murmured Georgina. "He didn't realize till after we left Jervaulx, that I ought to have been at home with him all the time. I don't think he really grasps the position, even now."

"I don't wonder. These professors never do grasp anything," chuckled Aimee. "We've beaten Diana and Bertrand. They're to be married in London next week."

"Isn't all this delightful to think of," sighed Georgina, "after the horrors we went through! Did you ever hear what became of that woman you told me about—the wife of the burglar?"

"Never heard a word more of her; I think she got away."

"It all seems like some fearful nightmare now," shuddered her cousin.

"As the wife of a future bishop, you'll wipe it off your memory, Georgie, dear. But I never shall! The greatest time I ever had in my life. The joy of living, Georgie!" Lady Scroope suddenly entered the room.

"Children," she said gravely, "in five minutes we start for the chapel."

Aimee bolted into her room, followed by her mother.

* * * * * * *

"Do you see 'em yet?" whispered an apple-cheeked woman eagerly. The red poppies in her bonnet quivered as she raised herself on tiptoe. The staff of the Scroope Towers household was grouped on either side of the great porch, behind the assembled guests.

The apple-cheeked woman was Mrs. Sunning of Ivy cottage, Stanhoe; the only envoy from the Jervaulx district. Her eyes sparkled, she clutched grimly to her breast a large bag of rice, a barbarous custom still permitted at Scroope.

Aimee and Billy suddenly emerged from the porch at speed, followed closely by Alexander and Georgina, amid cheers, flower-petals and confetti. Mrs. Sunning, with a shrill cry, opened her batteries.

Alexander and Georgina, swerving to the right, climbed into the waiting carriage. Billy, escaping through the shower of rice, shot past to the car.

"Beat it!" he cried to the chauffeur, and caught Aimee by the hand. Together they scudded on foot down the drive.

The guests paused in astonishment. Lady Scroope, her eyelashes sparkling, laughed gently. Aunt Erythea jutted an inquiring nose round the pillars.

The bride and bridegroom, having made good speed for two hundred yards, turned into a clump of laurels that efficiently hid the Flying Sphinx. Billy snatched up a blue cloak that lay athwart the saddle.

"On with it!" cried Billy, glowing.

In a twinkling Aimee donned the wrap; as Billy bestrode the saddle she threw herself upon the pillion and her arms about his waist.

"Ready—partner!" Billy said.

"Let her rip!" panted Aimee joyously.

The Sphinx hummed swiftly along the park road and swung left onto the highway.

"Hold tight!"

The Sphinx breasted the long rise at sixty miles an hour. The wind screamed past them.

Aimee laughed aloud. Leaning forward from the pillion, she pressed the smallest, soft round kiss on the back of Billy's neck, as they disappeared in a cloud of sunlit dust.

[THE END]

Harvester Works Fast.

From 150 to 200 tons of sugar cane can be cut and sorted in a day with a New Orleans inventor's harvester.

L 912

JUNE

Get Your
Daily Bread - - Welcome Flours
at the J. C. Bailey Store St. Joe
Made by G. A. WARD of the
ALBION ROLLER MILLS, Albion Indiana

NEWS OF THE TOWN

$ Day, Warner's Hat Shop, Saturday.

Glen Cole and brother Harry of Five Corners, spent Sunday with relatives at Edgerton, Ohio.

Mrs. B. V. Widney spent from Wednesday until Saturday with Albion friends.

Mrs. Byron Widney and daughter were Saturday afternoon guests of Mrs. J. F. Balts at Spencerville.

A ten pound baby daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Aden Breneman, north of town Sunday afternoon.

GLASSES—$2.50 up, Benj. F. Griest, Eyesight specialist, American Bldg., Hicksville, Ohio.

Wilburt Campbell of Auburn and and Miss Kathryn Curie were Sunday supper guests of Henry Sechler and wife at Butler.

Fred Crooks, wife, daughter and granddaughter of Auburn Junction were Sunday guests of Miss Marie Goldsmith.

Wm. Randall, wife and grandson were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Reasoner. The latter is in quite poor health.

Mrs. John Guisinger and grandson of Garrett returned home Sunday afternoon after a ten days visit here with relatives.

Ray Reasoner and wife and F. R. Bowman, wife and daughter Eloise, were Sunday supper guests of Mrs. Mary Bowman at Cold Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. Bigelow Ramp of Columbia City, Mrs. Iva Tyler and daughter Dorene of Ligonier were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Randall.

Even Town Marshall Harter likes to have a new car to drive,—another Ford—and he is putting repairs on his barn to afford good housing for the new property.

A great many loads of fine gravel is going through St. Joe every day now and being put on the Lancaster-Morr road which is under imrovement at the present time.

Clayton Hathaway attended the commencement exercises of the graduation class at Wittenburg last week. His brother who was a junior there last year returned with him Sunday.

A birthday anniversary surprise was planned and carried out for Harvey Hull Saturday evening. Nineteen being present at his home two and a half miles north of town. Ice cream and cake were served.

Joe Hull and son Harvey attended the funeral of a Mr. Neusbaum at Springfield Center, Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Neusbaum will be remembered here as Miss Gladys Squires.

Having improved in a better way than was expected Rev. & Havens was able to return home Tuesday from the Hope Methodist hospital in Fort Wayne. A second operation did not prove necessary for his recovery as it was first thought.

Dr. and Mrs. John Morr and grandson of Albion were dinner guests Sunday of Frank Johnson and wife. In the afternoon the Morr family, Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Anna Baker, were guests of Will Koch and wife. Clay Coburn family were also guests in the latter home.

H. R. Minnick, M. D.
St. Joe, Indiana
Office at Residence
PHONE NO. 16X

Willis Baker visited in the Cal Saylor home south of Coburntown several days the past weeks.

The first oil was put on the streets Wednesday. The oil is being hauled from Auburn.

James Harter and wife visited relatives in Butler Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Wals of Edon, Ohio, called on Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Laux, Sunday.

Mrs. C. H. Havens and children and B E. Widney called on Rev. C. H. Havens at the hospital in Fort Wayne, Sunday.

S. S. Widney returned Sunday evening from a two weeks visit with relatives at Fort Wayne, Marion and Harlan.

Mrs. Tom White is so far recovered as to be able to be out again She spent Sunday afternoon with her daughter Mrs. Clarence Hart.

Miss Mildred Gee returned home Eriday night from her school work at Thompson, Illinois, to spend her vacation with her parents.

Mrs. J. C. Hull went to Fort Wayue Tuesday on account of the illness of her mother, Mrs. Sarah Walter.

While in Hicksville recently Mrs Vina Fish met her couiin, Lavel Potts of California, whom she had not seen for fifty years.

The Misses Aleen and Twila Showers of Auburn are guests of their cousin, Miss Martha Miser, for the week.

Mrs. Maude Mahoney and mother, Mrs. Mary Andress of Defiance, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Alice Warner and daughter, Mrs. F. W. Langley.

Children's Day exercises will be held at the Methodist Protestant Church on Sunday, June 23. Definite announcements will be made next week in the church column.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Foltz entertained at dinner Sunday Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Buckingham. The main feature of the dinner was a two pound spring chicken.

The Friendly Bible class of the M. P. Sunday School met at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Shilling Tuesday evening in a social way. A potluck supper was served and games were enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Pflaummer drove to Springfield, Ohio last Tuesday to attend the commencement exercises at Wittenburg College. They returned Friday bringing home with them their son, Lawrence, who has been there at school the past term.

Correct Millinery for $1. at Warner's Hat Shop, Saturday.

Miss Susan Sechler went to Ft. Wayne Wednesdey for a few days visit with relatives.

Mrs. Anna Dilley went to Spencerville Tuesday evening for a few days visit with friends.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies Aid Society of the M. P. Church has been postponed one week, to meet with Mrs. Belle Barney on Thursday, June 21 instead of this week.

Walter Wiers and wife of Lima, Ohio, Miss Florence Filhart of Fostoria, Ohio, Ira Sherrick, wife and daughter Waneta and sons Harold and Holland and Miss Ruth Lotsenbiser all of Auburn, were Sunday afternoon guests of W. E Henley and wife.

The following young people enjoyed a weiner and marshmallow roast near Bear's bridge, below Spencerville on the St. Joe river Tuesday evening: The Misses Edna Jackson, Marjorie Curie, Portia Hadsell, Mary Armstrong, Ethel Pflaummer and Kathryn Curie and Messrs Olen Walts, Donald Kinsey, Robert Johnson, Harvey Hull, Stanley Means and Charles Miser.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Van Scoik of Auburn, Mrs. Blanche Michaelis and Mrs. Jessie Baxter of Waterloo were guests of the Rebekah lodge Friday evening. After the regular session members of the I. O. O. F. joined them and listened to Mrs. Michaelis give her report from the Grand Lodge held recently at Indianapolis. Mr. Van Scoik and Mrs Baxter, District Deputies, also gave interesting talks. Ice cream and cake were served to about thirty-five.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kinsey entertained from Friday until Tuesday Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson of Springfield, Ohio, and Mrs. Ollie Barringer of Warsaw. Their daughter, Mrs. Albert Wade and little daughter of Detroit, are still their guests, and Mrs. Harriet Sechler was also a Sunday guest.

Zay Sailer has announced his marriage to Miss Edith Keller of Fort Wayne, which occurred some eight months ago in an Ohio town, but which they kept secret; only the bride's mother being told. They have purchased the cottage belonging to Mrs. Ella Smith, which is located on Spencerville street, and will reside here.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Sailer entertained their children over Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Zay Sailer of Fort Wayne, Mr. and Mrs. Don Keller of Harlan, and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Sailer of Chicago. The latter couple came Saturday and will remain for several days.

The following people will represent Concord township at the State Sunday School convention next week at Indianapolis: Mrs. Chas. Koch, Robert Johnson of the St. Joe M. P. Church, Olen Dermott of the Christian Church, Stanley Means of the Lutheran Church, and Miss Jeanette Provines of the Concord M. P. Church.

Farmers in some 1,200 counties kept accounts of the expense, labor, and profit connected with their farming enterprises for 1922, and by means of these accounts made analysis of their of their business, with the assistance of their county agricultural extension agents, to determine how to increase their net income over a period of years.

NEAR HARVEST TIME!

BINDERS AND MOWERS

Don't forget that Harvest Time Is Near and you, who will possibly need a Binder or Mower, should consult us now as to our prices. As you all know harvest tools have already advanced 10 per cent for next year. We have a limited supply at the old price, so you had better place your order now.

BINDER TWINE

A carlord of McCormick-Deering Standard Binder Twine will arrive soon. Get our price which is no higher than the cheaper twine. We guarantee every foot of twine.

FLORENCE OIL STOVES

We do not need to tell you of the good qualities of this stove anymore, because, just ask your neighbor. Maybe he has one.

We have placed 74 of these stoves in this and the surrounding community in the past 14 months.

Each purchaser is our best reference. The Florence costs you less than one-half the price of other stoves, and has an Iron Clad guarantee that beats any other Stove Company's guarantee.

The Florence Oven is the Perfect Mate to the Florence Stove, a combination that makes cooking and baking a pleasure instead of a hardship.

Let Us Demonstrate This Stove to You.

Hardware Wm. Curie Implements
ST. JOE, INDIANA

Joseph Koch of Fort Wayne, spent over Sunday here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Koch.

Ed Woodcox of Logansport, spent over Sunday here with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. John Woodcox and sons visited their son, Gray and wife at Butler Sunday.

Mrs. Jacob Sechler, Merritt Sechler, Mrs. Frank Curie, son Charles and daughter Ruth, of this place, and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Mavis and two children of Auburn, visited Mrs. Martha Grosh at Cedarville Sunday.

John Draggoo and family of Bulah, Michigan, have arrived this week and will reside with Mrs. Draggoo's mother, Mrs. Anna Baker, for the present. They have sold their Michigan farm and will purchase one here.

Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Minnick had as Sunday dinner guests Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Stonestreet and twins, Billy and Betty, of near Garrett, Miss Latha Burtzner of Auburn, and Miss Treva Burtzner of Garrett. Afternoon guests fere Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thimler of Grabill.

Mrs. C. C. Bassett was a Hicksville visitor Saturday morning.

A good crowd attended the home-made ice cream social on the Lutheran church lawn last Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Brunson and two children were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Seavers, near Logan, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Leigh of Lima, Ohio, were Saturday and Sunday guests of the former's sister, Mrs. A. D. Goodwin and family.

Mrs. Foster Gee and children spent from Tuesday until Saturday guests of her sister, Mrs. George Packer and family at Butler.

Mr. and Mrs. James Sherwood and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Carper of near Auburn, were Sunday afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. Foster Gee.

Mrs. Earl Smith went to Holgate Saturday morning, returning Monday noon. Her little son, Jacques, who had been visiting his grandmother there and her husband's sister, Miss Golda Dancer, returned home with her.

As a correction to a statement in last week's issue of the News that the grade of Martha Miser in the eighth grade examination was 94.6 per cent, we were informed that it was 95.4 per cent.

Sunday School Report.

The following is a true and correct report of the various Sunday Schools in this neighborhood for last Sunday.

Christian	105	$ 4.62
M. P	73	3.98
Lutheran	105	7.19
M. E. Spencer	104	8 21
Lutheran	90	5.06
Newville U. B.	106	5.42
Christian	90	4 59
Coburntown	69	3.62
Concord	70	3.04
Mt. Pleasant	85	3 74
Rehobeth	81	4 47

Over Two Thousand Garments--All New Spring Merchandise
Will Go at the ONE PRICE
$25
$25 Buys a C. B. Shane & Co. $35, $40, $45 Whipcord or Bedford Cord Waterproof Coat
$25 Gives You Your Choice of More Than 1,500 Men's and Young Men's Spring Suits
$25 Buys a New Spring Hart Schaffner & Marx Fancy All-Wool $35 Suit
$25 Buys a $40 or $50 Hart Schaffner & Marx New Spring Topcoat
Regulars, Stouts, Stubs, Longs and Extra Sizes
Remember—More Than 2,000 Garments All to Sell at One Price, $25
PATTERSON-FLETCHER CO.

JUNE

L 912

639

THIS PAPER IS YOUR SERVANT,
USE IT WEEKLY

ST. JOE NEWS.

BOOST ST. Joe.
BOOST THE BAND.
BOOST THE PAPER

VOL. XXXVII. ST. JOE DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, JUNE 21, 1923 No. 25

Wilder--Hart Wedding

A pretty wedding took place Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hart of east of Spencerville, in which their daughter, Bernice, and W. Lehr Wilder, son of Mr. and W. W. Wilder of the same neighborhood, were united in the holy tie of matromony, Rev. W. H. Bransford of Hicksville officiating.

Besides the parents of both bride and groom, there were present Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Hart and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence of Hicksville, Fred Hart and family, Mrs. Alice Hart, William Baltz and Grant Baltz. Following the ceremony a two-course luncheon was served.

These young people are highly respected and are very active in the church and societies at Coburns Corners. The bride, 22 years of age, has taught school at Newville for the past two years and the groom, 24 years old, has been teaching school in Defiance county, Ohio.

The couple left Monday to attend normal school at Defiance this summer and both will probably teach again next term.

The News joins their many friends in wishing them a long and happy married life. Congratulations!

* * *

D. C. McCann who has been suffering with blood poisoning in the Garrett hospital for several weeks is much improved and expects to be brought home Saturday.

Husband Seeks Divorce

His wife deserted him while he was sick and helpless and needed her care, Darwin D. Frye, of Coburntown, Spencer township, avers in a complaint for a divorce that he has filed in the DeKalb circuit court against Olive Frye.

The Fryes were married September 9, 1918, and they have one child, Virginia, now almost three years old. The plaintiff says his wife lost her love and affection for him and treated him with indifference. A year and a half ago he was taken sick with typhoid fever and was ill for fifteen months. He adds that he almost died, but that in spit of his helpless condition his wife refused to care for him or to assist in his care. He asserts that while he was in this condition she abandoned him, taking their child and the small amount of household goods they owned, as well as his automobile, but she removed to Hobart, Ind., and has been there ever since.

The plaintiff sets out that since he has recovered from his illness he has appealed to his wife to return to him, but that she refuses to answer his letters, and she denies him the possession or society of the child.—Auburn Star.

* * *

The Commercial Acceptance Trust of Chicago, has filed suit in the DeKalb Circuit court on a promissory note against Fred Saylor of north of town. The complaint says that Saylor executed a note for about $450 to F. W. Silberg of Spencerville, last August, to be payable in monthly installments, and the defendant has failed to meet them. Silberg assigned the note to the Chicago company.

K. K. K. Have Open Meeting

The DeKalb county organization of the Ku Klux Klan held an open meeting at the home of Will Hamm east of town, Monday evening. Several St. Joe men attended, curious to learn what the Klan stands for and such other information as the secret order would give out to the public.

Not many knew of the meeting, for it was not advertised extensively. Only men of age were admitted and they were requested to not tell what they heard or saw. Whether any of our men became members or not cannot be learned, of course.

The Klansmen, all masked and robed in white, arrived in automobiles. Guards were stationed at the drive way of the Hamm home and did not let anyone enter except members after the meeting had begun at the barn, for fear of interrupting the speaker. The meeting disbanded at a late hour. It was announced that a closed meeting would be held here soon.

Crowds Attend Concerts

Have you been attending the band concerts this year? Do you enjoy the privilege of hearing the splendid music it gives every Saturday night on the streets of St. Joe.

If you have not been attending you are one of only a few in this and the surrounding community who do not. The increase in Saturday night crowds since the band concerts began three weeks ago is amazing, and the merchants are encouraged on to an effort to give better service to their trade.

That the band is appreciated and its music enjoyed is demonstrated in the fact that nearly every home as well as every business is contributing toward its support,

The band is making great progress this year in many ways. It has contracted to give concerts at Spencerville every Wednesday night and it will be engaged on several other special occasions.

$5,000 Suit Is Settled

The suit of Mrs. Anna B. Frank of Auburn, against the Fort Wayne & Northwestern Railway Co. for $5,000 damages for the death of her husband, the late O. Vernon Frank, has been settled out of court and the case dismissed.

Mr. Frank was a rural mail carrier and resided north of Auburn. On January 2, 1920, he was crossing the tracks a mile north of Auburn at the Morning Star road in his automobile when he was struck by an interurban car and killed.

Mrs. Frank, in her complaint, said her husband was cautious in approaching the crossing, but that the interurban car was traveling fifty miles an hour, and gas no signal. Mr. Frank left seven dependent children. The amount of the settlement was not made public.

Keller Reunion

Mr. and Mrs. Ora Baker entertained the Keller family reunion at their home two miles north of town Saturday. A basket dinner was served at the noon hour and a fine program was given in the afternoon. The following officers were elected to serve at the next reunion: President, Charley Keller of Butler; Secretary, Mrs. Dessie Webber of Edgerton, Ohio; Treasurer, William Gloy of Butler, and chairman of program committee, Frank Keller of near Edgerton, Ohio. Ninety-six were present to enjoy the day.

CIVIL WAR VET DEAD

CHARLES RHODES OF SPENCERVILLE DIED AT FORT WAYNE

Charles A. Rhoades, 79 years of age died Sunday morning at a Fort Wayne hospital of complicated diseases. Mr Rhoades had been failing in health for some time and about a week ago was taken to the hospital.

OBITURAY NOTICE

Charles A. Rhodes the only child of Mathias and Clestia A. Rhodes was born in Akron, Ohio, October 30, 1843, and departed this life at the Methodist Hospital at Fort Wayne, June 17, 1923, aged 79 years 7 months and 17 days.

When a young man he came to this country with his parents and located on a farm on the Allen and DeKalb County line southwest of Spencerville, where he spent most of his days in farming.

The deceased was a pioneer settles, a worker in his community and an intensely patriotic American citizen and soldier, who loved his country and offered his life as a sacrifice on the alter of liberty when the nation was tottering.

As a pioneer settler he was not the first but nevertheless at the time of his coming this country was one of vast forest, swamps and ponds with few churches, schools and roads. He courageously did his part in helping to change it into the beautiful country we know today.

As a soldier he served his country in freedom's cause as a volunteer in Co. G. of the 74th Ohio Regiment of Infantry from October 26, 1861 until October 3, 1862. Being wounded and disabled he was sent to the hospital at Columbus, Ohio, where he received an honorable discharge. His love for the old flag under which he faught never diminished and one of the pleasing sights to him was to see Old Glory floating in the free American air.

Mr. Rhodes was also a member the Masonic Lodge No. 556 of Spencerville, to which order he faithfully contended.

His first marriage was to Katie Bowman. This marriage was blessed with three children, Frank Rhodes of Akron, Ohio, and Rufus and William who died in childhood. The death summons called his first companion to the Spirit world.

In 1877 he was again united in marriage to Aroline Burley and to this union were born three children Metta Furnish who resides on the old homestead, Burnette Rhodes of Concord Indiana, and Lorie Newman, deceased.

The deceased leaves to mourn their loss a wife, three children, nine grandchildren and a host of friends.

Funeral services were held Tuesday at 2 o'clock P. M. from the home, Rev. F. E. Brewster officiating. Burial at White City Cemetery, E. R. Kinsey funeral director.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to thank our neighbors and friends who so kindly assisted during the sickness and bereavement of our dear husband and father.

Mrs. Rhodes and children.

* * *

Mrs. Minnie Gee and daughter, Mildred, and Abner Trostel will represent the Coburn's Corners Sunday School at the state convention being held at Indianapolis this week. They accompanied Mrs. Ida Hoss and daughter, Miss Esther, of near Butler, and made the trip by auto.

You can not afford to miss the $ Day Sale at Warner's Hat Shop, Saturday.

39 Years Ago

John Leighty Jr. is at home on his summer vacation.

Dr. Bowman drives a new trotting horse.

Rev. E. W. Erick of White Pigeon, Michigan, was in town Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Culbertson of Auburn, were guests of P. A. Shirts and wife over last Sabbath.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Davis left on Friday morning of last week for a visit among friends in Ohio.

Several of the young ladies of this place will attend the Normal to be held at Newville, commencing some time next month.

James Reed and P. A. Shirts are building a barn for William Simonton.

The citizens of St. Joe were aroused from their slumbers last Monday night about 12 o'clock by the ringing of the church bell and the cry of fire. It was found upon getting out that Joe Knisely's house was ablaze, but through the prompt exertions of the men who first arrived upon the scene, the flames were extinguished before they had done any more harm than to burn through one of the side walls and the door. Five minutes more and it couldn ot have been saved. It caught from a pan of coals that had been set out the night before for a mosquito smudge.

COAL

Fill up and keep filled up. Don't forget that the place to store your coal is in your bins, not in your dealer's yard, not at the mines.

Prices are now lowest of the season with all prospects of them going up, as coal is being mined below the cost of production at the present time.

We are trying to give you good advice. It is up to you to take it.

Place your orders now for the following coals:

Hocking Valley, Egg and Lump
Buffalo White Ash, none better
Hard Coal Chestnut and Egg

Please settle your last season's accounts now and make your credit good.

FEED

Hominy, Bran, Middlings, Tankage and other feeds.

The St. JOE ELEVATOR

Samuel Keesler, Mgr. Grain Dept.
Bert Jackson, Mgr. Coal Dept.

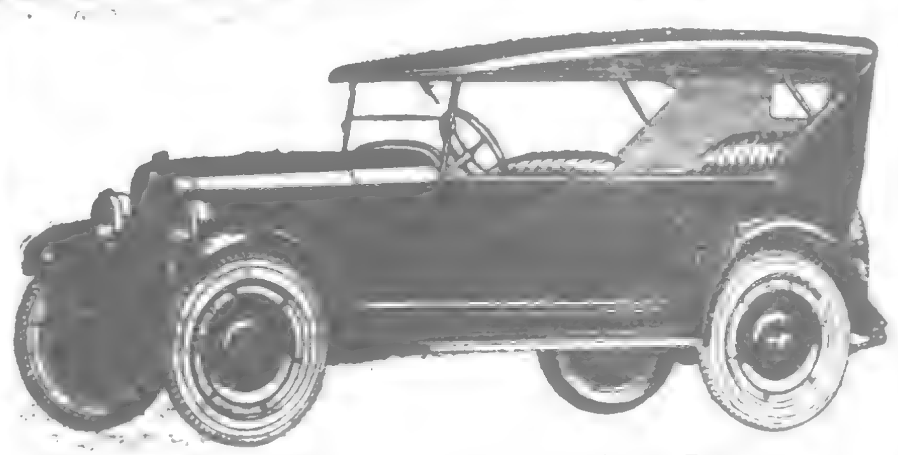
Call on us—glad to see you. Come in whether you want anything or not.

What He Needed

A stump speaker shouted: "I want tax reform, I want land reform, I want dress reform—" and then some fellow in the crowd retorted; Yes, and what you really need is chloroform."

That's what the man got for talking too much. Possibly someone will yet suggest chloroform for us because we keep telling about the advantages of our Bank, but we have such a good bank we can't help talking about it. We are not trying to reform anyone. We ARE trying to be of service to everyone by offering the facilities of a strong, reliable accommodating bank. If you are not already a patron, we invite you now. You'll be welcomed

St. Joe Valley Bank---A State Bank



Five Passenger Touring Car
$885, f. o. b. Detroit

The comfort and ease of riding of the good Maxwell have aroused great enthusiasm among owners. Its pronounced beauty, its reliability and its economy are other reasons for the remarkable inroads it is making in public regard.

ST. JOE GARAGE

Service all the time
Phone No. 36 Days No. 76 Nights

THE GOOD MAXWELL

CANNING TIME

CANS

"IDEAL QUICK SEAELRS"

Without a doubt IDEAL QUICK SEALER cans are the best on the market and because of that fact they are the most used jar made today. We will be glad to supply you.

RUBBERS

"GOOD LUCK"

We will have plenty of the famous "Good Luck" can rubbers, the kind all ladies want to use in canning.

E. R. KINSEY

Hardware Furniture Undertaking

JUNE

L 912

American Farm Bureau

From Left to Right—Guy L. Noble, Secretary National Committee of Boys' and Girls' Club Work; Miss Maude E. Sheridan, State Club Leader of Colorado; Bertha Boger, Elaine Hendricks, President O. E. Bradfute of the American Farm Bureau Federation; Beulah Rodgers, Esther Bollbaugh, Katherine Bollbaugh, John W. Coverdale, Secretary of the American Farm Bureau Federation; Miss Josephine Arnquist, Assistant State Club Leader of Iowa.

America's champion canning club team sailed May 23 for France. A two-month's trip abroad is their reward for winning the canning contest held in Chicago last fall in connection with the first national boys' and girls' club congress.

Esther Bollbaugh, Katherine Bollbaugh and Beulah Rodgers, all three of Eddyville, Iowa, made up the first team. Bertha Boger and Elaine Hendricks of Burlington, Colorado, placed second.

Miss Josephine Arnquist, state agent from Ames, Iowa, accompanied the first team and Miss Maude E. Sheridan, state club leader of Colorado, the second. The party visited Chicago for three days. While in Chicago they gave demonstrations before the extension directors of 12 northwestern states. From Chicago they went to Washington where they met President Harding and Department of Agricultural officials.

In France these American farm girls will give a series of demonstrations in canning methods. As guests of the American committee for devastated France they will visit all parts of France. They will also make a study of French cooking.

BIG BUSINESS IN LOUISIANA

Farm Bureau Federation Has Saved Members More Than $75,000 in Three Months.

The purchasing department of the Louisiana Farm Bureau federation, through G. A. Foss, purchasing agent, has done business totaling more than $200,000 for the first three months of 1923, and has saved farm bureau members in Louisiana more than $75,000.

The co-operative purchases made include 5,500 tons of acid phosphate, sold to the farmers at a price of $14.25 a ton f. o. b. New Orleans, against a general market price of $25 a ton; 2,500 tons of nitrate of soda at an average of almost $20 a ton; and 100 tons of nitrate of lime, saving not estimated.

G. A. Foss, Purchasing Agent.

Mr. Foss now has a deal on for several hundred thousand rice and potato bags for the use of Louisiana commodity associations, and it is expected that a considerable saving will be made over the general market price.

FRUIT GROWERS IN MOTION

Organization Formed in Michigan With Capital of $100,000—$25,000 Paid In.

Co-operative fruit growers' associations of western and southwestern Michigan have organized a state fruit exchange, to be known as the Michigan Fruit Growers, Inc. Its authorized capitalization is $100,000 with $25,000 paid in at the start. It proposes to affiliate with the National Federated Fruit Growers, Inc.

Headquarters of the exchange are to be in Benton Harbor, with branch offices at other points where the volume of business may warrant such office.

The exchange looks forward to affiliation with the Michigan state farm bureau under the farm bureau's commodity plan of control. Such affiliation will enable the exchange to secure for its members in a more direct way the seed, purchasing, traffic, publicity, legislative, wool and organization services of the state farm bureau and to co-operate with the other great commodity exchanges in exchanging sales services and in getting together on matters of common interest.

POTATO GROWERS IN BIG NATIONAL BODY

Co-operative Plan to Market Crops This Season.

Under the leadership of the co-operative marketing department of the American Farm Bureau federation, potato growers in all sections of the nation are organizing under the standard co-operative marketing plan to merchandise their crop collectively. It is expected that enough strong state potato marketing organizations will be established this season to form a powerful national body.

In addressing North Dakota potato growers, Walton Peteet, marketing director of the American Farm bureau, said:

"We hope to have enough states organized so that we will have a strong national organization in time to have a marked influence on the marketing of this year's potato crop. We now have strong state or other unit organizations over practically the entire heavy potato-producing region of the United States. These organizations are grower-owned and grower-controlled. Standard potato marketing contracts, as prepared by our legal adviser, Aaron Sapiro, are being signed by the growers as the basis for improved merchandising of their tuber crop."

No less than ten states are organizing to market their potatoes under the Peteet-Sapiro plan. The Maine Potato Growers' exchange has completed its organization campaign under the direction of S. G. Rubinow and has signed up 60 per cent of its entire production on a five-year contract.

Mr. Rubinow is now in Minnesota, where he is in direct charge of the organization campaign which will recast the Minnesota Potato exchange on the basis of 100 per cent pool for five years. Mr. Peteet spent May 4 and 5 in Minnesota to aid in the potato campaign.

In western New York the Empire State Potato Growers' Co-operative association, Inc., is being organized.

W. S. Hill, secretary of the Colorado state farm bureau, is in active charge of the potato organization work in that state and is conducting a campaign to enroll all the Colorado potato growers in a state co-operative association.

Seventeen local Irish potato selling associations in eight parishes are affiliated with the Louisiana Farm Bureau Irish Potato Growers' exchange.

In Wisconsin, plans for a state potato growers' exchange have been completely outlined under the direction of Mr. Peteet. The Wisconsin organization will center in Barron county.

Mr. Peteet and Mr. Sapiro have been in frequent conference with the directors and officials of the Michigan Potato exchange and there is no doubt but that the Michigan growers will be ready to join the national organization as soon as it is perfected.

The eastern shore of Virginia has an efficient potato marketing organization.

500 Cars for Iowa.

Through the good offices of the transportation department of the American Farm Bureau Federation, 500 cars were delivered on the Rock Island lines in Iowa the last two weeks in April for relief of grain shippers in that territory.

Good Care Will Pay.

A few chickens well cared for is better than a large flock made to care for themselves.

BETTER ROADS

Pranks of Temperature Ruin Expensive Roads

Jack Frost and Merry Sunshine are wrinkling the brows of highway engineers and contractors. Their pranks are ruining expensive hard-surfaced and paved highways.

During the winter months frost penetrates deep under the road surface, freezing and refreezing the subsoil numerous times. Then, just like freezing water breaks the water pipe, the subsoil bulges up and cracks the surface of the highway. Rain and slush seeps through these cracks, freezes again, and the process of destruction goes merrily on.

When spring comes the final touches are put on the breaking up of the road. The spring rains rush through the yawning cracks and wash away the subsoil, leaving a hollow shell. The warm sunshine aids in the destruction, drying the surface and making it brittle. It is no time then until the road crumbles away under the heavy traffic impacts.

Highway engineers of a big rubber concern travel and transport bureau declare that rapidly-increasing highway travel is focusing the attention of road-building experts to this underlying cause of highway destruction. They say that governmental and private agencies have, in the past ten years, lost sight of adequate subgrade soil treatment in their eagerness to produce hard, wear-resisting surfaces for highways.

Men prominent in highway development, say the bureau's experts, now recognize the urgent need of spending the necessary time and money to build proper road foundations and drainages before expensive stretches of highway are constructed. Searching study and analysis of subsoils will figure more prominently in future road-building than any other phase of the work, they say.

More Autos Registered Increase Highway Fund

In 1922 motor vehicle registrations more than maintained the rate of rapid increase which has caused the total registration to grow from 3,500,000 in 1916 to 12,238,375 motor cars and trucks at the end of 1922, according to the bureau of public roads. Last year the increase amounted to 1,775,080 registrations, as compared with an average yearly rate of approximately 1,390,000 for the preceding five years.

The table issued by the bureau gives registrations by states which total as follows for the whole United States:

Private passenger cars	10,890,112
Taxicabs, busses, and cars for hire	69,459
Motor trucks and commercial cars	1,278,804
Trailers	29,328
Motorcycles	182,714

A comparison of the truck registration figures with those for the preceding year shows an increase of 30 per cent, indicating that this phase of highway transport is undergoing rapid development. The increase in truck registration is not confined to industrial sections. Such agricultural states as Virginia, Indiana and Florida show increases of 33 per cent, 30 per cent and 29 per cent respectively, which seems to indicate that many farmers are changing their method of hauling as a result of road improvement.

The total gross registration revenue amounted to 152,047,823, of which $117,093,116 was applied to road work under the supervision of the state highway departments. Eighteen states taxed gasoline, deriving a revenue of $11,928,442, not all of the states reporting for a full twelve-month period. Of this amount, $6,474,178 was spent under the supervision of the state highway departments.

Spanish Trail Will Be Costly to Construct

The old Spanish Trail, a national highway from Jacksonville, Fla., to Los Angeles, Cal., along the Gulf coast and through the territory immediately north of the Mexican border, is destined to include several sections of road the equal of which will not be found in the United States. It is estimated that a road through the marshes strong enough to withstand any gulf storm and to bear the weight of artillery would cost from $800,000 to $400,000 a mile.

Motor Cars Responsible for Good Road Building

The great demand for motorcars that is responsible for many automobile factories working day and night is attributed in a measure to the work accomplished by good roads advocates during the past few years. In turn the automobile itself is accountable for many good roads movements. The two are closely linked.

Australian Government to Introduce Road Bill

It is expected that the Australian government will introduce a main road bill for New South Wales at the next session, creating a board to take charge of and finance the main roads for that province, says Consul R. Wormuth, Sydney, in a report to the department of commerce. At present there is a lack of coherence and consequent inefficiency in the matter of road building, because the control is divided among [illegible]

Spread of Wheat Rust by Barberry

Scientists Have Shown That Epidemics Disappear With Killing of Bushes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"Farmers proved that the common barberry spreads black stem rust to nearby wheat fields. Scientists showed why and how. Both have shown that rust epidemics disappeared when the bushes were destroyed," said Dr. E. C. Stakman of the United States Department of Agriculture. It is related that as early as 1720 a farmer in England became so angry at seeing a large barberry bush on a neighbor's farm, but near his own wheat, that he poured boiling water around the roots of the plant at night until he had killed it.

Bushes Source of Trouble.

A number of writers observed during the time from about 1750 to 1865 that wherever barberry bushes were found near wheat fields there also was found infected grain. Although it was not known just how rust could come from the barberry, it was natural that many farmers who had noted the damage to their own fields should be convinced that the bushes were the source of the trouble and should be removed. Differences of opinion between farmers and owners of barberry bushes became so sharp as to cause a so-called barberry war, which raged from about 1805 until 1855. Farmers whose grain had been destroyed by black stem rust often destroyed the guilty barberry bushes without even asking the owner's permission.

De Bary Solved Problem.

"Scientists," says Doctor Stakman, "finally tried to find out whether the farmers were right. They were." The matter finally was cleared up in 1865 by De Bary, a German scientist, who made careful experiments and found that the life history of the black stem-rust parasite is as follows: The black stage of the rust lives through the winter. It cannot infect grains or grasses. The spores (seeds), however, do infect the common barberry, on which they produce the cluster-cup stage of the rust. The cluster-cup spores are then blown by the wind and infect grains and grasses, on which they produce the red or summer stage of the rust. This stage continues to propagate and spread until late summer or fall, when the black stage again is produced.

Hundreds of scientists have shown that De Bary was right. No one any longer questions the fact. The barberry stands convicted.

Culture of Clover for Profitable Crop of Seed

If you have a heavy growth of clover and wish to get a crop of seed, cut the clover as soon as the heads turn brown; cure in the windrow and, as soon as the hay rattles in the handling, haul under cover; spread one peck of coarse salt over each two-horse load as put in the haymow. If salt cannot be had put a layer of straw or old hay between each load. The hay will take up the moisture in the clover and prevent heating in the mow. The side delivery hay rake is superior to the ordinary hay rake, as it leaves the hay loose so the hot air can cure as well as the sunshine. This rake will take the place of the tedder, as the fine leaves and stems are not broken in the handling and lost.

Flies Will Reduce Milk Flow of Cows Materially

The dairyman finds the fly an expensive inhabitant of his premises. Flies reduce the milk flow materially by annoying the cows. It is the practice now to protect the cows through the use of repellant mixtures. The extension division of the college suggests this mixture: Take twelve ounces of crude carbolic acid, twelve ounces of turpentine, twelve ounces of oil of tar, and three-fourths of an ounce of tannin. To these should be added enough kerosene to make five gallons of the mixture. Use this material in an atomizer and spray the cattle in the stable night and morning.

Sudan Grass Excellent Emergency Pasture Crop

If a farmer is going to run short of hay or pasture, he may well consider putting out a piece of Sudan grass as an emergency crop. Two cuttings of hay may be made in one season, giving a total yield of two to four tons per acre. Although it is relished by stock if cut early enough, it has no higher feeding value than ordinary grass hay. The feeding value of Sudan grass hay may be greatly increased by growing soy beans or cowpeas with it. For some farmers Sudan grass would be of even more value as pasture or as a soiling crop than for hay.

Feather Eating Habit Is Sometimes Hard to Cure

The reason that fowls eat feathers is the fact that they are seeking after certain classes of foods which they need but are not getting, says Harry Embleton, head of the poultry department of the A. and M. college. This class of food is represented by any form of milk, tankage, meat scraps, or alfalfa pasturage. If one or more of the above feeds are furnished them in sufficient quantities they will get over this habit.

It is sometimes hard to correct the trouble once it becomes a habit. Persistent cases often have to be killed.

Alfalfa One of Our Best Forage Crops

Succeeds in Various Soils; Withstands All Rigors.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Alfalfa is one of the leading forage crops in this country, says the United States Department of Agriculture. It is also widely distributed throughout the world, growing in various soils and meeting the rigors of both heat and cold. It requires considerable moisture, but it does best in a relatively dry atmosphere where water is available for irrigation. In the United States it succeeds at altitudes ranging from below sea level in the Imperial valley, Cal., to 8,000 feet above the sea in the mountains of Colorado.

Alfalfa withstands hot weather well where the atmosphere is dry; most of the damage is done by very cold weather in winter and spring. It is not known to what extent cold alone does damage to the crop, but it is known that low temperatures combined with other winter conditions cause a high mortality among the plants. Alternate freezing and thawing on poorly drained soils often does much damage by heaving the plants out of the ground and breaking the roots.

Deep loams with open subsoils are best, but where other conditions are favorable the crop has a very wide range of adaptation. It does not thrive on a soil that has an impervious subsoil, hardpan, or bedrock near the surface. However, it has been known to do well on soils with limestone ledges 18 inches below the surface. Good surface and underdrainage are necessary. During the growing season complete submergence for 24 to 48 hours may do much injury, but when the plants are dormant they may remain under water several days without danger. The crop seldom succeeds where the water table comes close to the surface, especially if it fluctuates considerably.

Discuss Insect Pests of United States and Canada

As a result of an international conference on insects of importance both to the northwestern states and the prairie provinces of Canada, which was held at Winnipeg, Manitoba, recently, plans were perfected for conducting experimental work in the control of these insects. The experiments are to be carried on in such a way as to render the results comparable in all the districts involved. A base map of all the international territory affected has been prepared for the purpose of plotting the occurrence of the principal insect pests of common importance to Canada and the United States.

The principal pests discussed were grasshoppers, the western wheat-stem sawfly, the pale western cutworm, and the Hessian fly in Canada. The bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture was represented, and other American entomologists were present. The meeting was addressed by Deputy Minister of Agriculture Davis, of Manitoba, and also by the acting president of the agricultural college.

Chickens and Eggs Sold Make Family Comfortable

Comfort and financial security were attained last year by a Colorado woman through her poultry keeping, although the main crop was almost a failure. The wheat crop was only 90 bushels and the barley 80, besides a small amount of corn to be fed to the live stock. A report received by the United States Department of Agriculture states that after culling her flock and selling the culls for $106 this woman bought lumber to enlarge the poultry house so as to have more space for the pullets retained. The eggs and chickens sold brought $597.20, which was sufficient to pay the annual taxes, to pay the interest on money borrowed for the farm, build the poultry house, add a new room to their tar-paper house, and finish the inside of two rooms. This enabled the family to have a cozy, warm, three-room house, which was much more comfortable than the one room and lean-to kitchen they had had before.

Taming of Guineas Must Be Started Right Away

Guineas can be tamed if their training begins immediately after hatching. If you want them tame it is best to hatch them under common hens and keep them confined while small, teaching them to roost in the hen-houses. In this way they will be quite tame, though they will probably never care to be handled. Some like to have them wild. In that case they may be hatched by the guinea hens, though on a farm, if there are enemies about and they are allowed to roam, they may be killed.

Guineas are noisy, but they have a place on the farm. Demand for them is growing in Eastern markets. They are most excellent eating, some finding them similar to prairie chickens. They are fair layers. The eggs are richer than hens' eggs and are said to keep longer.

High Value of Feeding Eggs to Little Chicks

Poultrymen occasionally doubt the value of feeding eggs to baby chicks. Experiments conducted at the University of Wisconsin show that the addition of a small amount of eggs to the ration for baby chicks will give surprisingly good results.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

Copyright, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.

LESSON FOR JUNE 24

REVIEW

Great Men and Women of the Old Testament—Devotional Reading, Psalm 99.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us."—Heb. 12:1.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Favorite Stories of the Quarter.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Favorite Heroes and Heroines of the Quarter.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Some Great Characters of the Old Testament.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lessons for Today From the Lives of Old Testament Characters.

Three methods are suggested. The first method is taken from Crannell's Pocket Lessons. The general subject is, "What Twenty Centuries Teach the Twentieth."

I. The Lesson of Vision.

1. Abraham, the Pioneer—Lesson 2.

2. Moses, the Nation Builder—Lesson 4.

3. Isaiah, the Kingdom Seer—Lesson 9.

II. The Lesson of Leadership.

1. Samuel, the Foundation Layer—Lesson 6.

2. David, the Solidifier—Lesson 7.

3. Nehemiah, the Rebuilder—Lesson 11.

III. The Lesson of Courage.

1. Elijah, the Reformer—Lesson 8.

2. Jeremiah, the Truth Teller—Lesson 10.

3. Esther, the Intercessor—Lesson 12.

IV. The Lesson of Character.

1. Ruth, the Woman Who Clave—Lesson 5.

2. Joseph, the Son Who Remembered—Lesson 3.

V. The Lesson of Life.

Jesus, the Summit of the Old Testament, Foundation of the New, Life of Both—Lesson 1.

The second method — Character Study. The different characters can be assigned the week before, upon which the pupils are to bring a brief essay or report giving a sketch of the particular hero.

A third method is to give a brief summary of each lesson.

Lesson 1—The truth concerning the risen Christ is the answer for all our questions and the impulse of our testimony to others.

Lesson 2—Abraham in obedience to the call of God went out not knowing whither he went. He so completely trusted God that he was willing to go all the way with Him.

Lesson 3—Though Joseph was sold into slavery because of the hatred of his brethren, God exalted him to a place of power in Egypt.

Lesson 4—Even though Pharaoh's decree was for the destruction of all the male children of the Hebrews, Moses was preserved and educated in the Egyptian court.

Lesson 5—When Ruth became acquainted with the true God, she chose to turn her back upon her native land and kindred and identify herself with God's people.

Lesson 6—Samuel was given in answer to his mother's prayer. In early boyhood his mother gave him back to the Lord.

Lesson 7—When Samuel went to anoint a new king over Israel, he had all the sons of Jesse pass before him. Although to human eyes the eldest seemed fitted to be a king, and although outer appearances were favorable, the inner reality as seen by God was against him.

Lesson 8—Elijah threw down to the people a ringing challenge, calling upon the people to decide between Baal and the Lord. The God who answered by fire was to be the true God.

Lesson 9—Upon the sight of the Lord, Isaiah was convicted of his sin. When cleansed by fire from the divine altar he heard and responded to the call of God.

Lesson 10—Jeremiah, for his faithfulness in making known the Word of the Lord, was most bitterly hated and persecuted. Though he was regarded as a traitor and put into the place of death, he remained faithful to God.

Lesson 11—When Nehemiah heard of the distress of his brethren in Jerusalem, he was moved with pity for them. Although he enjoyed prosperity, he grieved over the grave distress of his people.

Lesson 12—In the providence of God, Esther came to be queen of Persia at an opportune time to save her people. There is a definite place and purpose in every life.

Life-Force.

Life-force, which is another name for God, seeks ever for new outlets; it breaks through mind into something higher still.—G. A. Studdert Kennedy.

The Art of Pleasing.

The art of pleasing consists in being pleased. To be amiable is to be satisfied with one's self and others.—Hazlitt.

Banish Self-Conceit.

The first business of a philosopher is to part with self-conceit.—Epictetus.

JUNE

L 912

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

Now Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Washington, D. C.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved me from an operation which a physician said I would have to have for a very bad case of female trouble. My system was all run down for two years after my little girl was born. Then I read of your wonderful medicine and decided to try it. I could hardly drag one foot after the other, and after taking six bottles of the Vegetable Compound I felt like a new woman. I now do all my housework, also washing and ironing, and do not know what real trouble is. My health is fine, and I weigh 140 pounds. When I started taking it I weighed 97 pounds. I gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any one who is suffering from female trouble or is run down. You may use this testimonial for I am only too glad to let suffering women know what the Vegetable Compound did for me."—Mrs. IDA HEWITT, 1529 Penna. Ave. S. E., Washington, D. C.

Such letters from women in every section of this country prove beyond question the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Plan to Preserve Eyesight.

A nation-wide campaign of eye conservation is planned by the Eyesight Conservation Council of America in an effort to prevent blindness in this country resulting from avoidable causes. Co-operation in the movement has been promised by the federal bureau of education, the bureau of standards, several universities and various civic organizations.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Aspirin

Say "Bayer" and Insist!

BAYER

Genuine

Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer product prescribed by physicians over twenty-two years and proved safe by millions for

Colds	Headache
Toothache	Lumbago
Earache	Rheumatism
Neuralgia	Pain, Pain

Accept "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" only. Each unbroken package contains proper directions. Handy boxes of twelve tablets cost few cents. Druggists also sell bottles of 24 and 100. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.—Advertisement.

Explaining His Speed.

Judge—Why were you speeding?

Prisoner—It was like this, Your Honor. The next town was ten miles away and I had only enough gas in the tank to go three miles, so I put on full speed so we could make that fifteen miles before the gas gave out.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Red Cross Ball Blue should be used in every home. It makes clothes white as snow and never injures the fabric. All good grocers.—Advertisement.

It Did, Too.

Son—Mother, did you ever hear a rabbit bark?

Mother—No, dear. Rabbits don't bark.

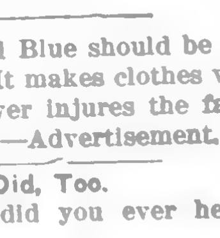
Son—That's funny. My book says rabbits eat cabbage and bark.

Lots of the lies crushed to earth rise again.

BACK ACHY?

Lame and achy in the morning? Tortured with backache all day long? No wonder you feel worn out and discouraged! But have you given any thought to your kidneys? Weak kidneys cause just such troubles; and you are likely to have headaches, too, with dizziness, stabbing pains and bladder irregularities. Don't risk neglect! Use Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands. They should help you. Ask your neighbor!

An Ohio Case



I. T. Buechler, carpenter, 335 E. Ohio Ave., Sebring, O., says: "I had a sharp twinge shoot through my back like the stab of a knife. To bend was nearly impossible, for it felt as if my back would break. My kidneys were weak and my bladder became congested, and the secretions scalded. I took Doan's Kidney Pills and it wasn't long before I was back in good condition."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 60c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

Matrimonial Adventures

The House Guest

BY

Alice Duer Miller

Author of "Manslaughter," "The Charm School," "The Modern Obstacle," "Less Than Kin," "The Blue Arch," "Calderon's Prisoner," etc.

Copyright by United Feature Syndicate

PERSONALITY OF ALICE DUER MILLER

Mrs. Miller smiled audibly over the phone when I called her up to ask her to tell me something about herself, her life, her work. She implied that there was nothing to tell, but I knew better and questioned her. She said she was a New Yorker by birth (but I was already aware that she belonged to one of the oldest and finest of New York families) and that she had lived there most of her life. Has she ever lived anywhere else? Yes, for some years in Central America. Her book, "Calderon's Prisoner," dealt with that country. It now bears the title "Something Different."

Nearly all her books, I found, had been both filmed and dramatized—an extraordinary achievement for any author. "Manslaughter" broke all her previous records. She has written plays that have been big successes; she has appeared times without number in all the leading magazines—it is impossible to fill the demand for her work.

Her interest in the Star Series of Matrimonial Adventures was keen from the first. The story that follows, written expressly for this series, holds her characteristic humor and charm.

MARY STEWART CUTTING, JR.

Eliot had been married seven years—and he was bored; not bored with the temporary languor that came over him of a Sunday afternoon when he wished for enough energy to go and play golf—but actively bored so that every action of his life as far as he could see was ugly and lusterless. And yet he loved his wife and his two good little girls. Mary was pretty, good, devoted, and—though his mind hesitated a little over the last step—intelligent. Her mind was as alert and vigorous and quick to understand his thoughts as it had been when, the autumn after he left college, he had married her.

It was matrimony, he told himself, not Mary, that bored him; but he was aware that the line was a fine one. Nevertheless he had been careful to draw it, when, the evening before, Sam Francis and he had been discussing the advantages and disadvantages of the married state. Sam was a bachelor. He had come over to dine, and after dinner the two friends had gone to a moving picture. Mary was busy putting the children to bed. The picture, as it happened, dealt with the life of a young married couple; and though all the walls were of rough plaster, all the doorways were arches, and all the trees eucalyptus, breakfasts and babies and bills seemed to be much the same on one coast as on the other.

"It's a dull picture," said Sam the bachelor, lightly.

"It's a dull subject," said Eliot, the married man, bitterly.

This opened the door to a discussion none the less frank and intimate because it was carried on in generalities. Eliot began by quoting that terrible sentence from Middlemarch: "I never loved anyone well enough to put my head into a noose for them—it is a noose you know." Sam agreed, but wondered whether every man as he grew older (Sam was twenty-six) did not want a home of his own, and at this point an irresistible desire for self-expression came over Eliot. He remembered how he had once been free—free not for evil things but for adventures that were often nothing more than intellectual—free to miss a dozen suburban trains, if he wanted to finish a book at the club—free to go to the theater without asking himself whether the money would not have been better spent on the children's shoes—free to wander all night on the bridges, thinking of some futile paradoxical philosophy, without owing anyone an explanation of his irregular hours—free even to give up his job if it became intolerable to him—free to hazard his future in any way he felt inclined. This was the aspect of matrimony that no one explained to you. You were told about giving up your club or your favorite cigar, and perhaps a good tailor, but no one made it clear that your privacy and your leisure and your liberty to choose must go, too.

"And to some people," Eliot said judicially, as if he had nothing in common with people like that, "to some people life becomes an intolerable bore when those things go. Of course that does not apply to us, because Mary is an exceptional woman."

"Oh, very," said Sam smiling to himself in the darkness of the theater, over the fact that anyone could call Mary exceptional.

The conversation made little impression on him, but in Eliot's mind it created a clear mental picture of his situation that he could not forget.

Never, it seemed to him the next morning at breakfast, had his two daughters asked why and when so often. Mary, neat and pretty at the head of the table, smiled and poured out coffee.

When he came home that afternoon, a note from Mary was lying on the hall table—a not unusual occurrence. She had probably gone to the Garden club. She was punctilious about letting him know her plans. It was the afternoon of the children's dancing class. The house was deserted. Eliot's spirits rose. He would actually sit down in his own sitting room and read—or think—or do neither, without any one saying, "What have you been doing all day, dear," or "Did you remember the butter," or "Why must I, father?"

He did it. He clasped his hands behind his head and looked at the ceiling. The little country neighborhood was silent. It was the first moment of this kind that he had had for months. He thoroughly enjoyed it.

He began to think about a little parody he was trying to write for a newspaper—he had been trying to do it at odd moments—in the train or in his bath—for several weeks. The occasion that made it appropriate had long since passed, but he wanted to finish it if he could. Within a few minutes, however, he heard the voices of his daughters returning. He wished the class had lasted a little longer.

Yet he was not an unnatural father and when they entered the room, flushed with exercise, elegant in their sheer white dresses and blue bows, he felt proud of them and glad to see them. He loved them even when the following interchange took place:

"Hullo, father. Do you like my new shoes? What is jazz?"

"Well, Marietta, it's a kind of music where the beat is irregular."

"Why is it?"

"Because people like it that way—the time changes."

"What is time, father?"

Remembering Mary's assertion that he didn't try to answer them, he paused a moment to consider, but Marietta went on: "I was called out in front of the class to make a courtesy, father. Where's mother? Why did she go away?"

"She hasn't gone away," said Eliot, disengaging his mind with difficulty, from the problem of time.

"She took a bag with her. Why did she, father?"

"We'll see," said Eliot, thinking to himself that she had probably taken the wash to the laundry, as it was Saturday, and sometimes, if they were short a sheet and some one coming to stay— He fished her letter out of his pocket. He had put off reading it for fear it would ask him to do something that would have interfered with his moment of solitude. He opened it, with Marietta sitting on the arm of his chair, and Doris aged four balancing on his crossed feet.

The letter said:

Dear Eliot: Something strange has happened that makes it impossible that you and I should ever live together again. I want to be alone for a few days and think over how I can arrange my life. I will come to the office Monday, and talk it all over with you. I am sorry this is Nora's Sunday out, but you can probably manage somehow with the children. They are so good. Yours,

MARY.

He became aware that Marietta had been saying for a long time: "What does mother say, father? What does mother say, father?"

He put the letter back in his pocket. "Oh, nothing, dear," he answered. "She had to go away for Sunday."

"Why did she?"

There was a question he couldn't answer. He had no idea—no explanation—no possible theory occurred to him. What could have happened? Had he done something? Or rather, for his conscience was absolutely clear, did she imagine he had done something to hurt her? Had she fallen under the spell of some sudden romance—one read of such things happening, but Mary! No. Had she gone mad? He remembered now that she had seemed silent at breakfast, but not portentously silent. He had questioned the children as to the events of the day—had any messages come—had any visitors been there? No, nothing. It was almost incredible that you should live with a woman seven years and be unable to form even a hypothesis as to why she had left you. Not that he admitted she had left him—it was just some misunderstanding.

To his first shock a feeling of anger succeeded. How could anyone treat another fellow creature like that—let alone a husband. And to leave him in suspense for days. And the children—suppose anything happened to the children?

They came to ask him to sit with them while they had supper and read aloud. They had asked him this almost every evening, since they had been able to speak, and he often refused. But this evening he consented. It was like a reproof to Mary. He chose Thackeray's "Rose and the Ring" to read to them. He hadn't read it for years. It was a magnificent piece of narrative. He read it well, too. At that place where the haughty Count Hogginarme stepped into the arena, and the lions rushed out saying, "Wurra, wurra, wur-rra—" he looked up to see two level spoons arrested in front of two opened mouths while four eyes dilated with excitement.

After the children had gone to bed he had a long uninterrupted evening—one of those evenings in which he could have finished a dozen parodies—except that his whole being was taken up with anger and speculation. He walked up and down the sitting room all evening, and then went to bed—but not to sleep. How could Mary have behaved so— He began to imagine their interview on Monday—his side of it at least. About four o'clock, he found he was going to use the phrase "My little motherless girls."

By morning, however, he had discarded it as sentimental. The feeling behind the words was there, however. It was Sunday. He would take them to church. He had never taken them to church before. He went and brushed his high hat. He looked very tall walking down the little lane to the paved avenue on which the church stood. The children, small and fluffy held each a hand. His little motherless girls.

Marietta chatted as they went. "You never went to church with us before, did you father? You're always so tired on Sunday when mother's home. The first time Doris went to church she thought the minister was God—all children do. I did myself. Why do clergymen dress like that, father? Why do they?"

If Mary had been there he would have answered, "Why do you wear ruffles on your skirt—because it's the custom," and Marietta would have replied: "Why is it?" and then the conversation would have been taken up by him and Mary as to whether Marietta was seeking information or simply trying to thrust herself into the foreground. But now Mary was not there he felt obliged to try and answer his motherless little girl, and she actually appeared to try to understand him, so that they were talking rather earnestly by the time they reached the church door.

In the afternoon he did not play golf, partly because he did not want to answer questions as to Mary's whereabouts, but partly because he became involved in a hymn Marietta had been most incompetently committing to memory for six months.

He went eagerly to the office the next day, and waited nervously through the early hours of the morning. About twelve Mary came. One glance at her told him that she was neither crazy nor playing a joke on him. Her face was the face of a woman who had been through two days of suffering. They went into his private office without greetings of any kind and shut the door.

Mary was direct. "I sat just in front of you the other night at the pictures," she said. "I could not help hearing."

There was a pause. Eliot's mind rushed back to the conversation with Sam, and his heart felt like a falling elevator. He recalled things he had said with a relish and bitterness hidden from Sam but obvious to Mary.

He looked at his wife. Her eyes were blazing. "And yet," he said, "I love you, Mary."

"I thank you for such a love," she answered, "the dull little woman at home—no, you didn't say that—quite. Suppose you had overheard me telling Virginia or Caroline that you bored me to death—that I'd stopped reading because you never talked of anything but housekeeping details—"

"That's most unjust," put in Eliot. "I said matrimony—not you."

"Oh, let's be honest," answered Mary, shaking her head, as if she were shaking out salt water from a wave that had passed over her. "Your marriage is me, and mine's you. And it's duller for me than it is for you—I don't even get to town every day and see a lot of people, and yet I'm not bored—I know what you're thinking—you think I'm not bored because I'm not as clever as you, but—"

"I wasn't thinking anything of the kind," said Eliot, and he imagined that he was telling the truth.

"Of course you were, but that isn't the reason. The reason is that no one can get more out of life than he puts into it—or out of marriage either. You're not bored with your business—and heaven knows it's a dull one—every one agrees to that—duller if possible than your own home—but it doesn't bore you. Why not? Because you put a lot of yourself into it."

Heretofore a sense of guilt had confused Eliot, but now he saw light.

"Isn't my work here just what I put into the home?" he asked.

"After office hours, what do you put into it?" said Mary. "You come home like a king expecting everything to be arranged for you—or a guest, who mustn't be interrupted by the children—your own children, mind you—"

"The men in the outer office will hear you, if you speak so loud."

"I hope they will," said Mary. "They are probably kings and house guests, too. They probably think they have an inalienable right to be bored by their women and children, too."

"Well, after all," said Eliot, "it's not a crime to be bored."

"Isn't it?" she returned. "Now listen to me, Eliot. I can imagine staying with a man who was unfaithful, or stole, or beat me, but I cannot imagine under any circumstances staying with a man whom I bored. Why should I? Good-by."

"Hold on, Mary. Where are you going?" He would like to have spoken with the tongue of men and angels, but he was distracted by a peculiar mental state, he felt it was impossible that he should ever have been bored with this vital, violent, irritating, handsome creature, and yet he knew quite well that he had been.

"Oh," Mary replied airily, "I'm going to my mother's—or on a trip—I really haven't decided."

"And are you ever coming back?" Eliot asked with a sarcasm that was meant to bite.

Mary took a step toward him, away from the door which she had almost reached. "Yes," she said, "I'm coming back, and I'll tell you when I'm coming back. When you've run the house so long that you feel uncomfortable if the food isn't good, when you feel guilty when the children interrupt me, when, in other words, I'm the house-guest—that's when I'm coming back."

And she went out of the office and slammed the door.

MRS. LAWS SPENT FORTUNE IN VAIN

All Efforts to Relieve Stomach Trouble Failed Until She Got Tanlac, She States.

"Five bottles of the Tanlac treatment have ended troubles that I spent a small fortune trying to get rid of," is the positive statement of Mrs. Laura Laws, 11 E. New Albany Ave., Vincennes, Ind.

"For five years I suffered from stomach trouble and continually grew weaker until I finally suffered a nervous breakdown. I just trembled like a leaf and could hardly get a wink of sleep. I couldn't eat more than a bit of toast, and even then gas formed in such quantities I would almost suffocate. I even spent eight months in St. Louis taking special treatment, but got no better, and had about lost hope.

"But Tanlac rid me of every ailment, and I now eat heartily, get plenty of sleep, and have so much strength I not only do my housework but get out and work my garden also. I feel years younger, and will always bless the day I started taking Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Take no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

Tanlac Vegetable Pills are nature's own remedy for constipation. Sold everywhere.—Advertisement.

Living Up to Policy.

"Isn't there something in my policy?" asked a caller at a LaSalle street insurance office the other day, "about my having to 'report any change of residence?'"

"Yes, sir," said the man at the nearest desk, picking up a pen. "Where have you moved to?"

"I haven't moved anywhere," rejoined the caller. "I have made a change in my residence by painting it a light straw color and putting a jack on the kitchen chimney. I think that's all. Good-day."—Chicago Daily News.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Discovering a Leak.

A leak in the gas main that has been troubling the residents of St. Albans, Vt., was discovered when a pick, used by a man employed by the gas company while he was digging near the main, hit a rock, producing a spark which caused a flame from the leak.

Sure Relief FOR INDIGESTION

BELL-ANS FOR INDIGESTION 25 CENTS

6 BELL-ANS
Hot water
Sure Relief

BELL-ANS

25¢ AND 75¢ PACKAGES EVERYWHERE

SLOW DEATH

Aches, pains, nervousness, difficulty in urinating, often mean serious disorders. The world's standard remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles—

LATHROP'S GOLD MEDAL HAARLEM OIL CAPSULES

bring quick relief and often ward off deadly diseases. Known as the national remedy of Holland for more than 200 years. All druggists, in three sizes. Look for the name Gold Medal on every box and accept no imitation

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine from any druggist and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful, clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double-strength Othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

DAISY FLY KILLER PLACED ANYWHERE ATTRACTS AND KILLS ALL FLIES. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Sold by dealers, or 5 by EXPRESS, prepaid, $1.25.

HAROLD SOMERS, 150 De Kalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

General Agents Wanted—Electric water heaters for doctors, dentists, barbers, private homes. Retail $28.50. Sample $14.25. Must carry $200 stock. Hygrotherm Co., Racine, Wis.

FREE TRIP TO PALM BEACH, FLA., and Florida position this winter, by demonstrating during summer your selling ability. Salerno Development Co., West Palm Beach, Fla.

Shave, Bathe and Shampoo with one Soap.—Cuticura

Cuticura Soap is the favorite for safety razor shaving.

W. N. U., FORT WAYNE, NO. 25—1923.

Metal Resists Tarnish and Corrosion.

Following the discovery of a non-tarnishable silver, reported recently in the London Daily Mail, comes the news of a white metal which resists both tarnish and corrosion, and has a remarkably deep and brilliant luster when polished.

The day appears to have come when the chemist, by skillfully alloying his metals, can make them resist the ravages of impure air produced by modern industrial conditions. The new white metal, which, it is stated, can be produced at a price within everybody's reach, has good casting qualities and is both malleable and ductile.

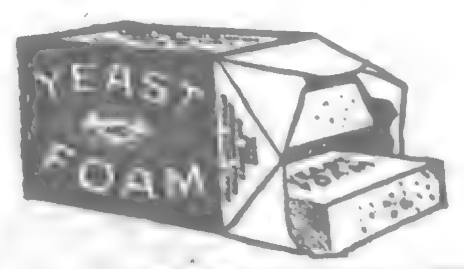
Life is a grind. The world is full of cranks.

Pride sometimes has to go before a fall in love.

Yeast Foam makes good bread

Bread making is easy to learn and is in itself an education in other cooking.

Send for free booklet "The Art of Baking Bread"



Northwestern Yeast Co.
1730 North Ashland Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

SHINOLA

AMERICA'S HOME SHOE POLISH

Black - Tan - White - Ox-Blood - Brown

SHINOLA is made of the finest wax and oils. It softens and preserves leather. Makes shoes wear longer and look better.

SHINOLA is quickly and easily applied - shines in a jiffy. Keeps shoes trim and tidy.

SHINOLA Home Set makes the home care of shoes easy

"The Shine for Mine"

JUNE

L 912

The St. Joe News

William S. Quance,
Editor and Publisher.

One Year, - - $1.50
Six Months, - - - .75
Three Months, - - .40
One Month, - - - .15
Single Copy, - - - .05
(Advertising Rates on Application)

Entered at the postoffice at St. Joe, Indiana, as second class matter.

Foreign Advertising Representative
THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

UNION SERVICES IN OUR CHURCHES?

Today is the first day of summer. With the beginning of the summer months, it has been customary for the past two years, to combine Sunday evening services in one common meeting.

Short and interesting programs made the summer evening church beneficial in many ways. Not only were they made more comfortable by being conducted out-of-doors, but also variety was given in each gathering, not only by the splendid thoughts of our own pastors, but also by speakers from away.

Of still greater usefulness is the union of St. Joe churches which tends to make us feel more deeply that notwithstanding the denomination or sect we are united in one high and noble purpose.

Is it not true then that by so coming together for a short period in the summer time that the influence of the church is broadened many times?

Perhaps little thought has been given to the idea or possibility of union services again this year because of the cool evenings. Should they not be continued? Let us not give them up!

—‡—‡—‡—

JUST WHAT WE MAKE IT

Some people get tired of this life and just fall asleep, while others hurry the end along with the use of a pistol, knife or a bit of poison. But it's a good old world after all, and it uses the most of us as we use it—in short, this life is just what we make it. Most people are satisfied with a fighting chance, while others are satisfied with a chance of fighting.

FARM LABOR SUPPLY SHORT

One year ago there was a surplus of about twelve per cent; now the Department of Agriculture reports a shortage of about the same percentage. Many farm operators report that at present high wages they cannot afford to employ labor and will only put in crops that they can handle with family labor.

—‡—‡—‡—

UP TO THE TIMES

A newspaper may boom a town through its editorial and news columns, but a critical investor takes his cue from the advertising columns for substantial evidence as to the thrift and prosperity of the place. To him the advertising is the barometer that measures the prosperity of a town. The ads reflect a prosperous condition and tell him that the place is up with the times in business.

—‡—‡—‡—

A brokerage firm seems to be one that goes broke.

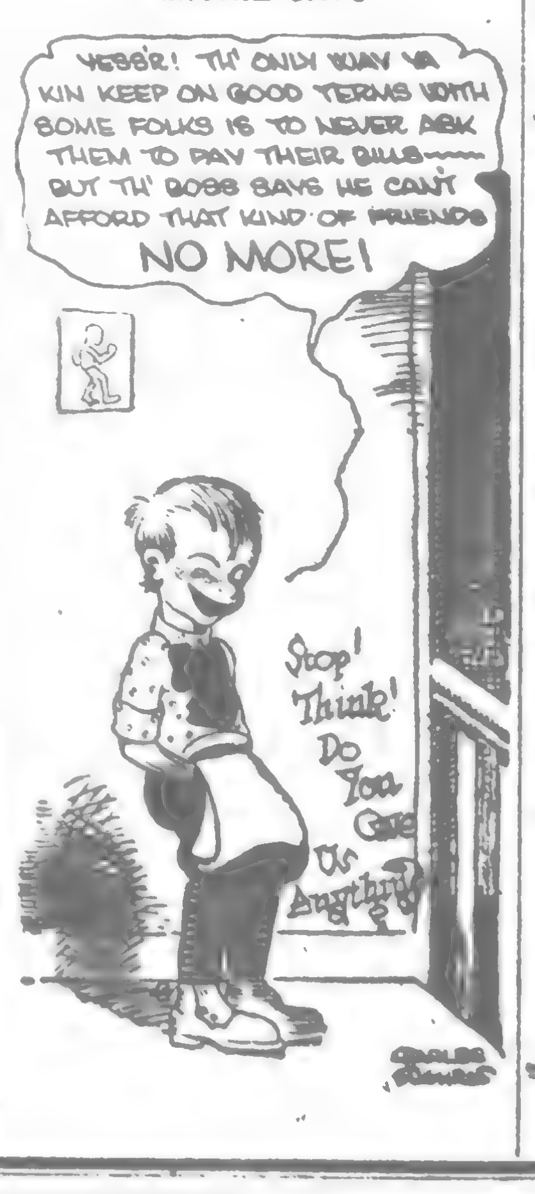
—‡—‡—‡—

You can depend on the merchant or manufacturer who advertises.

—‡—‡—‡—

More than 600,000 telephones were added to the Bell system in 1922, an indication of the growing use of this modern utility in business and home.

MICKIE SAYS



YESSIR! TH' ONLY WAY YA KIN KEEP ON GOOD TERMS WITH SOME FOLKS IS TO NEVER ASK THEM TO PAY THEIR BILLS—BUT TH' BOSS SAYS HE CAN'T AFFORD THAT KIND OF FRIENDS NO MORE!
Stop! Think! Do You Owe Us Anything?

Bible Thoughts for the Week

Sunday.

MAKING HASTE TO BE RICH.—He that by usury and unjust gain increaseth his substance, he shall gather it for him that will pity the poor. A faithful man shall abound in blessings; but he that maketh haste to be rich shall not be innocent.—Proverbs 28:8, 20.

Monday.

WISDOM AND UNDERSTANDING.—Whence then cometh wisdom? and where is the place of understanding? Behold the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil is understanding—Job 28:20, 28.

Tuesday.

JESUS' ANSWER.—Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind: and thy neighbour as thyself. This do and thou shalt live.—Luke 10:25, 27, 28.

Wednesday.

BOAST NOT.—Boast not thyself of tomorrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth.—Prov. 27:1.

Thursday.

AN EVIL EYE.—He that hasteth to be rich hath an evil eye, and considereth not that poverty shall come upon him.—Proverbs 28:22.

Friday.

A SAFE FORTRESS.—As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about His people.—Ps. 125:2.

Saturday.

IT SURELY WILL.—Be sure your sin will find you out.—Num. 32:33.

Rifles at before the war prices. Better than before the war quality...
Model B (take down) 24 barrel 4¾ lbs. $8.00
Model C has peep sights $10.50
Model A 20 barrel $6.25
Sent prepaid on receipt of price
Send for catalog
Page-Lewis Arms Company
Chicopee Falls, Mass.

Patronize The Advertisers.

Chiropractor Optician

Calls made at your home by APPOINTMENT.

EARL E. FRISBIE,
Butler, Indiana.

Office Cat

We mortals have to swat and shoo
The flies from dawn till dark,
'Cause Noah didn't swat the two
That roosted in the ark.

—oo—

The reason the philanthropist gets the advertising is because he takes it in small bunches and gives it in big ones.

—oo—

"The vamp," says an ad, "is of unfinished kid." All the kid vamps we have seen impress us as being raw, but we can see their finish.

—oo—

TWO EPITAPHS

Here lie two men, who we agree
Have won the cut-glass bonnet,
The first of them blew out the gas,
The other stepped upon it.
Here lies an early riser,
Who nevermore will squirm,
He thought he was the early bird;
Fact was, he was the worm.

—oo—

"Who is the meanest man in the world?"

"The guy who proposes to an old maid over the telephone and after she accepts him, tells her he has the wrong number."

—oo—

Sign in window of a fish market, "If it swims, we have it." But it seems they were just out of bathing girls.

—oo—

"Ah, this will be confining employment," remarked the prisoner, as he entered his cell.

—oo—

Any man who drinks liquor in Turkey gets thirty strokes of a whip. Over here he is liable to get just one stroke—of paralysis.

—oo—

UNSTRUNG!

"You can't string me," said the green bean to the cook as the twine fell off of the wrapping paper.

—oo—

When Mother takes in boarders Paw should be known as the dead-head of the house.

—oo—

The fellow who goes around looking for trouble, usually labors under the impression that he is in pursuit of happiness, says Park Murphy.

—oo—

If you will keep a stiff upper lip you will not run any chance of showing false teeth.

—oo—

Golfing possibly adds to a man's physical assets. It also no doubt increases his liabilities.

—oo—

Germany is sending us canary birds, much to the delight of American cats.

—oo—

Hero—Any man who lets other people lie for him.

—oo—

SPANKTIFIED

They called it the wood-shed,
Back in our boyhood years;
But we'd always shed while there, instead,
A quart of salty tears.

—oo—

Think often of your friends; but talk about them rarely—and then, only of their virtues.

—oo—

A man is your friend, when, knowing your sins, he can keep a closed mouth.

—oo—

The man who boasts that hardship made him what he is, is determined that his son shall have a much easier time.

—oo—

We asked our girl to go to church Sunday night, but her mother invited herself along—so we went to church.

TWO HANDS FOR BEGINNERS

Cop, to halted young St. Joe driver: "Why didn't you stick out your hand when you turned that corner?"

Stude: "But, I couldn't let go of the wheel, could I?"

Cop: "But, you have two arms."

"Ah, step on it," piped up the sweet young thing nestled at his side—and the car sped forward.

—oo—

A smile is a panacea for many ailments. If you are thin, it will make you fat; if you are fat, it will make you pleasant; if you are ugly, it will make you beautiful; if you are sad, it will make you happy, and so on ad infinitum.

—oo—

We can't all be Valentinos,
For we are not built that way
But if we can raise the beanos
We can vamp some jane some day.

—oo—

HOT DOG!

"I'll bite," said the flea, as it took another chunk out of doggie.

—oo—

One reason why the price of sugar is going higher is because sugar will accomplish certain things when placed in fruit juice.

—oo—

What we need, apparently, is a policy that will let us share in the oils without sharing in the broils.

—oo—

OUR MONTHLY HEALTH HINT
(Number 21)

Never spank a child on an empty stomach. Turn him over.

—oo—

A New York man, who was shot six times, finally died. He took the hint.

—oo—

It seems often the case that the mortgage sticks to the motor car longer than the paint.

—oo—

A bride is a person who wonders whether she salted it.

—oo—

Too many bank cashiers are escaping after a spring cleaning.

—oo—

One way to make a dollar go further is to invest it in gasoline.

—oo—

Dollars have treads like auto tires. This lets them travel fast without skidding.

—oo—

Lillian goes out sometimes,
Ophelia plays Goo! Goo!
Violet strings up all the boys,
Elsie necks some, too.

—oo—

In the old days the difference between a nobody and a somebody was in the blood. Now it's in the bank.

—oo—

Taking orders by telephone is all right, but one fellow says it is rather annoying to have your wife call you during office hours like that.

—oo—

Violent exercise after meals is injurious perhaps, but the toothpick athletes retain their vigor year after year.

—oo—

"I think I'll take a night off," said the garter as it broke.

—oo—

The man who has dogged determination usually manages to make a howling success of everything.

—oo—

Still, as a general thing the only people who would be shocked by naughty books are too respectable to read them.

Make Your Trip More Enjoyable by a Refreshing Night on Lake Erie
(Your rail ticket is good on the boats)
Thousands of east and north bound travelers say they wouldn't have missed that cool, comfortable night on one of our fine steamers. A good bed in a clean stateroom, a long sound sleep and an appetizing breakfast in the morning!
Steamers "SEEANDBEE" — "CITY OF ERIE" — "CITY OF BUFFALO"
Daily, May 1st to November 15th
Leave Cleveland - 9:00 P.M. } Eastern Standard Time { Leave Buffalo - 9:00 P.M.
Arrive Buffalo - 7:30 A.M. } { Arrive Cleveland - 7:30 A.M.
Connections for Niagara Falls, Eastern and Canadian points. Ask your ticket agent or tourist agency for tickets via C & B Line. New Tourist Automobile Rate—$10.00.
Send for free sectional puzzle chart of the Great Ship "Seeandbee" and 32-page booklet.
The Cleveland and Buffalo Transit Co.
Cleveland, Ohio
The Great Ship "Seeandbee" — the largest steamer on inland waters of the world.
Fare $5.50

LATEST and BEST!
An INCREASING, life-long Monthly Income if Totally and Permanently Disabled by accident or disease before the age of 60 years.
THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK
$10 a month during first 5 years, $15 during the next 5 years, $20 thereafter for life. No further premium deposits. And then $1000 at your death to your beneficiary, or $2000 if death, at any age, is accidental, payable in a single sum, or as income for a term of years or for life. Total disability lasting 3 months regarded, during further continuance, as permanent.
J. C. HULL, St. Joe, Ind.
Please give me further information about Perfect Life Insurance Policy
NAME ______
ADDRESS ______

SPARE PARTS

An ounce of attention is worth a pound of overhaul.

An oiling a day keeps the [illegible] man away.

Look before you back.

Spare the oil and spoil the car.

A rolling car gathers no crowd.

A tool in the kit is worth thousands in the garage.

Service is as service doe.

Fools rush in where experts fear to ride.

A little knowledge of electrical systems is a dangerous thing.

An ounce of instruction may save a pound of repair.

A skid to the wise is sufficient.

H. O. WILLIAMS
THE
Abstracter
is able to furnish you with a complete Abstract of Title to any description of Real Estate in DeKalb County.
OFFICE
West Seventh Street
AUBURN
FIRE INSURANCE NOTARY PUBLIC

Frank L. Milliman
TRUSTEE
Concord Township
Office Day Friday of Each Week at his residence 2 miles north and 1-2 mile West of St. Joe.

Newspaper Advertising Does Pay

WE BELIEVE IN IT

And we are reserving this space of value to tell you that we sincerely believe in it. Patrons read advertisements in this paper we know, because you are reading this ad as you read the others.

WE RECOMMEND IT

We print circular advertisements, but we do not recommend them as highly as we do the newspaper advertising. So many people never even carry a circular bill home with them as you will see by noticing the contents of the waste paper box at the Post Office. But you show me one who takes the home paper from the mail and throws it away before they get home and I'll show you ninety-nine who do not.

The St. Joe Weekly News
St. Joe, - - - - - Indiana

Lehman's CLOTHING HOUSE
ESTABLISHED 1887
MENS AND BOYS OUTFITTERS
810 CALHOUN STREET
BEN LEHMAN PROP.
Fort Wayne, Ind.

Money

Making a Living---
and Making Friends

Truly unfortunate is the man who gets nothing more than a living out of his business. Unless friendships develop out of his dealings with other people, earning a living is apt to be a dreary task.

For this reason, we value highly the warm friendship existing between the Farmers & Merchants State Bank and its many depositors. Rendering bank service is our business; but we like to render it in a a way that brings us permanent friends.

We'll welcome YOUR friendship, too!

Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank

Capital Stock, - $25,000

Spencerville, Ind.

The Bank of Personal Services

SPENCERVILLE

James Vallieu, wife and two sons visited the formers mother at Paulding, Ohio.

For good glasses see Griest at American Building Hicksville, Ohio.

Jay Chapman and family of Fort Wayne spent Sunday with Charles Chapman and family.

Mrs. Florence Silberg and daughter, Orpha, and Miss Vera Silberg spent several days last week in Toledo.

R. U. Bowser of this place sold a carload of feeder cattle to Fred Jenkins of St. Joe, on Monday, which will be pastured on the Erick farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Turner, Willard Binney and children of Walton, Indiana, spent Saturday and Sunday as guests of Rev. S. D. Steffey and wife.

Mrs. Vernie Reed and babe who have been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Tyndall, returned to their home at South Bend Monday. Mrs. Tyndall returned with her for a few weeks visit.

B. F. Markle and family were Sunday guests of Mrs. Matilda Oberholtser of near Harlan, and in the evening they attended the Children's Day exercises at that place. Mr. and Mrs. Eck Hursh and family were afternoon callers in the same home.

Correct Millinery for $1, at Warner's Hat Shop, Saturday.

Mrs. Walter Perkins and son, Lloyd, and Mrs. Ora Billman were Sunday guests of Joel Bets and wife.

Arthur Steward and family of Garrett were Sunday guests of relatives at this place.

L. A Bowser, wife and daughter Ada, of Fort Wayne, were Sunday afternoon guests of R. U. Bowser and family.

Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Carey and son, Fletcher, of Fort Wayne, were Suuday afternoon guests of Jacob Baltz and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Beams and Mrs. Rummell, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Shilling were Sunday dinner guests of William Lucas and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wertman, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Markle and Samuel Betz were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Webb.

The Misses Ellen Lake and Bina Zimmerman and Messrs Karl and Glenn Hart all of whom are attending the Tri-State College at Angola, spent the weekend with their parents.

Miss Francis Hursh of the Lutheran Sunday School and Frank Miller of the Methodist Sunday School left on Monday and Tuesday mornings for Indianapolis to attend the State Sunday School Convention.

On next Saturday evening at the Community Hall the M. E. church and Orcheatra will give a chicken pie supper and ice cream social. A short program is being planned.

Opportunity Waits on the Man.

The chance of a lifetime comes unheralded and unmarked. Recognition of it depends entirely on the man. Indeed, it is largely what the man makes it, what energies he devotes to it. The chance is in the man.

NEWVILLE

Children's Day will be observed at the U. B. church next Sunday.

Mrs. Belle Crumb spent a couple of days in Fort Wayne last week.

The W. C T. U. met with Mrs. Minnie Rupe Tuesday afternoon, June 12.

The Juniors will conduct the Sunday School at the U. B church next Sunday.

The young people of the U. B. church held an ice cream social on the parsonage lawn Saturday evening.

Argyl Sechler, wife and baby were Saturday night and Sunday guests of his brother, Jack Sechler and family of near Butler.

Byron Miller, Donald Ayers, Prestin Glawe left Sunday evening for Lansing, Michigan, where they expect to get employment on the oil works.

The Loyal Sons and Daughters of the Christian Sunday School held their class meeting with the Misses Oral and Daisy Richmond Friday evening.

Robbie Wyatt, wife and baby of Auburn, were the Sunday guests of Day Wyatt and wife and spent a few hours at the LeRoy Kinney home in the afternoon.

Mrs Burl Rude and little son went to Goshan Sunday where they will spend a couple of weeks with her parents, George Haverstock and wife and other relatives.

William Nicodemus, wife and two sons and a young lady friend all of Rochester, Indiana, were the Sunday guests of John Miller and wife. Mrs. Nicodemus is a daughter of Mr. Miller and had not visited the parents home for about 14 years. They returned home the evening of the same day. Dewey Miller, wife and baby of Auburn, were also Sunday guests.

Mt. Pleasant

Vera and Lora Yarlot were Sunday guests of Mabel Reed.

Mrs. John Knight spent Sunday at Detroit, Michigan, with her sister, Mrs. Ida Pike and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Praul and little son attended the funeral of a relative at Ashley, Thursday.

Sherman Ginder and wife entertained the Ginder reunion last Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hall of Waterloo, spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Gunsenhouser.

Clarence Keller and family attended the funeral of his aunt, Mrs. Hattie Keller, at Reading, Michigan, Tuesday.

Frank Ginder and family and Mr. and Mrs. James Harter were Sunday afternoon callers in the home of George Bassett at Harlan.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Inhoffe and son, Theron, spent Sunday in the home of Ed Kratt and wife at Spencerville.

Grant Keller and wife and Mr. and Mrs. George Keller attended Children's Day services at Concord Sunay evening.

The Mt. Pleasant Sunday School have received their new song books. They are to be paid for by each family donating the proceeds from the eggs which they gathered Sunday.

The men of the young married people's class entertained the ladies at the home of Harry Ginder last Wednesday evening. One of the features of the program was a debate: Resolved; that a man has a better head for business than a woman. The men were on the affirmative and the ladies on the negative. Of course, the negative side won.

Old School Reunion

The tenth annual meeting of the Spencerville Old School Reunion will be held on Thursday, June 28, 1923, in the Lutheran church at Spencerville. The announcement emphasized the basket dinner at noon. Mrs. (Dr.) Carey of Fort Wayne, is president and Mrs. J. R. Bishop of Auburn is secretary.

Band Concerts Started

Spencerville.—The St. Joe community Welfare Band has been contracted to play on our streets every Wednesday evening between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock. The first concert was given last night. The crowd was good.

A fine stand was built and wired and placed at a convenient location. The location will be changed from night to night, giving each business an equal benefit.

Wednesday night was chosen because it would be more convenient for people to attend than perhaps any other night.

The entire community is invited to enjoy these concerts. Special features will be given each time.

Married at Hillsdale

The marriage of Cecil Silberg, son of Mrs. Susie Silberg of Auburn, formerly of Spencerville, to Miss Nellie DePew of Altona, took place on Saturday, June 2, at Hillsdale, Mich., it is announced here. The couple will reside with the bride's parents in Altona for the present. The groom is employed by the DeKalb Sales and Service of Auburn, and the bride was a student in the Garrett High school.

Bible Conference at Cedar Lake

The success of the summer Bible conference in the east has led The Moody Bible Institute to inaugurate the plan in the west. The points chosen are Cedar Lake, Ind., where a conference will be held from July 29 to August 12, and Madison, Wis., August 5-12. These have been arranged in conjunction with the Special Course at the Institute, so that many of the speakers that have been brought from different parts of the world for special lectures will also speak at these two beautiful lake resorts.

Cedar Lake is only forty miles from Chicago on the Monon railroad and offers exceptional opportunities to the tired worker seeking rest, boating, bathing and fishing. The conference grounds are beautifully situated on a wooded bluff overlooking the lake. Torrey Hall will be converted into a commodious auditorium and the hotel, cottages and restaurant will provide for day attendants from Chicago, as well as those who desire to remain at Cedar Lake for the entire conference period.

The faculty of the Institute will be represented on the program by Dr. James M. Gray, Dr. Robert H. Glover, F. R. G. S., Rev. John C. Page, Rev. J. R. Schaffer, and Rev. Clarence H. Benson; and the Extension Department by Rev. George E. Guille, Dr. J. E. Conant and Rev. J. A. Sutherland. Others who have been invited to participate are Rev. P. W. Philpott, the pastor of The Moody Church, Chicago, Rev. S. B. Rohold, scholar, author and Jewish worker, who has just returned from Palestine, Rev. George S. McCune, formerly of Korea, now acting president of Huron College, S. D., and Charles Calvert Ellis, D. D., vice-president and professor of education, Juniata College, Pa.

THE HOME PAPER

A few of the reasons why the home folks should support it:

1.—Because when you were born, it was the home paper that introduced you to the world.

2.—When you grew up and graduated, the home paper gave you another write up.

3.—When later on you found your life companion and were happily married, the home paper gave you and your's a nice notice.

4.—When sickness and misfortune invaded your home, the sad news was carried to your friends and neighbors by the home paper.

5.—When you had been successful in business venture, or had been promoted, it was the home paper that heralded your ability.

6.—If you sold out or moved to another location, the home paper followed with news of friends and neighbors.

7.—When some unscrupulous person tried to injure your character it the the home paper that came to your aid.

8.—Because the home paper boosts your town and its institutions, its people, its schools, its churches and helps to promote good fellowship in the community.

9.—Because the live merchants offer money-saving bargains and protect you from catch-penny mail order houses.

10.—And last, when you are finally laid away, it is the home paper that prints consoling news of your demise and that extols your virtues so that hearts of those who mourn home paper stuck by you from cradle to grave.

Monkey's Good Service.

A monkey belonging to a family living in the fashionable Quai D'Orsay, Paris trapped a burglar. When the burglar entered a clothes closet the monkey locked the door and when the owner returned home the monkey proudly turned the prisoner over to him.

Sedan
Coupe
Touring Car
Runabout
Truck Chassis
Chassis
Fordson Tractor

Ford
$5.00 Enrolls YOU
Ford Weekly Purchase Plan

$5.00 starts you toward the ownership of any type of Ford Car, Truck or Fordson Tractor.

We will deposit your payments in a local bank at interest. You can add a little every week. Soon the payments, plus the interest, will make the Car, Truck or Tractor yours.

Come in and get full details.

FRANK W. SILBERG, Agent,
Spencerville, Ind.

Love of Home is a
Nations Bulwark

WAYS AND MEANS often seem to bar the way to the most natural and worthy inpulse of mankind.

But 'tis said: "Where there's a will, there's a way," so perhaps investigation may show that way to be easier than you may now think.

We will gladly help to direct your desire to OWN A HOME
in the "channel of least resistance."
Come and talk this vital matter over with us.

Spencerville Lumber Co.
ASHUR CULP, Manager
Lumber and Building Material of All Kinds
Spencreville, Ind.

Roses, Shrubs
Ornamental and Fruit Trees
Hedges
Plants

M. T. BISHOP
St. Joe, Ind.
Representing
BARRY NURSERY COMPANY
of Rochester, N. Y.

Dr. Bonnell M. Souder
HOSPITAL
Established in 1914
206 West Seventh Street
AUBURN, INDIANA

C. R Baumgartner, D V M
Veterinarians
OFFICE and HOSPITAL
SPENCERVILLE. - IND.
Phones —Office No. 7
F W Silberg, D V M

Hall's Catarrh Medicine
Those who are in a "run down" condition will [illegible]

INDIGESTION
[illegible]
CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS

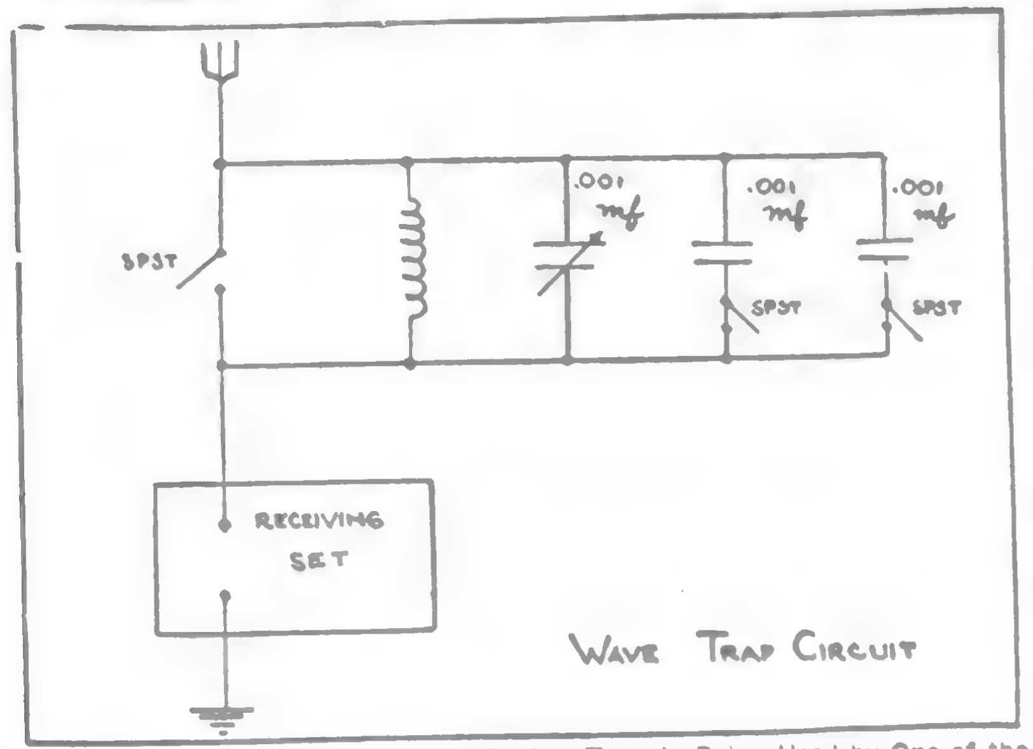
JUNE

L 912

644

RADIO

(Edited by G. Douglas Wardrop, Editor of Radio Merchandising.)



This is a Wave Trap That Works. Such a Trap Is Being Used by One of the Government Receiving Stations Which Operates on 450 Meters and Upward, Less Than a Mile from a 400-Meter Broadcasting Station.

At the present time there is no practical solution for every interference problem that a radio fan may have. However, there are a great many cases of interference that can be solved by the use of a properly constructed wave trap. It is the purpose of this article to give the results of tests which have been made and to explain exactly the construction of a trap which the writer believes will be of much help to many of the fans.

Just such a trap is being used by one of the government receiving stations which operates on 450 meters and upward and is less than a mile from one of the large 400-meter broadcasting stations. Before the trap was put into service, signals from the broadcasting station could not be tuned out, regardless of how the government receiving set was tuned. In fact, the interfering concerts could be heard for many feet from the 'phones. Before the broadcasting station was finally allowed to begin regular operations the problem of interference had to be solved. Several traps were made and tried out, and finally one was developed which cleared the trouble.

Conditions Were Rigorous.

The conditions which the trap had to meet were very rigorous. When the broadcasting station was in operation it was necessary that it should not be heard in the least when the government set was tuned to 450 meters or more. For this test the receiving set was tuned to 450 meters, the lowest wave length used in the reception of messages at that particular station. Also the regeneration was set at a minimum and two amplifier tubes in addition to the detector were employed. The fact that no regeneration was used made the receiving set much less selective, even though it was a loose-coupled type. Also, it was required that the use of the trap would not noticeably cut the signal strength of any messages that the operator desired to receive. Finally, after building several traps, using various sizes of wire, inductance and capacitance, an arrangement was found which met the specified conditions. It was possible to tune the receiving set as low as 430 meters before the 400-meter broadcasting signals were audible. There was no noticeable change in intensity of 450-meter stations when the trap was cut in and out of circuit. When the receiving set was adjusted to 400 meters about 90 per cent of the interfering signals was eliminated.

The accompanying diagram illustrates how the trap should be connected in circuit. When the condenser is adjusted so that the circuit resonates at 400 meters, for example, the trap offers, theoretically, an infinite impedance to any incoming signal of the same wave length. In actual practice the impedance of the trap at resonance is not infinite, due to the fact that a coil cannot be made which has no resistance, but it is, however, very high. All other signals above or below 400 meters find their way into the receiving set, since the trap is not in resonance with them.

How Inductance Is Made.

The inductance is made by winding 17 turns of No. 15 or No. 16 D. C. C. copper wire on a 4½-inch bakelite tube. The variable condenser is .001 mfd., or the usual 43-plate type. The fixed condensers are also .001 mfd. of mica dielectric. Two single-pole switches make it possible to cut in or out the fixed condensers in order that broader range of tuning may be had on the trap. The other single-pole switch makes it possible to cut in or out the wave trap as desired. After the proper capacity has been determined for any particular receiving station, it is probable that switches will be unnecessary for cutting the condensers in and out of circuit.

The trap will cut out 400-meter stations when one fixed condenser is in circuit and the variable condenser is placed approximately at mid-setting. To eliminate higher waves, increase the condenser capacity, and for shorter waves, decrease it, cutting in or out the fixed condensers as necessary. If a loose coupler or variocoupler arrangement is used in the receiving set, very close coupling must be employed; otherwise the trap will not be at all effective. The trap will slightly alter the previous settings of the receiving set but not to an appreciable extent. This particular apparatus will undoubtedly be of most service in eliminating 400-meter stations when one desires to hear 360-meter stations, and vice versa. Those who have trouble from commercial spark sets will also find it a great addtion to a radio set.

Bracing Aerial Pole at End of Ridge Roof

The accompanying diagram shows an excellent way of bracing an aerial pole where an anchor for a fourth guy wire is not available. The aerial consists of a 20-foot two-by-four on the end of a 20-foot building. It is braced in the manner described and has withstood several storms that have torn other aerials down.

This is a truss brace. When a turnbuckle is placed near the ground it provides an easy method of keeping the guy wires taut.

Arctic Explorer to Take Airphone Along

Donald MacMillan, the Arctic explorer, is planning to take a powerful radio receiving and transmitting outfit with his expedition on the ship Bowdoin, this summer. No matter how far north the party penetrates, the receiving part of the outfit at least will go with them, and while they are sitting inside their snow igloos in the frozen North, they can be listening to the latest jazz broadcasts from civilization.

Not only will the explorer's ship be equipped with a powerful receiving set, but it is planned to have a powerful sending set also, and there will be daily chats between the Bowdoin, which sails from Eastport, Me., in June and the Chicago broadcasting station at the Edgewater Beach hotel. E. F. McDonald, a millionaire Chicago radiophan, is in Maine to oversee the installing of apparatus on the Bowdoin.

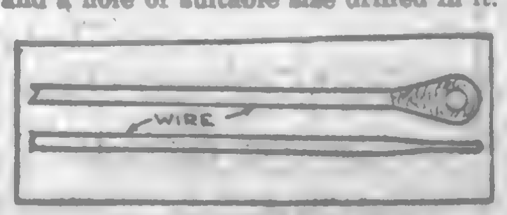
Radiophans will be asked to "stand by" each night for the voice of MacMillan from the Arctic. It is believed that he may be received better in some parts of the country than in others, owing to various forms of interference.

"If we have the same experience with the Eskimos regarding radio that we did with the regular wire telephone, it will be interesting and amusing," said Mr. MacMillan. I found one Eskimo at one end of the wire. He would yell and then run to the other end of the wire to try to hear the sound of his own voice. When I caught up with him he explained gravely that it could not be done. There was no hole in the wire."

The next expedition will have a crew of seven men aboard, to go within 720 miles of the pole. Five phonographs will be taken, one to be given to each of the Eskimo tribes. Two thousand pounds of pemmican, a highly concentrated food, will be taken along to avoid any possible food shortage ashore.

Wire End Connection Takes Place of a Lug

Number 14 or larger copper wire or busbar is easily flattened at the end and a hole of suitable size drilled in it.



This takes the place of soldering a lug to the end of the wire and it makes a permanent connection that will slip under a small nut or binding post without a bunch of solder or the flaps of the lug sticking up in the way.

Hints to Amateurs Who Wind Their Own

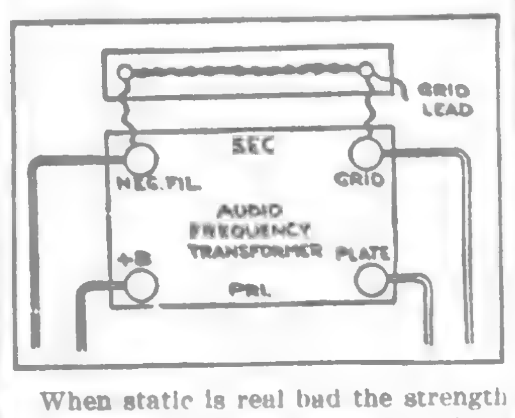
Here is a hint for those amateurs who "wind their own" coils for variocouplers, variometers, etc., on cardboard tubes. We have all been warned time and again regarding the ill effects following the shellacking of such coils to keep the wire in place after it is wound, the said ill effects being capacity or a condenser-like action between the wire and the shellacked covering, which causes a certain degree of choking of the signals.

This difficulty was overcome in the following way: The cardboard tubes are thoroughly dried in a warm oven and then given a coat of shellac both inside and out. As soon as this has dried the outside is given another coat. This should leave the surface quite glossy.

The wire is then wound in the usual manner, the ends being secured through holes in the edges of the tube. The wire is then "painted" with wood alcohol, which the covering absorbs greedily; then the coil is set away to let the alcohol evaporate. Keep it away from fire. The alcohol softens the shellac and this in turn sticks to the cotton covering of the wire where it is in contact with the tube. It will be found that the wire is held securely enough for couplers and variometers also the rotors of these, but not for tuning coils with which a slider is used.

Grid Leak Takes the "Fry" Out of the Set

The amateur who has a one or two-stage audio frequency amplifier on his set is well acquainted with the hiss or frying sound it gives forth when operating at its best or highest capacity. By placing a grid leak across the secondary of the last amplifying transformer nearly all the frying and hissing noise can me eliminated without noticeably reducing the signal strength.



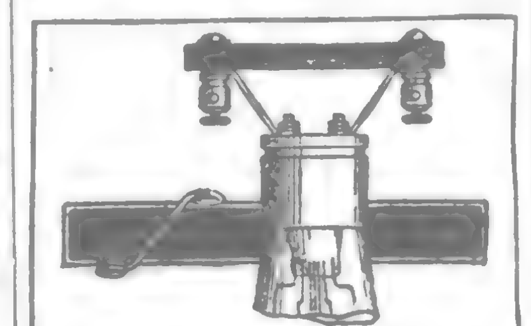
When static is real bad the strength of the leak can be increased to where it will take the harshness out of the static, but it will reduce the signals somewhat.

The ordinary grid leak consisting of pencil marks on a strip of paper can be used, but best results are secured by making these lines with ordinary black drawing ink.

To Make a Mounting for "W. P. 11" Tube

It is in some places impossible to purchase a socket for the "W. P. 11" tube (generally called the "peanut" tube) at any price.

With a piece of bakelite three inches square, four binding posts and some spring brass wire one can be made. The spiral part of the wire is bent around a six-penny wire finishing nail firmly held in a vise for the three small contacts, and the one for the "grid" contact (which is larger on this tube) is bent around a twenty-penny spike.



The inside of the coils is brightened with a rat-tail file to insure contact.

This socket works perfectly, and the natural springiness of the wire takes up any sudden jar.

SHORT CIRCUITS

The successful radio amateur is generally a man of parts.

An eastern radio club wants a suitable design for a club 'pin. How would a crystal set in platinum do?

Doctor De Forest says that radio has fired the imagination of youth. We know some youths whose imaginations might well be fired.

When your ice bill comes in, don't grumble. Think of the fellow who has to provide for the wide range of the radio broadcast.

If the loud speaker on your radio is unsatisfactory, how would you like to have a desk next to a fellow who yells all day over the telephone?

A loading coil is an inductance connected in the antenna circuit to receive longer wave lengths than the natural wave length of the antenna.

A man buys a radio set, not so much to hear a great orchestra, but to tune that orchestra in and out and thereby show the musicians that they have nothing on him when it comes to bringing out harmony.

A prominent government official writes that the poor quality of music furnished by the smaller radio stations is handicap to radio development in the smaller towns. He believes that by redistributing the output of the high-grade stations much better progress will be made.

INDIANA BREVITIES

Peru.—Bessie J. Barnhart was granted a divorce from Omer C. Barnhart, and her former name of Bessie J. Francis was restored to her. Prior to her marriage to Barnhart she lived in Indianapolis. When her suit for legal separation was first instituted she sought alimony in the sum of $35,000, asserting that Barnhart was wealthy and had promised her all sorts of luxuries which he had failed to make good. No alimony was mentioned in the decree of the court when the divorce was granted.

Marion.—Dr. Ira Howerth of the University of Colorado, one of the leading sociologists of the country, and Dr. M. V. O'Shea, dean of the school of education of the University of Wisconsin, are among the educators obtained for the annual institute of Grant county teachers to be held in Marion the week of August 27. Dr. Robert J. Aley, president of Butler college, also has been secured, and two other speakers of national reputation will be added to the list.

Marion.—The fire prevention committee of the Marion association of commerce, in a report made to the board of directors, urged expenditures of $75,000 for additional equipment of the water works and fire department. The purchase of three pumpers and an aerial ladder and the drilling of a new water well with a capacity of 2,500,000 gallons daily were recommended.

Laporte.—Bonds valued at $2,000 were found lying in the road south of Laporte by travelers on the way from Indianapolis to Michigan City, who turned them over to the First National bank to be returned to the owner. The bonds were in a traveling bag which was lying open in the road.

Hartford City.—A shelter house, composed of a dressing room and a shower bathroom, is being erected by the Tennis club here. The club has two new courts, which will be opened within a few days. The club plans to issue a challenge soon to teams in this part of the state.

Shelbyville.—Frank Cowin is held in the Shelby county jail on a charge of assault and battery with intent to commit murder. The charge was filed by his wife, Mrs. Nora Cowin. She alleges that Cowin struck her two sons by a former marriage with a piece of iron bar.

Noblesville.—The nine-room home on the farm of Mrs. T. J. McDonald, northeast of here, burned. The flames started from sparks from a chimney. Most of the household goods were burned, and the loss is estimated at $9,000, less than half of which is covered by insurance.

Brazil.—Pete Willoughby, fifty-seven, a resident of Brazil for many years, hanged himself in the attic of his home in South Lambert street. The body was found by a member of his family. He had used a chain which had been part of a hanging lamp.

Evansville.—J. S. Johnson, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, has accepted an invitation to address the annual convention of the Indiana Chamber of Commerce Secretaries' association, to be held at French Lick June 29 and 30.

Fort Wayne.—Bessie J. Edgeworth Santee, residing on the famous Spring Grove farm, seven miles west of Fort Wayne, benefits to the extent of $100,000 in the estate of Edward J. Leland, wealthy broker who died at his home in Chicago May 24.

Laporte.—Alan Raymond Chambers, sixteen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond C. Chambers and star high school athlete, has been recommended by Congressman A. J. Hickey for entrance to the United States Naval academy at Annapolis, Md.

Shelbyville.—Through gifts made by graduating classes, the Shelbyville high school has an endowment fund of more than $2,000, which is used to assist graduates of the local high school in obtaining a college education.

Portland.—Leo Locker, twenty-one, Salamonia, was arrested by Sheriff James Badders on a charge of having stolen an automobile and to have abandoned it by driving it into a stone quarry near Montpelier.

Indianapolis.—Edward L. Patterson was arrested charged with manslaughter following the death of Bennie MacInnis, eight years old. A car driven by Patterson struck the lad as he was playing in the street.

Warsaw.—Onion growers from northern Indiana counties met here and perfected an organization of the Onion Growers' Marketing association. Headquarters of the organization will be maintained in Warsaw.

Huntington.—Mrs. Rebecca Garretson, married 41 years, has filed suit for divorce from John Garretson. She alleges cruelty and asks $15,000. They are the parents of five grown children.

Hartford City.—A large barn on the farm of John Beath, south of this city, burned when struck by lightning. The loss was $2,000.

Indianapolis.—The Indianapolis Ministerial association elected Rev. J. D. Garrison, pastor of the North Park Christian church, as president.

Indianapolis.—The Indiana Association of Life Underwriters elected Frank L. Jones as its president at a meeting here.

Indianapolis.—All records for building operations in Indianapolis were broken in the month of May, Francis F. Hamilton, city building commissioner, announced. His department issued permits in the month for 1,809 building projects.

Delphi.—Officers for the Carrol County Sunday School union were elected at the county convention as follows: President, Dr. E. D. Wagoner Burrows; first vice president, John Robyler, Flora; second vice president, W. H. Casad, Monticello; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Ruth Tidrick, Bringhurst; superintendent children's division, Mrs. Paul R. Quick, Delphi; superintendent young people, Mrs. Fred Miller, Rockfield; adult superintendent, J. W. Eikenberry, Bringhurst; administration division, Irvin Brim, Flora, and education division, Dr. E. H. Brubaker, Flora.

Richmond.—A baby clinic is being conducted here June 7 to 16, in which physicians and nurses from the state board of health and local physicians and dentists make examinations of children. After the children have been submitted to a preliminary examination, field workers of the state board give them development tests, including those for vision and hearing. Mothers are then advised of proper methods to correct defects. Clinics also are being conducted in the small towns and rural districts of the county.

Connersville.—Plans have been made for an Indiana flour baking contest at the Fayette county free fair and Mrs. Emmett Flant, Mrs. C. W. Martin and Mrs. Lloyd Nichols are members of a committee that will work with Marion F. Detrick, county agent, and George Cain in arranging the exhibit. Two departments will be provided for contestants, one for persons under eighteen years and the other for persons over eighteen years.

Indianapolis.—A suit to mandate the state board of tax commissioners to approve and authorize the issuance of $73,000 worth of bonds by Franklin county to pay for the construction of a $69,990 concrete bridge over White river, at Laurel, was filed in the Marion Circuit court by William D. Moore, Jacob Klein and A. W. Waechter, Franklin county commissioners.

Columbus.—Wireworm is doing much damage in the eastern part of Bartholomew county. Thomas McFerron, a farmer, reported to S. R. Miles, county agricultural agent, that he had planted a 22-acre field twice and had failed to get a single stand of corn because of the worm.

Evansville.—Grand Master's day was celebrated here by nearly 5,000 Odd Fellows, who came from all parts of Indiana and northern Kentucky to pay their respects to Herdis F. Clements of Mount Vernon, who is the newly-installed grand master of the order in the state.

Wawaka.—Burglars, who ransacked the farm residence of Jacob Ramer, near Wawaka, passed up registered Liberty bonds valued at $1,000 and appropriated a revolver, a watch, a silver pencil and a foutnain pen. The robbers gained entrance to the house by breaking a window.

Anderson.—Myron Miller a local horticulturist, says that there will be only half a crop of peaches, that pears and plums will be good, that grapes will be reduced and that raspberries and blackberries will be plentiful in Madison county, despite frost damages.

Indianapolis.—Governor McCray at Indianapolis appointed O. W. Smith of Martinsville as field inheritance tax investigator for the state board of tax commissioners, succeeding Schuyler C. Mowrer. Mr. Mowrer will become a member of the office force of the board.

Decatur.—A woman's style show and big pyrotechnic displays are to be new features of the northern Indiana fair, to be held July 24 to 27, inclusive. There also will be horse races, baseball games, a live-stock exhibition, flivver owners' day and night shows.

Wabash.—A report received from the state laboratory at Indianapolis revealed that William Weaver, fifty-three, who died suddenly, committed suicide by swallowing enough poison to have killed 12 men. Weaver for many years was a drug clerk.

Muncie.—Four motortrucks were burned in a fire which is thought to have originated in a short circuit in the wiring of an automobile in a garage at the home of G. W. Rowlett. The loss is $5,000.

Clinton.—James Bennett, twenty-six, was killed at Bogle mine No. 3, evidently by being knocked from a car by a low-hanging crowbar or piece of slate or coal as he was driving to the bottom.

Terre Haute.—Forty-five students, comprising the thirty-ninth graduating class of Rose Polytechnic institute, received their diplomas, closing the impressive commencement exercises held in the new gymnasium of the institute.

Albion.—Mrs. Gladys Iddings was awarded a verdict of $8,500 against the New York Central Railroad company for the death of her husband, Scott, who was struck and killed by a train at Kendallville.

Jasonville.—The Baptist congregation of Jasonville is advertising for bids for the construction of a new church, the outside dimensions of which will be 46 by 70 feet.

Albion.—Vaughn DePew, eighteen, submitted to an operation for the removal of his left eye, the result of an injury suffered when a hot cinder entered it while he was awaiting a train.

Laporte.—Laporte will be host in October to the state convention of the Indiana grange.

Columbia City.—The Columbia City High School Athletic association has just completed a new baseball park. It will be surrounded by a half-mile cinder track, now being constructed.

Columbus.—Mrs. Hattie Doeller announced from her beautiful home that her son, William E. Doeller, and Miss Catherine Louise Littauer, daughter of a millionaire glove manufacturer of Washington, were married in Philadelphia.

$997.00 BUYS THIS
Sterling System Home
Direct from the Mill. Save middlemen's Profit. All material comes in one complete shipment—cut to fit—ready to erect, all on the ground when you start building. No waste. No guesswork.
Send 20 cents for beautiful book de luxe describing this and many other attractive designs.
INTERNATIONAL MILL & TIMBER CO.
1920 South Wenona Avenue, Bay City, Mich.

HOME OWNERS
Get ready for next winter, heat your home with fuel oil. Be independent of high coal prices, get rid of dirt and ashes. These burners were made for and used by the U. S. Government. Hundreds in use all over the country. Sold through dealers for $125, our new sales plan enables us to sell them for $15 With Order $20 When Equipment is Delivered
Oil can be procured from any of your local dealers. System is clean and requires little attention. Price includes 2 burner units, supply tank, pressure gauge, pressure pump and all pipe fittings. Anyone can install with instructions we furnish.
SURE HEAT CO.
(Incorporated Under the Blue Sky Laws of Illinois)
309 S. LaSalle Street Chicago, Illinois

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Removes Dandruff-Stops Hair Falling
Restores Color and Beauty to Gray and Faded Hair
60c. and $1.00 at Druggists.
Hiscox Chem. Wks. Patchogue, N. Y.

HINDERCORNS Removes Corns, Callouses, etc., stops all pain, ensures comfort to the feet, makes walking easy. 15c. by mail or at Druggists. Hiscox Chemical Works, Patchogue, N. Y.

California's Lemon Crop.

The present lemon crop of the state of California with one exception, will be the largest ever shipped out of that state. It is estimated that it will consist of 10,878 carloads of 400 boxes each. The crop of 1920-21 was slightly larger.

Cuticura for Pimply Faces.
To remove pimples and blackheads smear them with Cuticura Ointment. Wash off in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Once clear keep your skin clear by using them for daily toilet purposes. Don't fail to include Cuticura Talcum. Advertisement.

Yes?

Mrs.—Women may gossip now and then, but let me tell you, Mr. Man, that they have more control of their tongues than men have.

Mr.—You win. Men have no control whatever over women's tongues.—New York Sun.

For your daughter's sake, use Red Cross Ball Blue in the laundry. She will then have that dainty, well-groomed appearance that girls admire.—Advertisement.

HERE'S HEIGHT OF SOMETHING

Matter of Worry Seems to Have Been Principal Subject in This Little Discussion.

An old man with gray whiskers sat on the steps of the village post office, sunning himself. He whittled idly on a cigar box lid and whistled softly to himself. Another man came up the street and paused beside the first.

"What you doin', Ed?" the newcomer asked.

"Ain't doin' nothin' much," Ed informed him.

The questioner was silent for a minute, as though considering this information deeply.

"What you waitin' for?" he asked later.

"Ain't waitin' for nothin', Jim," Ed replied. "Just waitin', that's all."

Jim pondered this statement, too.

"Say, Ed," he ventured after a while, "if I was waitin' and wasn't waitin' for nothin' it would worry me so I couldn't wait, nohow!"—Kansas City Star.

Reason to Quit.

"Hank Pringle's wife sed she'd let him smoke in the house providin' he'd blow the smoke up the chimney. After Hank had bumped his head 'bout 'leven times an' singed off most of his whiskers an' broke his specs an' burned holes in his pants he allowed smokin' was a bad habit anyhow an' he reckoned he'd give it up."—Life.

If coffee disagrees drink Postum
There's a Reason

JUNE

L 912

645

The Secret Adversary

By AGATHA CHRISTIE

(Copyright Dodd, Mead & Company)

TOMMY AND TUPPENCE

Love, adventure, fighting, humor, an attractive hero and heroine, a capable literary workman for an author—given these and you have always a good story and often the kind that keeps you up o' night to finish it. Add a real mystery, cleverly handled, and you get a real thriller of a yarn. Well, they are all here. That's why "The Secret Adversary" is hard to lay down until the last page is read. In fact, this story is "good measure, pressed down and shaken" because it's got a World War tingle to it and a patriotic thrill.

Mr. Brown, the evil genius, of the story, rules a clever and dangerous band. So cleverly does he remain in the background that not even his agents knowingly set eyes on him. So, in the next to the last chapter you are in for a surprise when you learn the identity of Mr. Brown and realize that he's been walking about in plain sight all the time.

Agatha Christie, the author, is a young English woman who has developed the writing of a mystery story to a fine art. She wrote "The Mysterious Affair at Styles," which was widely read on both sides of the Atlantic. Her new story is international, too, and thus has thrills for all English-speaking readers.

PROLOGUE

—1—

It was 2 p. m. on the afternoon of May 7, 1915. The Lusitania had been struck by two torpedoes in succession and was sinking rapidly, while the boats were being launched with all possible speed. The women and children were being lined up awaiting their turn. Some still clung desperately to husbands and fathers. One girl stood alone, slightly apart from the rest. She was quite young, not more than eighteen. She did not seem afraid, and her grave, steadfast eyes looked straight ahead.

"I beg your pardon."

A man's voice beside her made her start and turn. She had noticed the speaker more than once amongst the first-class passengers. There had been a hint of mystery about him which had appealed to her imagination. He spoke to no one.

She noticed that he was greatly agitated. There were beads of perspiration on his brow. He was evidently in a state of overmastering fear. And yet he did not strike her as the kind of man who would be afraid to meet death!

"Yes?" Her grave eyes met his inquiringly.

He stood looking at her with a kind of desperate irresolution.

"It must be!" he muttered to himself. "Yes—it is the only way. I've got to trust someone—and it must be a woman."

"Why?"

"Because of 'women and children first.'" He looked round and lowered his voice. "I'm carrying papers—vitally important papers. They may make all the difference to the Allies in the war. You understand? These papers have got to be saved! They've more chance with you than with me. Will you take them?"

The girl held out her hand.

"Wait—I must warn you. There may be risk—if I've been followed. I don't think I have, but one never knows. If so, there will be danger. Have you the nerve to go through with it?"

The girl smiled.

"I'll go through with it all right. And I'm real proud to be chosen! What am I to do with them afterward?"

"Watch the newspapers! I'll advertise in the personal columns of the Times, beginning 'Shipmate.' At the end of three days if there's nothing—well, you'll know that I'm down and out. Then take the packet to the American embassy, and deliver it into the ambassador's own hands. Is that clear?"

"Quite clear."

"Then be ready—I'm going to say good-by." He took her hand in his. "Good-by. Good luck to you," he said in a louder tone.

Her hand closed on the oilskin packet that had lain in his palm.

The Lusitania settled with a more decided list to starboard. In answer to a quick command, the girl went forward to take her place in the boat.

CHAPTER I

The Young Adventurers, Ltd.

"Tommy, old thing!"

"Tuppence, old bean!"

The two young people greeted each other affectionately, and momentarily blocked the Dover Street Tube exit in doing so. The adjective "old" was misleading. Their united ages would certainly not have totaled forty-five.

"Not seen you for simply centuries," continued the young man. "Where are you off to? Come and chew a bun with me. We're getting a bit unpopular here—blocking the gangway, as it were. Let's get out of it."

The girl assenting, they started walking down Dover street toward Piccadilly.

"Now, then," said Tommy, "where shall we go?"

The very faint anxiety which underlay his tone did not escape the astute ears of Miss Prudence Cowley, known to her intimate friends for some mysterious reason as "Tuppence." She pounced at once.

"Tommy, you're stony!"

"Not a bit of it," declared Tommy unconvincingly. "Rolling in cash."

"You always were a shocking liar," said Tuppence severely, "though you did once persuade Sister Greenbank that the doctor had ordered you beer as a tonic, but forgotten to write it on the chart. Do you remember?"

Tommy chuckled.

"I should think I did! Wasn't the old cat in a rage when she found out? Not that she was a bad sort really, old Mother Greenbank! Good old hospital — demobbed like everything else, I suppose?"

Tuppence sighed. "Yes. Lou too?"

Tommy nodded. "Two months ago."

"Gratuity?" hinted Tuppence.

"Spent."

"Oh, Tommy!"

"No, old thing, not in riotous dissipation. No such luck! The cost of living—ordinary plain or garden living—nowadays is, I assure you, if you do not know—"

"My dear child," interrupted Tuppence, "there is nothing I do not know about the cost of living. Here we are at Lyons', and we will each of us pay for our own. That's that!" And Tuppence led the way upstairs.

The place was full, and they wandered about looking for a table, catching odds and ends of conversation as they did so.

"Funny scraps one does overhear," murmured Tommy. "I passed two Johnnies in the street today talking about someone called Jane Finn. Did you ever hear such a name?"

But at that moment two elderly ladies rose and collected parcels, and Tuppence deftly ensconced herself in one of the vacant seats.

Tommy ordered tea and buns. Tuppence ordered tea and buttered toast.

"And mind the tea comes in separate teapots," she added severely.

Tommy sat down opposite her. His bared head revealed a shock of exquisitely slicked-back red hair. His face was pleasantly ugly—nondescript, yet unmistakably the face of a gentleman and a sportsman. His brown suit was well cut, but perilously near the end of its tether.

They were an essentially modern-looking couple as they sat there. Tuppence had no claim to beauty, but there was character and charm in the elfin lines of her little face, with its determined chin and large, wide-apart gray eyes that looked mistily out from under straight, black brows. She wore a small bright green toque over her black bobbed hair, and her extremely short and rather shabby skirt revealed a pair of uncommonly dainty ankles. Her appearance presented a valiant attempt at smartness.

The tea came at last, and Tuppence, rousing herself from a fit of meditation, poured it out.

"Now, then," said Tommy, taking a large bite of bun, "let's get up-to-date. Remember, I haven't seen you since that time in hospital in 1916."

"Very well." Tuppence helped herself liberally to buttered toast. "Abridged biography of Miss Prudence Cowley, fifth daughter of Archdeacon Cowley of Little Missendell, Suffolk. Miss Cowley left the delights and drudgeries) of her home life early in the war and came up to London, where she entered an officers' hospital. First month: Washed up six hundred and forty-eight plates every day. Second month: Promoted to drying aforesaid plates. Third month: Promoted to peeling potatoes. Fourth month: Promoted to cutting bread and butter. Fifth month: Promoted one floor up to duties of wardmaid with mop and pail. Sixth month: Promoted to waiting at table. Seventh month: Pleasing appearance and nice manners so striking that am promoted to waiting on the Sisters! Eighth month: Slight check in career. Sister Bond ate Sister Westhaven's egg! Grand row! Wardmaid clearly to blame! Inattention in such important matters cannot be too highly censured. Mop and pail again! How are the mighty fallen! Ninth month: Promoted to sweeping out wards, where I found a friend of my childhood in Lieutenant Thomas Beresford (bow, Tommy!), whom I had not seen for five long years. The meeting was affecting! Tenth month: Reproved by matron for visiting the pictures in company with one of the patients, namely: the aforementioned Lieutenant Thomas Beresford. Eleventh and twelfth months: Parlormaid duties resumed with entire success. At the end of the year left hospital in a blaze of glory. After that, the talented Miss Cowley drove successively a trade delivery van, a motor-lorry and a general. The last was the pleasantest. I've forgotten his name now. I next entered a government office. We had several very enjoyable tea parties. I had intended to become a land girl, a postwoman, and a bus conductress by way of rounding off my career—but the armistice intervened! I clung to the office with the true limpet touch for many long months, but, alas, I was combed out at last. Since then I've been looking for a job. Now, then—your turn."

"There's not so much promotion in mine," said Tommy regretfully, "and a great deal less variety. I went out to France again, as you know. Then they sent me to Mesopotamia, and I got wounded for the second time, and went into hospital out there. Then I got stuck in Egypt till the armistice happened, kicked my heels there some time longer, and finally got demobbed. And, for ten long, weary months I've been job hunting! There aren't any jobs! And, if there were, they wouldn't give 'em to me. What good am I? What do I know about business? Nothing."

Tuppence nodded gloomily.

"What about the colonies?' she suggested.

Tommy shook his head.

"I shouldn't like the colonies—and I'm perfectly certain they wouldn't like me!"

"Rich relations?"

"I've got an old uncle who's more or less rolling, but he's no good."

"Why not?"

"Wanted to adopt me once. I refused."

"I think I remember hearing about it," said Tuppence slowly. "You refused because of your mother—"

Tommy flushed.

"Yes, it would have been a bit rough on her. As you know, I was all she had. Old boy hated her—wanted to get me away from her. Just a bit of spite."

"Your mother's dead, isn't she?" said Tuppence gently.

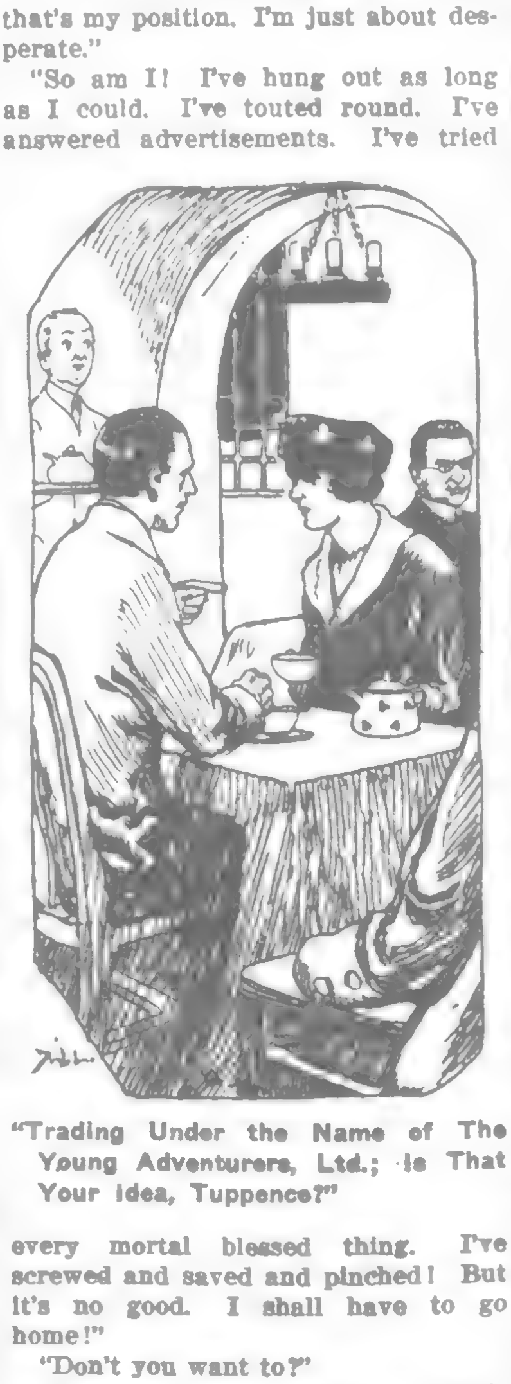
Tommy nodded.

Tuppence's large gray eyes looked misty.

"You're a good sort, Tommy. I always knew it."

"Rot!" said Tommy hastily. "Well, that's my position. I'm just about desperate."

"So am I! I've hung out as long as I could. I've touted round. I've answered advertisements. I've tried every mortal blessed thing. I've screwed and saved and pinched! But it's no good. I shall have to go home!"



"Trading Under the Name of The Young Adventurers, Ltd.; Is That Your Idea, Tuppence?"

"Don't you want to?"

"Of course I don't want to! What's the good of being sentimental? You see, there are seven of us at home. It's awful! All housework and mothers' meetings! I don't want to go back, but—oh, Tommy, what else is there to do?"

Tommy shook his head sadly. There was a silence, and then Tuppence burst out:

"Money, money, money! I think about money morning, noon and night! I dare say it's mercenary of me, but there it is!"

"Same here," agreed Tommy with feeling.

There was a pause.

"Of course," resumed Tuppence, "marriage is my best chance. I made up my mind to marry money when I was quite young. Any thinking girl would! I'm not sentimental, you know." She paused. "Come now, you can't say I'm sentimental," she added sharply.

"Certainly not," agreed Tommy hastily. "No one would ever think of sentiment in connection with you."

"That's not very polite," replied Tuppence. "But I dare say you mean it all right. Well, there it is! I'm ready and willing—but I never meet any rich men! All the boys I know are about as hard up as I am. No—marriage is fraught with difficulties. Remains—to make money!"

"We've tried that, and failed," Tommy reminded her.

"We've tried all the orthodox ways, yes. But suppose we try the unorthodox. Tommy, let's be adventurers!"

"Certainly," replied Tommy cheerfully. "How do we begin?"

"That's the difficulty. If we could make ourselves known, people might hire us to commit crimes for them. Look here, Tommy, shall we really? Shall we form a business partnership?"

"Trading under the name of the Young Adventurers, Ltd.? Is that the idea, Tuppence?"

"It's all very well to laugh, but I feel there might be something in it."

"How do you propose to get in touch with your would-be employers?"

"Advertisement," replied Tuppence promptly. "Have you got a bit of paper and a pencil?"

Tommy handed over a rather shabby green notebook, and Tuppence began writing busily.

"Shall we begin: 'Young officer, twice wounded in the war—'"

"Certainly not."

"Oh, very well, my dear boy. But I can assure you that that sort of thing might touch the heart of an elderly spinster, and she might adopt you, and then there would be no need for you to be a young adventurer at all."

"I don't want to be adopted."

"I forgot you had a prejudice against it. Now listen—how's this? 'Two young adventurers for hire. Willing to do anything, go anywhere. Pay must be good.' (We might as well make that clear from the start.) Then we might add: 'No reasonable offer refused'—like flats and furniture. How would that strike you if you read it?"

Tommy was holding the paper thoughtfully. His face burned a deeper red.

"Shall we really try it?" he said at last. "Shall we, Tuppence? Just for the fun of the thing?"

"Tommy, you're a sport! I knew you would be! Let's drink to success." She poured some cold dregs of tea into the two cups.

"Here's to our joint venture, and may it prosper!"

"The Young Adventurers, Ltd.!" responded Tommy.

They put down the cups and laughed rather uncertainly. Tuppence rose.

"I must return to my palatial suite at the hostel."

"Perhaps it is time I strolled round to the Ritz," agreed Tommy with a grin. "Where shall we meet? And when?"

"Twelve o'clock tomorrow. Piccadilly Tube station."

The two young people went off in opposite directions. Tuppence's hostel was situated in what was charitably called Southern Belgravia. For reasons of economy she did not take a bus.

She was half-way across St. James park, when a man's voice behind her made her start.

"Excuse me," it said. "But may I speak to you for a moment?"

Tuppence turned sharply, but the words hovering on the tip of her tongue remained unspoken, for the man's appearance and manner did not bear out her first and most natural assumption. She hesitated. As if he read her thoughts, the man said quickly:

"I can assure you I mean no disrespect."

Tuppence looked him up and down. He was a big man, clean shaven, with a heavy jowl. His eyes were small and cunning, and shifted their glance under her direct gaze.

"Well, what is it?" she asked.

The man took a card from his pocket and handed it to her with a bow.

Tuppence took it and scrutinized it carefully. It bore the inscription, "Mr. Edward Whittington." Below the name were the words "Esthonia Glassware company," and the address of a city office.

"How much do you know? And how much do you want?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Education of Chinese Girls.

Because they marry as soon as they leave the grades the little girls in China receive chiefly a moral education in school. The average girl enters school at the age of ten, and is married shortly after she finishes her brief educational course. The proverbial Chinese politeness is taught in the school as well as in the home. From their very entrance into school up to the time when they leave the classroom the little girls learn how to greet, how to receive visitors according to the old Chinese laws of ceremony, how to offer tea, how to offer an umbrella to an aged lady or how to share it with a companion. Home economics are taught. Girls help their mother in the household and clean father's books. During the last year in grade school, the young Chinese daughters of modern families learn civics and receive a sort of patriotic instruction.

Nothing to Brag Of.

An advertisement reads: "The best nuts are grown in America." True enough, but why brag about 'em?

Bottled Beasies.

English Ad—Special cows kept for infants and invalids, and delivered in bottles.—Boston Evening Transcript.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

BARNYARD CHATTER

"Such fine little goats as there are in the barnyard," said Mother Goat.

"There are three of the loveliest ones ever seen, and that I know full well."

"What do you mean when you say you know something full well?" asked Pinky Pig.

"Oh, it is just a way of saying that I know it perfectly well, or absolutely well, or anything of that sort."

"Why waste your time using extra words when you could save that time for eating?" asked Pinky.

"There is no food about just now," said Mrs. Goat. "That is one reason."

"Well," said Pinky, "that sounds like a good reason. Still you might dig in the hope you'd find something."

"Yes, I might," said Mrs. Goat, "and I'm also apt to find something blown toward the barnyard by the wind."

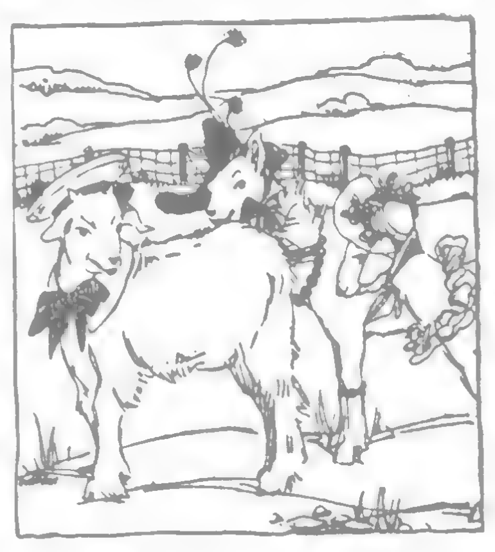
"Oh, dear," sighed Pinky, "what a work the wind could do if only it so chose. It could blow us food all the time."

"Grunt, grunt, if only the wind were more obliging," said Master Pink Pig.

"There is a farm not so very, very far away," said Brother Bacon, "at the top of a very high hill. I have always been very glad I didn't live there."

"Why?" asked the others.

"Because," said Brother Bacon, "I would always keep wondering if there wasn't something down below for me, and I'd have to climb down the path which is like a mountain pass and which leads down below.



"Three of the Loveliest Ones."

"Then when I got down below I would wonder if something had come up above which somehow I might be missing, and there would be so much climbing to do. Of course it looks like a beautiful place, but it would not do for me. Beauty is not the thing I care most for."

"True, true," shrieked the Geese as they walked proudly by, with their heads held high in the air.

"Grunt, grunt, I don't pay any attention to them," said Brother Bacon.

"But, Pigs," said Mrs. Goat, "you're all wasting a good deal of time in talking which you might spend digging or thinking of food."

"That is so," said Brother Bacon, "but we've thought of food all the time.

"That is why our talk hasn't been any more intelligent or worth hearing. You know when creatures talk and have something to say that is worthwhile they think of what they're saying. We don't bother to think much and so we don't talk well. Creatures who're thinking of all sorts of things while they're talking of something else don't talk well.

"That's the truth, grunt, grunt."

"I had a pleasant time while waiting to be milked in the barn last night," said Miss Jersey Cow. "There was some nice food there.

"But the other night we found a nice field of grain and were able to go through a place in the fence which had been left open by mistake and so we weren't ready when milking time came, but we had to be gone after. We were a good long distance off. Oh, yes, we had been having a regular party!"

"I came on the train to the farm," said a little Calf, "and when I was on my way here the train stopped at one station and there was a man who shouted out, 'Is the calf there?' I felt so important!"

"Baa, baa, baa," said Lionel Sheep. "I once traveled on a train, too."

"We took a long journey on our feet," said the two Mules, and they shook their long ears and said, "We most certainly did."

So the creatures chatted of many things.

Give the Water Credit!

Bobby was sent away from the dinner table to wash his dirty hands. He obeyed promptly, but his mother happened to notice the water in which he had washed.

"Oh, my!" she exclaimed, "how in the world do you manage to get your hands so dirty?"

"That didn't all come from my hands," indignantly answered Bobby. "I washed my face in that water, too." —Our Boys.

Full Credit Desired.

An arithmetic teacher was quizzing her class, and asked little Johnnie if he knew the multiplication tables.

"How much is three times eight?" asked the teacher.

"Twenty-four," from Johnnie.

"That's very good, very good, indeed, Johnnie," commended the teacher.

"Very good!" exclaimed Johnnie. "Gee, that's perfect!"

DO YOU WANT WORK

—of an interesting, healthful nature?
—at good wages?
—outdoors?
—with a manly group of he-Americans?
—traveling all over Northeastern United States?
—with an exceptional opportunity for advancement on merit?
—and the chance to receive professional training while you earn?

WE HAVE JUST SUCH WORK FOR YOU IF YOU ARE

—between 20 and 80 years of age
—unmarried
—in good health
—of good American stock
—not afraid of real work
—honest, energetic and ambitious
—able to supply good references
—equipped with high school education or equivalent.
—This is not a selling job; it is a real opportunity to learn the profession of tree surgery thoroughly from the bottom up, and to establish yourself in a responsible position with the only national concern engaged in this profession, which now employs more than 200 men.

Write, or better yet, use the coupon.

COUPON

The Davey Tree Expert Company,
96 City Bank Bldg., Kent, Ohio.

I am interested in your offer. Please send me your illustrated folder and qualification blank.

Name ....
Address ....
....

To avoid delay, please write name and address plainly.

NR
TO-NIGHT
Tomorrow Alright

KEEPING WELL—An NR Tablet (a vegetable aperient) taken at night will help keep you well, by toning and strengthening your digestion and elimination.

Used for over 30 Years

Get a 25¢ Box

NR JUNIORS Jrs

Chips off the Old Block

NR JUNIORS—Little NRs

One-third the regular dose. Made of the same ingredients, then candy coated. For children and adults.

SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST

Then She Went On.

She was in an imaginative mood.

"Henry, dear," she said, after talking for two hours without a stop, "sometimes I wish I were a mermaid."

"It would be fatal," snapped her husband.

"Fatal! In what way?"

"Why, you couldn't keep your mouth closed—you'd drown."

Clouds come high, but we must have them.

Father's day is pay day.

Shake Into Your Shoes

And sprinkle in the foot-bath Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic, healing powder for Painful, Swollen, Sweating feet. It prevents blisters and sore spots and takes the sting out of corns and bunions. Always use Allen's Foot-Ease to break in new shoes and enjoy the bliss of feet without an ache. Those who use Allen's Foot-Ease say that they have solved their foot troubles. Sold everywhere. Trial package and a Foot-Ease Walking Doll sent Free. Address Allen's Foot-Ease, Le Roy, N. Y.

BOYS! GIRLS! WE WILL GIVE FREE gifts, such as roller skates and ball outfits, for your spare time. Write quickly! Free information. Address G. H. BOYCE & CO., Dept. A, FT. WAYNE, INDIANA.

BOYS! RADIO AND RADIO SUPPLIES given free for working three hours in your spare time. For particulars write G. H. BOYCE & CO., Dept. C, FT. WAYNE, IND.

Dizzy Spells
Are Usually Due to Constipation

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

Nujol

JUNE

L 912

Get Your

Daily Bread - - Welcome Flours

at the J. C. Bailey Store St. Joe

Made by G. A. WARD of the

ALBION ROLLER MILLS, Albion Indiana

NEWS OF THE TOWN

Miss Janice Ridgway is spending the week with Auburn relatives.

$ Day at Warner' Hat Shop. Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Byron Widney visited Mrs. Silas Reasoner, who is not so well the past few days.

The Misses Edna Jackson and Portia Hadsell left Friday to attend school at Winona.

Mrs. H. R. Minnick spent Wednesday afternoon with her daughter, Mrs. Bessie Crouse at Garrett.

Ann Abel. Saturday night and Sunday guests were Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Bayliss of near Ney, Ohio.

The tennis court at the Methodist church is being made ready to use again.

The editor reports his aged grandmother, Sarah E. Walters, in a very weak condition.

Mr. and Mrs. Faye Reichelderfer of Payne, Ohio, Mrs. Fred Reichelderfer of Fort Wayne, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Betz.

Mr. and Mrs. Florence Buchanan left Monday for Cincinnati, Ohio, for a month's visit with their daughter, Mrs. J. E. Sturgis and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Curie went Saturday to Cold Springs, Lake Hamilton, and will spent a week at their cottage there.

Mrs. George Packer and two daughters of Butler, visited from Thursday until Saturday with her sister, Mrs. Foster Gee and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl B. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Brodbeck and children visited friends in Hudson Sunday.

Joseph Shull went to LaFayette last Tuesday to enter the nine weeks' summer school at Purdue University.

The fish season again opened on June 16, and this was very much in evidence on Saturday and Sunday along the river and at the lakes.

Mr. and Mrs. Milo Provines and children of near Auburn, were Sunday guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Gee.

Mrs. Albert Wade and little daughter returned Sunday morning to their home in Detroit after a couple of weeks visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kinsey.

Mr. and Mrs. William Pepple of Auburn, and Mr. and Mrs. James Sherwood of near that place, were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Kinsey.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Sechler and children of Fort Wayne, were Saturday night and Sunday guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sechler.

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Cameron of Bryan, Ohio, visited Sunday in the homes of E. B. Smith and Foster Gee. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Carper of near Auburn, were also Sunday guests in the latter home.

The ice cream and strawberry social held by the married people's class of the Lutheran Sunday School Friday night was very well attended. The program and music by the Tri-Mu Orchestra was fine as well as the eats.

Robert Johnson left Sunday morning for Indianapolis, to join his uncle, Everett Johnson and family, in an automobile tour to Washington, D. C. They will probably visit the capitol city about a week before their return.

Auburn—A part of the property owned by Christ Lagaris, who is now serving a six months term in the state penal farm on a charge of bootlegging, was sold at a Sheriff's sale last Friday to satisfy a judgment obtained against Lagaris by the Auburn American Security Co.

H. R. Minnick, M. D.

St. Joe, Indiana

Office at Residence

PHONE NO. 16X

Mrs. Tom White is not so well for the past few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker and children of Jackson township spent Sunday with Mrs. Anna Dilley.

Owen Gray of near Kimmell was a Monday dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Randall.

DuWayne Kinsey returned home Thursday evening from a few days' visit at Auburn.

Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Ulm were Sunday dinner guests of their son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. John Ulm.

George Walters and family were Sunday afternoon guests of Roy Koch and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Williams spent Tuesday and Wednesday at Crooked Lake and Angola.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Hamilton and daughter, Margaret Elenor were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Northrup.

Mr. and Mrs. William Randall and little grandson, Harry Jr. spent Sunday at Wolf lake, guests of her brother, F. A. Pinchon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Miser, daughter, Martha, and sons, Charles and Frank, visited relatives at Auburn and Waterloo Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sechler went to Auburn Monday evening for a visit with their daughter, Mrs. Everett Mavis and family.

Mrs. F. R. Bowman and daughter, Eloise, visited the formers' parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Baker at Fort Wayne one day recently.

Mrs. Vina Fish went to Auburn Monday for a week's visit with her daughter, Mrs. Ira Sherrick and family.

Mrs. Ford Jackson and baby were Friday guests of Mrs. George Kees. In the afternoon both ladies visited Mrs. Will Koch.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Buckingham and Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Folts were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Hillegass at Huntertown.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaiah Royer of Orville, Ohio, spent Wednesday night and Thursday morning guests of their aunt, Mrs. Catherine Curie.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Hamilton and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Northrup were at Auburn Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Henderson and son, Richard, of Antwerp, Ohio, were Sunday guests of Edith Widney.

Miss Kathryn Curie attended a birthday anniversary surprise party for her cousin, Miss Thelma Sechler, at Butler Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sechler had as week-end guests Mr. and Mrs. Blen Bowen and two children and the Misses Johanna Doeding and Mabel Williams.

William Curie, F. R. Bowman and Sam Mumaw attended the meeting at Berne, Indiana, of the Indiana Bankers' association last Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Monroe drove to New Haven Saturday, he returning Sunday evening, she remaining for a longer stay with their daughter, Mrs. Jesse Copp and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Friend and children of near Hicksville were callers of Mr. and Mrs. Will Koch and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Reasoner Sunday. The latter couple returned home with them for a week's visit.

Dan Myer and family were Saturday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Kees. In the afternoon both families drove to Garrett and visited in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gillingham.

C. R. Brunson of Fort Wayne, was a Saturday evening supper guest of his sister, Mrs. C. C. Bassett and family. He also visited his mother, Mrs. A. D. Brunson and other relatives until Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Rhodenbaugh spent Wednesday and Thursday at Napoleon, Ohio, visiting Elmer Hart and family. Ross Hart returned home with them for a few days visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hickman had as Wednesday guests, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Notestine of Normal, Illinois, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hickman of Bryan, Ohio. Friday evening supper guests were, Elmer Hickman of Hicksville, and Mrs.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Woodcox were Fort Wayne visitors Tuesday.

Harcourt Miser is driving a new Ford touring car.

Ernest Hallobaugh of Logansport, spent last Wednesday in St. Joe.

M. E. Leighty, superintendent of the DeKalb county infirmary, is building a modern home in Auburn.

For Sale—Fine eating potatoes and late seed. Geo. Walter St, Joe, Ind.

The St. Joe Fire Department is being represented at the State Convention at Decatur today (Thursday) by several of its members

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Folts left Tuesday for Holgate Ohio for a weeks visit with the formers Mother Mrs. Margaret Folts.

J. P. Buckingham left Wednesday morning for a three day fishing trip to the State Dam near Defiance.

Mr. and Mrs J. C. F. Abel returned home Tuesday afternoon after a seven week visit with their son and wife Mr. and Mrs. Glen Abel of Peru.

Aunt Kate Leighty accompanied Mr. and Mrs. F.D. Tope to Cherubusco, Sunday to visit until Monday night. Mr. and Mrs. Tope returned Sunday night.

The Misses Josephine and Esther Johnson left Tuesday evening for Adrian, where they will attend the Commencement exercises at Adrian College. Thursday they will go to Onstead, Michigan to spend the weekend with friends.

It dosen't seem so bad to think that our churches can't afford to send more then one or two delegates to the state convention at Indianapolis this week, but it is strange that a town can't afford to send at least one delegate to the state Firemen's convention at Decatur.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Bowman had as Sunday guests Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rosenbury of Angola, Mrs. Adam Ritchey and grandson, Douglas Detrick, Osro Ritchey and family and T. A. Ritchey, all of Hamilton, and Mr. and Mrs. John Benninghoff Jr. and little son, of Fort Wayne.

Clearing Sale —On Vines and Bedding Plants for one Week only, beginning Monday June 25. Some big reductions to make room.

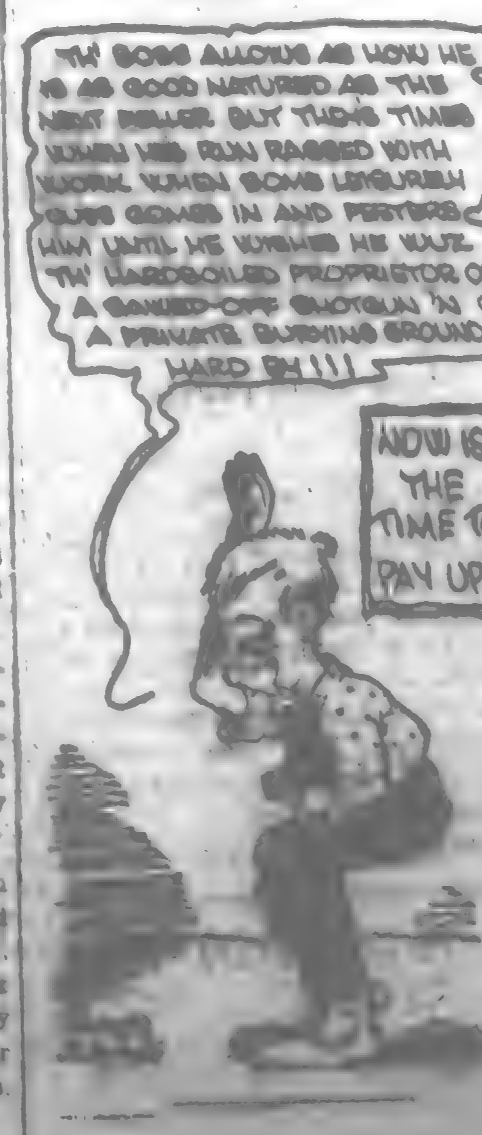
Feaglers Greenhouse

Phone 639 W Auburn, Ind.

Mrs. Ray Herrick and children of Fort Wayne, are here, guests for an indefinite period in the homes of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Perry, and also her husband's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orange Herrick. They were joined in the latter home by her husband Saturday night and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Vet Chandler of Hobart, came Saturday for a week's visit with the latter's mother, Mrs. Belle Ridgway, and other relatives. Sunday guests at dinner in the Ridgway home besides the above were, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Curie and children and Mrs. Catherine Curie. Afternoon guests were Mrs. Mabel Morr, Mrs. Georgia Van Wagner and baby of Auburn, and supper guests were Mr. and Mrs. Abe Mason, also of Auburn.

MICKIE SAYS



TH' BOSS ALLOWS AS HOW HE IS AS GOOD NATURED AS THE NEXT FELLER BUT THERE'S TIMES WHEN HE'S RUN RAGGED WITH WORK WHEN SOME LEISURELY GUY COMES IN AND PESTERS HIM UNTIL HE WISHES HE WUZ TH' HARDBOILED PROPRIETOR OF A SAWED-OFF SHOTGUN 'N A PRIVATE BURYING GROUND HARD BY!!!
NOW IS THE TIME TO PAY UP!

NEAR HARVEST TIME!

BINDERS AND MOWERS

Don't forget that Harvest Time Is Near and you, who will possibly need a Binder or Mower, should consult us now as to our prices. As you all know harvest tools have already advanced 10 per cent for next year. We have a limited supply at the old price, so you had better place your order now.

BINDER TWINE

A carlord of McCormick-Deering Standard Binder Twine will arrive soon. Get our price which is no higher than the cheaper twine. We guarantee every foot of twine.

FLORENCE OIL STOVES

We do not need to tell you of the good qualities of this stove anymore, because, just ask your neighbor. Maybe he has one.

We have placed 74 of these stoves in this and the surrounding community in the past 14 months.

Each purchaser is our best reference. The Florence costs you less than one-half the price of other stoves, and has an Iron Clad guarantee that beats any other Stove Company's guarantee.

The Florence Oven is the Perfect Mate to the Florence Stove, a combination that makes cooking and baking a pleasure instead of a hardship.

Let Us Demonstrate This Stove to You.

Hardware Wm. Curie Implements

ST. JOE, INDIANA

Goes to Convention

Harcourt Miser, Charles Miser, Miss Alice Tustison of this place, accompanied by the Misses Dora Carnahan of Jackson Township, and Dorothy George of Auburn, left via of motor to attend the State Sunday School Convention. Miss Martha Miser and Miss Jessie Provines of Concord, started to Indianapolis Tuesday and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Koch, Stanley Means and Olen Dermott drove through Monday, where they will also attend the Convention.

Class Reunion

The following young people were delightfully entertained at the home of their friend and former Sunday School class mate, Mrs. Pauline Jordon of Fort Wasne, last Wednesday; Mesdames Flossie Widney, Neva Hursh, Jean Curie, Marie Draggoo, Ireta Wilcox, and Misses Kathryn Kinsey, Melba Andress, Dorothy Bowman, of St. Joe, Mrs. Madonna Wade of Detroit, Michigan, and Mesdames Helen Benninghoff, Princess Zonker and Edith Hatch of Fort Wayne. The party was chaperoned by Mrs. Delora Curie. A delicuous potluck dinner was served after which a pleasant time was had in old time reminiscences.

First Aid.

At a southern junior college for girls, a student passing along the hall noticed a chaperon apparently listening through a keyhole, and notified the girls of that room. Soon after a stepladder was placed outside the door and a placard which read, "Keyhole out of order, please use transom."

NO FEAR OF EVIL resulting from change of diet, water or climate, concerns those who take on the short trip, summer vacation or long journey.

CHAMBERLAIN'S COLIC and DIARRHOEA REMEDY

Ready for emergency - night or day.

Church Notes

M. P. Church Notes

9:30 a. m. Sunday School.

7:30 p. m. Preaching servises. Rev. C. H. Havens, pastor, will fill the pulpit again.

10:45 a. m. Preaching Service at Concord.

The Children's Day exercises at Concord last Snnday evening were very good and were well attended.

Lutheran Notes

The Children's Day Program at the Lutheran church last Sunduy was well attended and the offering was liberal for the Orphan's Home. Thanks.

Preaching next Sunday at 10:30. A practical sermon to practical christians.

The Sundav School is very prosperous now. The opening exercises will be conducted by the teachers of the primary classes and their classes. This will be good.

The attendance at prayer meeting is growing in numbers and interest. Come and let us study the Word together. Christ says, "Sanctify the truth; thy word is truth."

You are invited to all of these services.

S. D. Steffuy, Pastor.

Christian Church Notes

The Loyal Sons and Daughters class held its regular monthly business and social meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Maxwell. After the potluck dinner the business session was held, at which time Ed Storer was elected class president and Foster Gee, vice-president. Thirty-two were present, which included members of the class, their children and four guests. Plans for enlarging the class were made.

Glen Cameron, student minister of Angola college, spoke here Sunday morning.

Children's Day exercises will be held next Sunday evening.

The Loyal Training class had a perfect attendance Sunday morning, fifteen present including the teacher.

Sunday School Report.

The following is a true and correct report of the various Sunday Schools in this neighborhood for last Sunday.

Christian	125	$ 6.01
M. P.	48	2.98
Lutheran	127	6.59
M. E. Spencer	98	5.35
Lutheran	115	5.75
Newville U. B.	100	4.56
Christian
Coburntown	82
Concord	91	4.15
Mt. Pleasant	72	2.72
Rehobeth	101	52.01

POST CARDS

GET THEM AT

The News Office

JUNE

L 912

THIS PAPER IS YOUR SERVANT,
USE IT WEEKLY

ST. JOE NEWS.

BOOST ST. Joe.
BOOST THE BAND.
BOOST THE PAPER

VOL. XXXVII ST. JOE DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, JUNE 28, 1923 No. 26

Drowns at Gravel Pit

Harry Derrow, a youth of 18 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Derrow, residing near Mudsock, 7½ miles north of St. Joe, was the victi mof drowning Sunday afternoon at about three o'clock in the gravel pit on the Willie Keeler farm.

Harry with his companion, Harry Badman, had gone to the pit to bathe and because he could not swim, the former waded about the shore in what he thought to be shallow water. But suddenly He slipped into a hole which proved to be at least sixteen feet deep. Young Badman who was swimming near, hurriedly dove to bring him out and was able to bring him to the surface and nearer the bank three different times, but the drowning lad made such a fight that he failed to save him.

Knowing that he could do no more alone, Badman sent to the neighbors and to St. Joe for help. Two hours after the boy first went down Frank Meese, of St. Joe, succeeded in bringing the body to the bank by use of hooks.

A doctor and others worked with the body for a time trying in vain to restore life to the body.

Expressed Appreciation

In a letter received recently from H. E. Bodine, secretary of the Fort Wayne Wholesalers' 1923, get-acquainted tour, since their return to Fort Wayne following their 3-day tour through Indiana, Ohio, and Michigan towns, expressed his appreciation in behalf of the entire organization, for the reception they received here and other towns.

Delegates Make Report

Local delegates to the State Sunday School Convention at Indianapolis last week returned Friday evening and Saturday, bringing with them reports of splendid things done and said during the various sessions. They are anxious to report DeKalb county as one of the four 100 per cent. counties in the state and that Concord township was one of the best townships in DeKalb county.

The delegates also feel elated to have found that our county president, George Beugnot of Auburn, is very active in the state organization and is asknowledged as a great leader. He was re-elected state vice-president.

W. C. T. U. NEWS

The St. Joe W. C. T. U. will meet at the home of Mrs. Jane Hull Friday afternoon, June 29, at 2 P. M. This is the annual Flower Mission day and members are asked to bring or send flowers that may be sent to the shut-ins and sick.

Song.
Devotional ....Lora Leighty
Life Story of Jennie Cassady
Herma Havens
Recitation ....Ruth Havens
Our Children and the Land of
"Make Believe" ....Jane Hull
Business.
Adjournment.

I will deliver Ice every Monday, Wednesdav and Saturday. Phone your order.

Earle Smith, St. Joe.

Another Open Meeting

Another open meeting of the Ku Klux Klan was held at the Will Hamm home east of town Monday night. As before there were only a few St. Joe men who are said to have attended. The meeting seemed not to have been advertised for not many knew of it.

The barn in which the meeting was held was surrounded by white robed sentinels probably for the purpose of keeping away anyone who might not be a desirable attendant.

At the close of the meeting a huge cross which had been erected in the field near the grist mill was burned, illuminating the field for a radius of hundreds of feet around. The masked Klansmen rode away in the automobiles in which they came.

Marriages

Miss Mary White, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jean White, and David Lants of Leo, were married on last Saturday morning at Coldwater, Michigan. They will make their home at Fort Wayne, where the groom is employed.

We have the announcement of the marriage of Miss Lela Williams and Edwin White, both of Fort Wayne, which took place at Hillsdale, Michigan, last Saturday, June 23. The groom is employed in the S. F. Bowser Oil Pump and Tank works at Fort Wayne, and is a son of Mrs. Pearl White of Springfield, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kinsey and E. R. Kinsey, wife and sons attended the marriage of the former couple's eldest son Gerald formerly of this place and Miss Marjorie Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Brown of Montpelier, O., which occurred at the home of the bride's parents Sunday morning at nine o'clock, the double ring ceremony being used. The young couple left the same day for a week's visit at St. Louis, Mo. They will reside in Montpelier.

New Records

Two new production records were established by the Ford Motor Company during the week ending Tuesday, June 12, the Ford News announces.

The total domestic output for the week was 40,346 Ford Cars and Trucks, 783 more than the last high week, that ending May 29 with its total of 39,563.

Daily production went to a new high figure Tuesday when the Ford assembly plants turned out 6,788 Cars and Trucks, beating the record of 6,781 established on May 28.

Fordson Tractor production for the week was 2,698.

Ford Motor No. 7,777,777 was turded out at the Ford Motor Company on June 8th and shipped on that date to the Los Angeles Branch of the company.

Entertained During Week

Wilson Beaber and wife entertained as follows during the past week: Wednesday at dinner J. D. Milliman and family, of Butler, Thursday at dinner Henry Beaber and family of Fort Wayne, Friday afternoon Fred Parker, wife and children of Gary and Mrs. Della McKinley and daughter of Hicksville, Sunday at dinner Cecil Shilling and family of near here, Royce Moody and wife and Wm. Moody and wife and grandchildren of Hicksville and Monday evening S. Keller and children of Woodburn.

Rum Runners Captured

The sewage system of the city of Hicksville, was flushed clean last Saturday when 180 cases of Canadian beer captured by Hicksville, and Defiance county officials were emptied into it.

Charles Shelly, Fred R. Parker, and Ralph Wolf, claiming Fort Wayne as their home, and the two large two-ton trucks on which the liquor was being hauled were captured Saturday morning at 8:00 o'clock just west of Hicksville on the Fort Wayne road and were taken into custody and held. The men were locked in jail and the trucks stored at a garage while the booze was pored out.

It is thought that these men have been making regular trips to Detroit after liquor and the officers prepared themselves to stop them this time if possible. Guards were stationed east ol Hicksville on the Bryan road Friday night expecting the rum runners along sometime in the night. Other guards were stationed in town and still others west of town near the narrow bridge.

Shortly before 8 o'clock Saturday morning the eastern guards phoned to town that the trucks had passed. Immediately the bridge west of town was securely blockaded and when the trucks came along they were forced to hault and readily gave themselves to the officers who directed them back to town.

The men were released Monday after having paid a fine of $750 each.

The incident caused considerable excitement in Hicksville. When the rumor was given out that rum runners had been captured the streets were readily lined with curious eyes.

A tip from a garage mechanic who repaired a car for what he thought to be a booze truck, led the officers to make an invistigation.

39 Years Ago

From Our Files

Dr. Bowman returned from New York last Monday evening.

J. D. Leighty attended the state convention at Indianapolis last week.

William Hollabaugh will put a slat roof on his barn.

Bill Shilling talks of buying out Milt Chaney's Meat Market.

Come to St. Joe on the Fourth of July and get your picture taken.

Alex. Donaldson has a sister visiting him from Pennsylvania.

Mrs. J. D. Leighty and son John, visited with friends in Churubusco this week.

Ask W. H. Simonton where he was when Squire Walborn called upon him last week.

Frank Barney has been at Indianapolis this week attending the state convention.

Chris Carie will have one of the best houses in this part of the country when completed.

The prospect throughout this section of the country for wheat, oats and grass is very encouraging, and corn is looming up wonderfully.

W. H. Calkins of Laporte received the nomination for governor at the Republican convention held at Indianapolis last week.

In order to give us time and opportunity to get our harvesting done we shall discontinue the publication of this paper until the first of August.

J. S. Davis was hurriedly called home from Milford Junction one night last week, on account of the arrival of a young telegraph operator at his house.

P. Bishop of Spencerville, went to Springfield, Ohio, last Tuesday morning, to attend the commencement exercises of Wittenberg College.

Alex. Filley's brother from Michigan, has been visiting with him this week.

The trees that were set out along our streets only a few years ago are growing nicely and are already beginning to add to the beauty of our town. There ought to be some trees set out upon the school grounds.

The social held at Leighty's orchard was like everything else the St. Joe people undertake to do, a decided success. There was a whole town full of people here, and although it a cool evening they gobbled down the ice cream and strawberries as though they never had seen any before. The net receipts were about $17.00.

Vacation time is here and many of aur readers will spend perhaps the whole summer, perhaps a month, perhaps two weeks, or perhaps only a week some where away from home. If so, just inform us at the office where you will be and we will gladly send your News to you. We know you will miss it if you don't get it at the regular time.

Mrs S A Abel returned home Friday after being in the home of her son, Wallace Abel near Newville, since last October

FEED GOOD FEEDS!

We have a full line of hominy, bran, tankage, cracked corn and other feeds. We buy in car load lots and give you the benefit in price.

HOT MEATHER!

Hot weather should not make you forget that winters are cold and some are awful cold. We warned you to lay in as much coal now as possible while the summer prices are on. We have always tried to give you the first hand information regarding coal. We look for a severe car shortage a little later on when everybody will be wanting coal at the same time.

Now is the time to put your coal in your own bins and don't put it off. We have excellent coal on hand now and suit you in almost any kind you want. Buy now. Take our advice.

The St. JOE ELEVATOR

Samuel Keesler, Mgr. Grain Dept.
Bert Jackson, Mgr. Coal Dept.

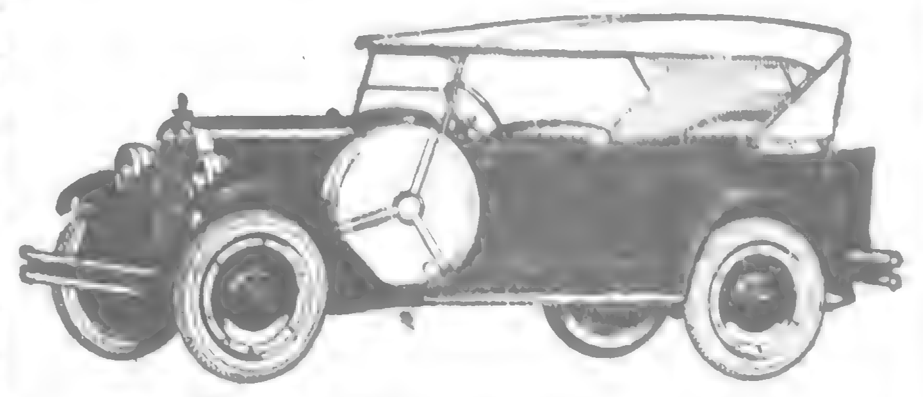
Call on us—glad to see you. Come in whether you want anything or not.

Ahead of the Game

Here is our text for today: If you are careful to spend LESS than you EARN you will always be a head of the game.

Think it over. It has its disadvantages at times when you want something you can't really afford, but in the long run you will find it the SAFE way. It is the easiest thing in the world for a luxury to become a necessity. Go forwardslowly, steadily, keeping your savings in a reliable bank like ours. In time all the necessities and many of the luxuries of life will be be at your commend.

St. Joe Valley Bank---A State Bank



Five Passenger Sport Car
$1025 f. o. b. Detroit

The comfort and ease of riding of the good Maxwell have aroused great enthusiasm among owners. Its pronounced beauty, its reliability and its economy are other reasons for the remarkable inroads it is making in public regard.

THE GOOD MAXWELL

ST. JOE GARAGE

Service all the time
Phone No. 36 Days No. 76 Nights

CANNING TIME

CANS

"IDEAL
QUICK SEAELRS"

Without a doubt IDEAL QUICK SEALER cans are the best on the market and because of that fact they are the most used jar made today. We will be glad to supply you.

RUBBERS

"GOOD LUCK"

We will have plenty of the famous "Good Luck" can rubbers, the kind all ladies want to use in canning.

E. R. KINSEY

Hardware Furniture Undertaking

JUNE

L 912

CHANGE OF LIFE LOSES TERRORS

For Women Who Rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Greenville, Pa.—"I took your medicine through the Change of Life and it did wonders for me. I was down in bed when I started to take it and weighed 95 pounds. I had hot flashes and was so nervous and weak that everything would get black and I could not see. I would sit and cry and did not know what I was crying for. Since I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel younger than I did ten years ago, and my friends all tell me I look younger, and I owe it all to the Vegetable Compound. I do all my housework for a family of seven now. I will be glad to answer any woman who writes me in regard to my case."—Mrs. JOHN MYERS, 55 Union St., Greenville, Pa.

Many letters similar to this have been published testifying to the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They are sincere expressions from women who describe as best they can their feelings before and after taking this well-known medicine.

Many times they state in their letters their willingness to answer women who write them. It is an offer dictated by gratitude and a desire to help others.

Economical Stove.

The ever-increasing cost of coal has led to the development of a heating stove that will burn sawdust or the lower grades of coal that are unsuited in the ordinary stoves. There is a separate magazine inside the drum of the stove, and this can be taken out and packed with fuel. A removable core is placed in the magazine before the fuel is packed in, and is withdrawn when the magazine is replaced in the stove. The space occupied by this core forms a central draft opening through the bed of fuel.

Fancywork Her Forte.

"Does your wife do any fancywork?" asked a victim.

"Fancywork? She won't even let a porous plaster come into the house without crocheting a red border round it and running a yellow ribbon through the holes."

Small Average.

White—What is the death rate in your town?

Gray—About two per motorcar.

A sure, safe way to end CORNS

In one minute you can end the pain of corns with Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads. They remove the cause—friction-pressure. You risk no infection from cutting, no danger from corrosive acids.

Zino-pads protect while they heal. Thin; antiseptic; waterproof. Sizes for corns, callouses, bunions. Get a box today at your druggist's or shoe dealer's.

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

Made in the laboratories of The Scholl Mfg Co., makers of Dr. Scholl's Foot Comfort Appliances, Arch Supports, etc.

Put one on—the pain is gone!

DON'T DESPAIR

If you are troubled with pains or aches; feel tired; have headache, indigestion, insomnia; painful passage of urine, you will find relief by regularly taking

LATHROP'S
GOLD MEDAL
HAARLEM OIL
CAPSULES

The world's standard remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles and National Remedy of Holland since 1696. Three sizes, all druggists. Guaranteed. Look for the name Gold Medal on every box and accept no imitation

Don't Cut Out a Shoe Boil, Capped Hock or Bursitis for will reduce them and leave no blemishes. Stops lameness promptly. Does not blister or remove the hair, and horse can be worked. $2.50 a bottle delivered. Book 6 A free.

ABSORBINE

W. F. Young, Inc., 310 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

Girls! Girls!! Clear Your Skin With Cuticura

Soap 25c, Ointment 25 and 50c, Talcum 25c.

Matrimonial Adventures

His Wife's Visitor

BY

Henry Kitchell Webster

Author of "Roger Drake," "Captain of Industry," "The Traitor and Loyalist," "The Whispering Man," "A King in Khaki," "The Sky Man," "June Madness," "The Real Adventure," "The Thoroughbred," "An American Family," "Mary Wollaston," "Real Life," etc.

Copyright by United Feature Syndicate

HENRY KITCHELL WEBSTER

Like so many of America's big authors, Henry Kitchell Webster began writing at an early age. His first work brought forth stories of mystery—thrillers; he specialized in plot.

Then he turned from that form of fiction to material with more substance. For one of the leading magazines he traveled in the tropics and wrote articles, not purely for local color, but studies of the life with a sociological background.

Later came his novels with their portrayals of real people and real problems, showing the power of Mr. Webster's mental equipment, for he is a widely cultivated person with a knowledge of the drama, music and literature. He speaks with authority on all of these subjects.

Mr. Webster is one of the authors who takes a long time at his writing, and the story that follows, written expressly for the Star Author Series of Matrimonial Adventures, was in process of development during a trip through Europe. "His Wife's Visitor" shows how very clever husbands sometimes are!

MARY STEWART CUTTING, JR.

The telephone rang for the third time since they had sat down to dinner. The maid, in her flurried haste to placate the tyrant, set down the dish of fried eggplant from which George had been about to help himself on the sideboard out of his reach. George and his wife sat listening in silence. The maid returned and said, "I think it's for you, Mrs. Tait." George sighed and produced the evening paper, which had been tucked under his leg against this precise contingency.

He didn't particularly care about the news, of which he had already read the unexciting headlines, but he did want to register a not unamiable protest against these continual interruptions of their dinner. Emily insisted on making a more or less formal meal of it. She'd have been mildly annoyed with him if he'd gone to the sideboard and helped himself to the eggplant while the maid was at the phone. Then why couldn't she instruct Anna to say to these importunate telephoners that her mistress was at dinner and ask them to call her in an hour? It wasn't as if they ever had anything to say.

There was no use saying this to Emily. He knew her argument as well as his own. Anna's morale would be ruined if they short-circuited her services by helping themselves, and then where would they be when they had people in to dinner? But if he didn't want the meal interrupted by telephone calls, why did he insist on their dining at the bucolic hour of six instead of seven when most of their friends did?

Of course Emily knew his answer to that, too. By dining at six they could, whenever they felt like it, go to the first show at the Alcazar and see the picture right end to, instead of from the middle of the fourth reel. Also they could find a convenient place to park the car. And they were home again by nine, so that if George had any evening work to do there were a couple of solid hours left for it. And as for setting an example of propriety to Anna, George felt it was rather hard. Ever since their first child, George, Junior, had been two years old, George, Senior, had been submitting to innumerable small infringements upon his personal liberty under the plea of setting a proper example. But now that Junior was in college, and his younger sister in a boarding school, it seemed to George at forty-three that he might be allowed to tilt back in his chair if he liked and empty his pipe scrapings into the dessert plate. There was no good saying any of that, either, for Emily knew it as well as he did.

Well, he knew her answer, too, though this last word was one she had never said. After all, they didn't live in New York nor in Philadelphia nor even in Chicago. They lived in Avonia, Illinois. George had a good law practice in Harrison county, but the great cities and the great corporations had never summoned him, and it was becoming clear to George—at forty-three—that they never would. Avonia and the movies and the bridge club and a month's vacation at Mackinac island was about his speed.

He doubted very much if Emily, as regarded her own potential speed—granted a conjugal partner of sufficient horsepower—acquiesced. Emily might well believe she was born for better things. She'd been a good deal of a belle in her day. She was too loyal to lament lost opportunities in his presence, let alone to fling them at him as missiles, but a consciousness that they might be lying ready to her hand made him walk warily. She should make the best of Avonia in her own way, and if there was a [illegible] of absurdity about some of the [illegible]ments she insisted upon, and about the seriousness with which she took her committees and her classes and her clubs, it did not behoove her husband to rail, no matter how often they called her from the dinner table to the telephone.

He had had time to think as far as this, his mind slipping rapidly past the familiar landmarks just as his eye slid down the columns of the newspapers, before he perceived that Emily was not, this time, talking to any member of her drama committee, nor to any citizen of Avonia, nor to anyone she'd had the slightest expectation of hearing from. It was a man—George could tell that from the quality of her voice—and he seemed to be throwing her into a good deal of a flutter.

"Why—why, yes," she was saying. "Oh, but we'd love to have you! . . . Yes. That'll be fine . . . We certainly will. Only I'm afraid you won't find us very exciting. . . . Four o'clock Saturday then."

George, as she returned to the table, fastened his gaze upon the paper. When she was rattled she liked to be allowed to take her time. She sat down a bit heavily in her chair, drew a couple of long breaths, resumed her knife and fork, and then asked, "Did you hear any of that?"

"Not much," he told her. "I thought you sounded sort of surprised."

"I should say I was," she admitted, "when I hadn't heard from him for nineteen years. Calling up on the long-distance to ask if he can come and spend Sunday with us! Surprised!"

"Who?" George wanted to know.

"I don't know why he should want to. He certainly won't find any material for a play in us. Still, it'll be nice to see him again. I don't suppose I'll know him."

"Look here," George demanded, "whom are you talking about?"

"Oh," she said, as if she had just heard his questions; but it was another moment before she answered it. "Why, it's Charley Hawkins—Hawthorn Hawkins—George, you know who he is!"

"I know who Hawthorn Hawkins is, but why do you call him Charley? And why does he call us on the long distance and propose to spend Sunday with us?"

"Why, he's giving the Sheldon lectures down at the University this year, and he looked up Avonia on the map and saw how near it was—so he phoned to ask if he could come."

"But why Avonia, and why us? If you know him as well as that, why haven't you ever told me anything about him?"

"George," she cried, scandalized, "I told you all about Charley Hawkins when we were first engaged—and you didn't even listen. He wasn't famous then, of course. And I haven't heard from him since the note he wrote with the wedding present he sent us. Now, for goodness' sake, don't ask any more questions, but let me eat."

It was from preoccupation rather than obedience that he let her alone until she rang for the maid. Then, "You haven't been writing to him, have you—telling him he was great and so on?"

Her eyes flashed at him, but the entrance of Anna procured him a polite answer. "I couldn't very well write to him when I'd never seen one of his plays."

"Ever read 'em?" he asked. "They are published, I suppose."

She shook her head and waited until Anna went out; then she swooped upon him. "I never thought you'd be so silly," she declared, "as to be jealous. And about a man I haven't thought of for twenty years."

"Jealous!" he retorted furiously. "I'm not."

"What are you then?" she asked with an alkaline sort of smile, and he found the question unanswerable. "Well, I hope you will be decent to him anyhow."

"I don't know whether I will or not," he told her. "That depends." She didn't speak to him again that night.

Two days later, coming home from a rather strenuous bout of shopping, Emily found her husband—home from the office a good hour earlier than usual—reading a small green paper-covered volume, which he put down hastily as she came in, and then took up again and held out to her.

"'Three Plays by Hawthorn Hawkins,'" she read. "Why, where did that come from? I tried to get it at Street's, but they'd never even heard of it."

"Came in the mail," he said. "I found it when I got here."

"Addressed to me?" she asked.

"Why—yes. I believe it was. I opened the package without thinking."

"Charley sent them on, of course," she remarked; "so that I'd have something to talk to him about."

"I don't believe he did," George said decidedly. "Not unless he's an unusual ass."

She flushed angrily at that, but he went on before she could speak. "I said I thought he wasn't an ass, not that I thought he was. There'd have been a card or an inscription if it had come from him. Anyhow, I wouldn't thank him for it unless he gives you a lead. Read 'em and say nothing. And don't leave 'em out on the sitting room table where they'll be the first thing he sees, either."

Her smile conceded that this advice was both friendly and intelligent. "But where did they come from?" she demanded.

"Search me!" he told her. "They don't postmark this fourth-class stuff. No, I didn't mean anything uncomplimentary. As far as I read in the first one, it seemed pretty good. I thought you might have sent to Chicago for 'em." She [illegible] out [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] he concluded, "I don't believe it's much of a mystery. Some old friend, most likely, that he told he was coming, sent it along so that you could surprise him. You'll read 'em tonight, I suppose."

She said she would, unless he wanted to go out somewhere with her; but he said he must go back to the office and work. "I'm going to be pretty busy between now and Monday," he added.

She looked at him sharply. You're going to be here tomorrow when he comes, aren't you?"

"Oh, yes, I'll be here—you bet." It was so evident, though, that the last brace of words had escaped him involuntarily that she forbore to remonstrate.

They kept rather carefully away from Charles Hawthorn Hawkins as a conversational topic that night. Next morning, however, just before he left for the office, George uneasily broke the ice by saying, "Don't count on him too much, Emily. He may not come, you know—send you a telegram this morning."

She asked hotly why he said that, and added, as the suspicion struck her, "I believe you've been telegraphing him, yourself, not to come." But this injurious charge she at once retracted.

"They're supposed to be sort of temperamental and changeable, that's all," he explained, "and I thought he might change his mind about this."

"You wish he would, I suspect," she observed.

"Yes," he answered, unhappily, "I suppose I do."

She gazed at him a moment in mute exasperation. Then her expression softened and she gave a reluctant laugh. "I think you're the most ridiculous person in the world," she said. "I suppose you think he's coming out here to break up our happy home and get me to run away with him."

He looked so glum over this that she gave him up as hopeless. "Oh, go along," she cried. "But I'm going to kiss you first. And you will be home sharp at four, won't you?"

It was an hour earlier than this that she found him in the dining room unwrapping a package containing two bottles, one of gin and the other of Scotch whisky.

"Got 'em from Walter Harbury," he explained sheepishly. "Walter has a regular bootlegger—comes around once a month. Been meaning to lay in something like this for quite a while."

Her astonishment over this bit of unabashed mendacity made it possible for him to get on to something else. He put the bottles away in the sideboard, turned his back upon it, and gazed at her so intently that she frowned inquiringly and presently asked, "Well, what is it?"

"Nothing," he said, "only I think you're looking great—just as you are."

Now this was the unadulterated truth. At forty, after two children and nineteen years of marriage and Avonia, she still looked infinitely desirable to George, and never more so than in the sort of clothes she was wearing now, a small felt hat crammed down upon her small round head (she'd been out doing some last-minute marketing), a sweater, a sport skirt, low-heeled shoes; her face moistly flushed, innocent of powder. It was true and Emily knew it was true.

All the same, she saw through him and smiled derisively. "So you want me to look like this when Mr. Hawkins comes?" she asked. "Well, I won't. I'm going up to dress this minute."

"I wish you wouldn't, Emily," he pleaded. "I don't want you to dress up for this chump. I don't want you to do anything—special for him. I don't see why you should. You don't care anything about him, do you? Nor about what he thinks?"

Her flush deepened as she met his look. She reached out suddenly and took hold of him by the ears. "Idiot!" she said, "Idiot!" But in the interval between the two words she kissed him, and she did not dress up for Mr. Charles Hawthorn Hawkins.

Perhaps because her husband's performance occupied the first place in her attention, she found it hard to remember what a celebrity Charley Hawkins had become.

He was curiously unchanged, through all his changes. The twenty pounds or so he had put on hadn't made him look older; had served only to accentuate the plump, cherubic look of boyish innocence there'd always been about him. He talked about himself a lot, just as he'd always done.

Emily shot an uneasy glance at George now and then; for instance, when Charley spoke offhand of the foremost American actress as Ethel. She wondered whether George was saying to himself, "Ass!" But apparently George was not. He seemed to be enjoying the gossip of the theater as much as the tales of Capri and Tahiti and other wondrous places the playwright had inhabited.

Emily herself didn't talk much. They drifted back occasionally into reminiscence, but since this, of course, excluded George, they didn't go far with it.

George had spoken of being busy, of the amount of time he'd have to spend upon a case that was coming up Monday, but he showed no signs of going off and leaving them to their own devices. She didn't know whether she wished he would or not. Intrinsically she wasn't especially anxious to be left alone with Charley, but if George was staying away from his work in order to watch them, she was furious with him.

Only, it didn't seem like that. The two men got around to the war at last, and the humble but absorbing parts they had respectively played in it, and after an hour of this, she bade them good-night. This was insincere, so far as it was addressed to George, for she fully intended staying awake until he came to bed, and asking him a few questions, but her modest share of the unwonted alcohol made her sleepy, and she never knew how late the two men—and the bottle of Scotch—sat up.

She got no chance next morning, either, for a private talk with George before they met their guest, and in consequence George's calm announcement of the day's program and his total elimination of himself from it fell upon her like a thunderclap. She caught him alone a few minutes after breakfast and asked him what he meant by it.

"I don't mean anything by it," he protested. "I have got to work all day, just as I told you. Hawkins understands all right. I told him about it last night. He's got to leave this afternoon and there's no good Sunday train from here, so it seemed decent to say that you'd drive him over to Rockport."

"You're simply—throwing me at his head!" she protested.

She detected a touch of bravado in the way he said, "Nonsense! He came to see you, didn't he?" But Charley was already coming downstairs with his bag, so there wasn't time for anything more.

Well, the events of that day were in George's head, then, whatever they turned out to be.

George bade their guest a cordial, almost paternal farewell and, clapping his hat a little too much on one side of his head for a Sabbath morning and an hour when he was certain to meet their neighbors going to church, strolled down the street in the direction of his office.

It was seven o'clock that evening when she stopped their car at the curb after her return, alone, from the fifteen-mile drive to Rockport. George was reclining, very much at his ease, upon the Gloucester swing on the veranda.

"Hello!" he called to her. "You back already? Had a good day?"

She chose to regard his second question as of a piece with the first, and she came up the front steps before she spoke at all.

"I suppose you're famished for supper," she remarked, ". . . if you've been working all day."

"Oh, I got home about an hour ago and scrambled myself some eggs. How about you?"

"I'm not specially hungry," she said. "I'll get myself a glass of milk by and by."

She sat down facing him. "George," she demanded, "why did you send for those three plays of Charley's?"

He sat up. "Why did I send . . . ?"

"It was either you or Anna who sent for them," she interrupted. "Charley swears he didn't send them and that he didn't say anything to a soul about coming out here."

He lay back again. "Oh, all right," he conceded. "I telephoned to Chicago for 'em the morning after I found out he was coming."

"But why?"

"Oh, I don't know. How could I know what he was going to be like? I didn't know what he was coming for. So—well, I wanted you to be—ready for him."

She took a minute or so to digest this reply. "I suppose you mean," she mused, "that you thought he might be coming out here to see how much of a—hick the girl was that he wanted to marry once, after she'd lived twenty years in Avonia. And you wanted to—fix me up so he wouldn't laugh. I suppose that afternoon dress Miss Maitland made for me doesn't look like much."

"Oh, d—n!" he said, and got to his feet. "Look here, Emily! You're all right in any dress. It wasn't you I didn't feel sure about. But he might have been any sort of ass. Of course, I saw he was all right before I'd talked with him ten minutes."

"No," she said, "you needn't have worried about that."

She let the voltage accumulate during a longish silence. Then she added, "He kissed me this afternoon. He'd been rather—sentimental all day, and when I said good-by to him he kissed me."

"Well," said George, after a silence of his own, "he certainly is a darned nice fellow."

She stared at him, speechless.

"Oh, I'm not much surprised," he went on. "You see, he told me about it last night."

"Told you, last night!" she echoed.

"He didn't say he was going to kiss you," George exclaimed. "Said he'd always been romantic about you, and all the more after he'd got old enough to realize how kind you'd been to a ridiculous, priggish kid. He said you'd contributed more to his education than anybody else he'd ever met, and he'd always felt grateful to you. Been wanting to come to see you for years, but was afraid to. Scared to death, he said he was, until he saw you were just as you had been; hadn't changed a hair. Actually wrote a telegram to say he wasn't coming and then tore it up."

"Well, then, why shouldn't he have a . . . day in the country? I hope you showed him a good time. I guess you did, or he wouldn't have kissed you."

He perceived now that she was crying. "I don't blame him for that, a bit," he went on. "I think he showed darned good judgment. Because you are a peach, Emily, and that's the truth."

He patted her awkwardly on the shoulder. "Come on in, old lady," he concluded. "What do you say to some scrambled eggs? You're hungry, that's all the matter with you."

A REAL MAN'S JOB

Tree Surgery is the new profession—one profession that is not overcrowded.

It provides:

1—Manly, vigorous, active outdoor work for both mind and muscles.
2—Opportunity to travel throughout the Eastern United States from Kansas City to Boston.
8—Association with the finest type of clean-cut, young Americans who are in love with this fascinating work.
4—Advancement on proved merit, with the opportunity to establish yourself in responsible position with a large national organization.

Our field organization at present numbers more than 200. We are prepared to train about 60 young men for this work. We can accept only men of the following type:

Unmarried, ages 20 to 30 years, good American stock, high school education or equivalent; honesty and industry, good references and good physique are essential. This is not a selling job, but a real opportunity to learn this work from the bottom up. Good wages while learning, steady advancement for the man who proves he has the stuff, and a real future for capable men.

Write, or better yet, use the coupon.

COUPON

The Davey Tree Expert Company,
97 City Bank Bldg., Kent, Ohio.

I am interested in your offer. Please send me your illustrated folder and qualification blank.

Name ....

Address ....

....

To avoid delay, please write name and address plainly.

Lumber Production.

Since 1905, with the exception of one year, Washington has led all the states in the production of lumber; Oregon comes second, followed in turn by Louisiana, Mississippi, California, Arkansas, Alabama, Texas, North Carolina, Wisconsin and Florida.

"O Happy Day" sang the laundress as she hung the snowy wash on the line. It was a "happy day" because she used Red Cross Ball Blue.—Advertisement.

Different.

"Ah, Jerry," she sighed. "I am afraid you are growing cold! Don't you remember, dear, how before we were married you used to sing to me: 'Every Morn I Bring Thee Violets?' And every night roses, dear?"

"Yes, Mary; I did that, honey," he replied, wearily. "I didn't know, then, how it was going to feel every Saturday to bring you my envelope."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

When men speak ill of you, so live that nobody can believe them.

RUB-NO-MORE COMPANY FORT WAYNE, IND.

SOFTENS HARD WATER

RUB-NO-MORE WASHING POWDER

STILL 5¢ A PACKAGE

You save even more money by buying the large package.

Cleans, purifies and sterilizes dairy vessels, dishes and all kitchen utensils. Makes dish and clothes washing easy. Saves soap!

BUY IT FROM YOUR GROCER

SAVE THE TRADE MARKS

Opportunity Calls from CANADA

Visit Canada this summer—see for yourself the opportunities which Canada offers to both labor and capital—rich, fertile, virgin prairie land, near railways and towns, at $15 to $20 an acre—long terms if desired. Wheat crops last year the biggest in history; dairying and hogs pay well; mixed farming rapidly increasing.

Excursion on 1st and 3d Tuesday of Each Month

from various U.S. points, single fare plus $2 for the round trip. Other special rates any day. Make this your summer outing—Canada welcomes tourists—no passports required—have a great trip and see with your own eyes the opportunities that await you.

For full information, with free booklets and maps, write

W. S. Nethery, Desk W, 67 E. Town St., Columbus, O. Canadian Government Agent, Desk W, 116 Monument Pl., Indianapolis, Authorized Canadian Gov't Agt.

JUNE

The Secret Adversary

By AGATHA CHRISTIE

Copyright Dodd, Mead & Company

"BLACKMAIL, EH?"

SYNOPSIS—Realizing that she has a possible chance of being saved, as the Lusitania is sinking, a stranger gives a young American girl a package which he asks her to deliver to the American ambassador in England. She is saved. In London, former Lieut. "Tommy" Beresford and Miss Prudence Cowley—"Tuppence"—discharged army nurse, form an organization, "The Young Adventurers, Ltd." They are both broke and consequently ready for unorthodox methods. They write out an advertisement.

CHAPTER I—Continued.

—2—

Mr. Whittington spoke again:

"If you will call upon me tomorrow morning at eleven o'clock, I will lay the details of my proposition before you."

"At eleven o'clock?" said Tuppence doubtfully.

"At eleven o'clock."

Tuppence made up her mind.

"Very well. I'll be there."

"Thank you. Good evening."

He raised his hat with a flourish, and walked away. Tuppence remained for some minutes gazing after him. Then she gave a curious movement of her shoulders, rather as a terrier shakes himself.

"The adventures have begun," she murmured to herself. "What does he want me to do, I wonder? There's something about you, Mr. Whittington, that I don't like at all. But, on the other hand, I'm not the least bit afraid of you. And as I've said before, and shall doubtless say again, little Tuppence can look after herself, thank you!"

And with a short, sharp nod of her head she walked briskly onward. As a result of further meditations, however, she turned aside from the direct route and entered a post office. Tuppence wrote rapidly: "Don't put in advertisement. Will explain tomorrow." She addressed it to Tommy at his club, from which in one short month he would have to resign, unless a kindly fortune permitted him to renew his subscription.

It wanted some five minutes to eleven when Tuppence reached the block of buildings in which the offices of the Esthonia Glassware company were situated. To arrive before the time would look overeager. So Tuppence decided to walk to the end of the street and back again. She did so. On the stroke of eleven she plunged into the recesses of the building. The Esthonia Glassware company was on the top floor. Tuppence knocked. In response to a voice from within, she turned the handle and walked into a small rather dirty outer office.

A middle-aged clerk got down from a high stool at a desk near the window and came toward her inquiringly.

"I have an appointment with Mr. Whittington," said Tuppence.

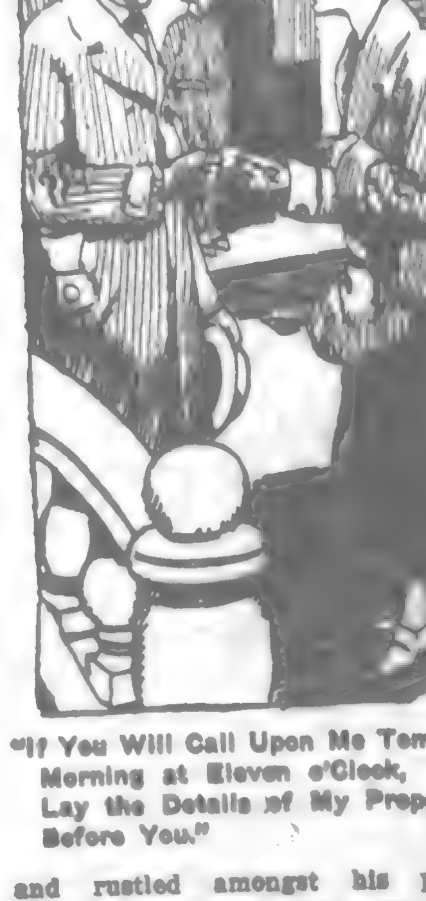
"Will you come this way, please?" He crossed to a partition door with "Private" on it, knocked, then opened the door and stood aside to let her pass in.

Mr. Whittington was seated behind a large desk covered with papers. Tuppence felt her previous judgment confirmed. There was something wrong about Mr. Whittington. The combination of his sleek prosperity and his shifty eye was not attractive.

He looked up and nodded.

"So you're turned up, all right? That's good. Sit down, will you?"

Tuppence sat meekly with downcast eyes whilst Mr. Whittington sorted and rustled amongst his papers. Finally he pushed them away, and leaned over the desk.



"If You Will Call Upon Me Tomorrow Morning at Eleven o'Clock, I Will Lay the Details of My Proposition Before You."

"Now, my dear young lady, let us come to business." His large face broadened into a smile. "You want work? Well, I have work to offer you. What should you say now to $500 down, and all expenses paid?" Mr. Whittington leaned back in his chair, and thrust his thumbs into the armholes of his waistcoat.

Tuppence eyed him warily.

"And the nature of the work?" she demanded.

"Nominal—purely nominal. A pleasure trip, that is all."

"Where to?"

Mr. Whittington smiled again.

"Paris."

"Oh!" said Tuppence thoughtfully. To herself she said: "Of course, if father heard that he would have a fit! But somehow I don't see Mr. Whittington in the role of the gay deceiver."

"Yes," continued Whittington. "What could be more delightful? To put the clock back a few years—a very few, I am sure—and re-enter one of those charming pensionnats de jeunes filles with which Paris abounds—"

Tuppence interrupted him.

"A pensionnat?"

"Exactly. Madame Colombier's in the Avenue de Neuilly."

Tuppence knew the name well. Nothing could have been more select. She had had several American friends there. She was more than ever puzzled.

"You want me to go to Madame Colombier's? For how long?"

"That depends. Possibly three months."

"And that is all? There are no other conditions?"

"None whatever. By the way, you are English, are you not?"

"Yes."

"Yet you speak with a slight American accent?"

"My great pal in hospital was a little American girl. I dare say I picked it up from her. I can soon get out of it again."

"On the contrary, it might be simpler for you to pass as an American. Details about your past life in England might be more difficult to sustain. Yes, I think that would be decidedly better. Then—"

"One moment, Mr. Whittington! You seem to be taking my consent for granted."

Whittington looked surprised.

"Surely you are not thinking of refusing? I can assure you that Madame Colombier's is a most high-class and orthodox establishment. And the terms are most liberal."

"Exactly," said Tuppence. "That's just it. The terms are almost too liberal, Mr. Whittington. I cannot see any way in which I can be worth that amount of money to you."

"No?" said Whittington softly. "Well, I will tell you. I could doubtless obtain someone else for very much less. What I am willing to pay for is a young lady with sufficient intelligence and presence of mind to sustain her part well, and also one who will have sufficient discretion not to ask too many questions."

Tuppence smiled a little. She felt that Whittington had scored.

"There's another thing. So far there has been no mention of Mr. Beresford. Where does he come in?"

"Mr. Beresford?"

"My partner," said Tuppence with dignity. "You saw us together yesterday."

"Ah, yes. But I'm afraid we shan't require his services."

"Then it's off!" Tuppence rose. "It's both or neither. Sorry—but that's how it is. Good morning, Mr. Whittington."

"Wait a minute. Let us see if something can't be managed. Sit down again, Miss—" He paused interrogatively.

Tuppence's conscience gave her a passing twinge as she remembered the archdeacon. She seized hurriedly on the first name that came into her head.

"Jane Finn," she said hastily; and then paused open-mouthed at the effect of those two simple words.

All the geniality had faded out of Whittington's face. It was purple with rage, and the veins stood out on his forehead. And behind it all there lurked a sort of incredulous dismay. He leaned forward and hissed savagely:

"So that's your little game, is it?"

Tuppence, though utterly taken aback, nevertheless kept her head. She had not the faintest comprehension of his meaning, but she was naturally quick-witted, and felt it imperative to "keep her end up," as she phrased it.

Whittington went on:

"Been playing with me, have you, all the time, like a cat and mouse? Knew all the time what I wanted you for, but kept up the comedy. Is that it, eh?" He was cooling down. The red color was ebbing out of his face. He eyed here keenly. "Who's been blabbing? Rita?"

Tuppence shook her head. She was doubtful as to how long she could sustain this illusion, but she realised the importance of not dragging an unknown Rita into it.

"No," she replied with perfect truth. "Rita knows nothing about me."

"How much do you know?" he shot out.

"Very little indeed," answered Tuppence, and was pleased to note that Whittington's uneasiness was augmented instead of allayed.

"Anyway," he snarled, "you knew enough to come in here and plump out that name."

"It might be my own name," Tuppence pointed out.

"It's likely, isn't it, that there would be two girls with a name like that? Quit fooling! How much do you know? And how much do you want?"

The last five words took Tuppence's fancy mightily, especially after a meager breakfast and a supper of buns the night before. She sat up and smiled with the air of one who has the situation thoroughly well in hand.

"My dear Mr. Whittington," she said, "let us by all means lay our cards upon the table. And pray do not be so angry. You heard me say yesterday that I proposed to live by my wits. It seems to me that I have now proved I have some wits to live by! I admit I have knowledge of a certain name, but perhaps my knowledge ends there."

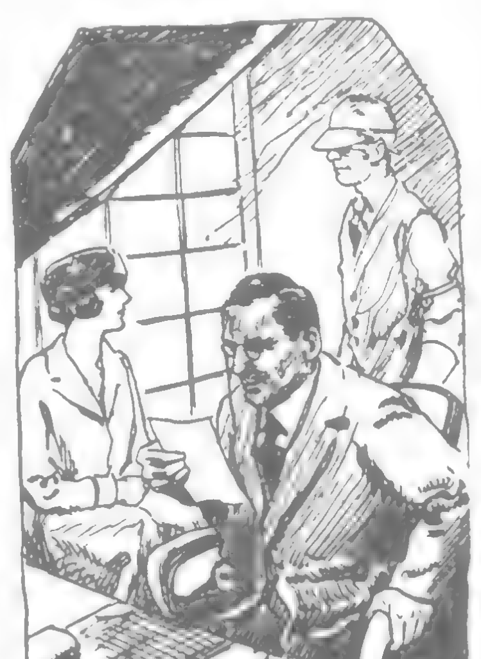
"As I said once before," said Whittington angrily, "quit fooling, and come to the point. You can't play the innocent with me. You know a great deal more than you're willing to admit."

Tuppence paused a moment to admire her own ingenuity, and then said softly:

"I shouldn't like to contradict you, Mr. Whittington."

"So we come to the usual question—how much?"

Tuppence was in a dilemma. So far she had fooled Whittington with complete success, but to mention a palpably impossible sum might awaken his suspicions. An idea flashed across her brain.



Whittington Snatched It and Read It.

"Suppose we say a little something down, and a fuller discussion of the matter later?"

Whittington gave her an ugly glance.

"Blackmail, eh?"

Tuppence smiled sweetly.

"Oh, no! Shall we say payment of services in advance?"

Whittington grunted.

"You're about the limit, that's what you are," he growled, with a sort of unwilling admiration. "You took me in all right. Thought you were quite a meek little kid with just enough brains for my purpose. All the same, someone's been talking. You say it isn't Rita. Was it—? Oh, come in."

The clerk followed his discreet knock into the room, and laid a paper at his master's elbow.

"Telephone message just come for you, sir."

Whittington snatched it up and read it. A frown gathered on his brow.

"That'll do, Brown. You can go."

The clerk withdrew. Whittington turned to Tuppence.

"Come tomorrow at the same time. I'm busy now. Here's fifty to go on with."

He rapidly sorted out some notes, and pushed them across the table to Tuppence.

The girl counted the notes, secured them in her handbag, and rose.

"Good morning, Mr. Whittington," she said politely. "At least, au revoir, I should say."

"Exactly. Au revoir, my clever and charming young lady."

Tuppence sped lightly down the stairs. A wild elation possessed her.

"Let's give Tommy a surprise!" murmured Tuppence, and hailed a taxi.

The cab drew up outside the tube station. Tommy was just within the entrance. His eyes opened to their fullest extent as he hurried forward to assist Tuppence to alight. She smiled at him affectionately, and remarked in a slightly affected voice:

"Pay the thing, will you, old bean? I've got nothing smaller than a five-pound note!"

CHAPTER II

A Setback.

The moment was not quite so triumphant as it ought to have been. To begin with, the resources of Tommy's pockets were somewhat limited. In the end the fare was managed.

"Well," said Mr. Beresford, at length able to relieve his feelings, "what the—dickens did you want to take a taxi for?"

"I was afraid I might be late and keep you waiting," said Tuppence gently. "And really and truly, I haven't got anything smaller than a five-pound note. Now let's go to lunch. How about the Savoy?"

Tommy grinned.

"How about the Ritz?"

"On second thoughts, I prefer the Piccadilly. It's nearer. We shan't have to take another taxi. Come along."

"Is this a new brand of humor? Or is your brain unhinged?" inquired Tommy. "Tuppence, old girl, what has really come over you?"

"Oh, unbelieving one!" Tuppence wrenched open her bag. "Look here, and here, and here!"

Tommy groaned.

"I must have been drinking unawares! Am I dreaming, Tuppence, or do I really behold a large quantity of five-pound notes being waved about in a dangerous fashion?"

"Even so, O King! Now, will you come and have lunch?"

"I'll come anywhere. But what have you been doing? Holding up a bank?"

"All in good time."

"And now tell me," said Tommy, unable to restrain his pent-up curiosity any longer, as they sat in state in the Piccadilly.

Miss Cowley told him.

"And the curious part of it is," she ended, "that I really did invent the name of Jane Finn! I didn't want to give my own because of poor father—in case I should get mixed up in any thing shady."

"Perhaps that's so," said Tommy slowly. "But you didn't invent it."

"What?"

"No. I told it to you. Don't you remember, I said yesterday I'd overheard two people talking about a female called Jane Finn? That's what brought the name into your mind so pat."

"So you did. I remember now. How extraordinary—" Tuppence tailed off into silence. Suddenly she aroused herself. "What were they like, the two men you passed?"

"One was a big fat sort of chap. Clean shaven, I think—and dark."

"That's him," cried Tuppence, in an ungrammatical squeal. "That's Whittington! What was the other man like?"

"I can't remember. I didn't notice him particularly. It was really the outlandish name that caught my attention."

"And people say that coincidences don't happen!" Tuppence tackled her luncheon happily.

But Tommy had become serious.

"Look here, Tuppence, old girl, what is this going to lead to?"

"More money," replied his companion.

"I know that. You've only got one idea in your head. What I mean is, what about the next step? How are you going to keep the game up? After all, you know, you can't bluff him forever. You're sure to slip up sooner or later. And, anyway, I'm not at all sure that it isn't actionable—blackmail, you know."

"Nonsense. Blackmail is saying you'll tell unless you are given money. Now, there's nothing I could tell, because I don't really know anything. I've got a plan. Obviously what we've got to do is to find out more about it all."

Tommy applauded.

"Don't jeer. We can only find out through Whittington. We must discover where he lives, what he does—sleuth him, in fact! Now I can't do it, because he knows me, but he only saw you for a minute or two in Lyons'. He's not likely to recognize you. My plan is this," Tuppence went on calmly: "I'll go alone tomorrow. I'll put him off again like I did today. It doesn't matter if I don't get any more money at once. Fifty pounds ought to last us a few days. You'll hang about outside. When I come out I shan't speak to you in case he's watching. But I'll take up my stand somewhere near, and when he comes out of the building I'll drop a handkerchief or something, and off you go!"

"Off I go where?"

"Follow him, of course, silly! What do you think of the idea?"

"Sort of thing one reads about in books. People will wonder what I'm up to. Anyway, it will be rather a lark."

They met by arrangement the following morning and proceeded cityward. Tommy remained on the opposite side of the road while Tuppence plunged into the building.

Tommy strolled slowly down to the end of the street, then back again. Just as he came abreast of the buildings, Tuppence darted across the road.

"Tommy! The place is shut. I can't make anyone hear."

"That's odd."

"Isn't it? Come up with me, and let's try again."

Tommy followed her. As they passed the third floor landing a young clerk came out of an office. He hesitated a moment, then addressed himself to Tuppence.

"Were you wanting the Esthonia Glassware?"

"Yes, please."

"It's closed down. Since yesterday afternoon. Company being wound up, they say. Not that I've ever heard of it myself. But anyway the office is to let."

"Just go on with what you're doing now. Find Jane Finn."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Prehistoric Cliff Dwellers.

Several skeletons of prehistoric beings estimated to be from 1,200 to 1,500 years old have been unearthed in the Ozarks region of Missouri. These people were cliff dwellers, but they should not be confused with the cliff dwellers who lived high up on the faces of cliffs in Arizona and New Mexico. Many crude weapons and implements were found perfectly preserved in the dry soil under the overhanging cliffs.

5 Pass. Sedan
$860
f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

The All-Year Car for Every Family

for Economical Transportation

CHEVROLET

Chevrolet is leading in the great shift of public demand to closed cars because this company has the world's largest facilities for manufacturing high-grade closed bodies and is therefore able to offer sedans, coupés and sedanettes at prices within easy reach of the average American family.

Six large body plants adjoining Chevrolet assembly plants enable us to make prompt deliveries of the much wanted closed cars.

As soon as you realize that your transportation requirements demand the year 'round, all-weather closed car, see Chevrolet first and learn how fully we can meet your requirements at the lowest cost obtainable in a modern, high-grade closed automobile.

Prices f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

Two-Pass. Roadster	$510	Five-Pass. Sedan	$860
Five-Pass. Touring	525	Light Delivery	510
Two-Pass. Utility Coupe	680	Commercial Chassis	425
Four-Pass. Sedanette	850	Utility Express Truck Chassis	575

Dealers and Service Stations Everywhere

Chevrolet Motor Company
Division of General Motors Corporation
Detroit, Mich.

SHINOLA
AMERICA'S HOME SHOE POLISH
Black - Tan - White - Ox-Blood - Brown
SHINOLA preserves leather as paint preserves buildings.

Quick and easy to use.
SHINOLA HOME SET
Makes Shining Easy
Genuine Bristle Dauber cleans around the sole and applies the polish thoroughly.

Shines in a hurry.
Lamb's Wool Polisher just fits the hand. Brings the brilliant Shinola shine with a few strokes.

The Shine for Mine.

The Foxy Youth.

Little Bob (about to go out with mother)—Mamma, you must take some money with you.

Mother—No, Bob, I'm not going to use any.

Little Bob—Yes, you must have money or chocolate; I might start crying on the street, you know.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription.

Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparartion send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

It Won't Bring the Sermon.

Pete Hanlon, who has been monkeying with homemade wireless, announces that the doodle-um causes the most trouble. "Buy a smoosh," says Pete, "and attach it to the korplex hind end up. The doodle-um is supposed to amplify the disseminator when the bifflebox is properly adjusted, but it seldom works on Sundays. —Boston Transcript.

Love is probably the only thing that has more lives than a cat.

Airplane Used Petroleum.

What appeared to some as an epoch-making event in the development of airplane and automobile motive power, is the recent successful trip near Copenhagen, Denmark, of an airplane using petroleum as engine fuel, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. It was observed by experts who witnessed the test that the plane flew just as well as with gasoline, that there was less vibration and no soot formed nor was there any self-ignition in the engine, which ran 100 less revolutions than normally.

CHILDREN CRY FOR "CASTORIA"

Especially Prepared for Infants and Children of All Ages.

Mother! Fletcher's Castoria has been in use for over 30 years to relieve babies and children of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and, by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving natural sleep without opiates.

The genuine bears signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

Still Practicing.

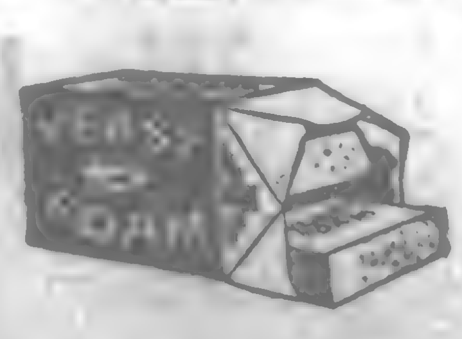
"I suppose your friend, the doctor, having married a very wealthy woman, has given up his practice."

"Not entirely; he's now treating her pocketbook for obesity."

Yeast Foam assures a well-risen dough

Home baking is the first step in home making because the girl who knows how to make good bread is equipped to do most other cooking well.

Send for free booklet "The Art of Baking Bread"



Northwestern Yeast Co.
1730 North Ashland Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

JUNE

L 912

The St. Joe News

William S. Quance,
Editor and Publisher.

One Year,	$1.50
Six Months,	.75
Three Months,	.40
One Month,	.15
Single Copy,	.05

(Advertising Rates on Application)

Entered at the postoffice at St. Joe, Indiana, as second class matter.

Foreign Advertising Representative
THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

EVENING

Again 'tis the gloaming, the sweet, sad gloaming,
  Night's shadows are falling, day's splendor is past;
The mystical lights, in a magical blending,
  Through shadowy twilight, their soft charms cast.

The faint after-glow of a glorious sunset,
  Where a few shy stars their vigils hold,
Is a silvery sheen, like ashes of roses,
  Imbued with a halo of purple and gold.

No moon lends her soft, peaceful rays to the landscape,
  To ease the tried spirit, with infinite calm,
But, lovely and pale, in the glimmering twilight,
  Fair Jupiter, shining, pours soul-soothing balm.

This life seems naught but one glorious present,
  No shadowy future, no phantom past;
A type of the blessedness of the hereafter,
  Where bliss, unalloyed, shall eternally last.

Like fairy enchantment, all nature blends sweetly,
  No discordant darkness, no somber night-gale;
The earth gleams in beauty, the pale light ethereal,
  Shines softly from hill-tops to shadowy vale.

How sweet if all earth-life could blend as this gloaming,
  No sickening sorrow, no pain nor sad tears;
A reflection of heaven, where dwells in glad triumph,
  Sweet harmony, always, through unending years.

—ESTELLE BAKER.

Be hospitable but don't let the flies eat with you.

—‡—‡—‡—

That Ford presidential boom seems to be slipping into high.

—‡—‡—‡—

There is no honor among bootleggers.

—‡—‡—‡—

The indemnity Germany is willing to pay, in round numbers is 00,000,000,000 marks.

—‡—‡—‡—

People whose houses are not well screened do not have to leave home to attend a mosquito meeting in St. Joe.

—‡—‡—‡—

Now that Arbuckle has made his come-back he can go back.

The Anti-Saloon league ought to change its name to Anti-Bootlegger.

—‡—‡—‡—

So many folks in St. Joe fret about never having opportunity to go to the lake for a day of rest. We might just say that there are spots along the St. Joe river to which anyone can walk that are as nice and comfortable and offer as good a place for a rest as any lake.

—‡—‡—‡—

PULLING TOGETHER

Any town or any community that doesn't pull together doesn't accomplish results these days. It takes united action to build towns and cities. Oftimes individual ideas must give way to the will of the majority. Right at the present time St. Joe people are moving as a unit and the town is growing faster and property enhancing more rapidly than ever before. Let's keep up the good work.

—‡—‡—‡—

THOSE WHO DON'T WORK

Generally speaking, here is now a job in this country for every man who wants one. This holds true in almost every community. The mayor in one enterprising city of 50,000 people is determined that the industrious members of the community shall profit accordingly, without having to support any idlers. He is having a list made of all the able-bodied loafers in town and holding it for future reference. The loafers are duly warned that if they apply for help next winter, as many of them have done in previous winters, there will be "nothing doing."

This is a commendable policy, if carried out with proper discrimination. It is a historic American principl, handed down from colonial days, that "he who will not work shall not eat." There is less need of that drastic rule now than there was in the days of pioneer hardship or during the recent war, yet it is just as it ever was, and as wholesome for those to whom it is applied.

—‡—‡—‡—

PERMANENT ROADS

It is difficult to conceive a legitimate argument against the proposition of the Indiana motorists that the state's main market highways be built with permanent "hard" surfaces. The suggestion argues itself. It may be permissable under some circumstances to construct less expensive roads in less traveled territory, but for the chief arteries of travel permanence ought to be a fundamental consideration.

We are in the midst, or perhaps at the dawn, of a motor age. Highways everywhere have become motor roads primarily, and the number of vehicles rapidly increases. Building perishable highways is as short-sighted as it would be to erect houses without roofs in the expectation tha no rain will fall. Highways must be built not only to support present traffic but the traffic that may be confidently forecast for the years at hand.

Permanence means smaller bills for maintenance, thus returning to the treasury some of its additional first cost. If a road is in continual need of repairs the indication is that the work was of a wrong type or was improperly done in the first place. Our idea is to put more money into original construction and thus avoid the necessity of putting so much into maintenance.

—‡—‡—‡—

The dry weather made the strawberry season extremely short with last Friday about the last day for delivery to be made here. The cherry picking season is at top notch now. The latter crop is very good.

With mercurv going to 96 during the midday hours of the past week people are using that part more for the resting hours and working early and late when it is not so warm. The oats crop is the one that will be effected and the hay crop will be effected nearly as much.

Patronize The Advertisers.

IS YOUR SUBSCRIPTION IN ARREARS

Renewals to the home paper are coming in daily and we are making a special effort to make the paper of the same high standard it has always maintained to cause these renewals to continue.

Now that all you readers have admitted to yourself that you appreciate the News why not pass the word along to your neighbor who may not be a reaber. He may want to use this public servant.

But are you in arrears on your subscription? If so we will be glad to receive at any time your remittance for the same and for an advance.

We would like very much to square our books at once.

The St. Joe Weekly News

St. Joe, - - - - - Indiana

Chiropractor Optician

Calls made at your home by
APPOINTMENT.

EARL E. FRISBIE,
Butler, Indiana.

"MY CITY AND I"

My home and my business is founded in My Town. She gives me and mine the protection of law and order, that my property may be enhanced and my right be sacred. I vote here.

My Town gives my children a superior schooling. Good neighbors are mine. Truly, My Town is "home spot" for me.

I owe My Town my full measure of civic loyalty. If I pretent a manly and fair conception of reciprocity, I must, upon every occasion give My Town a full measure o loyalty through intelligent co-opera tion with others of similar senti ments.

My Town does not want my parti sanship, my offiishness, my dissen tion, my criticism, nor m yindiffe ence. Rather, My Town expects o me qualities of high citizenship, to. erant friendship, willing co-operc tion, heart-given sympathy and ir telligent support.

Over 62,000 negro farm girls the 15 Southern States enrolled agricultural extension clubs in 192 to learn better methods of food preparation and preservation, construc tion and care of clothing, care of th home, poultry and dairy work, an gardening. More than 70 per cent of these club members, according t reports to the United States Depart ment of Agriculture, completed th entire year's work as planned by agricultural extension agents.

—‡—‡—‡—

INDIVIDUAL INTELLIFENCE, COLLECTIVE UNINTELLIGENCE

We all like to talk about instilling business principles into govern ment activity. We roast our public officials for playing politics, and give the impression that if we were on the job things would be different In the next breath, if our state representative in our law-making bodies fails to "play politics" to suit us and tries to vote and think along business lines, we are apt to join in a hue and cry and berate him for his action. We can see this illustrated every day in great national issues such as the tariff question or the World Court.

If there is any problem which should be settled from the standpoint of the country's welfare and not as a matter of political expedience, it should be policies relating to our foreign trade and our social and diplomatic intercourse with other nations. A Republican or a Democrat has the same interest in safe and sound conditions for this nation and for the world. Hence great issues on the settlement of which the prosperity of our nation rests should not be made political footballs by any party as a method of currying public favor.

Take the World Court controversy as an illustration. Any man who reads the country press of the nation, which represents the great mass of every-day thinking Americans, must be impressed by the fact that the general sentiment is favorable to some form of judicial settlement of disagreements between nations. Whether it is called a World Court, a League of Nations, an international board of arbitration or what not, makes little difference.

Not so many years ago when two individuals got into a controversy the fellow with the bigger club or the stronger arm settled the question in his own favor. A few centuries later these contestants would be put in a ring where they had to fight out their differences under the eyes of judges, and one or the other was the victor. A little later they did away with the clubs and had to tell their troubles to a jury which settled the question for one or the other without bodily harm to either.

Today no nation would think of allowing two of its citizens to maintain their rights by physical force While for several centuries men have individually subjected themselves to police regulation and courts of law, they have collectively as nations retained the privilege of doing battle with each other as did primitive man in settling his quarrels centuries ago Stripped of political and diplomatic intrigue and hypocrisy, the question which is involved in the World Court proposition is simple why cannot nations subject themselves to a judicial settlement of their controversies in the same manner as do private citizens in local political subdivisions as well as nationally and internationally? To the average American this sums up the question at issue. It is not a Democratic or a Republican program it is a national problem affecting our future international relations and it should not be made a partisan political issue to the extent of hampering our law-makers in arriving at a decision on the merits of the case.

Passing Through the Panama Canal.

It takes a ship about ten hours to make the trip through the Panama canal.

Bible Thoughts for the Week

Sunday.

THE ROYAL LAW—If ye fulfill the royal law according to the Scripture, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, ye do well: but if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors.—James 2:8, 9.

Monday.

LUSTS OF THE FLESH.—Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh. For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other.—Galatians 5:16, 17.

Tuesday.

TO SEE THE LORD.—Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord.—Hebrews 12:14.

Wednesday.

GLORY AND HONOUR AND POWER.—Thou art worthy, O, Lord, to receive glory and honour and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created.—Revelation 4:11.

Thursday.

HEAR THE WORD.—O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the Lord.—Jeremiah 22:29.

Friday.

THE TEMPLE OF GOD.—Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?—I Corinthians 3:16.

Saturday.

GRACE AND KNOWLEDGE.—Grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and for ever.—II Peter 3:18.

Make Your Trip More Enjoyable by a Refreshing Night on Lake Erie
(Your rail ticket is good on the boats)

Thousands of east and north bound travelers say they wouldn't have missed that cool, comfortable night on one of our fine steamers. A good bed in a clean stateroom, a long sound sleep and an appetizing breakfast in the morning!

Steamers "SEEANDBEE" — "CITY OF ERIE" — "CITY OF BUFFALO"

Daily, May 1st to November 15th

Leave Cleveland - 9:00 P.M. / Arrive Buffalo - 7:30 A.M. } Eastern Standard Time { Leave Buffalo - 9:00 P.M. / Arrive Cleveland - 7:30 A.M.

Connections for Niagara Falls, Eastern and Canadian points. Ask your ticket agent or tourist agency for tickets via C & B Line. New Tourist Automobile Rate—$10.00.

Send for free sectional puzzle chart of the Great Ship "Seeandbee" and 32-page booklet.

The Cleveland and Buffalo Transit Co.
Cleveland, Ohio

The Great Ship "Seeandbee" — the largest steamer on inland waters of the world.

Fare $5.50

C&B Line

LATEST and BEST!

An INCREASING, life-long Monthly Income if Totally and Permanently Disabled by accident or disease before the age of 60 years.

THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK

$10 a month during fi[illegible] years, $15 durin[illegible] 5 years, $20 thereafte[illegible] life. No further premium deposits. And [illegible] your death to your beneficiary, or $2000 if death, at any age, is accidental, payable in a single sum, or as income for a term of years or for life. Total disability lasting 3 months regarded, durirg further continuance, as permanent.

J. C. HULL, St. Joe, Ind.

Please give me further information [illegible] Perfect Life Insurance Policy

NAME ____

ADDRESS ____

Out Now
Cosmopolitan
Get it in a hurry!

H. O. WILLIAMS
THE
Abstracter
is able to furnish you with a complete Abstract of Title to any description of Real Estate in DeKalb County.
OFFICE
West Seventh Street
AUBURN
FIRE INSURANCE
NOTARY PUBLIC

Frank L. Milliman
TRUSTEE
Concord Township

Office Day Friday of Each Week at his residence 2 miles north and 1-2 mile West of St. Joe.

Lehman's CLOTHING HOUSE
ESTABLISHED 1887
MENS AND BOYS OUTFITTERS
810 CALHOUN STREET
BEN LEHMAN, PROP.
Fort Wayne, Ind.

JUNE

L 912

Money

$ $

LOOK HERE!

In Building Up

a business the corner stone is good commercial bank service. It can help you in many ways and tide over many difficulties. Have you an account in a good commercial bank? If not you should open one at once and give yourself a standing in business. We take small accounts and give you the benefit of our backing at the Farmers and Merchants State Bank

Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank

Capital Stock, - $25,000

Spencerville, Ind.

The Bank of Personal Services

SPENCERVILLE

Paul Dean was a Sunday guest in the Rev. Steffey home.

Otis Koch and wife were Sunday guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Koch.

Mrs. Anna Henderson will act as hostess to the C. C. Club Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Harry Markle, who has been visiting relatives in Garrett, returned home Friday evening.

Relatives at this place received word of the death of Delbert Steward of Russell, Kansas. Mr. Steward, a former resident of this place and is a brother of Mrs. William Reed of west of town. He leaves ten children, all of whom reside at home, to mourn his departure.

C. R Baumgartner, D V M

Veterinarians

OFFICE and HOSPITAL
SPENCERVILLE. - IND.
Phones —Office No. 7

F W Silberg, D V M

For good glasses see Griest at American Building Hicksville, Ohio.

Dwight Coolidge and family attended the Coolidge reunion at Errick's Grove Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Silberg and Miss Vera Silberg of this place spent Sunday at Hamilton Lake.

J. C. Vallieu and family spent Sunday with the former's mother, Mrs. Priscilla Hardesty of Paulding, Ohio.

Theo. Bowser and Mrs. Mary Hollopetter of Auburn, are visiting their son and nephew, R U. Bowser and family.

Mrs. Lyle Barr, Miss Ada Markle and brother, Richard, are visiting their grandfather, Jerry Markle and family.

Mrs. Nettie Perkins and son of near Harlan, and Mrs. Ora Billman were Monday guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joel Betz.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl McNabb and children of Auburn, and Jennings Horn and family were Saturday evening guests of Joel Bets and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Eckels and son, Jack, Mrs. Howser and Miss Delora Fitzer of Fort Wayne, T. A. Northrup and family and Vernon Kline spent Sunday with John Doll and family.

FOR SALE!

The following property located in Spencerville Indiana, at private sale:

Seven-room house with good cellar, Drove well and cistern; Good barn and other buildings ON TWO LOTS

Deering mower, Corn plow, 2 buggies, Set single harness, Pair bob sleds, 12-barrel steel tank, 30 feet 2-inch galvanized pipe, Pump jack.

W. P. Steward

Miss Marjorie Hollabaugh has accepted a position at the Wolf & Dessauer Store at Fort Wayne.

Mrs. Cora Steward received word on Monday morning of the serious illness of her step-mother, Mrs. Daniel Barr, of Missin, Ohio. Mrs. Steward expects to leave immediately.

CONCORD

Cleota Morr spent the week-end at home from her work at Angola.

Mildred Murphy entertained Arline Johnson and Joyce Rhodes to dinner Sunday.

Eord Jackson and family and Mrs. Charles Jackson and daughter spent Sunday evening in the George Kees home.

Ice Cream Social—Homemade ice cream will be served on the Concord church lawn, Friday evening by the Sunday School.

Howard Krise and family attended the Morr family reunion at Auburn Junction Sunday. A Miss Shull from Michigan returned home with them for a few days stay.

Mt. Pleasant

George Keller and wife had as Sunday guests his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Keller and sister, Mrs. Walter Mutzfeld and husband.

Mrs. Eva Shull and son Garth, of Coburntown, spent Sunday with Mark Shull and family.

Jacob Rigg and daughter Velma, were Sunday guests in the home of R. R. Brown and family.

Waldo Rosenberry and wife entertained Don Washler and wife at dinner Sunday.

Homer McCollough and family were Sunday guests of George Simanton and family at St. Joe.

Miss Evelyn Knight spent Sunday with Miss Freeda Martin, north of St. Joe.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Praul spent Thursday fishing at Hamilton lake. They report a fine catch.

Mrs. Eva Sheffer and Mrs. Grace Sheffer and son, helped Dorothy Knight celebrate her birthday, Wednesday.

J. S. Varner and family and Mr. and Mrs. George Lynn, and two children spent Friday at Hamilton lake.

Mr. and Mrs John Weicht and daughter, Wilma, were Sunday guests of his brother. George and family near Waterloo.

George Ginder, who has been traveling in the west, visited Sunday at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ginder.

NEWVILLE

Two mormans were distributing literature in our town recently.

We are informed that Miss Cena Parks has gone to Hicksville to make her home with some friends.

Mrs. Joe Rhoads remains helpless. Her children are caring for her as Mr. Rhoads is also old and quite feeble.

Six car loads of gypsies passed through Newville Wednesday of last week. They were very rude, ill behaved and dishonest.

Byron Miller, his parents and little Elsie Mendenhall, were Sunday guests of Harry Fuller and family of Garrett.

Belle Crum has given her house a new coat of white paint which adds quite an improvement in appearance.

The boys who went to Michigan last week came back to Newville Friday not being able to obtain the employment they expected.

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an Ointment which Quickly Relieves by local application, and the Internal Medicine, a Tonic, which assists in improving the General Health.

Sold by druggists for over 40 Years.
F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

Church Notes

Christian Church Notes

Olen Dermott brought a fine report from the State Convention which he gave Sunday morning.

The Martha Society will not meet this Thursday as announced, but will meet at the next regular meeting July 12, at the home of Mrs. Ida Williams.

The Children's Day exercises held Sunday evening was well attended. The program was good and well carried out. The offering amounted to over $10.00 and will be sent to Foreign Missions.

Next Sunday morning the various semi-annual reports of various church organizations and Sunday school classes will be given. Be present to hear them and learn just where and for what the money raised the past six months has been spent.

The Loyal Training Class gives the following report for the past six months:

Enrollment at beginning of year	13
Attendance for first quarter	128
Average attendance	10 2-3
Offering	$5.42
Enrollment at beginning of second quarter	13
New scholars during quarter	2
Attendance during second quarter	151
Average attendance	11 2-3
Offering	$6.41

Teacher present twenty-two Sundays.

Visitors during six months, 6.

Three scholars had perfect attendance for the past six months. They are Miss Flossie Keeler, Walter brown and Russell Reasoner.

M. P. Church Notes

When Jesus came into the world it was a disappointed world. Several hundred years had passed and Jehovah had sent no prophet to cry out against sin. Jesus came and with his coming brought a great message. When he left he left a great message. What is that message the church has as a heritage of the living Lord? This is the sermon topic Sunday morning. You are invited to attend.

Sunday evening the service at Concord will be a special service. Special music and a reading.

The sermon will be devoted to the farmer and his influence in the world as a citizen. From the shepherds of Palestine during David's time, the fifes and manors of French and English history, to the present farmer of the middle west, there is a connected story. You will be interested in this service. We want you to come.

Sunday School 9:30.
Worship 11:00.
Evening service 8:00.

A short Temperance Program will be given next Sunday morning before the lesson. Everybody be on time.

The Children's Day program was given last Sunday immediately following the study of the lesson. It was short, consisting of several songs and recitations. Miss Marie Kinsey was in charge. The collection was special for foreign missions.

Lutheran Notes

During the very hot weather the services at the Lutheran Church will be only 45 minutes including all. The sermon next Sunday night will be on the "Fourth Day of Creation." Be sure and hear this one. We are now approaching that period when we must account, not only for the propagation of life, but for life itself. Let us go over the creation story carefully and forever settle the question of the orthodoxy of our views.

The prayer meetings are interesting and very helpful now. The attendance is good.

The Sunday School goes well, attendance good and interest also. Stanley Means will make his report as delegate to the State Sunday School Convention next Sunday. You are invited.

S. D. Steffey, Pastor.

CONSTIPATION
A cause of many ills. Harmful to elderly people.
Always relief in taking
CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS
Easy—pleasant—effective—only 25c

Ford
Weekly Purchase Plan
Makes It Easier to Buy

Let the Whole Family Participate

$5.00 Enrolls You

For as little as $5.00 you can start toward the ownership of a Ford Car under the terms of the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan. This enables you to become a Ford Owner out of your weekly earnings.

Your money is deposited in the bank and draws interest. What easier way could there be? The whole family can participate.

You'll be surprised how quickly the car will be yours.

Come in! Get full particulars!

FRANK W. SILBERG, Agent,

Spencerville, Ind.

Office Cat

An Ohio man grafted skin of a chicken on his dog's back and now the dog can go chase himself.

—oo—

No, Barney Google, a spark plug isn't always full of carbon.

—oo—

Every "Human Fly" has to learn his profession from the ground up.

A cynic says his idea of hell is to be broke in a small town. Also it's the small town's idea of an unwelcome visitor.

—oo—

It has been suggested that we have a reckless driving week, but it would be hard to distinguish it from others.

—oo—

An optimist is one who thinks matters might have been worse if we hadn't begun to elect senators by popular vote.

COMPARISONS

A bullet is a deadly thing
Rushing onward, with a zing!
And should it penetrate my hide,
'Twould make an awul weight inside,
But I don't think that it compares
With biscuits that my wife prepares.

—oo—

It isn't what others may think about you that bring the worry wrinkles; it's what you know of yourself.

—oo—

A great deal of alleged golden hair is plaited.

—oo—

"A gentleman" is a man who can make you hate him and treat you so nice you are ashamed to cuss him.

—oo—

One citizen attributes his escaping an aviation accident to his presence of mind. He has consistently refused to go up.

—oo—

No man is a hero to his office boy, and no office boy is a hero to his boss.

2ND MESSAGE

Fence and Fence Posts

We have just received another carload of wire fencing--the very best, at prices that are the very lowest.

Also a carload of cedar fence posts has just arrived.

We are in a position to care for you in the way of fencing in every item.

NOTICE--Yau know what "White Head Anchor Post" means. They cannot be pulled.

Spencerville Lumber Co.
ASHUR CULP, Manager
Lumber and Building Material of All Kinds
Spencreville, Ind.

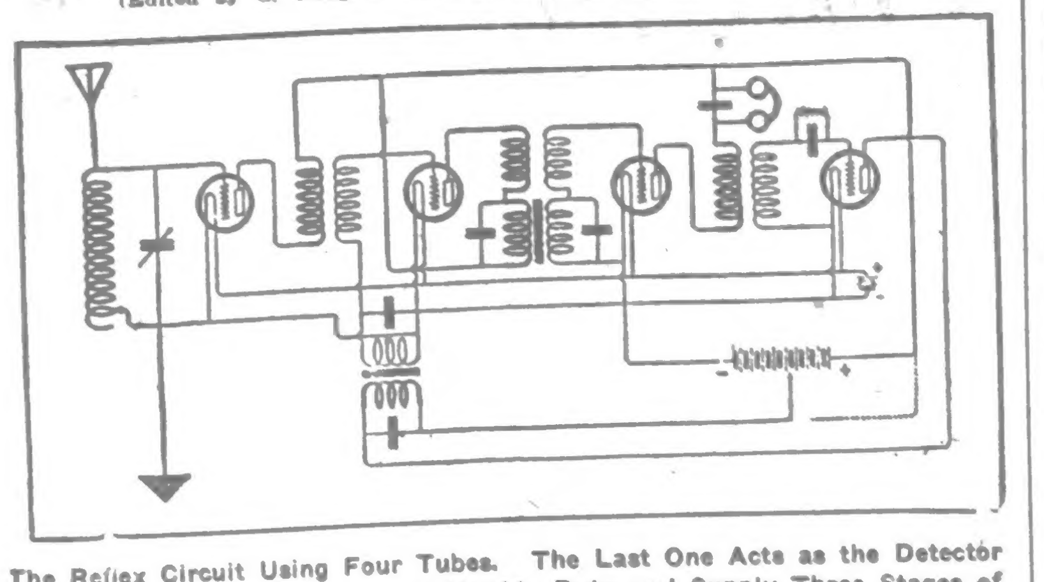
JUNE

L 912

0652

RADIO

(Edited by G. Douglas Wardrop, Editor of Radio Merchandising.)



The Reflex Circuit Using Four Tubes. The Last One Acts as the Detector While the First Three Play Double Duty and Supply Three Stages of Radio Frequency and Two Stages of Audio Frequency Amplification.

By J. L. GOLDSMAN, I.R.E.A.I.E.E.

Very much discussion has been carried on as to the practicab. ty of the so-called reflex circuit—a circuit designed, developed and patented in April and November of 1917 by Marius Latour, a French radio engineer.

The circuit consists of four tubes, the first three acting as radio frequency transformers, which are designed for limited wave lengths, the last tube acting as a detector. After the rectification of the high frequency oscillations the current is led back to the primary winding of an audio frequency transformer and thence to high voltage and the filament.

The secondary winding of the transformer is placed in the grid circuit of the second tube, which consequently amplifies the audio frequency oscillations at the same time as the radio frequency. The latter does not pass through the secondary windings, but is shunted across a fixed condenser of approximately .002 mfds. The audio frequency currents are amplified by the second tube and pass through the primary winding of the second audio frequency transformer. The secondary winding of this transformer is in the grid circuit of the third tube. This tube also amplifies the audio frequency currents which flow through the telephones, which are included in the plate circuit of the third tube. Fixed condensers are placed across both primaries and both secondaries of the audio frequency transformers to prevent the windings from interfering with the high frequency oscillations flowing simultaneously in the same circuit. This circuit is complex and difficult to control due mostly to capacity effects, etc. In lieu of the radio frequency transformers I substituted oscillation transformers (.0004 variable condensers and approximately .2 millihenry inductance). Better results were obtained. Great care must be taken to prevent understage radio frequency transformers acting as grid condensers and rectifying the high frequency oscillations before they reach the detector tube. This is common with many radio frequency sets on the market today. Atlanta Journal was heard in Toledo with this circuit using an aerial, but from all indications the standard five-tube radio audio frequency circuit is preferred where a loop is practical. Another circuit along these lines is now under test using only three tubes and with a few changes in wiring greater audibility has been obtained.

(Copyright, Radio News.)

The Outdoor Aerial Should Be Grounded

With the coming of summer weather, all users of radio receiving sets should provide their aerials with a suitable switch for grounding when not in use.

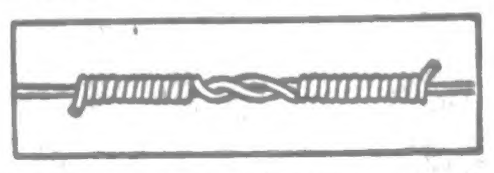
Any conductor of electricity insulated from the ground will, in certain kinds of weather, accumulate a charge of static electricity and discharge into the ground or any neutral body at the first opportunity.

In times of thunderstorms this charge is more severe and becomes a real menace to the receiving set if not properly grounded. On the other hand, the aerial, if leading to ground through a switch, is a genuine protection to the property.

An ordinary single-pole, double-throw switch, of a size depending upon the size of the aerial, should be placed outside the building at the point where the lead-in enters. The aerial is connected to the middle post of the switch, and the ground and receiving set to the two outside posts, respectively. During a storm, or when not in use, the switch should then be left in the grounded position.—The Chiropractor and Clinical Journal.

The Small Condenser Can Be Made of Wire

Grid condensers and other small condensers can be quickly made by leaving the insulation on the wires and twisting them together like in making a regular soldered joint. The longer the splice the greater the capacity of the condenser. The capacity of these condensers can be made of any value by connecting them in series and parallel in different combinations.



These condensers are very compact and when wrapped with a piece of tape they will stand the hardest kind of rough usage.

Says Her Baby Cries for Radio, Then More

Babies now cry for radio. The new national pastime has invaded the nursery, and many mothers are adopting radio waves as pacifiers. A mother of six children, the oldest eleven years old, writes WGY, the Schenectady broadcasting station, that her youngest child, aged fourteen months, is already a fan. Mrs. Robert Barber of Rensselaer, N. Y., writes as follows:

"I wonder if it would interest you to know that I think I have the youngest radio listener. My baby is fourteen months old and she walks to the desk where I have my crystal set and points for me to open it. When there is anything she sits with the ear phones just as nice as any large person, but as soon as it stops she takes off the phones and starts to scold for more.

"I have six children and they all like to listen. I have two sets of phones and they separate them."

Prince Takes Up Radio.

H. R. H. the Prince of Wales has taken up radio. His Radio Highness.

Radio Sure to Work Out Its Own Destiny

A practical joker once suggested as a subject for a debate "The Future of Electricity." As the subject was to be considered by a society of engineers, they at once smelled the proverbial mouse and declined to be led into talking of something so vast and so unlimited in possibilities that no sane man would attempt to do it justice.

A review of the accomplishments of radio the past years and of the prophecies of experts for its future, but causes one to ponder upon the inadequacy of any possible foretelling of what this great gift of nature is to accomplish. We can but gasp and wonder.

In view of the fact that radio has always been with us, excepting for the invention of some apparatus of importance small in comparison with the natural elements used, who can answer the question, "What of the future?" Radio for the transmission of power has such tremendous possibilities within its scope that the most confirmed dreamer and the scientist of the widest vision can only guess in a feeble way.

Radio, now that it has been recognized in the abstract, will work out its own destiny. Such a force once started at work is not to be stopped, but will go on and on, along its destined course. We can only hope that that course will run along peaceful channels and for the benefit of the greatest number of the world's people.

Things to Remember About Your License

Quite a few amateurs have complained that they had to go through a re-examination for a renewal of their operator's license.

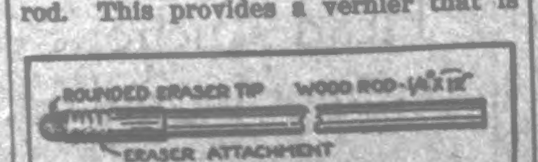
There are a few points to consider in this connection. First is to watch the expiration date and the second is to get three amateurs to write that your station was heard on the air within the three months prior to your application for renewal.

The license will then be renewed without trouble, but if you wait until it has expired an examination will be necessary.

Also remember that you are never notified about expirations so that you must watch both your operating and station licenses.

Method of Eliminating Some Capacity Effects

A handle for turning the knobs may be made from a wooden dowel rod one-quarter inch in diameter and about twelve inches long. A pencil eraser attachment designed to fit over a pencil end is slipped on one end of the rod. This provides a vernier that is as good as any on the market. The adjustment was secured by putting the eraser end up to the edge of the dial and slowly twisting the outer end of the rod. Before using, the eraser should be tapered with sandpaper.



DX-Flex Tuning May Be Done by Coupling

It may surprise some fans to know that it is possible with the DX-Flex to accomplish practically all of the tuning by means of the coupling control alone. It is true that this is not the most efficient method of tuning, but it certainly is an easy scheme and, as far as local work is concerned, gives excellent results.

It is known that the wave length, to which two separate circuits may be tuned, varies very much as the two circuits are brought in relation with each other. When the circuits are closely coupled the wave length of each is reduced, while the opposite effect takes place as the circuits are drawn apart.

Hence, in the primary setting of the DX-Flex for this tuning stunt, the coupling should be set at about the 20-degree position. This means that the rotor of the coupler is near the maximum or parallel position with respect to the primary. When this has been done the primary taps and the secondary condenser are tuned carefully for 360 meters. It will then be found that as the coupling is reduced the wave length goes up uniformly on both circuits and there is very little difference in effect between this method of tuning and one which is usually recommended where the coupling is left fixed and the primary and secondary are varied.

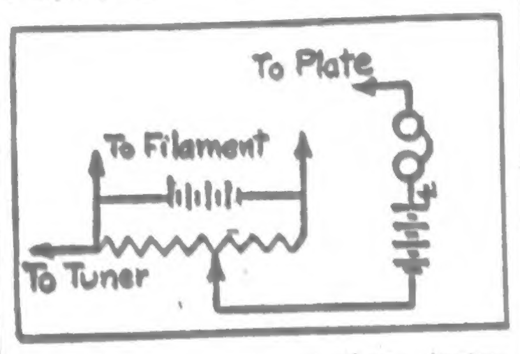
It is entirely possible to adjust a bit below 360 meters for KDKA, then to reduce the coupling a little bit and come across the wave length of WJZ. A little further reduction and WGY is picked up, while near the minimum in comes WEAF and some of the other 400-meter stations.

Some may question the selectivity if this method is followed, but a little thought will show that interference from code stations operating on 600 meters will not be great on the 400-meter adjustment, inasmuch as the coupling is greatly reduced. The tendency for interference on 360 meters is least there, and therefore an increase of coupling on this wave is not troublesome.

This scheme is most satisfactory for the use of those who are not familiar with radio apparatus, for it reduces the tuning controls to one and is therefore eminently fitted for the use of members of the family not versed in the intricacies of primary and secondary adjustments.

Potentiometer Needed for Selective Tuning

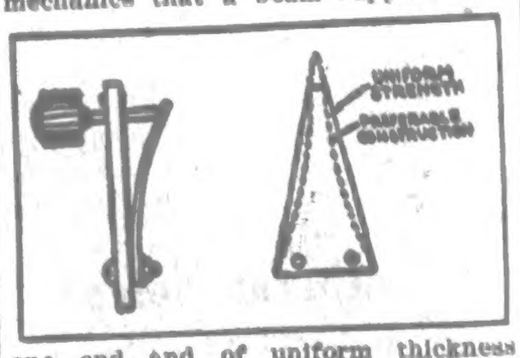
The word potentiometer is a big word. No matter what the circuit is this little instrument is the goods. Distance and perfect reception are assured by the employment of such an instrument. It is generally placed across the filament battery. The accompanying sketch shows the proper connection for one of these instruments in the circuit. The reason for the potentiometer is that the gas content vacuum tube demands close adjustment of the plate circuit battery potential. It consumes 0.02 amperes, which is negligible.



Proper Shape for Resistance Spring

When laying out the phosphor bronze contact piece for the Flewelling variable leak care should be taken to have this piece of the proper shape. This is to make the change of resistance gradual.

It is quite evident to students of mechanics that a beam supported at one end and of uniform thickness should have the shape of a triangle, if the stress is to be uniform. Furthermore, it is best to go one step further and make the contact piece so that the end nearest the adjusting screw will be raised from contact with the resistance unit before the supporting end is raised.



Ohms Resistance Found in Radio Circuits

Units of apparatus varying widely in their values of ohmic resistance are connected in radio circuits. For example, the resistance of the filament rheostat for amplifier and detector tubes has a maximum value of approximately six ohms, mechanically arranged to be variable in order that a filament current of 1.2 amperes may be drawn from the storage battery.

With the new UV201-A tubes on the market a special rheostat is needed to secure the best results. The ohmage of this rheostat should be approximately 20 to 25 ohms.

The regenerative action is accomplished by feeding back to the grid circuit a portion of the plate circuit energy and thus balancing out the effect of the circuit resistance.

INDIANA STATE NEWS

Marion.—Miss Hessel Conway won first honors in oratory at the annual commencement exercises of the schools of Green township, held in the M. E. church at Point Isabell. Frank Swackhamer won the honor for receiving the highest grade, 92. Diplomas were presented to 13 graduates by A. R. Hall, county superintendent. The graduates are: William H. Grim, Glenn O. McGraw, Zola Marie Eckelbarger, Dorothy Aliene Eckelbarger, Myrtle Harriet McGraw, Bessie Florence Hofferbert, Sallie May Lamb, Frank A. Swackhamer, Aubrey Hamilton, Helen Elcis Leisure, Ray Ertel, Fred Echelbarger and Hessel Ruthine Conway.

Elkhart.—Apropos of the opening of the fishing season, Mel Stewart, a painter, whose farm home is on the banks of the Elkhart river, rises to remark that the "still" fishing is unusually good out his way. When he discovered a loaded raft against one of the banks, Stewart put out in a boat to investigate. On the raft was what appeared to be a big boiler, but closer inspection revealed a still and when it was opened out poured 20 gallons of moonshine.

Terre Haute.—Through co-operation of the Indiana State Normal school and the public schools of Terre Haute, student-teachers from the Normal school are to be placed in the city schools for observation work and experience in teaching. For this privilege the state institution will pay $1,000 a month into the treasury of the city schools. The new agreement will be effective at the beginning of the fall term of the city schools.

Rockport.—Under the supervision of the state, the M. & P. Contract company will build a reinforced concrete bridge on the Grandview road, north of Rockport, at a cost of $30,000. It will be a combination bridge for the state highway and the Evansville & Ohio Valley Railway company, which operates traction cars. The bridge will be 49 feet 6 inches wide and of 50-foot span.

Seymour.—Gus Sapkaris of Bedford received a verdict for $2,500 against the Meridian Fire Insurance company in the Jackson Circuit court. Household goods owned by Sapkaris and insured for $3,000 by the defendant were burned about a year ago. Settlement was delayed and Sapkaris brought suit in the Lawrence Circuit court to recover damages. The case was sent to Jackson county for trial.

Columbus.—R. S. Thomas, a soy-bean expert of Purdue university, will give a soy-bean demonstration August 8 on the farm of George W. Thompson of Clifty township. Mrs. Thompson is cultivating four varieties of soy beans in different plots. The object of the demonstration will be to determine which of the four has made the best growth and which will be best adapted to the soil of Bartholomew county.

Frankfort.—Walter Brown received a cablegram from his son, Halfred Brown, who said that he would receive the degree of doctor of laws from the University of Lyons, at Lyons, France, July 15. Brown has been in France for the last two years, following his graduation from Wabash college with the class of 1921. He will return to the United States about September 1.

Franklin.—Presidents of the missionary societies of the Christian churches in Shelby, Owen, Monroe, Morgan and Johnson counties held a meeting at the home of Mrs. A. T. Records, district secretary, south of Franklin. Among the speakers were Miss Louise Kelly, of Indianapolis, a missionary to China, and Miss Josepha Franklin, of Anderson, a missionary to India.

New Albany.—Temples of Pythian Sisters in Districts 11 and 12 in 16 counties of southern Indiana were represented by 125 members at the annual convention held with Mistletoe temple. Mrs. Fay Tyson of Butler, grand chief; M. Easterday, grand senior, were present. Mrs. Verna Keithley of Georgetown, district deputy, presided over the sessions.

Columbus.—Ninety-five hens owned by Mrs. B. F. Ropp, of Clay township, led all other flocks of Bartholomew county in the monthly egg-laying contest that was held under the auspices of S. R. Miles, county agricultural agent. The hens averaged 20.2 eggs each in May.

Bedford.—E. B. Thornton, stone operator, has bought a ten-acre tract of heavily wooded land inside the city limits, of the Kramer heirs and after beautifying it by landscape gardening, will present it to the city for a children's playground.

Hartford City.—A large barn on a farm six miles north of here, owned by Mrs. J. T. Kelley, was burned. The fire was caused by burning sulphur in a henhouse in one corner of the structure.

Connersville.—The Merrill block at the corner of Central avenue and Fifth street, has been sold to Mr. and Mrs. Dora Bourne for $51,000. The property was sold at commissioner's sale.

Wabash.—A suit for $1,000 damages filed by Amos J. Wilcoxson against Charles Axton, former superintendent of White's Manual Labor institute, was compromised after a trial had been started in Circuit court. Axton agreed to pay Wilcoxson $200 and the costs of the case. The suit followed a fight between the men.

Richmond.—The largest class in its history was graduated from Earlham college, diplomas being granted 71 students. Walter Jessup, president of the University of Iowa, delivered the commencement address.

South Bend.—E. B. Henderson, Indianapolis representative of the State Bar association, state department of public instruction, and of the Junior Red Cross, will be one of the principal speakers before the St. Joseph County Teachers' association the week of August 27. Other speakers will be Henry S. Curtis, secretary of the National Child Welfare association, and supervisor of playgrounds at Washington; Miss Carolyn Hoefer, research worker for the Elizabeth McCormick memorial fund, Chicago, and Dr. E. M. Linton, of Bloomington, Ind.

Martinsville.—Dr. Edward M. Pitkin, who has been instructor in anatomy in the Indiana University School of Medicine, has accepted the position of house physician at the Martinsville sanatorium, and will soon take up his duties. He succeeds Dr. J. S. Hinkle, who resigned to engage in private practice. Dr. W. E. Hendricks, associate physician, who was one of the first in the sanatorium business in this city, will continue his connection with the sanatorium.

Cannelton.—Nine foreign-born residents of Perry county have received their full second naturalization papers. They were of French, Belgian, Swiss and German birth. Anton G. Rudolph of Tell City was born aboard a ship while his parents were crossing the Atlantic ocean. Maxime Deom, Anton Schmidt, August Fay, Martin Schwarz, August Thierry, Jacob Truempy, John Baptist Popp, Sr., and John Jacob Popp were the others attaining citizenship.

Noblesville.—The annual convention of the Epworth League of the Logansport district of the North Indiana Methodist Episcopal conference was held at Sheridan June 18 and 19. The program included addresses by John Edwards, C. McPheeters, O. J. Beardsley, W. T. Arnold, J. Thompson, J. B. Sparling, C. W. Fawns, J. Ira Jones and W. E. Gratz. Djie Hian spoke of the missionary work that has been done in Japan.

Warsaw.—The Warsaw city council has created a new office, that of sanitary police. W. A. Winebrenner has been appointed to fill the office and it will be his duty each day to visit dairies and pasteurization plants and to see that the city's milk ordinance is complied with by all dealers.

Shelbyville.—Walter W. Leslie, auditor for Shelby county, has completed the distribution of money collected by the county treasurer in the spring tax installment period. The total distributed was $516,559.43. Checks for the amounts due the state, county, townships and city were sent out.

Marion.—The twenty-fifth anniversary convention of the Women's Mite Missionary society of the A. M. E. church of Indiana was held in this city. Rev. W. D. Shannon of Kokomo and Rev. J. L. Craven of Anderson made addresses.

Logansport.—The annual picnic of the Veterans' association of the Logansport division of the Pennsylvania railroad will be held at Lake Maxinkuckee June 30. A special train will carry the veterans and their families to the lake.

Terre Haute.—The Terre Haute Labor Temple association has bought a building built and formerly occupied by the Phoenix club. The building will be used as a home by labor unions of Terre Haute. The consideration was announced as $35,000.

South Bend.—The Kiwanis club of Indiana will hold their annual Indiana meeting in South Bend, September 12, 13 and 14. The local club, acting on advice of the district governor, is arranging to take care of 2,500 Kiwanians, who will come to South Bend.

Laporte.—The case of Leo Hogan of Knox, charged with firing a shotgun into the Ku Klux Klan meeting at San Pierre April 30, with intent to kill, has been taken on a change of venue from the Starke Circuit court to the Fulton Circuit court at Rochester.

Hartford City.—The Blackford county board of children's guardians was organized for the year with the election of L. E. Kelley of Montpelier, president; Dr. W. A. Hollis, vice president, and Mrs. Charles Ritter, secretary and treasurer.

Anderson.—Miss Mabel Reeves of Anderson, who was graduated as a nurse at the Methodist hospital at Indianapolis, has been appointed supervisor of surgery in the Methodist hospital at Gary.

Crawfordsville.—Announcement has been made by Edgar H. Evans, of Indianapolis, national chairman of the endowment campaign committee, that Wabash college will soon enter a campaign for the college endowment fund.

Salem.—More than 50 boys and girls enrolled this year in the Washington County Purebred Pig club which is sponsored by the Washington County Hog Breeders' association and directed by C. A. Furnas, county agent.

Marion.—The Upland flint glass factory which was damaged by fire several months ago, has been rebuilt and will resume operations. The concern employs about 250 men and women.

Greenfield.—Howard Macy has been appointed chief of the fire department by Mayor Marshall Winslow, to succeed James Moran.

Laporte.—Seven Laporte business houses were swindled by fraudulent checks, cashed, it is said, by John Allison. The checks, totaling $47.76, ranged from $2 to $10.50 in amounts. Allison, who was working in the city, drew his money out of the First National bank and then wrote the checks before he left for parts unknown.

Anderson.—Notice was filed with the county auditor of the intention of the Alexandria school board to erect a new $76,000 building. A bond issue of $76,000 will be made to pay for the building.

Sure Relief
FOR INDIGESTION
BELL-ANS FOR INDIGESTION 25 CENTS
6 BELL-ANS
Hot water
Sure Relief
BELL-ANS
25¢ AND 75¢ PACKAGES EVERYWHERE

Shake into your Shoes
ALLEN'S FOOT=EASE
For Corns, Bunions, Tired and Aching Feet
AT ALL DRUGGISTS
Trial package and a Foot=Ease Walking Doll sent Free. Address ALLEN'S FOOT=EASE, Le Roy, N. Y.

Coated Tongue
Nature's Warning of Constipation
When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.
Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.
Nujol
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

FEW BID FOR CRIME RELICS

Sale of Grewsome Collection Sparsely Attended, and Articles All Sold for Small Sums.

Relics of famous crimes and criminals no longer have the same fascination for the British man in the street as they did less than a generation ago.

The whole private collection of the late George R. Sims, journalist, author and playwright, was auctioned recently in London. Mr. Sims was more than thirty years getting his "Black Museum" together, and the whole of it—relics, news cuttings, and books—was sold to an almost indifferent public in less than half an hour.

One of the most treasured of the relics, a kitchen chair on which a woman was sitting when she was murdered, realized only 5 shillings, little more than $1. Autographed letters from notorious murderers, various things belonging to criminals who had been hanged—all went for a few dollars apiece. Even things having a certain historical value, such as a set of rusty leg irons used on criminals in the Eighteenth century and a massive lock from one of the cells in old Newgate prison, failed to interest buyers.

New Idea for Showcase.

Storekeepers will be interested in a new showcase which appears similar to the usual display case from the front, but differs greatly at the rear. It is made in two sections. In the front section the shelves and mirror are placed so as to be in the customer's line of vision as he enters the store. The rear section is a miniature stockroom. When the buyer indicates the article in the case he desires, the clerk merely opens a small door at the rear directly behind the indicated merchandise, and is enabled to hand out the goods without having to disturb the display scheme.

Behind the Scenes.

Telephone Operator—Sorry, sir, Mr. McConnell is at an important conference and is likely to be away all afternoon.

Customer—Can you tell me when he will be back.

Telephone Operator (to office boy)—When is the baseball game over, Johnny? Five o'clock? (Over the phone): No, I don't think he will be back before half-past five. This is an important conference. I'll tell him you called.—Cohoes (N. Y.) Sentinel.

Some people worry because they are unable to worry other people.

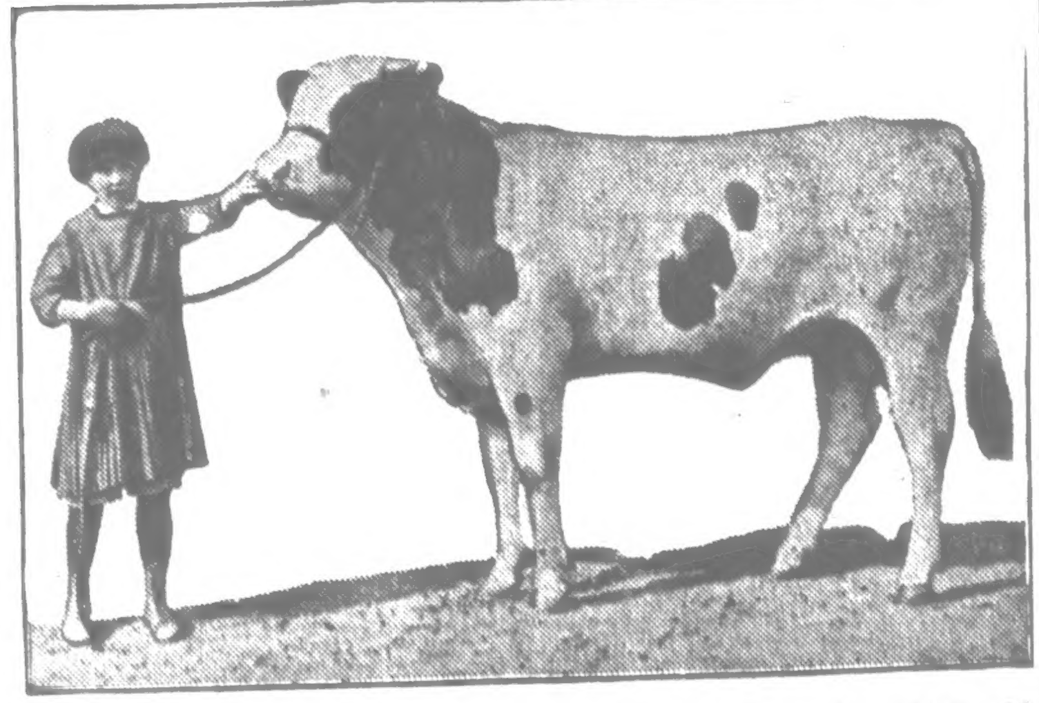
If coffee disagrees drink Postum
"There's a Reason"

JUNE

L 912

0653

American Farm Bureau



Edith Clarke, age eleven, was the proudest girl in Wisconsin when she purchased Wayside Sir Ollie Longfield, a registered Holstein yearling sire at the Green county sale held at Monroe. It was the top animal of the sale and purchased by the champion calf club girl of Wisconsin.

Two years ago the two Clarke girls started in the Rock county junior clubs, organized by the Holstein Breeders' association and the farm bureau. Edith won in 1921 and repeated in 1922, winning the championship cup for the county.

Edith's Holstein calf—Snowgirl Oak Lodge—won second place at the Wisconsin state fair, with a Rock county entry in first place, and the next day placed first in the junior exhibit with her sister close behind. Nor did these two girls stop there. Edith won the junior prize at the National Dairy show and won the blue ribbon at the Wisconsin Junior Live Stock exposition held at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture, Madison. Alice placed second.

The two girls invested their club winnings in live stock. They now own seven head of registered Holsteins, two ponies, eight purebred sheep, including the new bull, a grandson of Iowana Sir Ollie, national grand champion in 1919. They will put the calf in the Rock county show herd and hope to win at the state fairs and national dairy show this year.

CUNNINGHAM OF IOWA GIVEN GREAT HONOR

"Dirt Farmer" Appointed to Federal Reserve Board.

E. H. Cunningham is the farmers' representative on the federal reserve board. The appointment was recently made by President Harding. Mr. Cunningham is a "dirt farmer." With his son he operates a 320-acre farm at Cresco, Ia. For three years Mr. Cunningham has served as secretary for the Iowa Farm Bureau federation. He has also served as president of the United States Grain Growers, Inc., and is now a member of the board of directors of the National Live Stock Producers' association. As a member of the Farmers' Live Stock Marketing Committee of Fifteen, he helped work out the national plan for live stock marketing. He is also one of the organizers and a director of the Iowa Farm Credits' association.

Mr. Cunningham is noted for his vigorous championship of the farmer's cause. It is a favorite story among the farmers of Iowa that when the federal reserve board came into that state after the war and ordered the farmers to sell their products on a demoralized market and pay their notes at the bank, to "deflate" all costs. Mr. Cunningham told them bluntly to go to a place a great deal hotter than Iowa on a good corn-growing day. The organized farmers of America have an idea that it is this type and leadership that will bring to agriculture the representation it needs on the federal reserve board.

E. H. Cunningham, Iowa "Dirt Farmer."

The appointment is a popular one. The congratulations and the support of the farmers go with Mr. Cunningham into his important new work. The spirit and the letter of the "dirt farmer" amendment are being carried out.

BIG PROFIT ON COTTON SEED

Farmers of Louisiana Parish Also Make Big Saving in Purchase of Soil Fertilizers.

A profit of $3 a ton on cotton seed, and savings of $5.25 a ton on six carloads of acid phosphate and $15 to $18 a ton on three carloads of nitrate of soda for the last few months is the record in dollars and cents gained by farmers of Webster parish, Louisiana, who are members of the parish farm bureau according to L. A. Miller, secretary of the local organization.

"This is not only dollars made but it is dollars saved," Mr. Miller said. "Our accomplishments so far are only a drop in the bucket compared with the increased advantages we are going to gain over our short-sighted anti-bureau neighbors who continue to buy and sell individually against an organized world."

CO-OPERATIVE MILK MARKETING COMPANY

Illinois Organization Has Experienced Big Growth.

When successful co-operative dairy marketing organizations of Illinois are mentioned, the name of the Stephenson County Co-Operative Milk Marketing company immediately comes to mind. Organized in February, 1921, and opening up for business the following April, the co-operative has experienced a remarkable growth and now has almost 1,000 farmer-members. The company is capitalized for $75,000 and has a $30,000 milk plant at Freeport.

During the second year's business just closed the sales of the company totaled $518,364.55, or an average of $43,197.04 per month. The running expenses were $61,742.57 and $411,164.56 was paid to patrons for products and in the 7 per cent dividend for stock. A sinking fund of $12,704.72 was retained.

A total of 13,129,766 pounds of milk and 1,704,606 pounds of cream was handled by the plant during the year. The following is an itemized account of the sources of sales:

Product.	Sales.	Per Cent of Total.
Butter	$253,661.75	47.6
Milk	145,929.25	28.2
Cheese	46,082.49	9.5
Cream (sweet)	51,522.69	10.0
Buttermilk and skim milk	4,693.47	1.5
Miscellaneous sales.	16,474.90	3.2
	$518,364.55	100.0

Butter, which easily constitutes the largest single item of sales, is sold under the brand name, "Vita Gold." It scores 90 per cent or over and commands one cent above the top price on the Chicago market.

Organization of the milk marketing company was effected by the Stephenson county farm bureau, in co-operation with the dairy marketing department of the Illinois Agricultural association. Much of the success of the association is due to the efforts of G. F. Baumeister, for the past five years county farm adviser, and Alfred Ahrentzen, the present manager.

Local stations effect a much more efficient organization than would one central group to which all farmers are members. Locals are located at Dakota, Damascus, German Valley, Egan, Baileyville, Forreston, Shannon, Pearl City, Lena and Waddams Grove. Farmers belonging to these locals have their officers and are represented on the governing committee of the association. No man can purchase more than five shares of stock in the company, and every stockholder must be a producer.

General satisfaction in their organization is being expressed by the large majority of the membership in the co-operative. They receive from 75 cents to $1 more per hundred pounds for their milk than was the case prior to organization. With this new incentive of an excellent market in their own co-operative association, milk producers tributary to the Stephenson county plant have shown a new interest in dairying and the industry is being rapidly boosted in the territory.

FILLED MILK IS PROHIBITED

Law Passed in New Hampshire Forbidding Sale and Manufacture After Hot Fight.

A law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of filled milk has just been enacted in New Hampshire after a strenuous fight. In addition to this anti-filled milk measure, a law has been enacted prohibiting false advertising of dairy substitutes. Credit for the passage of these measures goes to the New Hampshire Farm Bureau federation.

ROAD BUILDING

Vast System of National or Interstate Highways

There was a day, not very far back, when vision in road building was about as broad as a man's farm or a community's interest. Pork barrel methods and political pull, not yet a memory, were a big part of the accepted order. Then it became possible to see to the county limits and still later it gradually was revealed that roads leading from one county to another might be a convenience to a reasonable number of travelers. Thus emerged the idea of state systems.

It has remained for recent months, however, to bring into potential existence a vast system of national or interstate roads that in a few years may reasonably be expected to lie, like long ribbons of white, across every section of the country and link up the states, the cities and counties even more closely than they were joined in the construction of railway lines. The idea isn't a dream, but a thing of national statute, provided for in the federal highway act of last November and now rapidly assuming form through co-operation of the state highway departments with the United States bureau of public roads.

The system will comprise more than 175,000 miles, 7 per cent of the entire public road mileage of the United States. Of this amount three-sevenths will be composed of interstate roads, the remainder to make up connecting state systems. There is state and federal money enough in hand or in sight to start the actual work, and nearly all the states now have submitted to the national bureau plans for the sections of road that will go into the interstate system. And the bureau is seeing to it that the sections meet at the state lines. No federal aid will be allowed on any highway which does not fit into the general scheme of a national or state system.

This is vision in road building, bounded only by the limits of the country itself. It will mean results in the shape of roads that link up and lead somewhere and bring service to all rather than a favored few.—Kansas City Times.

Colored Pins Indicate Danger Spots in Roads

A rather original way of ascertaining the condition of roads and the places where repairs are necessary has been worked out by a road commissioner for state roads of Maryland. It is based upon the accidents occurring on the highways of the state. Upon receipt of each accident report, a numbered colored pin is put in the proper location on a map of the road system of the state. Fatal accidents are marked with a red pin and other accidents are marked with yellow pins, the numbering on the pin referring to a card index system, enabling one to find the character of each accident.

By keeping this record, it has been found that bad stretches of road can be easily located because of the number of accidents occurring thereon. In many cases it was found that the road on that stretch was too narrow, or had a bad approach to a bridge, and in many instances these stretches had never been listed as being in need of repair or change. The method outlined has proved successful and has located many dangerous spots.—E. B. House, Department of Civil and Irrigation Engineering, Colorado Agricultural College.

Good Roads Are Called Great Aid to Churches

"Where roads are best churches are strongest and civilization bears its choicest fruit; where roads are poorest churches are weakest and ignorance, poverty and crime abound.

This is the outstanding thought in an article written by Dr. S. M. Johnson, former pastor of the Austin Presbyterian church at Chicago and now director of the Lee Highway association.

Doctor Johnson, in his article, points out that the modern highway will do as much for a rural community as a railroad, school or church, serving as a means to bring the people together and promoting the consolidated school, the union church and the civic center. These, he shows, result in more regular attendance at church and school and better-paid preachers and teachers for the rural communities.

Smoothness of Highways Needed for Easy Riding

While the smoothness of a road is desirable for easy riding, there are other reasons, such as the saving of wear and tear on the machines from the vertical movements caused by roughness and the fact that it takes less power to run over a smooth road than it does to go over a rough road.

Rocky Road.

"The road to the police court," mused the motorist, "is paved with good pedestrians."—The Passing Show (London).

Road Connects Seaports.

A highway is being planned along the South Atlantic coast linking the chief seaports from Norfolk, Va., to Jacksonville, Fla.

Grade Crossings.

There are more than 250,000 highway grade crossings in the United States.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

SAMMY SAUSAGE'S TRICK

"Grunt, grunt," said Sammy Sausage to himself, "I've thought of a new trick."

"Let's hear it," said Brother Bacon. "Squeal, Squeal, let's hear it."

"Grunt, grunt, I would like to hear about the new trick," said Grandfather Porky Pig. "Tell your grandfather what the new trick is. Is it some way of getting under the fence and wandering where there is more food? Is it a trick of that sort?"

"No, Grandfather," said Sammy Sausage. "But I cannot tell you my trick."

"Grunt, grunt," said Grandfather Porky, "why can't you tell me? I suppose it has something to do with food and so you are keeping the secret all to yourself."

"Was there ever a pig who was not greedy?" asked Sammy Sausage as he twisted his tail.

"Never," said Grandfather Porky. "And let me never live to see the day when a pig is found to be generous.

"I'd rather be thought sweet and clean than be thought generous."

"You needn't worry," said Sammy Sausage, "you will never be thought any of those things. You will have those wishes granted you. In fact they have been granted to you long before you made them."

"But you're not telling us your trick," said Brother Bacon.

"I said it to myself," said Sammy Sausage.

"Said what to yourself?" asked Grandfather Porky.

"You Won't Be Told."

"I said to myself that I'd thought of a new trick," said Sammy.

"But I heard you say it," said Brother Bacon.

"I know you did," said Sammy Sausage, "and for that I am sorry."

"I heard you say it, too," said Grandfather Porky Pig.

"Grunt, grunt, I heard you."

"I know you did, too," said Sammy Sausage, "and I am sorry about that, too.

"I didn't mean either of you to hear me. I didn't mean any one to hear me. I didn't intend to share so much as my secret with anyone."

"Squeal, squeal," said Brother Bacon, "how the pig nature will come out. It's splendid to see it!"

"Splendid," said Grandfather Porky Pig, "but I'd like to know the trick. If he didn't mean us to hear him when he was grunting happily to himself it must be a very nice greedy secret that he has.

"It certainly must be," he repeated.

"Yes, that's so," said Brother Bacon.

Sammy Sausage grinned and squealed delightedly. "But you won't be told," he grunted.

"Oh, just tell me," said Grandfather Porky. I promise I won't tell a single creature."

"Oh, just tell me," said Brother Bacon. "I promise I'll not tell any one."

"Of course neither of you would tell any one else for you wouldn't share so much as a secret," said Sammy Sausage.

"What did I tell you!" exclaimed Grandfather Porky. "I knew it was a greedy secret."

"Oh, just tell me," said Brother Bacon.

"Just tell me," urged Grandfather Porky.

But Sammy would tell neither of them. In a little while the farmer came along with the food for the pigs. It was then that Sammy rushed as hard as ever he could and as he reached the feeding trough just a second ahead of the others he put both feet in it as well as his snout so that others would not get so much to eat and so he could have more room. This was the trick he had thought of, but the other pigs soon put a stop to this idea by all trying the same thing, and finally having to go back to the old way of simply putting their snouts in and getting as much as they could in the good old way.

He Saved Trouble.

Teacher—Robert, in your composition on George Washington you say he cut down a cherry tree with a saw. Don't you know he chopped it down with a hatchet?

Robert—Yes'm; but I didn't know how to spell hatchet.

Vehicle With One Wheel.

"A vehicle with three wheels is called a tricycle and one with two wheels is a bicycle," said the teacher. "Now, Edgar, what would you call a vehicle with one wheel?"

"A wheelbarrow," promptly answered the little fellow.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

Copyright, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.

LESSON FOR JULY 1

JOHN, THE BAPTIST

(May be used with temperance applications.)

LESSON TEXT—Luke 3:3-8; 7:24-28.

GOLDEN TEXT—"He shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink."—Luke 1:15.

REFERENCE MATERIAL — Matt. 3:1-17; 11:2-15; Mal. 3:1-6.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Baby, John.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Man Who Prepared the Way for Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Herald of the Christ.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Character and Work of John, the Baptist.

John was a great man. In announcing his birth the angel said, "He shall be great in the sight of the Lord." He was not only great in the Lord's sight, but was great when measured by the standards of men. In the teaching of this lesson a survey should be made of John's life and work.

I. Birth and Ministry Foretold (Matt. 3:3; cf. Isa. 40:3).

He was thought about and his work planned long before he was born. He came as God's messenger. His life was a plan of God. He was said to be a man sent from God (John 1:6). There is a sense in which every life is planned—everyone is sent from God. Everyone should remember that God has something to do with his life.

II. His Character.

1. Humble (Luke 3:4). He did not seek human praise and commendation. His supreme concern was to proclaim the Christ. He did not make himself prominent—was only a voice calling upon people to prepare for the Messiah. His person and habits were a protest against the luxury and hypocritical formality of his time.

2. Courageous (Luke 3:7). He faced a great multitude and struck hard at their sins. He did not trim his message to suit the crowd. He even denounced the religious leaders of his time and demanded of them fruits worthy of repentance.

III. His Preaching (Luke 3:3-8).

1. Demanded Repentance (vv. 3-6). Suddenly emerging from his seclusion, he came into the region of the Jordan as a messenger of God, calling upon the people to repent in preparation for the coming of the Messiah.

2. Demanded Proofs of Penitence (vv. 7, 8). He insisted that their false religions be abandoned—their sinful hearts renovated—showed them that the vile passions of their souls must be uprooted. A change of mind, that is, the turning of the soul from sin to God, was necessary. This is a preparation which must be made before one can see and experience the salvation of God.

IV. Jesus' Testimony to John (Luke 7:24-28). Because John did not see the interval between the "sufferings of Christ" and the "glory that should follow" he was perplexed. Therefore he sent a deputation to Jesus for light. The prophets did not see, or at least did not make clear, the interval between the crucifixion of Christ and His second coming. The two events were so presented as to appear to be in close succession. John in his preaching has stressed the mighty judgments which should take place at the appearance of the Messiah. The turn things were taking (he himself being imprisoned with the gloomy prospect of death), was in great contrast to the coming of the Messiah in fiery judgment—"the ax is laid unto the root of the trees" and "the chaff is burned up with unquenchable fire" (Matt. 3:10, 12). The trend of events puzzled him. It was not lack of faith, but confusion of mind that prompted his inquiry. Christ's testimony defended him against any such an accusation. Christ vindicated him against a vacillating mind because of the storms of persecution. He was not like a reed shaken by the wind (v. 24). He had lived a life of self-denial, therefore he did not deny his faith in Christ because of the dungeon (v. 25). Jesus declared that no greater prophet had arisen. That which perplexed John was the delay in judgment—the day of God's patience while gathering out the Church. This was a truth not disclosed to the prophets—that which Paul made known—because a special revelation had been granted (Eph. 3:3).

V. The Martyrdom of John (Mark 6:14-29).

While John was in prison Herod had frequent interviews with him. John boldly told him that it was unlawful for him to have his brother's wife. He did not mince matters even with the king. This so enraged the licentious Herodias that she caused his death. He sealed his testimony with his blood.

Seeking the Name of God.

The Turks carefully collect every scrap of paper that comes in their way, because the name of God may be written thereon.—Richter.

Men of Genius.

Men of genius are often dull and inert in society; as the blazing meteor, when it descends to earth, is only a stone.—Longfellow.

Prosperity and Adversity.

He that swells in prosperity will be sure to shrink in adversity.—Colton.

TANLAC RESTORED THE WHOLE FAMILY

Self, Wife and Four Children Amazingly Benefited, Declares Engineer.

"My wife, myself and our four children have been greatly benefited by the Tanlac treatment," recently said Max Liva, well-known engineer, living at 222 S. Eighth St., West Terre Haute, Ind.

"Two years ago I had the flu, and since then had been weak and worn out, suffering from stomach trouble, bloating, biliousness, headaches, nervousness and loss of sleep. I just felt all out of fix in every way.

"My wife was much the same as myself, perhaps worse. She underwent an operation, which left her in a nervous, run-down condition, with no appetite and a terribly disordered stomach.

"Tanlac is the best purchase I ever made, for it rid us entirely of all our troubles, and brought health and happiness into our home. All four of our children have taken Tanlac with splendid results too. We are using it now as our family medicine, and wouldn't be without it."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Take no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

Tanlac Vegetable Pills are nature's own remedy for constipation. Sold everywhere.—Advertisement.

Grasping the Wrong Sleeve.

My husband and I were going through the 10-cent store. He asked me to go to another counter with him. When I reached the counter I reached for his arm and said: "Do you know, today I want to buy a wash boiler." A strange voice answered: "Do you?"

Looking up, I discovered I was holding the arm of a strange man. I beat it out of the store while the strange man and his companion were laughing.—Chicago Tribune.

Watch Cuticura Improve Your Skin. On rising and retiring gently smear the face with Cuticura Ointment. Wash off Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water. It is wonderful what Cuticura will do for poor complexions, dandruff, itching and red, rough hands.—Advertisement.

Very Satisfactory.

The bright young thing was interviewing the boss regarding the vacant post of confidential typist and secretary.

He asked her all the usual questions and got satisfactory answers in every case.

"Tell me," he said after a while, "what would you do if I were to tell you that my wife proposed visiting the office one day?"

The reply came promptly:

"Put on my oldest frock and make myself look as old-fashioned and frumpish as possible, and call you 'Sir.'"

Engaged on the spot.

Fresh, sweet, white, dainty clothes for baby, if you use Red Cross Ball Blue. Never streaks or injures them. All good grocers sell it.—Advertisement.

"Not Me," Said He

In entering a playhouse one evening the doorman asked me for my ticket, and I said, "The man behind has it."

You can imagine my feeling when the man behind replied, "Not me."

My husband had stopped to talk to some one and I had walked right in.—Exchange.

Most of the things that are to be had for the asking benefit the giver more than the receiver.

Better Than Pills For Liver Ills.
You can't feel so good but what NR will make you feel better.
Get a 25c. Box.
Nature's Remedy
NR-TABLETS-NR
A. H. LEWIS MEDICINE CO.
25-TABLETS-NR
Your Druggist

CASH GROCERY.
Clearing $600 Monthly

Long lease, with flat above. High-class American locality on busy street. Fine fixtures, large clean stock; $4,000 cash. Will allow closest investigation. Owner leaving city on other business. N. C. McGEE, 12700 E. Jefferson, DETROIT, MICH.

VISIBLE BOOKKEEPING
USE BOOKKEEPING CHART
(Copyrighted)
FOR STOREKEEPERS, MERCHANTS, MANUFACTURERS AND STUDENTS

Especially helpful to students, beginners and those unfamiliar with bookkeeping routine. Double entry method. A little practice will make you a skilled double entry bookkeeper. Simple. Concise. Price $3.75. Send money order only. BOOKKEEPING CHART CO., 246 Fifth Avenue, NEW YORK CITY.

25c MOTORIST, GARAGES, TIRE SHOPS
SAVES TIME TEMPER & VALVES

You need our New B N S DEFLATOR and VALVE WRENCH. Just what you are looking for. Send 25c in silver or money order for our new, wonderful tool. Dealers Wanted. BENSON & SATTERSTROM, HASTINGS, MINN.

JUNE

L 912

654

Get Your
Daily Bread - - Welcome Flours
at the J. C. Bailey Store St. Joe
Made by G. A. WARD of the
ALBION ROLLER MILLS, Albion Indiana

NEWS OF THE TOWN

Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Riding of Los-Angeles, Cal., came Wednesday for an indefinite visit in the home of Mrs. Alice Warner.

Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Dilley of Fort Wayne, spent over Sunday here with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sechler and Mrs. Anna Dilley.

Miss Susan Sechler went to Butler Sunday night for a week's visit with her brother, Henry Sechler and family.

Miss Thelma Curie spent from Friday evening until Sunday afternoon a guest of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Morr at Auburn.

Next Sunday eevning at the Coburn's Corners church Children's Day will be observed and a program will be given.

Mr. and Mrs. Olen Dermott moved here Monday from his father's farm near Coburn's Corners. They will occupy the Mrs. Lum Brinker property.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Keesler, daughters, Doris and Jane and son, Henry left early Friday morning for Eastern Ohio to visit relatives for a week or ten days.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Randall of Ottowa, Ohio, spent from Wednesday until Saturday here with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Randall.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hickman and little son spent Saturday afternoon and Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Bayliss near Ney, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Abel of Peru, came Saturday evening for a few days' visit with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. F. Abel. They are also visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Milliman at their cottage at the lake.

It is reported that Christ Lagaris of Auburn, has escaped from the state penal farm and is at large. Lagaris has been a prisoner since March 21, when he was sentenced for bootlegging, etc., by Judge Endicott.

Miss Mary Thompson of Waynesboro, Pennsylania, sister of Miss Minnie Thompson, and Bobbie Houser of the same place, a grandson of Harvey Kimes, are here for a six or eight weeks' visit in the Kimes home.

H. L. McKenney, principal of the Auburn High School has been appointed superintendent of the Auburn public schools to succeed G. W. Youngblood, the present superintendent, who has resigned to accept the superintendency of the Peru schools. The change will take place July 15.

Mr. and Mrs. Grover Curle entertained as Friday evening supper guests, Mr. and Mrs. Vet Chandler of Hobart, Mr. and Mrs. Derwood Ridgway and children, Floyd Ridgway and mother, Mrs. Belle Ridgway, and as evening guests, in addition to the above, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. F. Abel.

Sam Mumaw and wife entertained the following Sunday evening, serving them with ice cream, strawberries and cake: Hollie Dilley, wife and son John of Wayne, Wm. Staman, Jr. and wife, Mrs. Frank Sechler and Edith Widney.

Wanted—Young men and women to learn wireless telegraphy. Railroads, Western Union and Wireless Companies in dire need of operators. We teach you quickly, and procure positions at big salaries. Great opportunities for advancement. All expenses low; can earn part. Write today for free catalog. School established fifty years.

Dodge's Telegraph Institute.
Monroe St., Valparaiso, Ind.

H. R. Minnick, M. D.
St. Joe, Indiana
Office at Residence
PHONE NO. 16X

Charles Quance of Fort Wayne spent Saturday and Sunday here.

Craig Sheffer, wife and son, Basil, visited Butler friends Sunday.

Will Koch and wife were Sunday dinner guests of Clay Coburn and wife.

Frank Jonhson and wife attended the Morr family reunion held at Auburn Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Meade Baker spent the day with his father O. J. Baker, Sunday.

Dan Myers and family of Hicksville, were Saturday guests of relatives here.

Edgar Lysher spent over Sunday here from his work in Fort Wayne.

George Seevers and family of near Logan, Ohio, spent Sunday with Tom Brunson and wife.

For Sale—Fine eating potatoes and late seed. Geo. Walter St, Joe, Ind.

Mrs. Ada Bassett went to Fort Wayne Wednesday to visit until Sunday.

Miles Baxter, a former postmaster of Auburn, has purchased a 10 acre orange grove near Clement, California.

James Edwards and wife of Albion were guests of B. V. Widney and wife from Saturday until Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Kees are at home again after visiting a couple of weeks with Fort Wayne and Garrett friends.

Martha and Frank Miser went to Fort Wayne Wednesday to visit for two days with Leon Sechler and family.

Mrs. Edith Hatch and baby of Fort Wayne are making a short visit with her mother, Mrs. Ada Berry.

Mrs. J. S Nelson of Fort Wayne has visited since last Friday with Mr. and Mrs. Will Sommers and M. T. Bishop and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Dill, three children and David Dill of Pierceton, spent Saturday and Sunday with Dr. Price and wife.

David Furnish, wife and daughter Isobelle of Detroit, came Saturday afternoon, he returning after a short visit and his family remained for the week.

The annual reunion of the Widney family is being held today (Thursday) at the farm home of B. E. Widney. Great plans are being laid for a good time.

Thirty-eight persons were killed and 184 injured over the week-end as a result of automobile accidents in and about thirty large cities of this country.

F. R. Bowman, wife and daughter spent Saturday night and Sunday with his mother, Mrs. Mary Bowman at Cold Springs. Ray Bowman returned home with them for a day.

Sherriff W. G. Morr is having his hands full these days. Monday he chaperoned five lads away from Auburn, taking three of them to the state penal farm and two to the state reformitory.

For Sale—$25 buys the choice of 6 registered Spotted Poland brood sows. These sows average in weight from 400 to 700 pounds.

T. A. Northrup, Phone 2213.

Dr. Bonnell M. Souder
HOSPITAL
Established in 1914
206 West Seventh Street
AUBURN, INDIANA

Mrs. Angelia Wolff spent Friday in Butler.

Wm. Miller's new barn is nearly completed.

Paul Krabill is relieving operators at Wellsboro, Ind., for a few days.

Correll Simanton had his tonsils removed Tuesday by Dr. Hansen at Hicksville.

Mrs. Vina Fish returned home Saturday from a week's visit at Auburn.

Pluma Hamilton and Edith Widney were at Fort Wayne all day Monday.

Helen Storer spent Saturday night and Sunday a guest of Margaret Elnor Hamilton.

Glen Cole spent Sunday with his father L. E. Cole near Five Corners.

Velma Kinsey and Arlene Hart were Auburn visitors Saturday and Sunday.

Geraldine and Chas. Thornton had their tonsils removed Wednesday at Hicksville hospital by Dr. J. S. Hull.

Vernon Woodcox and family have moved from the Ella Smith property into that of Clyde Mason north of the railroad tracks.

Robert Cochran of Butler came Saturday morning, returning Sunday morning and visited his son Charles Cochran and wife.

Miss Evalyn Knight was a Sunday evening caller of her grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. B. S. Sheffer.

John Sechler and wife spent Saturday evening with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Pifer at Moorsville.

Coburn's Corners Children's day exercises will be held next Sunday evening. Rev. A. L. Martin will preach there Sunday morning

Ray Henley and family of Roanoke spent Sunday here with the former's father, W. E. Henley and family.

Miss Mary Philpott of McClure, Ohio, is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Thornton and family for a few days.

Abe Culbertson underwent an operation for removal of cataract from eyes at Fort Wayne, Tuesday of last week by Dr. McBride.

The citizens on Main street west of Geo. Kees corners were unable to secure oil to oil street from 5th street to Spencerville street again this summer.

Sheldon Wolff, wife aud daughter of Angola, were Sunday dinner guests of Sherman Wolff and wife. Harry Jones, wife and four children of Hicksville were afternoon guests and Alcinus Beebe and wife of Auburn spent the evening in the same home.

Mrs. Vada Turley and son Hollis of Edon, spent Sunday with E. B Smith and wife and Miss Rosella Mendleshon. The three ladies are sisters.

Mr. and Mrs. Ora Baker had as Sunday guests Wm. Gloy and wife and Mrs. David Keller of Butler, Mesdames Fred Keller, Elmer Keller and Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Fetters and baby.

Merritt Sechler visited over Sunday with Harry Milliman's at their cottage at Lake George. Everett Mavis and family and Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sechler spent the time during his absence caring for his home duties.

A girls sewing club is being planned for the girls of Concord township. A meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Storer last Wednesday. After the meeting adjourned the daughters of the house served those present with peaches, cake and lemonade.

Roses, Shrubs
Ornamental and Fruit Trees
Hedges
Plants
M. T. BISHOP
St. Joe, Ind.
Representing
BARRY NURSERY COMPANY
of Rochester, N. Y.

IF YOU ARE HOT
OUR SUMMER
SUITS
Will Greatly Reduce the Temperature
Special Values in Genuine Palm Beaches
$12.50
Other Summer Suits $15 to $40
Regulars, Stouts, Stubs, Longs, Long Stouts,
Short Stouts, Extra Sizes
WE CAN FIT YOU
Patterson-Fletcher Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Wetherald and family of Toledo, spent Thursday and Friday with F. M. Thornton and family. Mrs. Wetherald is a sister of Mr. Thornton.

Mrs. Wm. Miller spent Friday in Fort Wayne. Her little niece, who has been visiting her for the past three weeks, accompanied her as fas as New Haven.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Sommers had as Friday guests Mrs. L. C. Nelson of Fort Wayne, Mrs. R. F. Moffett, daughters Jessie and Mrs. L. R. Rhoderfer of Auburn and Mrs. J. E. Sommers of Spencerville.

Mrs. Opheha Headley returned to her home at Newville after spending the week with her brother, Laney Gee, during the absence of his wife and daughter at the state Sunday School Convention.

It Needs Turpentine.

Sometimes shoe polish becomes hard in the box and not fit to use. You can soften it and make it as good as ever if you add a little turpentine and let it stand for a short time.

Rapid Growth of Hair Astounds Neighbors

Dallas Resident Tells of Wonderful Results From Simple Remedy

An incident of interest to women is related by Mrs. Charles Sloan, of Dallas, Tex. "For years," Mrs. Sloan writes, "I was embarrassed by having such scanty hair that I could not dress it without 'rats,' puffs and switches. I tried all kinds of treatments, but none helped until I began using Lucky Tiger. This remedy made my hair grow so fast that my neighbors actually were astounded. I kept on using Lucky Tiger, and now my hair is almost to my waist."

Always sold under a money-back guarantee, Lucky Tiger is the one positive remedy for troubled scalps and as a perfumed toilet necessity has no equal. Ask your druggist.

SAVES BABIES, helps grown-ups, comforts elderly people. For cholera infantum, summer complaint, weakening diarrhoea—use
CHAMBERLAIN'S
COLIC and DIARRHOEA
REMEDY
Take in a little sweetened water. Never fails.

Remember Barcus Q. Hip

Just thirty-nine years ago today the well known pioneer, Barcus Q. Hippenhammer had the following to say in a letter to the editor of the home paper at that time:

A girl is sweet,
But oh how bitter
The same girl is
Wen hur clothes don't fit hur.

In mi last letter, if you remember I told ov a girl wat was mashed on me, but lo an beehold you things have tak a change, an now I am mashed. I hed promised miself not tu hav eny thing moor tu du with the femail sect but I cood'nt help it; and as the poet says "luv concored me an I wus aggoner." I met her on the street an hur exquisit buty an luvliness at once captivated mi young an tender hart. I purposed, was accepted, an in the stilly autum, wen the muskeeters are all bed, we will bea maid one. It wus truly a case ov luv at first site. Mi happanes is compleat, mi cup ov joy is ful an running ovar. No moor sewing on pance buttons fur me.

Yours in Matrimony,
Barcus Q. Hippenhammer.

Notice of Appointment of Executor

STATE OF INDIANA, } ss.:
DEKALB COUNTY, }

I, E. A. McClintock, Clerk of the Circuit Court, for the County of DeKalb, State of Indiana, do hereby certify that Burnett A. Rhodes has been appointed executor of the last will and testament of Charles A. Rhodes late of DeKalb county, who died testate, and the said Burnett A. Rhodes having qualified and given bond as such executor is duly authorized to take upon himself the execution of said will.

Witness my hand and seal of said Court this 20th day of June, 1923.

E. A. McCLINTOCK,
Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court.
C. M. Brown, Attorney.

An Altruist.

"It is well to leave something for those who come after us," said the man who threw a barrel in the way of the cop who was chasing him.—Boston Evening Transcript.

Sunday School Report.

The following is a true and correct report of the various Sunday Schools in this neighborhood for last Sunday.

Christian	120	$ 6 26
M. P	56	16.11
Lutheran	92	7 34
M. E. Spencer	72	3.82
Lutheran	100	5.75
Newville U. B.	115	7.23
Christian	90	4 59
Coburntown	72	3.45
Concord	66	3.92
Mt. Pleasant	68	2 28
Rehobeth	92	5.87

The safest thing to take for a cold is an extra handkerchief.

—oo—

MONICKERBOCKERS

Says The Rushford, N. Y., Spectator. Miss Onlee Eaton took dinner with the Perry family Sunday.

We suppose of course that the social side of her visit must have amounted to something, but the fact remains that she was Onlee Eaton.

POST CARDS
GET THEM AT
The News Office